BRITANNIA PIER.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edward Gray.—The Royal Tokio company of Japanese performers are drawing crowded houses here this week, and their act is wonderful. Spry and Monti are scoring a success with their comedy scena, The Dandy Guardsman; Dolly and Madge McCalla, juvenile performers, are a clever little couple who gain unstinted applause; Miss Dollie Denton charms with bright song and dance; Ned Graydon, comedy instrumentalist, possesses some extremely funny and original ideas; the Harrison Brothers and the Two Jays also contribute excellent items to a most enjoyable programme.

WELLINGTON PIER PAVILION.—Proprietors, Great Yarmouth Corporation; Manager, Mr. Harry Tunbridge.—The principal part of the programme is supplied by the Dandies, who, as vocalists and comedy artists, give a most enjoyable entertainment. Mr. Elliston and company contribute an amusing comedy. My Friend the General. The orchestral selections by Herr Delikat's orchestra are much appreciated.

GREENOCK.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Directors and Managers, Messrs. A .B. and J. J. Wright.—When Knights Were Bold is presented this week by Mr. James Welch's company. As Sir Guy de Vere Mr. Nelson Keys has ample scope to display his undoubted abilities; Mr. Charles Ommanney is excellent as Sir Bryan; Mr. Augustin Symonds is decidedly good as the Jew, Isaacson; so, too, is Mr. William Lochart as the Dean. The Hon. Charles Widdicombe finds an able exponent in Mr. Thomas Paunceford; and Mr. Talbot Homewood is praiseworthy as Wittle. Miss Emelie Polini lends her charming abilities as Rowena; Miss Marjorie Chard makes a fascinating Jewess; and the other ladies' parts find capable exponents in the Misses Violet Graham, Eva Leonard Boyne, Vera Herbert, Lena Flowerdew, and Nannie Hume. The curtain-raiser is a smart little piece, entitled The Miller, in which Mr. Talbot Homewood and Miss Eva Leonard Boyne appear.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES. — Lessees, The Greenock Empire Syndicate; General-Manager, Mr. H. L. Skivington.—Lady Mansel's troupe of juveniles, who are pleasing singers and dancers, head the bill here this week; the Meymotts, in their sketch, Semi-Detached, are cordially received; the Two Loves are popular, both as singers and dancers; Will Mitcham, vocal and musical comique; Sylvo, comedy juggler; Andy Burn, comedian; and the Empire Pictures, also add to the enjoyment of the audience.

PAVILION, LTD. — General-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chas. A. White.—Sam Redfern heads the bill here, and meets with a popular reception; a prominent feature is supplied by Fred Keeton, comedian; Rale Walters is a charming comedienne; the Calcotts have a good speciality, Rags and Tatters; Stanley Brett's baritone selections are highly appreciated; Spencer and Marks appear in a speciality act, entitled The Stage-struck Waifs; Madoline Rees, vocal comedienne, is also good; and the pictures complete the list.

TOWN HALL.—Mr. Sydney Prince opened here on Monday with a first-class cinématograph show, and a series of fine pictures are being shown. Variety turns are submitted by Bean, the basso, and Charlie Ousley, the coloured coon.

GRIMSBY.—PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. H. Curry.—The Duchess of Dantzic, presented by Mr. Chas. Macdona's company, is proving a highly popular attraction. Miss Anna Hickisch is winning universal approval for her impersonation of Sans Gêne; in Mr. Frank Bradley a thoroughly competent exponent of Napoleon is found; Mr. Marshall Vincent is thoroughly successful as Lefebore, his singing being worthy of special note; Mr. C. Burronston Williams also scores honours as a vocalist in the dual rôle of the two Vicomtes de Bethune; Miss Daisy Kersey is a truly captivating Renée; Miss Edith Martyn accomplishes good work as Lisette; and Mr. Harold Batt invests the part of Papillion with appropriate quaintness.

THE PALACE.—Proprietors, Grimsby Palace and Buffet, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. G. Rhodes Parry.—The Duchess of Tooting is a complete musical comedy in miniature, and is smartly performed by Mr. Sidney Bacon's company, the principal members of which are Mr. Stephen Adeson, Mr. Marius Gerard, Miss Josie Farrington, Miss Dora Heritage, and Mr. Henry Latimer. The Girl and the Tough is of an intensely dramatic character, and for its production Mr. John E. Brandon and company are responsible. The Brothers Lavelle are amusing comedy acrobats; Sam Vincent gives a sensational table-jumping act; and others appearing are Johnny Walker, comedian; May Fayre, soubrette; and Maud Ford, comedienne and sand-dancer.

THE TIVOLI.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. H. Curry; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. North.—Jan Rudenyi's wonderful powers as a violinist are greatly delighting the audiences in a sketch, The Power of Music; Billy Howard and Kathryn Harris score a success in their laughable comedy speciality; Miss Jennie Johns is as popular as ever; Edwards and Espinosa are skilful musicians; Les Marsumas are clever comedy cyclists; Tom E. Hughes is an amusing comedian; whilst other good turns are given by Mlle. Pollo, gymnast; and the Nettas, in a vocal scena.

GUERNSEY.—THEATRE ST. JULIAN'S.—Lessee, Mr. Edward Marris.—On Monday Mr. Chas. W. Poole's Myriorama opened its second week. Its fascination is as great as ever. Mr. Macdonald's company in The Dairymaids was billed for Friday.

HALIFAX.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling.—That evergreen attraction The Lady Slavey is delighting capital houses here. At the head of Mr. Robt. Crossman's company is Mr. W. T. Thompson, whose quaint mannerisms in the rôle of Roberts keep the audiences in continuous merriment; Mr. Frank Henderson as Lord Lavender is as good as ever, and wears well; Mr. Keino Johnston makes a typical Major O'Neill, his singing being excellent; Phyllis (the slavey) is sweetly depicted by Miss Winnie Volt; as the millionaire Tomato King Mr. Edmund Cooper is exceptionally smart; while Miss Nita Presano is a fitting exponent of the character of Flo Honeydew.

GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. Sam Winks.—Rudinoff presents a remarkable turn here; Ouida Macdermott in military song scena and Jno. Conolney, raconteur, are approved of; Fred Edwardes is one of the best light comedians we have had, and together with Bertha Northam in the Kleptomaniacs provides a regular feast of fun; Abdy's Canine Hippodrome, De Lil, a humorous ventriloquist, Marvell's Birds, Marquise and Mignott, and Hulbert, an illusionist, give a good account of themselves.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME, LTD.—Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Foster.—Abdullah and La Superba, in a dazzling electric display entitled Electra's Bower, hold foremost position this week; the Floradora Girls, Mr. and Mrs. Finden in A Desperate Remedy, Lena Robinson, Percy Curry, Marba and Verity, D. W. Watson, and the Brothers Horne in a boxing sketch are also with us.

HANLEY. — ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Douglas Elphinstone.—A welcome return visit is being paid by Messrs. Dauncey and Leveaux's company in The Walls of Jericho. Mr. Wilfrid E. Payne contributes a manly reading of Jack Frobisher; Miss Dora Hole as Lady Frobisher plays cleverly; as Bannister, Mr. E. Spencer Geach is well placed; Mr. W. Kingsford Pearce is admirable as the Marquis; Miss Elsie Ross is excellent as Lady Lucy; Mr. Gerald Henson as Lord Drayton does exceedingly well; and the Harry Dallas of Mr. Chas. Fancourt is a capital piece of acting. As Lady Westerby Miss Margaret Murray does capable work.

GRAND.—Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. James Wynes.—Leoni Clarke's performing cats, monkeys, rats, mice, and canaries head the bill this week, in their truly wonderful performance. Percy Ford and Edward C. Webb's company present a dramatic episode entitled The Spy, in which Mr. Lionel D'Aragon, in the title-rôle, acts with much manliness; Miss Eugene Magnus as Mme. Halcon, scoring also a distinct success. Mr. George Hanbury is well placed as Sergeant Burnie; the Arleys, gymnasts, &c., provide a capital turn; France and Stewart return in their amusing sketch, viz., 100 to 1 Chance; Will Dalton causes roars of laughter with songs and patter; the Silver Tone Quartette of coloured vocalists are much appreciated; May Evans is a character comedian of exceptional ability; Tatton Hall, a smart burlesque comedian, and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux, are up to date.

HARROGATE.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. F. Smith.—For the first three nights of this week we had a visit from Mr. Chas. Macdona's company in The White Chrysanthemum. Mr. W. Hartigan played Admiral Armitage in a breezy manner; Mr. Victor Kahn appeared successfully as Reginald; and Mr. Erskine Lang did well as Lieut. Belmont. Mr. Walter Westwood was satisfactory as Perks; Miss Lilian Hubbard as Sybil Cunningham, known as O San, looked well; and Miss Harriet Fawn as Mrs. Kenyon was effective. For the rest of the week Miss Emma and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company in Peter's Mother occupied the theatre.

THE KURSAAL.—General-Manager and Musical-Director, Mr. Julian Clifford; Manager and Sec., Mr. R. Eldrid.—The attractions for the week here are Mr. W. A. Peterkin baritone; Mr. Archer Rosenthal, solo pianist; Miss Margaret Adele and Miss Annie Grew, vocalists. Reid's bioscope is also in the bill. On Thursday matinée and evening Miss Ada Reeve is announced, and Miss Marie Hall for Saturday matinée only.

HARTLEPOOL.—EMPRESS.—Proprietors, Messrs. Councillor Everton and J. W. Cragg; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Burns; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Charlie Ferrier.—The programme arranged for this week is headed by the Martelloni troupe of lady acrobats, whose difficult feats are performed with remarkable dexterity. Astley's American Circus is provocative of much laughter; Speedwell, the whirlwind painter, is a clever artist; excellent mimicry on the violin is contributed by Carlos Menard; the Sisters Ely, duettists and dancers, contribute a pleasing turn; as also do the Firmans, in a comedy scena, The Fire Station, and Lily Currie, a taking vocalist. Steeley and Dowsons, in burlesque, and the bioscope films are other attractions.

HASTINGS.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles E. Scutt.—For the first half of the week we have had here Mr. George Dance's company in The Little Michus, and its first production in the borough on Monday attracted a crowded house. The Little Michus themselves were charmingly rendered by Miss Alice Coyerick (Marie Blanche) and Miss Gracie Sinclair (Blanche Marie). Mme. Michu had an excellent representative in Miss May Younge, and her singing was much appreciated. As Mlle. St. Cyr, Mlle. Marjorie met with gratifying success for her dancing; Mr. Foster Courtenay kept his audience continually laughing by his humour as General Des Ifs. Mr. Ed. Wynn played and sang well as Gaston Rigaud; Mr. Gilbert Childs was clever and amusing as Bagnolet; Mr. William Benson made an artistic Pierre Michu; and other rôles had capable exponents in Mr. Alfred Drinkwater as Aristide Vert and Miss May Stephenson as Mlle. Herpin. For the second half of the week Mr. Milton Bode's company in The Belle of Mayfair was billed.

HIPPODROME THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General-Manager, Mr. Vivian Fisher; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Norman.—The programme opens with Miss Katie Eplett, an attractive serio; the youthful ventriloquist, Spitari, is singularly clever; the films representing "Secret Service" are much applauded; Harry E. Baker and De Sales are accorded a hearty reception; the skipping rope dance and musical selections of Miss Fannie Humber are interesting; Frank Zara is an excellent storyteller; the pantomime of Chas. F. Best is very laughable; and a high-class selection of vocal music is rendered by C. Emlyn Jones; and the Daughters of Britain; Ern Sparks, eccentric dancer; and Nellie Vesto greatly delight the audience.

PIER PAVILION. — Pier-Master, Mr. R. Turner; Entertainment Manager, Mr. J. W. Hunter.—A varied and interesting programme is opened by Miss Margaret Lewys, a Welsh contralto; La Petite Carolina is a pretty and graceful dancer; Miss Clara Evelyn sings with sweetness and expression; a wonderful exhibition of thought-reading is given by the Days (brother and sister); the Keiths perform on a variety of musical instruments; Miss Marie Dainton gives some clever imitations; a novel performance on a rolling globe is much applauded, the three Ettenas combining fun with cleverness. Some interesting up-to-date pictures are shown on the Bioscope.

ROYAL CONCERT HALL.—Under the auspices of Dr. Abram, Mr. George Grossmith on Monday gave a drawing-room entertainment here, assisted by the charming vocalist, Miss Dorothy D'Egville, and Miss Dorothy Scott, whose elocutionary efforts gave much pleasure to her audience, and Miss Bernadette Rawstron, a clever pianiste.

AL-FRESCO ENTERTAINMENTS.—On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday last week four performances of One Summer's Day were given in the Archery Grounds, St. Leonards, by Mr. A. Austen Leigh and company. Mr. Leigh played very effectively as Major Dick; Miss May Saker was a delightful Maysie; Mr. E. Brampton feelingly sustained the part of Phil Marsden; Mr. Norman Clark was an amusing Theodore; Mrs. Bendyshe had a capable exponent in Miss Caroline Fenton; and Mr. R. Trieve did well as Tom. The gipsies were convincingly played by Mr. H. G. Mason as Seth, Miss Emmie O'Reilley as Chiara, and Mr. W. P. Wells as old Bess; the remaining rôle of Mr. Hoddesden being filled by Mr. E. Vernon.

At the Beach Concert Pavilion, Mr. Wallis Arthur's company continue its evening concerts, matinées each day being given in the Alexandra Park. Miss Marie Schultz, Mr. George Blackmore, Mr. Harry Jeanes, Miss Edith Blanchard, and Mr. Leslie Owen are all successful

At the St. Leonards Gardens, Mr. Wallis Arthur's second company, the Lieutenants and the Maids, are much appreciated. Miss Ada Gaskill, Mr. Alec Johnstone, Mlle. Nina Lorenza, and Messrs. Robt. A. Innes, Harry King, and Charles Howard supply capital selections. The evening performances are given in the Band Kiosk at the St. Leonards Pier.

HEREFORD.—DRILL HALL.—Manager, Mr. A. Lovesey.—A first visit is being paid this week by The Belle of Mayfair. Miss Winifred Preece in the name-part is very successful. As Hugh Meredith, Mr. Michael Raven is excellent, his musical numbers being renedered in praiseworthy manner; Mr. Sidney Burt's portrayal of Sir John Chaldicott is one of the drollest studies imaginable; Miss Nancy York is delightfully gay as Pincott; and others lending valuable aid are Messrs. S. Ravenscroft (Raymond Finchley), Stephen Hall (Earl of Mount Highgate), and Miss Grace Mackay an ideal Gibson Girl.

HUDDERSFIELD.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Frank Seddon.—Mr. George Dance's company is playing The Lady Dandies. Mr. Ripley Adams uses his sweet tenor voice with perfect method; Miss Nancy Rossiter is dainty and charming in style; and Miss Maisie Gay's more robust manner is admirably suited to her impersonation of Lodoiska. The comedians are well led by Mr. O. E. Lennon as St. Amour. Mr. Charles Hanbury has just the right air as Lagorille; Mr. Tom Seymour as Tournesol and Mr. J. E. Walker as Malicorne make an amusing pair; and the less prominent parts are admirably sustained.

HIPPODROME, LTD.—Resident-Manager, Mr. N. M. Robinson.—The principal turn is provided by Hill and Whitaker, favourite musical comedy artists. Others in the bill are Miss Kitty Clover and company, in a sketch; Miss Evelyn Taylor, comedienne, whose reception is most flattering; Stephens and Rennior, comedians and dancers; Miss Mollie Wolstenhulme, ballad singer; Tom Lloyd, comedian; H. O. Wills, a quaint comedian; and the Alberto troupe of skilled acrobats. A change of pictures is given on the Bioscope.

HULL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. Morton; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. F. Morton.—After a short absence of six months, Hull's prime favourite, Mr. Martin Harvey, returns, and this week has created a record, for his visits are always extremely popular. On Wednesday, an ideal performance of The Only Way was given. In addition to himself and Miss De Silva, there is included that veteran actor Mr. Fred Wright, whose Dr. Manette will long live in memory; the Ernest Defarge of Mr. Chas. Glenney was highly commendable; Miss Coleridge makes a charming Lucie. The Breed of the Treshams and A Cigarette Maker's Romance are also in the bill.

GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; Resident-Manager, Mr. Wynn Miller.—The Stronger Sex, presented by Miss Emma and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company has created a good name, and, no wonder, when the play and its representatives are so talented. As the wife, Miss Margaret Fanleigh acts with admirable taste with Mr. H. J. Carvill, who is a pleasing representative of the husband; Miss Emma Hutchison is very well cast, and her picture of the society gossip is one that is full of attractiveness. The play is well mounted, and has met with a very hearty reception.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE, MORTON'S, LTD.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. Morton.—Arthur Shirley and Ben Landeck's drama, Saved from the Sea, is a stirring production, and one well to the taste of the Alexandra audiences. In the leading rôle Miss Marie Auckland meets with much success; Mr. C. Lodge Percy has just the finesse and dash associated with an adventurer; Mr. David G. Noble cleverly portrays the part of the husband.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. Alfred Graham; Manager, Mr. Tom Lunn.—Harry Pleon is staying another week, and highly amusing large audiences with his sketch, The Club Raid. The wonderful Emilions perform clever feats. Other agreeable turns are the Brothers Curvan, Lade Henderson, Tom Kelso and company, Chris Beach, and Minnie Fenton. The Grafters are to be seen on the Hipposcope.

EMPIRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Harry Slingsby.—Nellie Atherton and company provide the star turn here this week in their amusing sketch, Wanted, a Partner. A mystifying performance is given by the Gelders, Van and Lily. Other pleasing items are rendered by Ivy Dene, Lytton and Bland (Poppy and Jack), Lily Hartley, the Brothers Idento, and the dramatic sketch, entitled The Devil's Hand, is given by Wright, Aitken, and company. A series of pictures is exhibited on the bioscope.

HYDE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Granville; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. R. Feather.—This week Mr. Walter Melville's company is drawing large audiences with In a Woman's Grip. Mr. Percy Dawsone is a convincing hero; Mr. Oswald Douglas and Mr. James Crowley succeed as villains; the funny element is in the very capable hands of Mr. Freddy Bentley. In her varied characters Miss Rose Ralph shows talent and discretion; Miss Jessie Yatman is dainty and pathetic; and Miss Amy Rudd ably assists in the lighter vein.

ILKESTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. L. F. A. Rogers.—Proof is being played here this week by Mr. and Mrs. William Maclaren's company. Mr. S. Herbert Humber displays great skill as Pierre Lorance; Miss Thelma Kury charmingly enacts the part of Adrienne; Mr. G. Ridgeway Thorne makes the most of Victor De Laugney; Miss Alicia Raleigh is excellent as Valentine; and the Mme. Depreis of Miss Elizabeth Dexter is a well-studied performance. Mr. Bernard Elliott gives a capital interpretation of the Duke D'Aubeterre; Miss Amelia Wilson is an effective Duchess D'Aubeterre; the rôle of Chamboran loses nothing at the hands of Mr. Carl Beechy; and Mr. Penn Hamilton is a good representative of Lazare.

INVERNESS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr. Cameron Burgess.—This week Mr. Harry Tilbury and company are here. On Monday, His Dishonoured Wife was given to a crowded house. The part of Frank Lindon was capably portrayed by Mr. Chas. H. Phelps; the Lord Devant of Mr. Horatio Sinclair was a strenuously-played character; Mr. Harry Tilbury won great popularity in the part of a comic Irishman. Miss Arline T. George did well as Alice Harvey; Florence Lindon was well acted by Miss Belle Tilbury; and other parts were well filled by Mr. Bernard Webb, Mr. Harrison Weir, Mr. George Rufus, Miss Ivy Rocheforte, and Miss Jessie Gillette. For the last three nights of the week The Blind Foundling was given.

IPSWICH.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. E. T. Bostock; Manager, Mr. T. Stead.—Haley's Prize Juveniles have been the chief attraction during the present week, and the charming singing of both principals and chorus has delighted the audiences at each performance. Harry Leybourne is a humorous double-voiced comedian; the Bros. Redmond are amusing acrobatic comedians; the programme also includes Sibon's ponies, cats, and dogs in a series of clever tricks; Hiddar and Dunbar, musical duettists; and Miss Lily Black and Marion Scott, comediennes. Miss Ada Fawn, a popular favourite here, had a hearty welcome. The Bioscope pictures completed the entertainment.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Leonard Grey.—For three nights and a matinée the theatre has been occupied by the Gaumont Company's Pageant Animated Pictures. Some omissions were necessarily made on Monday night, but these were remedied at succeeding exhibitions. The Bury pageant was admirably illustrated, many of the participants being easily recognised by those who were present in July. The boards on Thursday were occupied by Mr. Arthur Bourchier's company, in The Morals of Marcus.

JARROW.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Rex Sugden.—The attraction here this week is Mr. Jas. Bell's company in The Idol of Paris. Miss Annie Bell, as Flare-Flare, acquits herself ably; Mr. Otto Minster, as Phillipe D. Esterse, infuses much spirit into the part; Mr. Sidney Arnold's impersonation of Victor Cashelle is satisfactory; Mr. Arthur McCullock is an interesting Prince Sergius; and Mr. Norton Shields faithfully depicts Gustave Langlois; the comedy parts have able representatives in Mr. H. Vyvian Thomas as Tartare, and Miss Annie Megson as Ann; Miss Ethel Carthew scores a success as Madame Sancterre.

JERSEY. — OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee, Mr. E. Marris.—The Dairymaids is represented here this week by Mr. Robert Macdonald's thoroughly efficient company of clever principals, supported by an excellent chorus. Miss Empsie Bowman is a bright and attractive Peggy; Miss Doris Dickens is a bewitching Winifred; and as Heléne Miss Annie Heenan proves herself the possessor of a well-trained voice. The parts of Lady Brudenell and Penelope Pyechase are capably filled by Miss Molly Tremaine and Miss Daela Gordon; Miss Maud Lucy as Eliza is a delightful comedienne and a graceful dancer: the Joe Mivens of Mr. Dan Agar keeps the audience in roars of laughter; whilst Mr. Robert Telford as Sam Brudenell contributes considerably to the fun of the piece. Mr. A. Gordon Begg is good as Dr. O'Bryne, and Mr. Richard Bottomley appears as Lieut. Brudenell.

WEST PARK PAVILION.—The Merry Madcaps are paying a visit here, and give an excellent entertainment.

ODDFELLOWS' HALL.—"Frivolity" Freear performed here on Monday and Tuesday evenings, and met with a flattering reception. During the rest of the week the stage was occupied by Mr. Robert Ganthony, assisted by Miss Rita Felix, L.R.A.M.

KIRKCALDY. — KING'S THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan.—Mr. Louis Calvert's company opened on Monday in Sunday. Miss Nita Faydon, in the title-part, was charming and effective; Mr. Leonard Pagden was exceedingly good in the dual part of Colonel and Arthur Brinthorpe; Messrs. Wm. H. Brougham, Sidney Rennet, James Hussey, and Alex. Alves did well as Towzer, Davy, Lively, and Jacky respectively. Mr. Ernest A. Douglas was good as Tom Oxley. Charley's Aunt was the attraction on Thursday.

LANCASTER.—ATHENÆUM.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alfred Hook.—A Destroyer of Men, played by Mr. James Hare's company, is proving a great attraction here. Mr. C. P. Wentworth, as Count Starevitch, is decidedly good; Mr. Hill Cremer, as Paul (his son), gives a capable impersonation; Mr. James Hare, as Karl Mischla, does full justice to a difficult rôle; Miss Irene Clifford, as Olga, gives a delightful delineation; Miss Emmie Barton plays Vida Ravel in a winsome manner; and Miss Alice Buckland is highly amusing as Nina Pattakake.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. John Porter and W. J. Fergusson.—Variety gives way this week to The Chinese Honeymoon, well presented by Mr. Chas. Macdona's company. Miss Kitty Clayton, as Fi Fi, is exceedingly funny; Mr. Leo Kloss gives a fine impersonation of the Emperor; Messrs. Louis Ashmeade and Lindsay Harman appear successfully as Chippie Chop and Hi Lung; Mr. Ernest Sefton is a capital Pineapple; Mrs. Pineapple has a winsome and capable exponent in Miss May Davis; a charming Soo Soo comes from Miss Lydia Bland; Mr. Frank G. Gunn is a capable Tom Hatherton; and Miss Alma Bolton supplies a very ripe impersonation of the official mother-in-law, Mrs. Brown.

LEAMINGTON.—THEATRE ROYAL. — Lessees, Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Manager, Walter P. Wright.—We have an excellent variety programme here this week. Dick Bradley is a clever trick cyclist; Bert Oakley and Polly James, in A Bit of Everything, prove exceedingly popular; Nina St. Elmo is a charming comedienne; Clarissa Talbot and Albert Pearce present a pretty Japanese duologue; Mint and Mast are clever comedy sketch artists; the Olympian Stars are well received; and the Carpos Bros. in their acrobatic act, give a fine display; pictures are also shown by Vernon's Imperial Bioscope.

The management of the Leamington Theatre have this season determined to utilise the house for variety as well as purely theatrical performances, in order to keep it open for a longer season, and thus provide a more varied class of entertainment. The season has opened with variety entertainments, and so far the experiment has proved very successful.

LEEDS.—GRAND THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager, Mr. Edward Cadman.—A full and enthusiastic house accorded Mr. H. B. Irving a big reception on Monday, when this accomplished son of an illustrious father presented The Bells. The portrayal of Mathias by Mr. Irving created a deep impression, and evoked a storm of applause; Annette is a pleasing performance by Miss Gwladys Wynee; Christian is presented in able style by Mr. Bernard Limpus; and Mr. Charles Dodsworth enacts Father Walter to the general satisfaction. The Lion and the Unicorn was played as a curtain-raiser. On Tuesday evening The Lyons Mail was presented to a large and distinguished audience, and Charles the First is also in the répertoire.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; General-Manager, Mr. R. Ernest Liston.—A Sister's Sin, by Mr. F. G. Kimberley, is the attraction here. Some fine dramatic work is done by Miss Kathryn Eckhart as Charzel, the gipsy; Harold Raymond and his charming young wife are presented with rare ability by Mr. A. Wills and Miss Violet Ingram; an extremely effective portrayal of the villainous George Oakley goes to the credit of Mr. Frank Eaglesfield; Mr. Harry Lyndon does capitally as Theophilus Hope; a pleasing representation of May Raymond is that of Miss Lilian Balee; and Mr. Ernest Frere, Miss Janet Lawton, and Miss Maggie English also do good work.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. T. Gerald Morton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Alex Galley.—The Boissetts are once again here with their screamer, The Bricklayers, which continues to provoke a multitude of laughs. At the bottom of the bill are the Borghetti Troupe in clever acrobatic feats. The Haytors are to be seen in clever comedy and tricky dancing; Cullan's Comedy Four are much applauded for a smart speciality; the Ten San-Tan Girls contribute a song and dance speciality; and Cissie Curlette, mimetic vocalist, the Three Clarions, comedy entertainers, Grace Merton, vocalist, and the Sisters Poole, society entertainers, achieve considerable success.

QUEEN'S THEATRE AND VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. F. W. Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Bush.—A dramatic sketch, The Red Letter, is the tit-bit of this week's programme, and in its presentation Mr. H. Leslie Bell, Miss Lily Pearl, and company acquit themselves well; Helen Charles is rewarded with applause for a fine drawing-room entertainment; a capital gymnastic effort by Charles Serra is well received; the Bartholomew Girls are to the fore with clever song and dance; Edie Anderson is a comedienne of merit; physical culture methods are demonstrated in interesting style by W. L. Murray; and other good turns are subscribed by Ted Saunders, a clever mimic, and Selby and Myers, comedians.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Thos. Barrasford; General-Managers, Messrs. Chas. Weldon and Mr. Claude Shayler.—The Bensons are doing a lively and mirthful comedy sketch here; Collinson's company also provoke a deal of merriment; Daisy Jerome is as popular as ever; Vandinoff, the lightning sketch artist, arouses much enthusiasm; and the same remark applies to Colby and May, in a capital ventriloquial speciality; the Sisters Brooke receive much notice for clever singing and dancing; and Mike Cray, comedy juggler, Mabel Hind, character comedienne, and Nellie Moore, in impersonations, are popular.

CITY VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. F. W. Wood; General-Manager, Mr. J. C. Whiteman; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sam Jones.—The premier position here is occupied by a clever musical comedy burlesque, The Belle of Barcelona, and its presentation is much enjoyed. That laughter-provoking comedian, Harry Conlin, is funnier than ever in new items; Duncan and Godfrey are vastly popular with an effective coster speciality extremely well done; Rosie Coleman is a strong favourite in song and dance; the Selwyns please with a vocal and dancing act; the Society Quartette are capital entertainers; and Marriott Edgar, comedian, is also in the bill.

LEICESTER.—ROYAL OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Business-Manager, Mr. Charles Hermann.—We are being regaled this week with a first visit of Mr. Fred Mouillot's company, in the musical comedy The Girl Behind the Counter. Miss Nora Brocklebank wins admiration for a delightful impersonation of the title-part, her singing being much above the average; Miss Florence Lee as Millie Mostyn is deserving of high praise; Mr. Ellis Holland as General Sir Wilkie Willoughby creates no end of merriment; and Mr. Arthur Cartwright both acts and sings well as Charles Chetwyn.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole L

LIVERPOOL.—Royal Court Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Lawrence.—With a view to test the feeling of Liverpool as to the feasibility of reviving on a grand scale some of Shakespeare's most popular light works, a scheme which has been attended with considerable success at Manchester, Mr. Robert Arthur on Monday staged here As You Like It. The entire production was from the Manchester Theatre Royal, and there was certainly nothing lacking, either in its manner of presentment or the ability of the players engaged in the interpretation. So complete and satisfying a representation of the immortal bard's always favourite comedy should certainly whet the appetites of playgoers for similar treats in future. Everybody was pleased, and the attendance a large one. To Mr. Gerald Lawrence was extended a greeting that must have assured him of his auditors' appreciation of his great histrionic gifts. A finer Orlando could not be desired. The telling, melodious voice and charming manner of Miss Fay Davis were employed with delicious effect in the part of Rosalind. That lady, however, owed much to Miss Valerie Salberg for her valuable support as Celia, whose sweetly-expressed commiseration for her distressed companion greatly impressed the audience by reason of its naturalness. Miss Salberg certainly shared the honours of the evening. Jaques was handled in capital fashion by Mr. W. Farren, jun., who delivered the "seven ages" speech with tact; Mr. Harry Paulton's Touchstone was filled with rich drollery; as the banished Duke Mr. John Nesbitt found favour; and thanks were also due to Miss Violet Chamier for her Audrey; to Miss Francis Weistead, who was Phœbe; to Mr. Orlando Barnett, who fully realised the character of Adam; and to Mr. Frank Western, a capital Le Brue. The incidental music by Mr. Edward German, which was rendered by an augmented orchestra, was particularly fine.

Shakespeare Theatre. — Managing Directors, Messrs. E. Stevens and R. C. Buchanan; Manager and Secretary, Mr. John Gaffney.—The Bondman was given here this week for the first time in Liverpool, and on all hands nothing but praise was heard regarding Mr. Hall Caine's latest powerful drama. Delighted audiences have "eaten" it. Mr. George D. Day sent a most competent company, which included Mr. Frank Cooper. That able artist's wonderful picture of the passion-tossed Jason moved his auditors to a remarkable degree, and the "curtains" were many; Miss Ida Phillips impersonated Greeba with delicacy and refinement; every credit was due to Mr. Henry Doughty for his striking character of Michael; Mr. Adam Alexander and Mrs. Edwin Palmer were admirable as the Fairbrothers; Mr. Gilbert Yorke stood out with distinction as the good Father Ferrati; Mr. Edwin Palmer proved an amusing grandfather; Mr. Edward Gee did the most with Dr. Boni; the Misses Bertha Frances and Ethel Eden were efficient in the small parts of the Callow girls; and worthy support came from Miss Hazel Hood (Nattaline), Miss May Mundan (Martha), and Mrs. Lee (Maria). The mounting was a strong feature.

Rotunda Theatre.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company are here this week with the stirring drama, At Cripple Creek. As Joe Mayfield Mr. Stanley Bedwell played with every discretion, and won general approval; Miss Agnes Verity proved a most creditable "Dynamite" Ann; as the rascally Martin Mason Mr. Eric Hudson bore himself with distinction; Miss Daisy Carlton proved a sweet Maggie Mason; the comedy was in the good keeping of Mr. Will Hook, a funny Reggie Harwood; Mr. J. L. Leigh gave a fine idea of the bully, Manuel Alvarez; thanks were due to Miss Norah Dillon for her Sarah Lively; and Miss Nancy Roberts made an interesting Belle Gordon.

Star Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr Harris Fineberg.—The Female Swindler has paid still another visit to the popular Star, and good business has resulted. Mr. Tom Taylor's company comprised some really capable artists, all of whom did justice to the play. Foremost was Miss Madge Girdlestone, whose assumption of the title-part was marked by dramatic power; the energetic detective, Jack Coulson, was admirably portrayed by Mr. Joseph Millane; Mr. Frank Woodville was highly amusing as Abraham Mikestein; continuous laughter followed the humorous work of Mr. Henry Wright, whose representations of four distinct characters were excellent, and Miss Jessica Ford, a smart Mary Ann Mee; a sufficiently rascally Geoffrey Warden came from Mr. Stanley Radcliffe; and creditable were the efforts of Mr. Walter H. Domoney (Harold Travers) and Miss Cecilia Dare (May Andrews).

Queen's Theatre.—Proprietors, the Granville Theatres, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Fred Granville.—When It Was Dark paid a first visit to Liverpool here this week, with Mrs. Morton Powell's able company. The fine drama was very favourably received. Miss Beatrice May gave a powerful rendering of the part of Gertrude Hunt, the unfortunate woman; Mr. Cuthbert Imrie made a deep impression with his Constantine Schaube; Mr. Frank Tennent afforded the utmost satisfaction as the Rev. Basil Gortre; a villainous Sir Robert Llewellyn was submitted by Mr. Edward Valentine; Mrs. Morton Powell proved a charming Helena Byars; and good support also came from Messrs. Lionel West, Ernest St. John J. L. Inglis, C. O'Connor, and Miss Dorothy Hildebrand.

Empire.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Albert C. Duncan.—Happy Fanny Fields tops the bill here this week, and has proved as lively as ever; another big line has been the Gotham Comedy Quartette; The Garden of Girls, presented by Haley's company of vocalists and dancers, met with general applause; a number of well-executed illusions came from Oswald Williams, assisted by Winifred La Barte; Florence and Lillian showed themselves to be talented musicians; a most amusing trifle, entitled Fun at a Railway Station, was presented by Farley, Rennie, and Farley; La Belle Nello, as a lady contortionist, displayed remarkable ability; and others who appeared were Charles Stevens, character-vocalist; and J. A. Wilson, the funny recruiting sergeant.

Tivoli.—Proprietors, Liverpool Theatres of Varieties, Ltd.; Director of Entertainments, Mr. Fred Willmot; Manager, Mr. James Marks.—A smart comedy couple, Ross and Grayson, head the bill here this week, their mélange of music, singing, dancing, and piano-playing being exceedingly pleasing; Nat Clifford, a comedian of ability, put his audience into a good humour; as operatic duettists, the Elgars earned loud applause; Les Uniques gave an interesting gymnastic pot-pourri on electrically illuminated perpendicular ladders; Datas replied to questions with his customary accuracy; Ernest Montefiore and company pleased with the pathetic Little Colonel; Mlle. Zelda had a neat musical novelty act; and there also appeared Ruby Aston, comedienne and dancer; and Gladys Huxley, comedienne.

Lyric.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—Heading the bill here this week were the Fred Moule and E. D. Nicholls's company with The Battle of the Belles, a sketch that provoked endless laughter; Luis Hardt, "the miniature Sandow," pleased everybody with his "Flights of Imagination"; those funny comedians, Will and Ike Scott, brought their latest successes; under the direction of Frank Pemberton, the Maritana Operatic company gave condensed versions of Il Trovatore and The Bohemian Girl, the artists engaged being Frank Pemberton, Albert Chapman, Vera Viyard, and Evelyn De Lara; Charles Norton was a novelty mimic of ability; as vocal duettists the Sisters Edwards pleased immensely; and also in the list were Ernie Myers, eccentric comedian; the San Remo Girls, comediennes and speciality dancers; and Lily Lonsdale, vocalist.

Royal Hippodrome. — Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Walter Hassan.—Captain Frank Taylor's educated baboons have proved an interesting turn here this week; that exceedingly funny comedian, Sammy Shields, tickled the ribs of his audiences to a remarkable degree; Kellie and Agnas submitted a smart turn as comedy acrobats, singers, and dancers; Billy Williams made everybody laugh; dainty singers and dancers were the Sisters Albert; a good all-round show was given by the Vyponds, society entertainers; the vocal speciality presented by Stewart and Morgan was well appreciated; Martine and Son's illustrated songs met with acceptance; and the list also included the name of George Victor, actor-vocalist.

Royal Palace of Varieties.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole.—This week the "Royal" stock company presented Scudamore's play, Dangerous Women, the principal rôles in which were held by Messrs. Harry Tresham (Ronald Courteney), Cecil Ravenswood (Colonel Rothwell), Sydney Grant (Dr. Dysart), E. D. Allen (Mark Raby and Dick Pudsey), R. Wilton (Smudge), Miss Florence Palmer (Sylvia Rothwell), Miss Beryl Ravenswood (Cora Fay), and Miss Florence Cameron (Bessie Basket).

Paddington Palace. — Proprietors, Liverpool Theatres of Varieties, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. N. Edwards.—The Human Spider has been staged here this week by the "Palace Theatre" stock dramatic company. Mr. Harry Wren was the Colonel Wintringham; Mr. Ernest Wingfield, George Wintringham; Mr. Frank S. Strickland, Basil Mortimer; Mr. H. Hesslegrave, Shmi Khan; Mr. Francis E. Wybert, Romilus Potter; Mr. H. G. Brandon, Jack Chignall; Miss Gladys Hastings Walton, Millie Tresdale; and Miss Florence Barnes, Janey Jenkins.

Haymarket.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. Edwin W. Smith.—Harry Calden and company continue to prove a big attraction here. This week they have given a well-presented dramatic sketch, entitled A Vision of the Past; or, a Villain's Scheme; Bella Leaburn, a smart comedienne, paid a welcome return visit; some clever work on the silver rings was performed by Akbar; La Belle Bowles sang and danced well; and the Bioscope had the latest pictures.

Westminster.—Lessee, Mr. Fred E. Weisker; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Montgomery.—Charlie Chard, vocal character comedian, has been prominent here this week making everybody happy; another excellent line was Chris Van Bern, eccentric comedian; some remarkable work in club-swinging, boxing, and wrestling was executed by Lachie Thomson's Topweights; the Sisters Walmsley were neat duettists and dancers; and there also appeared Flo Lister, contralto, and Annie Casey, comedienne.

Olympia.—District-Manager, Mr. Albert Bulmer; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wighton.—A clever satire, entitled The House of Lords, presented by the Savoyards, has occupied a big place in the programme here this week, and been richly enjoyed for its excellent humour, the artists taking part being G. H. Snazelle, Ethel Macalpine, Mary Fraser, Alec Fraser, and J. J. Dallas; the remarkable intelligence shown by De Gracia's elephants has been generally commented on; La Berat gave a picturesque fire dance; endless laughter was aroused by the eccentric musical comedians, Binns and Binns; Olive and Owen proved an excellent turn with their comedy act, Roadside Tinkers; Amy Anderson and company gave an enjoyable coster scena, The Banana Queen; a humorous dancing speciality, Fits and Misfits, came from Ross and Lewis; and also in the programme were C. Robinson, vocalist; and Ted E. Box, eccentric comedian and silleur.

Roscommon.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Willmot.—Good business continues to be done here by the stock dramatic company, who are playing drama twice each night. This week the ever-popular Shaughraun has been given in excellent style by Mr. Percy Boucher's company, that gentleman causing a deal of laughter as the rollicking Conn. Mr. J. D. Geddes afforded satisfaction in the rôle of Captain Molyneaux; Mr. A. Wilson-Rae made an efficient Robert Florliott; Mr. Mark Mills proved a satisfactory Father Dolan; as Harvey Duff Mr. C. H. Maxwell was as villainous as could be; Miss Madge Blundell acted neatly as Arte O'Neill; a graceful Clare Ffolloitt was submitted by Miss Lilian Beaumont; Miss Enid Wilde proved very popular as Moya; and praise was earned by Mrs. E. F. Brady, who played Mrs. O'Kelly.

LLANDUDNO.—Grand Theatre.—Manager, Mr. A. G. Pugh.—Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company appeared here on Monday for three nights in Peter's Mother. Mr. Charles Harley as Sir Timothy Crewys was well placed; Miss Lilias Earle as Lady Mary Crewys played excellently; Mr. Percy Hutchison distinguished himself as Peter; and Miss Mary Griffith gave a good impersonation of Lady Belstone. Miss Annie Stalman as Miss G. Crewys well sustained the part; and Mr. Alfred Bucklaw was good as John Crewys. Sarah was in the capable hands of Miss Hilda Honies. The Blue Moon was announced for Thursday.

Prince's Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. A. E. Vaughan; Manager, Mr. J. Ritson.—Our Flat occupied the boards here on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. The Nathaniel Glover of Mr. Rollo Balmain was good; and Miss Sara Mignon as Bella was well placed. Mr. J. Percy Watson did well as Reginald Sylvestre; and Miss Vera Fordyce made an attractive Margery Sylvester. The Night of the Party was announced for Thursday.

Pier Head Pavilion.—Local-Manager, Mr. A. R. Sutcliffe.—Messrs. Adeler and Sutton again provide a tip-top bill, first and foremost being Mr. Charlie Harvey (the Bundle of fun); Miss Lilian Barness is a first-class contralto; Mr. A. R. Sutcliffe is as vivacious as ever; Mr. Clifford Grey is clever; Mr. C. D. Reekie is a good comedian and mimic; and Mr. J. A. Sunbridge ably presides at the piano.

LONG EATON.—St. James's Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Lindsey Edwards.—This week we have a visit from A Soldier of France company. Mr. Leonard Aardale and Miss Hettie Zillwood have the chief parts as the Corporal and Pauline, and the scene when the feelings of the mother become ascendant is very touching. The merry business is safe in the keeping of Mr. David Phillips and Miss Jennie Clare, the latter's slavey song being encored.

LOWESTOFT. — South Beach Pavilion. — Proprietors, the Lowestoft Corporation; Manager, Mr. R. C. Luxton.—The excellent variety programme here still draws good audiences, although the season is on the wane. Charles Kay is a very popular comedian; Bod Jose has added to his reputation as a clever turn; Guy Carlton wins all hearts with his fine tenor voice; and Humphrey Bishop (bass) and Fanny Chetham gain well-merited applause; Frances Roscorla is a dainty little Dutch girl; and Madge Campbell is always refreshing.

Marina.—Manager, Mr. E. A. Smith.—For the first part of the week we have Mr. Chas. Macdona's company, in Dr. Wake's Patient. The piece is cleverly staged and dressed, and the parts are creditably sustained.

The Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert.—This popular house was re-opened for the season on Monday by the British Biograph company, having been redecorated and arranged with excellent taste. The stage is enlarged so as to admit of some of the best turns on the variety stage. In addition to the charming series of pictures, we have Mlle. Lumiere, serpentine dancer; Agnese and Arthur Lynch, and the Donatos, in a clever entertainment.

LUTON.—Grand Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. E. Graham Falcon; Manager, Mr. Louis J. Beard.—Mr. Geoffrey Fulton has brought his newly-produced drama, A Girl Redeemed from Sin, here this week. Nancy Lee is ably portrayed by Miss Olive Fulton. She is ably supported by Mr. Spinner as Robert Denham, Mr. Burgess as Ernest Sylveston, and a good all-round company.

MANCHESTER.—Theatre Royal.—Lessees, the United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edmonstone Shirra.—Mr. Hubert Druce's company is playing here this week The Pocket Miss Hercules. Plenty of comic effect is gained by Mr. Stanley Cooke as the dudish young suitor and Miss Ruth Mackay in the title-rôle. The part of Lord Dyderdown's butler, Meakin, is skilfully handled by Mr. T. J. Bell; Mr. H. Athol Ford does well as Lord Dyderdown; Mr. Douglas Hamilton capably fills the part of the Rev. Falarope; and the clever work of Mrs. C. Herbert Hewitson, Miss Amy Coleman, Miss Daisy Atherton, and Mr. Frank Smiles completes a brisk and satisfactory performance. The piece forms a lively contrast to The Lottery, which precedes.

Prince's Theatre. — Proprietors, the United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Lee.—A visit of Mr. George Edwardes's company, in See-See, attracted a large house here on Monday. The cast includes Miss Denise Orme in her original part of the Beauty of Pekin, and she is accorded a reception which is well earned by her charming impersonation and her vocal gifts. As Yen Mr. Leonard Mackay is also a great success with his fine voice and manly style, while Miss Maud Boyd shines as the fortune-teller, Mai-Yai. The humorous element is in the capable hands of Mr. Frank Danby and Mr. W. H. Rawlins, both well-known and popular comedians; and a distinct hit is made by Miss Octavia Barry in her vocal opportunities as Maio-Yao. Among others who contribute to the bright effect, a word of praise is due to Miss Adeline Lester, Miss Dora Langham, Miss Daisy Revett, and Miss Hilda Holton.

Royal Osborne Theatre. — Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Mason.—We have here this week Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company in For Her Sake. Miss Mabel Mannering as Olga and Mr. Wellesley Draper as Prince Vladimir are at the head of a very able cast, and are applauded for their excellent work. As the proud mother of the Prince Miss D. Gilham does well in a strong part; Mr. Bernard Mervyn capitally portrays the villainy of Gregorvitch, the traitor and spy; and as Ivan, a serf, Mr. Fred Hilliard plays dramatically; while Mr. C. E. Johnson figures well as Nicholas; and entertaining humour is supplied by Messrs. Sidney Benson and Fred Beech, and Misses Gertrude Netterville and Mamie Randall.

Metropole Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hearn.—Mr. J. A. Campbell's company is here this week, still delighting patrons on the Broadhead circuit by their performance of the homely and effective drama, The Little Breadwinner.

St. James's Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. R. Flanagan; Manager, Mr. P. Ryan Smith.—Mr. Charles H. Phelps and company, under the business management of Mr. Charles Melvin, are here this week in an effective musical comedy-drama, One Woman's Wickedness. A well-varied cast includes a number of strong parts, among which that of Jem Craggs, an escaped convict, is excellently played by Mr. Charles H. Phelps, who is also the author of the piece. Miss Irene Carrington is well suited as Janet Raymond; Miss Florence M. Daly is very good as Janet's mother; Miss Mabel Hal ldepicts Lillian Craggs with nice judgment and finish; and Miss Cissy Clarke gives a clever and humorous impersonation of Jenny Jiggles, the occasionally vocal barmaid. Mr. Frank Roy as Philip Beaufort plays in heroic style; Mr. Frank Hertie makes an aceptable Paul Roque, the solicitor; Mr. Harry Howe contributes a good character sketch of a London pickpocket; and Mr. Clifford Spencer's Lord Algernon Fitznoodle is light and amusing. All the remaining parts are capably played.

Grand Junction Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Day.—Mr. W. H. Hallatt's company are here this week in Two Little Sailor Boys, after a successful week at the Royal Osborne Theatre.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—A very successful top star turn here this week is that of Victoria Monks, whose principal item, "Moving Day," is capitally done. Leipzig, conjurer and card manipulator, is also prominent, and exhibits some wonderful sleight-of-hand. Walter Munroe is very well received; Maggie Bowman and Tom J. Morton appear in a clever comedy item; Horace Pollock and company present Pinero's sketch, Hester's Mystery, in good style; George Newburn, the popular mimic, imitates well-known favourites with wonderful fidelity; Park's Eton Boys submit some enjoyable singing; Josie Mooney, vocalist and dancer, adds a capable turn; and, in addition to the Dieppe motor race on the Bioscope, the programme includes a number of trial turns, a different one appearing at each performance.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. P. Morgan.—The Typhoon is to be seen here this week, and reflects great credit on all concerned. The Famous Craggs go through a wonderful performance; Harry Rochez introduces some remarkably well-trained animals; J. W. Rowley is heard in new songs and old; Wyndham and Kitty are clever on the wire; Ella Dean sings well; and Johnson and Best are successful in a novel act, A Queer Customer. Hamish McCunn's delightful musical setting to "The Wreck of the Hesperus" is beautifully rendered by the choir and orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Alfred Haines, the musical director; and some excellent Bioscope pictures and a part-song by the choir also help to strengthen the programme.

Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. Walter De Frece; Secretary, Mr. Peter Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Tealor Wade.—Cissie Lawson tops the bill here this week in that exciting episode, The Devil's Sunday, which is well acted throughout. The Six Brothers Luck are highly amusing in their well-known absurdity, Blazes; Howard and Collinson are better than ever in their funny act, The Porter and the Parcel; D'Arc's Marionettes are altogether excellent; the Grisse Trio are clever acrobats; Alexandra Edwin has a good voice, and is well received; Harry Rogerson, the idle comedian, is good; the Fitzroys are capital in their trapeze and rope speciality; and Farr and Farland have some good patter, and play well on the banjo. The Bioscope pictures are, as usual, good.

Tivoli.—Managing-Director, Mr. Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—The Cattanios, including Mlle. Devralboy and the Kaffir Sydney, are a wonderfully clever troupe of comedy tumblers, and are deservedly well received. Rachel Lowe, the charming comedy artist, meets with a big reception; Fred Herbert, the popular topical vocalist, makes a decided hit; Maud Lordy's dogs are well trained; the Llewelyns, in The Two Wicked Maids, a comedy operetta, are exceedingly good; Percival and Morley, in the duologue Turtle Doves, prove popular; and good dancing is done by Cissie Esdaile, Edie Jennis and Gertie Laune, and Ella Beaumont. Raymond's Vivagraph pictures are interesting.

Queen's Park Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meek.—The Five Musical Tritons, in a gorgeous, spectacular, electrical, musical scena, are delightful, and the singing of Miss Lydia is very good. Lallie Brooke is exceedingly pleasing in a pretty song-scena; the Foy Brothers and company do some clever tumbling; Wyndham and Waters are amusing in The Professor and His Pupil; the Four Regals are excellent in gymnastic and muscular feats; Larry Lewis is a capital comedian; Howard and Wallace do well in a neat sketch; Jessie Jukes sings and dances smartly; Sadler and Ross are entertaining cross-talkers; and Sam Shipley is an amusing comedian. Pictures complete.

King's (Longsight).—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. B. Taylor.—Mr. Lester Collingwood's very capable company are the attraction here this week in that highly successful play, When London Sleeps. Mr. Richard Ferris as Captain Rodney Haynes and Mr. E. E. Ashby as David are particularly good. Miss Mabel Scudamore as Queenie Carruthers is pleasing and effective, and Miss Lilla Wilde does well as Hilda Carode. Considerable amusement is caused by Mr. D'Arcy Kelway, Mr. Frank Howard, and Miss Bella Power; and good work is also done by Miss Daisy Clifford, Miss Ethyl Sinclair, and Mr. Tom Roydon.

Hulme Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Kay.—The big turn here this week is Jesse L. Lasky and company in the latest novelty, The Fourteen Black Hussars, which is highly successful. Phil Herman, the veteran Dutch comedian, entertains in his usual good style; the Yorkshire Meisters are good singers; Bonetti and Corrie are clever comedy jugglers; the Cumberlands are exceedingly smart in an up-to-date cycle act; and enjoyable turns are also contributed by the Columbia Coloured Coons in their scena, Plantation Pastimes; Lucy Coventry, comedienne; and Horace Sade, dancer. Mrs. Brown's Troubles are depicted on the Bioscope.

MACCLESFIELD. — Royal. — Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. H. Gatley.—Large audiences have taken pleasure in witnessing the stirring drama, Between the Lights, as presented by Messrs. Fred Acton and H. C. Nash's company. Mr. E. Stream as Captain Robert Hinton played the part to perfection; and Mr. F. Garrett was typical in the part of Gerald Warren. Mr. F. Orchard presented in realistic manner the dual characters of Oswald Warren and Ben Armley; Mr. W. R. Winning gave a sound impersonation of Stanley Crofton; and Mr. F. Acton was especially excellent as Jimmy Tickle. Mr. F. Daleno did well as Charles Stott; Miss Phyllis Elton gave a charming portrayal as Violet Warren; Miss Winifred Acton was entertaining as Ellen; Miss Fannie Williams was a host in herself as Madge Armley; and Miss Millie Doris did all that was desired as Kittie.

MAIDENHEAD.—Town Hall.—Secretary, the Town Clerk.—Mr. J. Bannister Howard's company, playing The Silver King, had a hearty reception on Sept. 10, the hall being crowded. Mr. E. Stanton Sharp gave a consistent rendering of the title-rôle; Miss Florence Radcliffe was a natural Nellie Denver; Mr. Roland Howard an interesting Jaikes; and the children were well represented by Dorothy Love and Doris Thorne. Mr. Paul Beckett as the Spider was realistic, being well supported by Mr. Ralph Leo as Henry Corket and Mr. William Dempsey as Coombe.

MANSFIELD.—Grand Theatre. — Proprietors, Mansfield, Sutton, and District Theatres, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Captain Cecil Clayton.—During this week Mr. John F. Preston's company have been presenting Rogues of the Turf to good houses. Mr. Preston is admirable in the rôle of Joe Flaxman; Mr. Ernest R. Allen is well placed as Arthur Somerton; Mr. Arthur Lenville plays the part of Moses Solomon to the life; and Captain Dudley Clifton is in the safe keeping of Mr. W. H. Barlow. Miss Mabelle F. Barlow gives a very powerful portrayal of the exacting part of Marion, Lady Heathcote; Sir Gerald Heathcote being admirably represented by Mr. A. Hartley. Miss Ethel Rainforth is sympathetic in the rôle of Nellie Flaxman. The comedy parts of Phyllis Wurzel and Sammy Flaxman are in very capable hands; Miss Laura Wright, Mr. Horace Custins, and Mr. Arthur Bell are all that can be desired in their respective parts.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Herbert Darnley; Resident-Director, Mr. Tom Jennings; Acting-Manager, Mr. Mark Lorne.—Mr. Herbert Darnley has this week produced a new play, entitled A Mother's Sacrifice, a full report of which appears on another page.

MARGATE.—Theatre Royal.—Exclusive Manager, Mr. Edward Michael; Resident-Manager, Mr. Wallis Clark.—The Truth was played here on Monday and the two following evenings. Becky was delightfully portrayed by Miss Decima Moore. In the lighter portions of the comedy she caused considerable merriment, whilst in the sterner scenes her emotional acting was particularly effective. Mr. Robert Minster gave a finished conception of the rôle of Becky's husband, Tom; Mr. Hugh Ardale was especially good as the profligate husband, Fred Lindon; and Mr. Arthur Hare played Stephen Roland, Becky's father, to a nicety. Eve Lindon was admirably played by Miss Maud Linden; Miss Kitty Lofting was excellent as Laura Fraser; and Miss Elspeth Dudgeon was effective as the designing Mrs. Crespigny. Mr. Howard Leslie was satisfactory as Jenks. On Thursday evening the bill was changed for a week-end visit of What the Butler Saw.

The Hippodrome.—Joint Proprietors, Mr. Fred Mouillot and Mr. Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident - Manager, Mr. C. F. As Nina Miss Grace Armytage Noble meets with gratifying success; Mr. Stephen T. Ewart plays Hilary Jesson with power; and Mr. J. Edward Pearce as Filmer Jesson is responsible for a good interpretation. Mr. Lloyd Lowndes as Major Maurewade gives satisfaction; and the part of Mlle. Thomé has an able representative in Mlle. Lilli Kehr. The Ridgleys find clever representatives in Mr. George Fitzgerald, Mr. E. R. Holloway, Miss Augusta Haviland, and Miss Blanka Stewart. The part of Dereck Jesson is in the capable hands of Miss V. May Harris. The scenery and costumes are exceedingly pretty.

Empire Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Brill; Manager, Mr. Charles Rembges.—A Japanese Love Story, a charming little operetta, is given here this week by Marie San Toi's company. Much laughter is caused by Claude Ginnett's company, in Rejected Remounts; Marie Jones gives a clever quick-change turn; George Brooks has some new and up-to-date songs; and Gertie Gitana is a most pleasing comedienne and dancer. Other turns are given by Lily Flexmore (dancer) and Lizzie Daniels (comedienne).

Oxford Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Alfred Graham; Manager, Mr. R. L. Griffiths. — Victor Travers causes laughter with his songs and patter; and Ford and Barras prove themselves remarkable dancers. Fatmah Diard, the American prima donna, delights all with her singing; the ventriloquial sketches of Cavalli are amusing; and other turns are provided by May de Rowse, Ted Tomus, Ormonde Penstone, and Hans and Lord.

MORECAMBE.—Royalty Theatre and Opera House.—Sole Lessee, Lieut. Julian Malvern; General-Manager, Mr. Chas. M. Julian.—Miss Emma and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company, in Peter's Mother, have been doing good business. The cast includes Miss Violet Ley, who is admirable as Lady Mary Crewys, Mr. Henry Renouf as John Crewys, Q.C., and Mr. E. F. Meads as Peter Crewys, a part in which he does very well. Miss Hilda Sims, Miss Evelyn Shelley, and Miss Mallalieu, Messrs. Ernest Rusten, Wm. Mallalieu, Townsend Whitling, P. Calder, and Frank Case are suitably fitted. The play is preceded by Chalk and Cheese, a one-act piece by Eille Norwood.

Winter Gardens.—Manager, Mr. Tom Atkinson.—Tom Foy and company, in The Yorkshire Lad in London, have caused roars of laughter; and Mlle. Haydee's mannikins are cleverly worked. Others in the programme are Lillian Victoria, male impersonator; Vosper, facial mimic; Bennett and Martell, comedians; Carl Howard, in magic and comedy; Halma, juggler; and the Coventry Pageant on the Bioscope.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. Teale Lingham.—Mr. Lewis Waller and a talented company are drawing crowded audiences in Robin Hood. In the title-rôle Mr. Waller is splendid, vigour, grace, vivacity, and perfect elocution characterising his efforts all through; Miss Nora Lancaster's Marion is graceful, natural, and altogether winning; and both these artists well deserve the frequent calls before the curtain that they receive at the end of each of the four acts. Mr. Shiel Barry contributes an excellent study of Prince John; and Mr. Frank Woolfe plays in courtly manner the part of King Richard Cœur de Lion; a jolly and jovial Friar Tuck is Mr. Charles Rock, fulfilling the part to the letter; Mr. Cecil Cameron as Allan a'Dale scores with his several songs; and very good is Mr. Herbert Jarman as John Little; Adela is ably impersonated by Miss Dora Barton; and Alison Merch finds a sweet exponent in Miss Eleanor May. Others taking prominent parts are Mr. S. B. Brereton, Mr. Owen Roughwood, and Miss Helen Layton.

Tyne Theatre and Opera House.—Lessees, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred C. Sutcliffe.—Mr. Edward Terry, supported by a good all-round company, appears in a series of his well-known successes. On Monday evening Liberty Hall was staged, and in the part of William Todman Mr. Terry finds a rôle admirably suited to his style and reputation. He is ably supported by Miss Marion Ripley, Mr. Thos. Holding, and others. On Tuesday evening Sweet Lavender was staged, and other pieces played during the week were The Magistrate, The Rocket, and Paul Pry

Louise; Miss Clara Earle is a vivacious Stephanie; and Miss G. Robertson an interesting Blanche. Mr. Tom Robertson deserves every praise as Talleyrand; and Mr. Frank Stone is an admirable Marquis de Beaumont.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. F. W. Fitt.—Mr. Bransby Williams is here this week, delighting large audiences with characters from Dickens; Le Diablo performs his feat of "Looping the Devil's Wheel," whilst the audience are moved to intense excitement; Oakdene is a clever ventriloquist; Patty Yole finds favour as a vocalist; Mr. Charles J. Johnson, "the black diamond," has a good reception; Regan and Ryan are good as comedians and dancers; and Fred Cary, comedian, is very popular. The Hippo-Bio exhibits interesting scenes.

NOTTINGHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL. — Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Howard Finney.—My Wife was capitally presented here on Monday by Messrs. Silvanus Dauncey and M. V. Leveaux's company. Mr. Eille Norwood, an excellent comedian, fulfils the highest expectations as the volatile Gerald Eversleigh; Miss Cicely Stuckey furnishes a delightful rendering of the romantic and wilful Trixie; Mr. J. W. Deverell handles the feather-brained "Gibby" with a discriminating taste that deserves praise; and Falandris is smartly played by Mr. Edmund Hollick. Mr. Alfred S. Barber makes an amusing Dupré; Miss Lily Leverne as the frivolous Baroness plays with a light comedy touch; Miss Mary Dibley makes an attractive Miriam Hawthorne; and Miss Edith Cochrane aptly assumes Mme. Dupré. The Drums of Oude precedes the comedy.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Harry Upton.—Home, Sweet Home, forms a series of incidents appealing strongly to the patrons of this house, and their interest is secured throughout the play. Miss Marion Wakeford as the heroine plays with tenderness and grace; Mr. Frank Lindo's impersonation of Stephen Armitage is the embodiment of a manly, outspoken sailor; as the old Duke of Ancaster Captain Gerald Gambier gives a characteristic portrayal; Mr. F. Miles Hodgson acts with subtlety as Lucas Lyle; and Mr. D. Doyle offers a careful study of David Armitage. Mr. George Overs is to be congratulated on his earnest and successful rendering of the fisher lad, Dick Redmayne; Miss Hetty Webster well simulates the haughty Lady Summerton; and Miss Daisy Rochefort makes a charming Dora. Miss Ray Rochefort (Sybil Fay) and Mr. T. Armitage (the Hon. Percy) are responsible for the humour.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. H Bowmaker.—Eugene Stratton is delighting large audiences here. The science of balancing has no better exponent than Mr. Carmo; Happy Tom Parker strikes a vein of humour that is contagious; Miss Ethel Stalman and Messrs. Herbert Russel and George Elliston present the comedietta, That Brute Simmons; Signor and Mme. Borelli score heavily in their mimicry of a "cat concert"; Rossi Ashton, in a song-sketching act, and Eida and Falco, vocalists and dancers, are suitably rewarded; Madge Osmond is a smart male impersonator; Marie Weston proves a dainty dancer; and Fred Lincoln adds to the humour by his song.

NUNEATON.—PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE AND ENTERTAINMENTS CO., LTD. — Managing-Director, Mr. A. F. Cross; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter J. R. Bryan.—Messrs. Armadale and Warren's company, on a return visit here, opened to a good house on Monday. As the treacherous Le Loup, Mr. Gilbert Hall is well made up, and displays considerable talent; in the arduous rôle of Paul Gouffet, Mr. T. W. Dunsmore is convincing throughout; Mr. Alfred Warne is excellent as Henry de Brisson; and a good Lucian Cortier comes from Mr. Herbert Daneville. Miss Marie Barrett is a favourite as the long-suffering Marie de Brisson; Miss Marie Tennant plays well as La Pinau; Mr. C. Alan Hineson as Peter Pottlebury, and Miss Gladys Newcombe as Babette, are the cause of plenty of mirth.

OLDHAM.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hulme.—On Monday Mr. W. W. Kelly staged for the first time here his latest production, The Gayest of the Gay. Miss Laura Walker as Kate Latimer and Susan Meredith is decidedly interesting; Mr. Ernest Owtrim as Jack Latimer is smart; Mr. Leonard Yorke as the villainous Hubert Steele acts in a forcible manner; Mr. Alfred Grenville does well as the Hon. Frank Draycott; Mr. Dennis Brayan makes a good Jake Howland; and Miss Mary Hardacre is a sympathetic Nelly Burns; Miss Helen Richmond as Doris Daintree, with Mr. Henry Belding as Barney O'Brien and Mr. William Holl as Percy Palgrave, are quaint in the comedy rôles.

COLOSSEUM.—General-Manager, Mr. W. Eastwood.—The Prodigal Daughter occupies the boards here after an absence of about eight years, and Mr. Joseph Bebb's company does full justice to the piece. Miss Millie Ford appears in the title-rôle, and acts capitally; Miss Marjorie Davenport is successful as Violet Woodmere; Mr. Chas. Herberte as the bluff Sir John Woodmere is very good; Mr. Frederick Harker makes a manly Captain Harry Vernon; Mr. Lionel Atwill a sinister Julian; Mr. G. Clifton Boyne an excellent Maurice Deepwater; Dudley Roper being well played by Mr. Marshall Meade; Miss Olive Lloyd is a demure Dorcas Gentle, and with Mr. Sidney Lynn as Lord Banbury causes much hearty laughter; Mr. George Antley is smart as Tom Blinker. The Grand National is represented with great success.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Howgate.—Chung Ling Soo is delighting large audiences here with his marvellous illusions; Les Voces sing well; Kathleen Cogan is a dainty dancer; the Bros. Dean are smart whistlers and dancers; Bob Hamilton is a successful Scotch comedian; and Harry Bickley, eccentric. The Soho Trio and Keegan and company in a laughable bicycle absurdity conclude a capital programme, which embraces the pictures on the Dottoscope.

HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Nuttall.—John Grua Marx heads the bill in his feats of strength; a musical treat is provided by Miss Mabel Mavis with piano and glassophone solos; Baroni and Kemp are smart in a quick-change skit; Wheeler and Wilson are refined comedy acrobats; Alma Obrey, comedienne, has excellent songs; Will Souls sings laughing songs with success; and Bob Baxter also does well. The latest pictures are being shown on the Dottoscope.

OXFORD.—NEW THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Oxford Theatre Company, Limited; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. C. Dorrill.—Messrs. Dottridge, Longden, and Livesey's company is here this week with The Village Blacksmith, which, capitally performed by an excellent company, met with a cordial reception on Monday. Mr. Sam Livesey is an ideal John Strong, and his acting is as effective as his physique is magnificent; Mr. Joseph Carter, too, is admirably suited as the villainous Captain Leo; Lucas Marler, St. John Herman, and Jeremiah Parkins find capable exponents in Messrs. E. Maydew, G. Wilton, and T. E. Marshall; and Mr. G. V. Campbell causes much amusement as Billy Twigg. Miss Bertha Hanbury prettily plays the part of the child, Harry Strong; Miss Edith Giddens and Mrs. T. C. Livesey are capital as Martha Mopps and Sal Parkins; Miss Cassie le Grande makes a most interesting Ruth Parkins; and Miss Maggie Edwards sustains the arduous rôle of Kate Strong in convincing fashion.

PAISLEY.—PAISLEY THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. H. Savile.—A Woman's Pluck is being presented here this week. The leading parts are finely interpreted by Mr. Matthew Boulton as Winstone Dale and Miss Dolly Gilroy as Jessie Pope. Dick Darrell is well acted by Mr. Jackson Wilcox, as is also the part of Sir Noel Fordyce by Mr. Arthur Temple. In the dual rôle of Mark Scanlon and Jim Daremont, Mr. J. P. Dryden is excellent; Mr. Harry Emmerson as Matthew Pope gives a convincing portrayal; Mr. Dicky Bird as Roger Pippin is amusing; as is also the Ophelia Pippin of Miss Fanny James; Sir John Daredevil is admirably played by Mr. Herbert Claremont; Miss Kitty Johnstone is seen to good effect in her portrayal of Bertie Daredevil; Mr. Alfred Prior figures satisfactorily as Tom Ascot; Miss Marion Fawcett acts with distinction as Grace Daremont; Miss Elsie Maitland as Lady Daredevil is capital; Miss Ethel Danby gives a good presentment of Polly Primrose; and Miss Nora Kingsley succeeds as Mrs. Pope.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Douglas F. Bostock.—The chief turn here is provided by Leonard Gautier and his miniature circus. The Gladenbecks perform marvellous hand-balancing; May Mars, burlesque actress, has a warm welcome; merriment is occasioned by Otta and Olga, mock operatic artists; the Gregson Trio, in their novel act, The Dummy, afford pleasure; Anna Kenwick, comedienne, appears to advantage; Allis and Cassati submit a refined and pleasing number; George Antill, comedian, is well received; and the Hippodrome Bioscope concludes with excellent pictures.

TOWN HALL.—Proprietors, Magistrates and Council.—W. F. Frame, "the funny man," gave his annual concert here on Saturday night. "The man you know" was in great form, and quite captivated his audience. He was assisted by Miss Lena Wylie, soprano; Jack Chambers, coon singer and dancer; The Davenports, illusionists; Andrew Brown, vocalist; The St. Johns, instrumentalists; Doo and Dare, comedy jugglers; and Clark and Cambridge, comedy artists.

PERTH.—THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. H. Savile; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Aldridge.—A False Wife is this week staged here by Mr. F. Marriott-Watson's company. Mr. Fred H. Constable plays the part of Lieut. George Mansfield with great effect, and Miss Annie Hylton gives a good account of herself as Agnes Weyland; Sir Colin Mansfield is ably impersonated by Mr. George Langham; the part of Jean Beraud is in the capable hands of Mr. F. Marriott-Watson; Mr. Elton Morgan acts in admirable style as Ben Rattler; Mr. Allen Charles is very amusing as Constable Archibald Brown Tee; Miss Florence E. Florence plays the part of Lady Mansfield with great effect, her great acting powers being especially displayed in the last scene; Bessie Blazer is humorously enacted by Miss Ivy Chandos.

PETERBOROUGH. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Manager, Mr. A. Darville Vernon.—Mr. William Greet's company is here this week, in The Shulamite. Mr. Scott gives a fine rendering of the part of Simeon Krillett; Miss Ella Thornton is well placed as Deborah Krillett; Mr. B. Garth is an excellent Robert Waring; and Mr. George Rammell does well as Jan Vanderberg. Other parts are taken by Miss Corona L'Estrange, Miss Nellie Fancourt, Miss Empsy Hawkswood, Miss Chrissie Bickerstaff, Mr. W. Uruaquart, and Mr. Albert Rogers.

PLYMOUTH. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Manager, Mr. J. Langdon Lee.—Mr. F. R. Benson's Shakespearean company on Monday presented The Merchant of Venice to a large and appreciative audience. Mr. Henry Herbert acted Shylock with becoming restraint; Miss Gladys Venderzee as Portia greatly improved as the evening advanced and scored a distinct triumph; Mr. Philip Merivale was a calm and dignified Antonio; and Mr. Baliol Holloway's fine manner and presence enabled him to score a success in the part of Bassanio. Mr. Everard Vanderlip furnished a creditable rendering of Lorenzo; Mr. Ross Shore was a genuinely humorous Gobbo; and Miss Helen Macdonald an attractive Jessica. As You Like It, The Merry Wives of Windsor, Julius Cæsar, She Stoops to Conquer, Hamlet, and Henry V. are also in the répertoire.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. Jack Field.—A very excellent "bill" is provided for the week. The Betsons provide a funny tit-bit, in which some fine cycle work is introduced; R. H. Douglass, monologue artist, presents an item brimful of smart witticisms; Mark Melford and company have a really funny sketch, entitled Only a Wedding; the Glenroy Troupe, accomplished dancers, are loudly applauded; and the Great Roland submits wonderful illusions. Other attractions are Flo. Inman, Frank Seely, and Vernon's Pictures.

PORTSMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Bell.—Mr. Frederick Mouillot's Daly's Theatre Répertoire Company on Monday presented The Geisha, Miss Joan Ritz taking the part of Mimosa San in a charming manner. Miss Florrie Saunders was a vivacious and dainty Molly Seymour; Miss Violet Kenyon an admirable Juliette; and Miss Aubrey Ashton a successful Lady Constance Wynn. Reginald Fairfax was impersonated by Mr. Cyril Dane, with natural ease; Mr. Edward Carlton's interpretation of Wun Hi was all that could be desired; the Marquis Imari was unctuously taken by Mr. Lionel Braham; Mr. J. Mansell Stringer as Captain Katana was extremely good; Mr. A. J. Nicholls also did good work as Takemine. San Toy and The Greek Slave are also in the répertoire.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. E. Agate.—Mr. Frederick Melville's able company is here in Her Forbidden Marriage. Mr. Henry Lonsdale as George Maddison plays with force and manliness; Miss Gertrude Bonser in the rôle of Lucy is natural and graceful; Mr. Louis Hector enacts Charles Devereux successfully; Mr. Leonard Maxwell as Geoffrey Broughton does good work; Mr. Henry Hare is an excellent Sir George; Miss Gertrude Hunt portrays Lady Lucretia with good effect; Miss Nellie Fletcher as the Mother Superior is dignified. The comedy side of the drama is in the most efficient hands of Miss Sybil Hare as Patty Lovejoy, and Mr. Fred De Vere as Timothy Tuttutt.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Capt. Warren Wright; Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt.—An excellent bill includes Flo Melville, a burlesque artist, with a crisp style; Kavados, juggler and equilibrist; Clarke and Glenny, in their absurdity, The Haunted House; the Sisters Morgan, duettists and dancers; Barrett and Knowles, versatile comedians; Gus Hindell, in a novel and attractive number; Belrose and De Velin, specialty duettists; Fancourt and Rubie, in their capital comedy act, Nipper, the Messenger; the Trupnell Family, graceful lady acrobats; Ten Zerbinis, in a musical scena, The Enchanted Glen; and Pat Rafferty, Irish comedian. Payne's Pictures complete an enjoyable bill.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter De Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. De Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—Mr. Arthur Roberts and company head the programme this week in The Importance of Being Another Man's Wife; Wallau is a capable and clever juggler; Miss Leah Adell's vocal scena is a very pleasing item; the Brothers Hayes, Australian comedians, are smart sand dancers; Miss Rosie Archer, mimic, shows much versatility; Johnson and Pelham, in the comedy pot-pourri, A Golf Match, are most amusing; Sydney and Maud, duettists and dancers, do well; the Achmed-Ibrahim Troupe of Bedouin Arabs are experts in their tumbling and balancing business. The Hippodrome Pictures finish a capital entertainment.

PRESTON. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Proprietors, Exors. of the late W. Johnson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Stephen Pritt.—Mr. Arthur A. Horner's company is this week giving J. M. Barrie's comic play, Walker, London. Mr. Harry C. Morton has the lion's share of the comedy, in the part of Jasper Phipps; Mr. W. Rene Hammersmith as Renard Von Burg is very natural, his pronounced German accent being very good; Mr. C. Hughes portrays the part of Kit Upjohn satisfactorily; Mr. Forrestier Harvey as W. G. is a capital impersonation; and Ben the boatman is ably sustained by Mr. Chas. Middleton. Miss Ruby Hamilton-Belasco as Mrs. Golightly, and Miss Eleanor Papera as Nanny O'Brien, are satisfactory; Miss Katherine Parry as Bell Golightly is sufficiently dignified; and Miss Lilian Francis as Penny and Miss Jennie Douglas-Hicks as Sarah Rigg are equally good in their respective parts. The play is preceded by Curing a Husband. On Thursday a new farcical comedy in three acts, by Chas. Riminton, entitled The Play Actor, was produced.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Sawyer and Woodruff. — This week the boards are occupied by Mr. Jack Haddon's company in Under the Russian Flag. Mr. Jack Haddon commands loud applause as Ivan Romanoff; Mr. Chas. Stafford is a manly hero; Mr. Jerrold Ord gives a realistic portrayal of stage villainy; Mr. W. Wilson is a dignified Colonel Souveroff; Mr. Templer Ellis as Alexis Skopolopki; Mr. Hal Forde as Peter Poulski; and Miss Molly Hackett as Ogarita ably sustain these humorous parts; Mr. H. Naylor Grimson as Wolf Marischka gives a fine rendition of the part; Miss Beatrice Balfour as Vera Vassiloff is captivating; and Miss Marie Rayner sustains the trying rôle of Luka Marischka in a most skilful and commendable manner.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. E. J. Linsdell.—This cosy house has just emerged from the hands of the decorators, and looks very attractive in its new "war paint." Milton Ray's Don Quixote is presented here this week, and is proving a good draw. The company includes some very smart comedians, and the chorus is also much above the average. Mr. Fred Russell is good as Don Quixote, and Mr. Arthur Milton as Sancho Panza is very funny. Another clever pair are Messrs. Sandy and Carl, their mock combat being very original. Miss Lily Ward is a sprightly Cardenio; and Mr. Joe English an amusing Donna Betsiana. There are some interesting turns. Yorkshire Tom is loudly applauded for his imitations of birds and animals; Angelo gives some wonderfully good sketches of celebrities; Snowball and Miss Dolla, American comedy duo; Chas. Rowen, comedian; and the Sivanes, in their original comedy act, are entertaining; George Young is an expert blind musician of considerable promise; the Sisters Gilbert are dainty dancers; and Will Freedo is a comedian and dancer of no mean merit. The pictures are excellent.

RADCLIFFE. — GRAND OPERA HOUSE. — Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Geo. T. Sante; Acting-Manager, Mr. James Boothman.—The public is favoured this week by Mr. Charles H. Lester's company in the detective play by Mr. Max Goldberg, entitled The Bank of England. Mr. Chas. H. Lester displays undoubted ability as Sherlock Holmes; Mr. Clifton Earle depicts the villainous conduct of Stephen Hartley with power; Mr. J. H. Firman looks and acts the part of Sir Sidney Barraclough to perfection; Mr. Chris Phelton is entertaining as the Hon. Bertie Burlington; Mr. Harry T. Wood is good as Eric Dane; and one of the principal supports in the piece is Mr. Edmund O'Grady as Gordon Isaacs. The efforts of Mr. Victor Leglese as Tommy Sprouts, assisted by Miss Annie Thomas as Lucy, are much appreciated.

RAMSGATE. — AMPHITHEATRE. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry Bowman.—The New Barmaid has made a re-appearance at the Ramsgate Amphitheatre this week, and large audiences have assembled to accord this lively little lady a hearty welcome. The company is Miss Violet Osmund's, and the various parts are filled in praiseworthy fashion. Mr. Alexander Loftus is thoroughly funny in the rôle of Bertie White; Mr. James Grant does admirably as Lillian White; and McAdeson is quite successful as the volatile henchman, M. Bonsor. In the title-part (that of Ethel Joy) Miss Aimee Roberts makes a charming appearance, and Mr. James Hawkes is good as Capt. Lovebury. Excellent contributions are also made by Miss Violet Osmund (Dora Heather), and by Miss Grafton as Brenda. Mr. Frank Collins satisfactorily sustains the character of Colonel Claymore.

ROYAL VICTORIA THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. Jules Richeux.—At the Royal Victoria Theatre, during the past week, large audiences have "larfed consumedly" at KARNO'S comedians in the lively farce, Saturday to Monday. The gem of the show is the impersonation which Mr. Rolando Martin gives as John Willie Jaggs. His efforts are seconded by those of two amusing juvenile characters, Master G. Dance and Master F. McDonagh. Miss Ethel Beech (Violet Blake) and Mr. C. Curtis add to the attractiveness of the production by their effective vocalism, and the other members of the cast contribute to the enjoyment.

READING.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Milton Bode.—The popular musical play, The Cingalee, is being played here this week by an excellent company.

REDDITCH.—PUBLIC HALL.—Manager, Mr. Will Treadgold.—The dramatic season opened here on the 6th inst, when Miss Inez Howard's company, under the direction of Mr. Henry Chattell, began a two nights' engagement in the successful drama, When London Sleeps. The company, one and all, gave a good performance, and big business was done. Mr. Coleman Davies' company, with Beneath the Stars, were billed here for the last three days of this week.

REDHILL.—MARKET HALL.—Proprietors Market Hall Co.; Secretary, Mr. A. Simmons.—The Face at the Window, ably presented by Mr. Arthur West's No. 1 Company, is this week's attraction at the above house. Mr. West himself is strong in the character of Paul Gouffet, the detective; the Lucio Delgardo of Mr. Marcus Gray is also a capital piece of character work; whilst the Lucien Cortier of Mr. Percy Speakman is good. Mr. Ernest Stevens is decidedly funny as Peter Pottleberry; Mr. Aubrey Norton as Henry de Brisson is all one could wish; Miss Leah Strickland, as Marie de Brisson, has a thorough conception of the part; Miss Clara Knowles as "the Queen of the Rogues' Retreat" is most acceptable; and Miss Blanch Young creates much amusement in the part of Babette.

RHYL. — PIER PAVILION. — Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Manager, Mr. J. Macdermott. —A welcome visit is made this week by Miss Emilie Tait, Messrs. Harry Herbert, and Norman Osborne, who have just returned from a successful tour in India. Rapoli is a juggler of exceptional ability, performing clever feats with ease; the Four Louberts submit an amazing acrobatic sketch, entitled Uninvited; and Fields and Lewis create roars of laughter with their burlesque dramatic act. Kyoto, Japanese conjurer, &c.; Miss May Geraldine, comedienne and dancer; Harry Bentley, comedian; Miss Cordite and Nick Buffalo, rope and lassoo manipulators; and the Circus Biograph also contribute.

EMPIRE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Thomas Hargreaves; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Hargreaves.—The Ten Loonies top the bill here with their musical sketch, Dotty; the Jansons display muscular skill in their gymnastic act; Pete and Juno, coloured comedians and dancers, are favourites. Howard and Townsend, vocal duettists; Adey Spencer, in The Girl from the Hat Shop; Kisbey, "the Call Boy"; and the Bioscope pictures complete an enjoyable evening.

RYDE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Charles Constant.—The visit of the popular farce, Tom, Dick, and Harry, has provided plenty of amusement for patrons of this house. Mr. George Unwin's efforts in the part of General Stanhope met with general appreciation; Miss Beatrice Marsden made a charming Daisy Armitage; Tom Stanhope met with efficient impersonation at the hands of Mr. Kaye Brudell; Messrs. Fred Manners and Page Lawrence displayed much cleverness as the twins, Dick and Harry Winters; Miss Edith Barwell sustained the part of the weeping grass-widow, Mrs. Winters, in amusing fashion; and Miss Kate Ruskin did well as Molly Summers. The piece was preceded by The Second Mrs. Grundy, which was well received. An excellent animatoscope and variety display conclude the week.

PIER PAVILION.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Herbert Jay; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. L. Furst.—A great success, as usual, attended the visit of ehe Follies, who gave their high-class entertainment to a full house on Saturday evening; the Pelicans, with Miss Lillie Bowman, are appearing here for the last week of the season. A second Zacharewitsch-Woodhouse recital was given on Wednesday afternoon.

SALFORD.—PRINCE OF WALES'S.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden.—Greed of Gold is again presented by Mr. T. Morton Powell's company, which was welcomed by a good house on Monday. The villain, Harry Hood, is well played by Mr. E. J. Preston; Mr. Alf Stratton successfully portrays Arthur Erroll. Mr. Albert M. Fox works hard and well as Tom Welstead, Miss Amy Venimore makes a good Dora, and Cecil is cleverly sustained by Miss May Edias. Miss Cissy Murdock is a charming Patty Mayfield; Miss Annie Barclay as Mrs. Maxwell, Mr. Sydney Bryant as Cully Snig, Mr. Victor C. Rolfe as Mr. Brightone, K.C., Mr. Denis Campbell as Conn Creamer, Mr. James Jarrett as Mee Chow, all do well in their various characters.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wilberforce Turner; Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Secretary, Mr. J. C. Patterson. —An excellent programme this week is topped by Lew Lake and his company, including Bob Morris, Harry Lavers, and Kitty Wilmore, in the farcical absurdity The Bloomsbury Burglars; Morny Cash, comedian, keeps the house in roars; Barney Stuart's mimicry is smart; Lucia Collins, comedienne, and daughter of Lottie Collins, sings and acts charmingly; Les Belles Americaines are clever acrobatic dancers; Fame and Fortune, comedy acrobats, and Ted Karno and company in Dinner Hour, or the Carpenter's Shop, a pantomime absurdity, also keep the audience well amused.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, W. H. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. Percy B. Broadhead; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. Went-worth.—The Geni Family of ten Continental risley acrobats, do some marvellously clever work; the Fullers (Fred and Louie) present a pretty song scena, The Shoeblack's Dream; and other turns include Connie Mascot, comedienne and dancer; George Edney, character vocalist and comedian; Lambeth and Robertson in Scottish songs; Dolly Agnes, and Maud in ballads, &c.; Hilda Leigh and Co. in The Captain's Daughter; Carney and Armstrong, and Harry Nelson, comedians.

Brudenell; Mr. Victor Huntley is well placed as Capt. Leverton; as Dr. O'Byrne Mr. A. Gordon Begg is capital; and Mr. Dan Agar scores a huge success as Joe Mivens.

VICTORIA PARK.—Director of Entertainments, Mr. F. D'Alton Tebby; Manageress, Miss Jessie D'Alton.—Fresh items are introduced into the capital programme which is nightly given to crowded audiences. Mr. Will Skidmore is a popular comedian; Mr. Anderson Arthur's fine voice is highly appreciated; Mr. Albert Laurence has several new songs which are given in good style; Miss Beatrice Witham sings cleverly; Miss Lillian Ramsdale is a smart comedienne and dancer; Miss Flora Macdonald sings gracefully; Miss Jessie D'Alton sings and dances in dainty style, and her limelight songs are especially pretty.

SCARBOROUGH.—SPA THEATRE.—Proprietors, Cliff Bridge Co.; Manager, Mr. Fras. Goodricke.—Mr. F. R. Benson, in Shakespearean plays, is here this week, supported by Mrs. Benson and a host of capable actors and actresses, in Hamlet, As You Like It, She Stoops to Conquer, The Merchant of Venice, The Merry Wives of Windsor, and The Taming of the Shrew. As Hamlet, Mr. Benson gave a fine reading of the character; and Mrs. F. R. Benson excelled herself in Ophelia.

LONDESBOROUGH THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Waddington and Son; Manager, Mr. J. T. Carpenter.—High expectations were realised when Miss Hook of Holland appeared here this week. Mr. Leslie Holland as Mr. Hook contributes strongly to the success; Miss Deborah Volar, in the title-rôle, secured a great share of the favouritism; Miss Mabel Sealby as Mina has songs to sing that suit her exactly, and she dances in a well-finished style that demanded encores; Mr. Fred Lynne as Slinks was full of humour and comicalities that were up to date, and soon became a great favourite; as the Captain, Mr. Fredk. Hobbs sang well; as did Mr. Arthur Harold as the Bandmaster. The scenery and effects were admirable.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Garside; Manager, Mr. F. P. Morgan.—Mr. Edward L. Garside, who recently married Mrs. Hy. Mayhew, the proprietress of this comfortable little theatre, is here this week with his company, in Her Marriage Vow, Mr. Garside taking the part of Gilbert Carlton with great ability. Miss Ruth Shepherd depicts the wronged wife powerfully; as the hero, Ned Benton, Mr. George Beverley is admirable; Mr. J. Knowles as Daffy Dan has a part that suits him exactly; and Mr. Dan Ryan and Miss Nellie Garside provide the comic element in good style, and cause much fun.

THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. George Zalva. —The great attraction here is still the water carnival; as barrel jumpers, Gladys and Alber would be bad to beat; Wilkes Lloyd is still retained; and also Mlle. Chloe Convere. Captain Devereux's Dogs are always an attraction; Harry Friskey still maintains his reputation as a juggler; and Stelling and his dog give a remarkable performance.

THE AQUARIUM. — General-Manager, Mr. Walter Kitchingman.—The vocalist this week is Mr. H. K. Bradshaw, a powerful tenor; Jean Seul, illusionist, is clever in his deceptions; Miss Flo Florence does well in a song-scena; Mart and Pep are smart hand-balancers; the Netherlands are excellent vocalists and dancers; the Itrams, on the perch, are also most entertaining; Vela does well on the wire; Geo. Blakeney sings with ability; and the Cedrics give a turn that is pleasing.

SEACOMBE. — IRVING THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. James Kiernan.—Mr. Edward Marris's company is proving a strong attraction here this week with the musical play, Somebody's Sweetheart. Stephen Leverton—the principal villain—is skilfully enacted by Mr. Charles Edward King; Lem Lee receiving adequate treatment at the hands of Mr. Percy Maitland; Stanton Ashleigh is excellently rendered by Mr. Cecil W. Parker; Freddie Ashleigh is cleverly depicted by Miss May Norris; Mr. George Brentwood causes merriment by his clever playing of Martin Blabbs; and Miss Ainsley is well looked after by Miss Dora Hargreaves; Mr. Fred Black and Mr. Charles Herries do well as Sambo and Pete; and the Misses Lily Williams and Gus Demonte dance themselves into favour as Norah and Molly.

SEAHAM HARBOUR.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. A. C. Harrison.—The attraction here this week is the Anglo-Russian drama, Under the Czar, produced under the direction of Mr. Wilson Howard. Mr. Gerald Smythe is a capable Captain Johnson; as Nicholas Zeroslaff, Mr. W. Howard stands out prominently; the villainy of Zakhar Zeroslaff is successfully depicted by Mr. Wm. Matthews; Mr. R. Merring is distinctly good as Granoviski; Paul Ignat is well portrayed by Mr. Fred Elvin; Mr. Carl Vallender as Petroff displays a rare fund of humour; Miss Carlotta Anson is a delightful Sonia; and Siomka is successfully presented by Miss Violet Vivienne; and as Zara Miss Madge Clare does well.

SHEERNESS.—THE HIPPODROME.—General-Manager, Mr. F. Leighton.— The Four Eugenes occupy the premier position on the bill, and are accorded a hearty reception; Carlisle and Walker, comedy artists, gain applause; the Neilson Troupe of comedians and dancers submit a pleasing entertainment; Fred Neiman, ventriloquist, is highly amusing; Andy Fagan, comedian and dancer, wins favour; Rose Nicholson, serio and dancer, pleases in song and dance; Harry Luck, comedian, is favourably received; and an entertaining series of animated pictures is presented.

SHEFFIELD. — LYCEUM THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont.—Mr. Robert Courtneidge's company began a return visit on Monday with The Blue Moon. Miss Marie Wilson, a young candidate for comic-opera honours, charmed the house by her dainty grace and delightful singing. Mr. Edward Lewis as Moolraj kept his many admirers in roars of laughter; and Mr. Jack Cannot as the funny Major, Mr. Jack Spurling as the Prince, and the irrepressible Mr. Horace Mills as Private Taylor all did their best to keep the fun going. Miss Marie Rignold maintained the family traditions for good work. Miss Florence Imeson was chic and tuneful as Millie; and good vocalism distinguished the efforts of Mr. Ronald Bottomley as Captain Jack and Miss Violet Hobson as Oma.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont.—Revenge, a strong and interesting military drama, is pleasing the Royal habitués this week, being excellently played by Mr. Hill-Mitchelson's company. Miss Violet Carlyle makes a handsome and dramatic Queen, and the clever acting of Mr. E. Hill Mitchelson, Mr. George Daiper, Mr. Sinclair Holden, Mr. William Heilbron, and the other artists makes the story convincing.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. W. D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Ramsay.—A crowded audience on Monday gave a cordial greeting to Mr. Samuel James's company in Mr. Thane's play, The Love That Lasts for Ever. Much amusement was caused by the laughable interludes of Mr. Herbert Fuller and Miss Bessie Frank; and commendable impersonations were Mr. Bert Morley's Professor Morley, Mr. H. Booth's Gordon Morley, Mr. F. Litchfield, jun.'s Stephen Fletcher, Mr. Clinton Badderley's Dr. Selby, Mr. Joseph Rowland's Wiley, Miss Agnes Collier's Elsie, Miss Ida Ferris's Mother Moocher, and Miss Florence Millett's Ida Ross. The drama was effectively staged.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Proprietors, The Moss' Empires Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar.—Mr. Harry Randall reappeared on Monday, and kept the house in roars of laughter with his quaint mannerisms and diverting patter. Other talented performers were the beautiful and accomplished Mlle. Von Etta in her marvellous and elaborately staged illusionary sketch; the Miles Stavordale Quintet, the famous banjoists, &c.; Miss Florence Esdaile, the cultured comic-opera vocalist; the Five Osranis, in a French pantomime; Mr. J. B. Preston, Scotch comedian; Miss SMETHWICK. — Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. C. Barnard; Manager, Mr. B. Hewisson.—A Girl's Cross Roads, played by Mr. Walter Melville's capable company, forms the attraction here this week. Miss Hilda Beverley is prominent for her vivid portrayal of the part of Barbara Wade; Mr. Charles Franmore as the Yorkshire farmer is most realistic; Mr. Wilson capably sustains the rôle of Jack Livingstone; Mr. Fred Ingram is very amusing as Toby Turvey; Mr. Gerald Jordan plays successfully as the villain, and was ably assisted by Mr. Fred Withers as Luke Ramsden. Miss I. G. Vayne is a winsome Constance Cornell; Miss Florence Kelsey as Nellie Meadows makes the best use of her chances; Miss F. G. Vayne causes much amusement as Tilly Vane; and Mr. Cyril Vernon is well placed as Dr. Weston.

SOUTHAMPTON. — Grand Theatre. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Fredk. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Weston.—Miss Ellen Terry received an enthusiastic welcome on Monday, when she appeared in Captain Brassbound's Conversion. Naturally, the greatest interest centred in her magnificent performance of Lady Cecily Waynflete. Mr. James Carew was also excellent as Captain Brassbound, and the other parts were all well played.

Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Wm. Trussell.—Alfred Lester with his Restaurant Episode provides the star attraction here, and this mixture of fun and frivolity pleases everyone. Florence Wakeman supports Mr. Lester admirably. Another excellent turn is that given by Miss Alice Raymond, whose musical Night in Egypt is a most artistic production; the Bros. Adderley in a comedietta An Officer's Servant; Jack Rae, comedy gymnast, &c.; Cambo, musical monkey, Lilian Warren's pictorial songs; the Sisters Lytton, duettists; and Lilith, illusionists, also score.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and W. de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. P. Howell.—George Gray's new sketch Parson Gray, V.C., is full of interest; William Lee, Helen Bentley, and company score in their comedietta A Friend in Need; the Sisters Aindow are accomplished musicians; Picquays, equilibrists; Phillips and Merriott, smart entertainers; Crissie Cross, comedienne and dancer; Arthur Croxon, comedian; and Edie Beno, comedienne and dancer, also successfuly appear.

Pier Pavilion.—Acting-Manager, Mr. H. C. Sait.—The Follies, under the direction of H. G. Pelissier, create quite a furore here, and the Gramophone Concerts given by the Gramophone Co. are exceedingly popular.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA.—Empire Theatre.—Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. Conquest; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. Lingham Power.—On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday delightful performances were given of The Morals of Marcus by Mr. Arthur Bourchier's company. Mr. C. H. Croker-King was an admirable exponent of Sir Marcus Ordeyne; Mr. Richard Neville was a successful Sebastian Pasquale; and Messrs. A. H. Leveaux and Frederick Jaques gave entire satisfaction in their respective parts. Judith Mainwaring was ably sustained by Miss Joan Burton, and Miss Hilda Antony did well in the simple yet difficult character of Carlotta. The Little Michus commenced a three-nights' engagement on Thursday.

The Kursaal.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. P. T. J. Bacon.—This week's programme in the Variety Theatre is of a pleasing character, and gets well received. The contribution by Wragg and Wragg in their military display is an exceptional item of interest. Other pleasing turns are given by Norman, Vanderbilt, and Norman in That Terrible Boy; Mr. Harry Gilmore, comedian, with plenty of patter; Miss Kate Oxford, with classical ballads; the Original Little Dandies, eccentric comedians; Miss Florrie Farren, comedienne and danseuse; Miss Lillie Le Breton, trapeze artist; with Lindsay and Harte, comedy entertainers.

Pier Pavilion.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. E. Angless; Acting-Manager, Mr. Stanley E. Angless.—Never was an engagement so popular as The Sorrows of Satan, which on Monday by its weird and highly commendable presentation proved both impressive and thoroughly instructive. Miss Loie Esmond has a talented company, who deserve special praise for their individual efforts. The play is made the more thrilling by the numerous mystic effects. To Mr. Edward Neville is allotted an exceedingly hard task in the rôle of Prince Lucio, and his successful interpretation evoked great applause. Mr. F. Douglas Howard is a capable Geoffrey Tempest, and Mr. J. Le Fleming well portrays the Earl of Elton. Mr. Fred Cherry imparts capital humour as Morris, and Miss Ethel St. Barbe as Mavis Clare gives a pleasing and refined portrayal. Miss Loie Esmond shows remarkable cleverness as Diana.

SOUTHPORT.—Opera House, Winter Gardens.—Proprietors, The Southport Opera House and Winter Gardens Co., Ltd.; Secretary, Mr. R. Singleton.—A full house greeted Mr. Louis Calvert's well-selected company on Monday evening, when Amasis was presented for the first time at this theatre, and was received with many manifestations of appreciation. The part of Pharaoh was depicted by Mr. Rutland Barrington with excellent effect; Miss Winifred O'Connor played the title-part with charming grace, her vocal numbers being capitally rendered; Miss Madge Vincent is a piquant and pleasing representative of Natis, and lent ample support; Mr. Roland Cunningham portrayed the part Anhotep in a highly commendable manner, his singing being exceptionally good; Mr. Lauri de Freece as Sebak created much merriment and applause by his unctuous humour; whilst the remaining characters were each well played, and the scenery and dressing was in keeping with the general excellence of the production.

ST. LEONARDS.—Pavilion Theatre.—Pier-Master and Entertainment-Manager, Mr. Elvey Thomas.—Shakespearean and old English comedies are being introduced here this week by Mr. Ian Maclaren and company. In the title-rôle of David Garrick Mr. Maclaren shows sincerity and earnestness. In the part of Mabel Brackson Mrs. Ian Maclaren acts with a vivacity as charming as it is rare; and Mr. Frank Royde plays the Hon. Bob Fairley with characteristic ease. Alderman Brackson is well taken by Mr. Arthur Fane; Messrs. Kenneth Bruce, J. V. Bryan, and Huston McNarry give good impersonations of City men; and Miss Gertrude Littlewood and Miss Clare Townshend as Mrs. Peters and Arabella Johnson create amusement. Othello, Hamlet, The Merchant of Venice, Romeo and Juliet, As You Like It, Taming of the Shrew, Twelfth Night, The Rivals, and She Stoops to Conquer are also in the répertoire.

STOCKPORT.—Theatre Royal and Opera House.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Revill, jun. — A Broken Heart, as presented by Mr. Harry Foxwell's thoroughly capable company, has been greeted with unstinted praise by large audiences. Mr. Harry Cullenford impersonates the blacksmith John Barnard in manly style; and Mr. Harry Foxwell makes an impressive Rev. Mr. Staunton. Mr. Chas. Vivian displays exceptional ability in the character of Gash Gills; Mr. Will Lindsay is genuinely funny as Tony Tibbets; Miss Louisa Peach acts with much pathos and feeling as Mary Barnard; whilst Miss Marguerite Thorne's portrayal of Mrs. Barnard is realistic.

Empire.—Proprietors, The Stockport Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Black.—De Canty's illuminated water grotto provides a beautiful spectacle, which has been well received here this week. An admirably-acted sketch is The Gambler, given by Messrs. Fred S. Peake and company; the Reays are graceful acrobats; Curwen and Belle are entertaining in their imitations; Edith Courtney's rendering of old ballads is most acceptable; the Geretti Sisters accomplish much on the trapeze that is marvellous and clever; Ryde and Beeman are amusing eccentrics; and the Lovelaces, song illustrators, prove very popular.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.—Hippodrome Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Robt. A. Nicholson; Assistant-Manager, Geo. Stainton.—The Klein Family of trick cyclists are here this week, and their feats are greatly relished by appreciative audiences; the Wakeman Quartette provide delightful part singing; Harry Briggs is a clever mimic; and Jimmy Shields an amusing one-legged dancer; the Princellas provide great fun in their "farmyard flirtation"; and Zenora is a skilful hand jumper. Much laughter is provoked by Zeta Grey and company in The Lancashire Lass; the pictures are very humorous.

Grand Theatre.—Proprietor, Councillor J. Batty; Manager, Mr. W. Batty.—The Elliott-Savonas, who head the bill, provide a rich musical treat; Barry Lindon is an exceptionally good basso; the Sisters Dorrell are a pair of dainty duettists and dancers; Carl Lynn is clever as an imitator of animals; and the Melroses are a funny pair of comedians; the New Macs cause great amusement with their patter; the Pictures, as usual, are very interesting.

STOKE.—Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Manager, Mr. H. Miller.—The Drummer of the 76th heads the bill this week. Mr. Matthew Brodie as Napoleon is excellent; and Miss Dorothea Vivian as the drummer boy is seen to much advantage. Shirley and Ransomo are also seen in an interesting sketch; Alice Maud mimics star artists wonderfully well; Julia Mack, the suffragette comedian, is irresistibly funny; the Danas, in their duologue, On the Honeymoon, provide plenty of mirth; Les Zelovas, in their acrobatic and ring turn, contribute a smart performance; Henry Bekker is an up-to-date conjurer; Percy Farrimond, the singing collier, meets with success, and the pictures are good.

SUNDERLAND.—King's Theatre.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Stevens and Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. L. Carlo.—Despite the finer weather, a big as well as a merry crowd assembled to witness what is announced as the "farewell visit" of Mr. William Greet's company in the lively and well-worn musical comedy, The Earl and the Girl. Mr. William Stephens as the dog trainer, Jim Cheese, fairly convulses his audience; Mr. Thomas Kennard's impersonation of Dick Wargrove was manly and hearty, singing his numbers with much acceptance; Mr. Percy E. Wright submitted an excellent rendition of the Hon. Crewe Boodle; and Mr. H. Courtin was admirable as the bluff Bunker Bliss. Miss Chrissie Ralland as Elphin Haye was bright, fresh, and charming; Miss Jennie Richards scored in the low comedy part of Liza Shoddam; Miss Kathleen Gerard was an imposing Mrs. Shimmering Black; and a word of praise is especially due to Miss Ethel Erskine for her vocal efforts as Daisy Fallowfield. Miss Frances James quite succeeded as Aunt Virginia.

Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jos. Hemingway.—Once again we are having a visit from Mr. E. Hill-Mitchelson's company in The Traitor. Mr. Stephen E. Scanlan in the title-rôle played with considerable power and skill; Mr. Graham Woods as the Crown Prince Rudolph was all that is desired; Mr. Wilton Reed was an admirable General Hertz; and Mr. Alf. Richards a successful Capt. Ross; Mr. Edward Duff was fully qualified as General Franz; Miss Mary Robson submitted a telling interpretation of the Avenger; Miss Gwynne Warren was adequate as the Countess Zicka; and Miss Lilian Matthews as Elsie Dupres rendered valuable aid. The comedy element was provided by Mr. Val Gully and Miss Polly Denville as Jack Boult and Cen-Cen respectively; and Miss Jessica Black contributed some good work as the Little Martyr.

Empire of Varieties.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—Chief honours are won here by the Seldoms' statuary exhibition; Theo. Bouwmeester's quick changes in a short act, Who is Guilty? in which he impersonates seven different characters, is really clever; Cussac Talma and Yvonne de Forge have a wonderful cabinet illusion; Rich and Rich are a couple of quaint comedians; and others appearing are Elsie Roby, in her monologue burlesque act, The Slavey's At Home; the Avrignys, jugglers; Klein and Clifton, in The Dummy's Holiday, that has a decidedly American flavour; Eugen Joly, cornet virtuoso; Geo. Reeves, comedian; and the Bioscope pictures.

Palace of Varieties.—Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Acting-Managers, Messrs. Browne and Stringer.—The veteran Chirgwin is paying a welcome visit, submitting much of his old business and patter; Athas and Collins are also vastly amusing in some clever comedy and variety items; the Bros. Durant prove wonderfully clever acrobats; Marie Neilson is a neat little dancer; Maxwell and Frances appear in a flirtation act; little Vio Gette does some male impersonations and dances; Harry Wenburn is welcomed as a comedian; and pictures conclude.

SWANSEA.—The Grand.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Brooks and Woodbridge; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. Oswald Brooks; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Dean.—The Marriage of Kitty is one of the smartest comedies seen here for some time. Miss Mary Thorne was a delightfully pert Kitty; and Mr. Edgar Kent as Sir Reginald Belsize kept the audience convulsed by his quaintness. Mr. Thomas Sydney as John Travers was eminently suggestive of the law; Miss Winifred Pearson highly distinguished herself as Mme. De Semiano; Miss Josephine Rae making an effective Rosalie. Mr. J. J. Hooker as Hampton and Mr. W. Cronin-Wilson as Norbury maintain the general excellence of Mr. Sidney's company. The Marriage of Kitty is preceded by that charming one-act play, Twenty Years After.

The Star.—Manager, Mr. William Coutts; Assistant-Manager, Mr. S. J. Powell.—Mr. Alex. C. Grant's company makes a brave show in A Woman from Scotland Yard. Miss Eveleen Clyde's spirited acting as Edith Mayne won for her unstinted applause; Mr. George Edward Clive gave a clever impersonation of Harry Stanhope; as Paul Obanoff Mr. Alex. C. Grant was capital; Miss Violet Crawford was an effective Lady Mary Stanhope; and Miss Dorothy Wilkinson as Mary White, her maid, was also good. Mr. Charles Graham made a dignified Sir James Stanhope.

Moss' Empires, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. A. Mitchell; Assistant-Manager, Mr. P. C. Rowe.—Hetty King scores a well-deserved success this week; Bell Davies and her piccaninnies are much enjoyed; Cull Pitt provides a turn which for originality takes a lot of beating; O'Malley and Brown are as funny as ever; the Smythsons make a big hit with the Love Germs; Gertrude Bradshaw has a really good soprano voice, which she uses to advantage; Frank Darwin is an actor-vocalist of great talent; Westland, Scotch comedian; the Eriks Brothers, see-saw equilibrists; and Bioscope pictures complete the bill.

SWINDON.—Queen's Theatre.—Business-Manager, Mr. Alfred Manners.—Another visit of that interesting drama, The Still Alarm, was greeted by a large audience on Monday. The piece is again well-staged and performed by Messrs. Glenville and Osmond's company. As the dashing young fireman, Jack Manley, Mr. Mathew H. Glenville is admirable; Mr. Lewis Gordon is seen to advantage as Mr. Fordham; and Mr. George Arthur makes the part of John Bird stand out prominently; as Doc Wilber, Mr. Fred Osmond acts cleverly; and Mr. Tom Beasley is decidedly successful as Will Manley; Miss Francis Waring is a delightful Elinor; and Miss Mabel Veriton as mother of the Manley's is agreeably natural; Miss M. Leighton, as Carrie, must be complimented on her success, while her songs and dances and the quartettes of the firemen are greatly appreciated.

TAMWORTH.—Assembly Rooms.—Manager, Mr. F. Hughes.—This spacious hall, which has been closed for cleaning and re-decoration, was re-opened on Monday evening by Miss Inez Howard's company, in When London Sleeps. The play was well staged. Mr. Cyprian H. Matthews as Captain Rodney Haynes made a polished stage-villain; Mr. Louis Norman scored a success as David Engleheart, the hero; and Mr. Geoffrey Chate was amusing as the Hon. Bertie. Miss Vera Crichton won golden opinions as Queenie Carruthers, the heroine; and Miss Francesca Strickland did justice to the unthankful part of Hilda Corrode. Mr. Douglas Campbell as Sammy Blythe evoked plenty of fun. Favourable mention should also be made of Mr. Walter Manfree as Mr. Furabay Fuller, Mr. Tom Otley as the constable, Mr. W. B. Sommerville as Mark Blackwood, Miss Amy Wood as Mrs. Jones, and Miss Doris Kelvey as Maudie de Frere. There were enthusiastic recalls from a house crowded in every part.

TORQUAY. — Theatre Royal. — Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr. W. H. Mortimer; Secretary, Mr. Arthur Pearse.—Torquay is this week enjoying a first visit of The White Chrysanthemum, by Mr. Chas. Macdona's principal company. Miss Muriel George in the title-rôle is dainty to a degree, and her sweet soprano voice is admired by all. No less successful is Miss Rosa Sullivan, a captivating Cornelia Vanderdecken; Mr. Melville Florance makes a dashing Lieut. Armitage; and as his father, the Admiral, Mr. John T. McCullum is excellent; Miss Dorothy Sephton has a winning manner as Betty Kenyon; and much humour is introduced by Mr. Victor Kerr as Lieut. Belmont. Mr. James Graydon as the Chinese cook causes continuous laughter; and Mr. James Dallas as Private Perks is also responsible for a good deal of amusement.

Princess Pier Concert Hall.—Proprietors, the Torquay Town Council; Manager, Mr. A. T. Tremlett. — A hearty reception is accorded the "So-and-So's," who are paying a welcome return visit here this week. Miss Maude Davis has an excellent soprano voice, and her charming style soon makes her a favourite; Miss Margery Bride is the possessor of a very fine contralto voice; Miss Annie Lang introduces some clever step-dancing, and Miss Dorothy Edwards is an efficient accompanist. Mr. Harry Quiningborough proves himself a versatile entertainer; whilst Mr. Ernest Thiel is a humorist of more than ordinary capability. Mr. Stuart Alexander is a talented tenor, his efforts being much appreciated.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—Opera House.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. Welton Dale. — Mr. Lionel Rignold and Miss Ada Blanche in What the Butler Saw have kept local playgoers in uproarious merriment this week. Mr. Rignold's genuinely humorous butler and Miss Blanche's charming impersonation as the fascinating Mrs. Barrington gaining great eulogy. The clever company also includes Mr. Chas. Fawcett, who gives an admirable Irish character study; Mr. Cyril Harrison, whose excellent light comedy is much appreciated, in the part of Sir Charles; and Mr. Roy Byford, who is first-rate as the old Professor. Favourable mention should also be made of Mr. Geo. Ascot as the General, Mr. H. H. Rignold as Abraham Wernstein, and Mr. Leo St. Clair as Sydney Clifford; Miss Dorothy Hart is a smart impersonation of the up to date young lady; Miss May Hart gives a clever juvenile study; and Miss Doris Hunt as the aristocratic Miss Smyth is also very successful.

TYNEMOUTH.—Palace-by-the-Sea.—Proprietor and Director, Mr. J. H. Graham; Manager, Mr. Lindon Travers—Although approaching the wane of the season, the entertainment provided by the management continues to draw excellent houses. This week's bill includes Mr. Kenna Lawson, humorist; W. Kennedy, tenor vocalist; Ernest Atwill, baritone vocalist; Nessie Walker and Olive Mortimer, vocalists; Edgar Hulland, pianist; Fred Vallance, comedian; and Annie Hall, the Lancashire nightingale; with the Palace pictures as a fitting finale.

WALSALL.—Her Majesty's Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, the Walsall Theatres Co., Ltd.; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. W. H. Westwood. — A good company here includes Mr. Fred Lindsay, the whip wonder, who performs some exceedingly clever tricks; Kerr and Koe, in their laughable absurdity, Yards and Houses; Hilda Playfair, a charming ballad vocalist; Amos Howard, coon singer and buck dancer; Lloyd's Siberian wolf-hounds, presented by Miss Pauline Viola and Nellie Lloyd; Ben Albert, comedian; O'Gust, mimic; and the American Bioscope.

Grand Theatre.—Proprietors, the Walsall Theatres Co., Ltd.; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. W. H. Westwood.—Mr. Morton Powell's company is appearing here this week, with The Woman Who Gambles. Mr. George Steele displays ability in the part of Count Otto Steinbach; Miss Lilian Herries, in the title-rôle, is seen to advantage; Mr. Percy Ballard is well placed as Baron Gratzlaw; the part of Lieut. Ctzarteriski is admirably filled by Mr. Reginald Fox; Mr. Richard Hulton as Paul Slivanovitch is capital; Miss Lily Malvern is most successful as Stella Malakoff; Miss Lillian Rignold as Mlle. Zita Zeyelda, and Miss Brenda May as Zanetta, win approval in their respective rôles; and Miss Dora Pass charmingly sustains the part of Cora Gouldhart.

WARRINGTON. — Royal Court Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred J. Reece.—Mr. Frank Bertram's company in The Convict's Daughter is here this week, and the stirring drama has again won favour. Mr. Bertram in a quadruple rôle displays versatility; Mr. Edward de Vere as Frederick Melville acts with a dignified air; and a true spirit of manliness is associated with Mr. Walter Graham's portrayal of Harold Trevelyan; Mr. Escot Robson is a remorseless Jasper Thorn; Miss Lilias Deane as Edith submits a charming delineation; Miss Maud Beard as Marian Thorn is well placed; and the humorous element is ably sustained by Mr. Sam Roberts as Patrick O'Laragan and Miss Lilla Nordan as Betty Hyne.

Royal Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Waters; Director of Amusements, Mr. F. Willmot.—Tom and Marie Motramo are old favourites here, and they were accorded an enthusiastic welcome on Monday evening; Fred Curran, who is looking exceptionally well after his Australian tour, delighted all with his many parodies; and Frank Coyle scored with a fund of humour; Clifton and Gilson are clever eccentric comedians; and Lily Alndale is a dainty comedienne; Derenda and Green are expert humorous jugglers; and Beatty and Blanche delightful duettists and dancers. The Royal Bioscope pictures are good.

WEDNESBURY.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr. Harry Battersby; Manager, Mr. Tom Kuner.—Mr. Henry Swinerd's No. 1 company, in Dare-Devil Dorothy, is drawing capital houses here. Mr. W. Ashley submit a clever delineation of Captain George Fielding; as Captain Edward Dudley, Mr. H. C. Ward scores a decided success; Mr. Deane Cliffe's interpretation of Featherstone Haugh, evokes continuous applause; Silas Crump is effectively played by Mr. Henry Ugar; Miss Dorothy Desmonde shows marked ability as Dorothy Montrose; the parts of Rose Montrose is left in the safe keeping of Miss Pauline Emeric; Miss Mabel Blake as Polly and Miss Lilly Blake as Rosy Ann do some clever work in their respective parts. The speciality artists consist of Miss Desmond, contralto vocalist; Miss Nellie Harcourt, American soubrette; Miss Mabel Blake and Miss Lily Blake, acrobatic and speciality dancers.

WEST BROMWICH.—Theatre Royal and Opera House.—Lessee, Mr. Harding Thomas; Manager, Mr. R. Nightingale.—Mrs. F. Wybert Clive's company opened here on Monday with The Conscript, Mr. Algernon Syms portraying the title-rôle with great force and ability. Mr. Walter Steel acts with distinction the prominent part of Count Paul Hardiski; an excellent study of Ivan Manloff is presented by Mr. W. Cowell Clarke; Mr. Charles Coleman does well as Doggervitch; the humorous character of Trotoff is in the hands of Mr. Harry Liddle; and Mr. Fred Eric is good as the Ferret; Miss Mable Ronald presents a capital portrayal of Little Karl; Wanda is faithfully represented by Miss Isabel Hunt; much praise is awarded Miss Lilian Ross for her clever impersonation of Nadia Truevitch; and Miss Olga Datre and Miss Gertrude Price are also seen to advantage.

New Hippodrome.—Lessee, Mr. Albert Withers.—Mr. Harry Champion is paying a return visit here this week and receives a warm welcome; Miss Lily Simcox sings pleasingly; Morelli and Moore submit a smart singing, dancing, and juggling turn; Les Rallis supply a clever and amusing entertainment; Verno and Voyce, in their latest vocal burlesque, The King of the Clouds, cause much fun; Monetti and Ford are good; the audience are held spellbound by the remarkably clever contortions of Souplessi; but the turn of the evening is that of the Howards, who fairly mystify the house with their wonderful thought reading and silent mental telepathy. Some interesting pictures are projected on the screen.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.—Grand.—Mr. Herbert Darnley's latest success, The Sandow Girl, is being presented here, with Miss Victoria Charlton in the name-rôle, a character which suits her admirably. Others who are well fitted in their rôles are Misses Ray Fairfax, Hilda Blanche, Nellie Bryant, Grace Lambert, Maude Lester, and Louise Cartner. Several amusing incidents are introduced into the piece, and laughter is frequent.

Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Julius Simpson.—The principal attraction this week is undoubtedly dainty Dot Stephens, whose pretty style and charming voice are captivating enraptured audiences nightly. Florette, who created such a favourable opinion on a recent occasion here, is again doing her remarkably clever contortionist performance. The dancing by the Sisters Iris in a speciality number is exceptionally good; laughter abounds whilst Wild, Willie, and West submit their comedy acrobatic trampoline and trap act; "The Bounding Navvies" show remarkable skill and deftness in ball-punching; and cycling is exhibited by Lawson and Namon. Arthur Albert, actor-vocalist, takes well; the dancing of Leoni Dixon is well appreciated, as is also the comedy gymnastic mélange by Lord, Murray, and Lord. Raymond's Bio-tableaux are a strong number.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE.—Knightstone Pavilion and Opera House.—Manager, Mr. W. Payne.—Mr. Norman MacOwan's company is here this week in A Marriage of Convenience, The Tyranny of Tears, and The Second Mrs. Tanqueray. In the latter Mr. MacOwan gives an artistic interpretation of Aubrey Tanqueray; Mr. Murray Hathorn shows histrionic ability as Cayley Drummle; Mr. Bernard Copping makes an excellent Captain Ardale, and Mr. Sydney R. Palfrey does good work as Sir George Orreyed. Mr. Robert Entwistle as Gordon Jaynd and Mr. Arthur Linay as Frank Misquith are both praiseworthy; Miss Violet Sterne gives an intensely dramatic impersonation of Paula; Miss Isabel Hathorn is charming as Ellean; Miss Mary Masters makes the most of Mrs. Cartelyon, and Miss Lester Stephens was successful as Lady Orreyed.

Grand Pier Pavilion.—Manager, Mr. John H. Stevenson.—"The Gaieties" are the attraction this week on a return visit.

WHITBY.—Spa Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. Payne Seddon; Manager, Mr. F. W. Davies.—The boards of this theatre were occupied the first three nights of the week by Mr. W. Penhyn Forster's company in The Officers' Mess. Mr. Gerald Manville gives a clever portrayal of the rôle of Major-General Sir Adalbert de Beaune, V.C., K.C.B., and Mr. Victor Tollemach as Captain Hon. Claude Melville, D.S.O., is a distinct success; as Antonio Wilkins, Mr. Chas. Danvers provides a fine interpretation of the part; Mr. Harry Liddle as Thomas Rugg sustains the rôle with fine effect. The audience frequently applaud the efforts of Miss Nellie Sheffield, who cleverly interprets the rôle of Rose Smith; and Miss Clara Nicholls as Lady Constantia de Beaune is a distinct success; Miss Edith Harmer as Sybil Carruthers and Miss Millie Gordon as Timothy Tiptoe also win approbation.

WHITEHAVEN.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Clark; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Clark.—A return visit is being made here by Mr. T. Morton Powell's company in Honour Thy Father. Mr. J. A. Wilson makes a dashing hero; Duncan Bly has an able exponent in Mr. H. Traviss; Mr. J. W. Evelyn is a pathetic figure as Gabriel Garth; and Mr. Fred Graham is exceedingly funny as Mike Sopplestone; Mr. K. Black as Ned and Miss Lizzie Jacobs as Poppy are amusing; and the part of Gertrude Garth is feelingly played by Miss Kate Newton; Miss Violet Hammersley is a charming Lilian; and Miss Winnie Donovan is well cast as Mercy Merry.

WIDNES.—Alexandra Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Jas. Kiddie.—Mr. Alfred B. Cross and company are here this week with The Manxman, which has obtained a gratifying reception. Nothing remains to be said of Mr. Alfred B. Cross in the part of Pete; it is a delightful study, both humorous and heart-stirring. Mr. E. W. Cudd is a clever Cæsar Cregeen, bringing out all the hypocrisy of the character; Mr. Sydney C. Kearns acts very forcibly as Philip Christian; and Mr. Howard Brenan does well in the comparatively small part of Rose Christian; Miss Minnie Watersford gives a sound and sympathetic study of the erring Kate; Miss Dorothy Duncan is a saucy Nancy; Miss Katheen Barrett plays the colourless part of Miss Christian with intelligence; and minor parts are well allotted. The staging of the play is charming, the orchard scene being particularly attractive.

WIGAN.—Royal Court Theatre.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Co.—Mr. Charles Macdona's company, including Mr. Johnny Schofield as Hoggenheimer, have entertained large audiences during the week in the sparkling musical comedy, The Girl from Kay's, Mr. Schofield fully maintaining his reputation as a mirth-maker. Miss Mavis Hope as Nora Chalmers and Miss Jessie Fraser as Winnie play the respective parts, and sing their songs with great charm and vivacity. In her dances and vocal selections, Miss Irene Vere is pronouncedly successful; and other rôles are capably filled by Mr. H. Franklyn (Harry Gordon), Mr. G. H. Liot (the Hon. Percy Fitzthistle), and Mr. C. Dampier (hall porter).

The Hippodrome.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Co.—The skilful equestrienne, Tina Clementa, with a number of cleverly-trained dogs, gives a most entertaining sporting act. The Melody Makers, in novel vocal and instrumental comedy, are popular; and Amy Ellam and company, in the Russian sketch, A Woman of the World, play with considerable dramatic power; the Copeland's, world's champion clog-dancers; Marie Blythe, vocalist; the Mayvilles, in their Liliputian act; and Ulrick, the barrel king, are all acceptable turns. Capital comedy is furnished by Peter Bermingham, George Prince, and Walter Stanley.

WORCESTER.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. Le Wards.—The Silver King, presented by Messrs. G. M. Polini and Austin Melford's company, is meeting with generous support this week, and evidently repeated visits have no power to diminish the favour in which this powerful work is held by the public. Mr. Herbert Ford as Wilfred Denver gives a sympathetic impersonation, strengthened by commendable restraint; Miss Viola Holland is a tender and graceful Nellie Denver; and as Raikes, the old servant, Mr. Tom Paulton is responsible for a capital character study. As The Spider, Mr. Henderson Bland scores a great success; Mr. John Detlin is well suited as Elijah Coombe; and Mr. Beresford completes a rascally trio. Miss Brineton takes the part of Olive Skinner with distinction; and Genna Lyndon as the child Cissy instantly secures the sympathy of her audience. Capitally staged and dressed, the production should serve to secure liberal support wherever it goes.

WORKINGTON.—Opera House.—Lessee, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Manager, Mr. Falconer Jackes.—Enthusiastic receptions have been accorded to Mr. G. T. Sante's production of The Life of a Showman. Mr. Sante as Brien was heartily applauded for his manly impersonation of the part. He was efficiently partnered by Miss Bamford as the heroine. Mr. C. Osborne was intelligent as Sir Noel; Mr. Morris Maud was a picturesque villain; Mr. E. Warden was forceful as the parson; Mr. J. E. Sante secured sympathy as Grey, and was encored for his excellent renditions on the violin; Miss C. Medwyn was successful as Agatha. The comedy was well portrayed by Mr. C. Clement, Mr. E. Turner, and Miss May Neilson.

WORTHING.—Theatre Royal.—Manager, Herr C. Adolf Seebold.—The popular manager here, Mr. Seebold, has introduced the plan of having voting papers sent to the theatre habitués, so that the week's répertoire of the Moody-Manners Company might be chosen by them. The presentation of Faust on Monday was greatly enjoyed, and rarely if ever has such a musical treat been afforded. As Faust Mr. Seth Hughes was excellent; the Marguerite of Miss Alice Boaden was a fine performance; and the remaining characters were of equal excellence. The fine chorus, so beautifully balanced, was greatly appreciated and admired. On Tuesday, prior to the raising of the curtain on Lohengrin, a concise and highly instructive explanatory chat on the opera was given by Mr. Harrison Frewin.

WREXHAM.—Empire Music Hall.—Proprietor, Mr. J. J. Scott; Manager, Mr. C. W. Collings.—Mr. Dinnis J. McCarthy, in his realistic dramatic speciality, The Coast Guard, is a pleasing feature of this week's programme; the Summersons, in their comedy act, cause much laughter; Miss Lena Page sings acceptably, and is loudly recalled; Miss Edna Francis, a sweet singer of dainty songs; and Will Merson, comedian and dancer, are also in the bill.

YORK.—Theatre Royal.—Lessees, Messrs. Waddington; Acting-Manager, Mr. N. J. Dacre.—Mr. Robert Courtneidge's Blue Moon company drew large audiences on the first three nights of the present week. As Chandra Nil Miss Clarice Lockstone was charming to a degree, singing most tastefully; Miss Maud Aston was a vivacious and pleasing Millicent Leroy; Miss Ida Stratham was a fascinating Evelyn, and Miss Laura Leycester a sufficiently austere Lady Brabasham. Mr. Reginald Switz made a decided hit as Private Taylor; Mr. Alfred Beers as Moolraj was most amusing; and Mr. Alfred Clark as the Major was most effective.

Opera House and Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sidney Brooke.—The Howards are giving their wonderful second-sight exhibition with the greatest possible success, and delighting all by their originality. Recco is vastly amusing in his antics; the Percys introduce some taking business; and the Boston Twins are, as usual, well received; Lil O'Gorman sings herself into favour; Capt. Harris's comedy five are a pleasing item; an amusing boxing competition introduced nightly, and Harry Morris, Carta, and Mertzana, in addition to the Bioscope, are well received.

As a consequence of the dislocation of the steamship traffic, Miss Marie Hall was unable to arrive in England from New Zealand in time for Wednesday's concert of the Gloucester Musical Festival. Arrangements were made for Mischa Elman to appear in her place.

The Moody-Manners Company concluded its eight weeks' season at the Lyric Theatre on Saturday evening with a performance of Madam Butterfly. On Monday the organisation was to be found at the Camden Theatre, when Faust was performed. Carmen was announced for Tuesday, Madam Butterfly on Wednesday, Tannhäuser on Thursday afternoon, and The Bohemian Girl on Thursday evening, Il Trovatore on Friday, and Faust on Saturday.

ACTORS' UNION.

An increased attendance was noticeable at the meeting of the Actors' Union at the Bedford Head on Tuesday, when Mr. Frank Gerald, the Union's delegate to the recent Trades' Congress at Bath, gave an account of his mission. Among those present, in addition to a number of non-members, were Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Marshall, Messrs. Cecil G. Calvert, W. Ruddle Brown, H. Paulton, jun., Watty Brunton, Norman Wrighton, Robt. M. Taylor, A. Wainwright, Fred F. Loyd, J. W. Braithwaite, E. Y. Rae, J. Carl Lyle, J. Nelson Ramsay, Arthur St. John, Harry Turner, and Kenneth Blackmore (secretary), and Misses Gladys Ffolliott, Lena Delphine, Kitty Marion, Adelaide Gracey, Bessie Armitage, L. L'Estrange, Florence Creagh, Grace Lester, Nelly Howitt, Patey, and Trounsell.

The Chairman called upon Mr. Frank Gerald, who had a hearty reception. He said he took the first opportunity to catch the chairman's eye at the Congress, and directly he called out "Frank Gerald, Actors' Union," there was dead silence, and everybody in the vast hall must have looked towards him, such was the interest taken by every section of the Congress in the first appearance at their meetings of a representative of the theatrical world. He tried to get sympathy, and did not find it a difficult matter, because directly he said "I want you to think of our work not as play, but to put it the other way round, and regard us as labourers worthy of our hire," there was an immediate response. When he said, "Consider us as artists, professionals, tradesmen, what you will," and that "a rose by any other name would smell as sweet," it appealed equally to the cabman from London, the dock labourer from Liverpool, and the collier from Newcastle. They welcomed them as an integral part of the great labour movement of Trades Unions. On resolutions away from their own particular profession he did no more than vote, but the points on which he entered into discussion were the Board of Conciliation and voluntary and compulsory arbitration, the Sunday Closing resolution, and overtime. The first was defeated by over a million votes, because if they sent forth to the world that they were anxious to establish a Board of Arbitration it would

THE REAL "HAMLET."

AND HOW IT SHOULD BE STAGED.

By PERCY FITZGERALD, M.A.

IV.—OPHELIA.

As to the young lady's artfulness there could be little question, for when her adroit father arranged that he and the King should overhear her talk with Hamlet she made no objection. No well brought-up young woman would have relished this device, or, perhaps, consented to it. Even the King had frankly told her that they intended to overhear all that was said, and then she sweetly consented to two little pieces of deception likely to draw on the lover. The shrewd old Polonius thought that her standing about doing nothing would look unnatural, so he put a book into her hands and bade her appear to be saying her prayers. To this she agreed. She opened the talk with the returning of some presents that Hamlet had given her. For—

"Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind."

But this artful stroke brought forth nothing, except a most uncompromising "flouting" rejection with some unsavoury language. Hamlet also said, "I have heard of your prattling, too." It was certainly mortifying with the others listening. The King, quite convinced, dismissed the notion of attachment at once; it was clear there was nothing in it.

"Love! His affections do not that way tend."

With this mortifying announcement, poor Polonius could not exactly agree. He thought it all came from "neglected love."

Many generations of playgoers have been mystified by Hamlet's barbarous treatment of the girl in this well-known scene. It certainly seems unmeaningly capricious. It has been contended that he meant it as a display of his assumed madness. But if we accept this theory that such intimate relations existed between them, there is more coherency in the situation. He may have found her complaints and importunities inconvenient and a hindrance to his plans, and thus have brought to an end the adventure by a violent quarrel. He shows his dislike to the whole family—to Polonius the father, Laertes the brother, and the persevering Ophelia, who, he thought, were fastening on him. In the end he actually killed all three, or caused their deaths! I cannot but fancy that he had read Ophelia's true nature as a scheming young person, who was doing what she could to secure him.

And why should Hamlet bid her "get her to a nunnery" to take the veil? Perhaps he thought of it as a penitential retreat for her, just as La Vallière after her fall retired to a convent. His cutting speeches as to female arts of attracting, painting their faces, etc., were surely not conventional speeches. Could they have been meant as a bitter reproach—these arts of yours, your insatiable coquetries have brought about the mischief, so now go into retirement; repent and leave me alone. But these insults notwithstanding, Ophelia was in nothing daunted. She passed it over as a slight aberration. She had too much at stake to be put off by a little burst of ill-humour. She would be independent of both King and father, who thought her business hopeless. So she took her own course.

There was the entertainment of the play coming on. This offered an opportunity, and here we find the poor suffering girl whom Hamlet had dismissed so violently, after leaving him almost in despair, suddenly recuperated, transformed into an almost coquettish young thing, and meeting her lover's capricious advances in quite a flirting spirit. When the guests were all assembled for the play she made the very boldest advances to him. So overjoyed she seems at his compliment "here's metal more attractive," that she allowed him to lay his head on her lap and tolerated his free and doubtful double entendres with the simple, tolerant remark, "You are naught—you are naught—I'll attend to the play"; i.e., "Fie, fie; naughty, naughty." As who should say, "Fie, fie, my lord—how very wrong of you; I wont speak to you any more." Then she put all kinds of questions to him in her innocence, "which means this and that, my lord." She certainly seemed a very "fetching" young lady—on this occasion at least.

It is else difficult to know why the Bard put this string of double entendres into Hamlet's mouth when conversing with her. It is noticeable that she seems to have received them without rebuke, and with an assumed coyness and pretence of being shocked. Even accepting the coarse license of the old playwriting, it is extraordinary that a young woman would so behave. At all events it destroys the notion of "sweet innocence," and shows clearly that Polonius's daughter was a well-trained "hussy," who was doing her best to capture the young Prince.

The natural refinement of our modern times has completely destroyed the true motive of Ophelia's madness. The common arrangement sets out that this is all due to the loss of her father—her snatches of song are made, on the common arrangement, to point to this—and so the King expounds it. Now this is hardly likely to have been the result of the loss of a parent, however acutely felt. There would be passionate grief, hysterics, but not unsettlement of the wits or wild rantings. Nor could it be owing to the mere loss of a lover. If we are to put any meaning to her snatches of song and speech, it is that she has been abandoned after being betrayed. A speech of Hamlet's during the play scene seems to point to the same thing. Shamed, disgraced, deserted, her father killed by her lover, her brother away—what was to become of her? Her wits left her. A courtier reported that people were making comments on her odd "speeches, botching her words up," evidently guessing that something was wrong.

It must be admitted that this supposed relation to Ophelia, which is a wild speculation enough, introduces quite a new and distorting element into Hamlet's character. We can hardly conceive him as the immaculate and virtuous youth who could thus lead astray a young lady of rank without any scruple, and then cast her off in so unfeeling and heartless a fashion. But it is clear such lapses in those days were not thought very serious matters. They were blunders, mistakes of policy, and her father's and brother's warnings were clearly based upon this view. It seems impossible, they urge, to gain him in an honourable way. She must take care and not act foolishly. The old Polonius's instructions to his emissary, Raymond, to spread about reports of his son's looseness of morals are not edifying, and show that he might have reconciled himself to his daughter's left-handed marriage, as he might deem it.

Further, this notion of Hamlet's unlicensed designs on Ophelia—if such they were—is fully supported by the very indelicate (to speak indulgently) character of his thoughts and remarks when speaking to her or of her. His mind seems to be running on such gross topics. Even in his letter to her there is a not very modest allusion. So with the well-known speech to Polonius, "if the sun breeds maggots in a dead dog," and the warning as to "conception." In a previous talk with his daughter Polonius had said, "I feared he trifled and meant to wreck thee."

The play-scene is usually accepted as an effective bit of melodrama which interests the audience. But somehow its influence soon passes away, and we forget it. Yet it was a far more momentous thing than a mere Court exhibition. It must, as Hamlet no doubt intended, have set afoot gruesome whispers and speculations. Why was His Majesty so disturbed and agitated? What did it all mean? It was to lead to the killing of Polonius, to the death of Ophelia, to Hamlet's expulsion from the country, to his projected assassination, to the revengeful attack by Laertes, and other horrors. All is forecasted in this play-scene, which should have far more impressive solemnity than is usually imparted to it.

What if this episode were given in an excited, impassioned style? To begin with, there should be plenty of space, and the whole should be set forth with due state—rich dresses and eager movement. Maclise's well-known picture showed a very large raised stage, with a regular proscenium, richly decorated, an idea he may have got from the late Queen's theatricals at Windsor. But a moment's reflection will show that this is too elaborate. It is, however, near the mark, for the players were certainly expected, and due preparation would have been made to exhibit them. But the effect in the picture is quite a too modern one.

The true disposition might be this: A spacious hall, with an archway at the end leading into another great chamber: here would be the stage, set off with suitable furniture. Here should the performers declaim in passionate style, and promenade about, striving to realise just such a situation as there might be in the audience. There should be pauses at telling and applicable situations. The murder should be worked up slowly and tragically, the murderer entering in a secret, guilty fashion, looking round in fear of detection, retiring and advancing. The aim should be to affect the real modern audience, exactly as the author wished to affect his audience. The whole should be worked up to a pitch of tension, the audience wondering and growing a little suspicious of what was meant; some rising to see better, some whispering and murmuring. All this would at last culminate in the King's rising in agitation and dissolving the assembly.

After the poisoning is gone through Hamlet grows excited. The usual fashion is that he keeps his eyes fixed on the King, watching him and every movement—dragging himself across the floor, &c. And he is even made to roar across to him—"He poisons him in the garden. . . . The story is extant and writ in choice Italian. You shall see anon how, &c." But it is clear that this is all addressed to Ophelia, with whom he has talked from the beginning. She even has to tell him "The King rises." "What," he answers, "frighted with false fire?" So that he had not seen him. All which seems more natural and impressive than the favourite violent treatment.

It is difficult to understand why the dumb show, which preceded the Court play, did not also affect the King in the same fashion as the spoken drama did. It seems, moreover, quite unnecessary, as it repeats the action of what was to come.

After the play scene Hamlet is not in the least excited—rather perfectly calm. All the company had gone out. As soon as the pair are left Hamlet utters his stanza "let the stricken deer," and asks mildly if his conduct on the scene would not have got him a place in a company of players. Again, there was nothing for him to be so exuberantly excited about. The King had certainly shown agitation before the company; the little plot had succeeded; but there was much more to do yet, so Hamlet evidently thought. He was, indeed, not quite certain as to the result, and appeals to Horatio. It would be impossible for one who was in such a frantic, passionate state, after bounding into the chair, to begin reciting snatches of plays, and then appeal to his friends: "Did I not act it well? Did I not?" More curious still is his declaration: "I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound"—that is—and we should mark this—he was by that time perfectly convinced of the murder by the King's agitation. For "Didst perceive?" he asks Horatio.

Horatio: Very well, my lord.

Hamlet: Upon the talk of poisoning?

Horatio: I did very well note him.

So that if Hamlet then had rioted in the King's chair, exulting in detecting him and probing him, would he begin to reason in this quiet way, or appeal to his friends to back his opinion? It was only after slow reflection, therefore, that he saw that his shot had told, and that he had to appeal to Horatio for further assurance. The King, after all, only seemed to his court to be unwell; even Horatio, Hamlet thought, might not have noted the guilty symptoms. The whole was, therefore, a quiet experiment of his own, but there was nothing to be so boisterously triumphant about, save that the play had affected the King uncomfortably. So that the proceeding is really of a quiet complexion, and after a few moments the deliberate and reflective march of the play is resumed.

After the play-scene explosions and Hamlet's triumph, how rational that the action should still go forward, culminating as it were, instead of being abruptly closed by the drop scene. It was to be a long and continuous night's work. Thus, after chuckling with Horatio over his success, Hamlet must needs entertain himself with music, and so sends for the Court performers, whose strains he means shall reach the King and disturb him yet more. Then should come players with those notorious recorders and other instruments, perhaps; and when they come in he carelessly takes one up.

The late Wilson Barrett carried out this notion of continuity in every effective fashion, abolishing all these artificial halts. He could not be convinced that after every "explosion," or crisis, all came to an end for a time, but we must rest and recommence presently. He applied the principle to the Hamlet soliloquies, at the end of which the performer has it all to himself, and is left lost in thought.

The scene where the King indulges in his fit of penitence, properly treated, is a most pathetic and harrowing one; and, as everyone who searches his own heart must admit, a perfect representation of the struggle which the poor helpless sinner endures when he strives to get free. The King is wrought up to despair, grief, and misery of the most acute form. He tries to soften his poor, hardened heart, but without result. It is a hopeless business, for without the gift of grace, and some attempt at atonement, nothing can be done. A person who felt as he did was not wholly bad, and on the road to pardon and grace. But the audience will have it that he is acting. The truth is, this is Hamlet's scene, and part of his "business." He is prowling about, listening. Many have been shocked at his truculent and blood-thirsty denunciations, but it is forgotten that these are not purposes, but mere ruminations—thoughts flitting through an agitated brain. Shall I do this? Shall I do that? Here is a fair opportunity; or should I wait until he has relapsed into his old villainy—a mere excuse to himself for putting the old villainy aside.

How dramatic it is! The repentent King, surging and struggling with his remorse, all unconscious that he is being secretly watched by his greatest and most unscrupulous enemy, and within an ace of being done to death. To give it effect there should be realism, extreme passion and colour, and a sense of mystery. But we should imagine Hamlet on tiptoe, now peeping in, now drawing back, in fear of detection, now listening eagerly to catch the words, showing bitter scorn and scoff at each moral sentiment, now laughing harshly. What a contrast would be here. There is yet another touch of this penitential feeling, when the King suffers a sort of agony at a casual allusion by one of the characters, declaring that it came home to himself and wrung his very heart. The man had certainly a conscience.

V. THE PICTURES.

In connection with the portrait scene in the Queen's closet there is perpetual debate whether these two portraits hung upon the walls or were simple miniatures. These are vital questions. Granting two material pictures were intended, this notion of the miniatures is not to be thought of, for such things were then hardly known. In Rowe's edition of Shakespeare (1712), we are shown two large half-length pictures hung on the wall, as though in a modern palace, which is, of course, absurd, for this was the Queen's own private closet or boudoir. It is obvious she would not like to have such a reminder of the departed, and her present husband, who was too touchy on the matter and so remorseful, would certainly have objected. It was a matter to be altogether forgotten. Neither would she have cared to have "number one" and "number two" together.

What does Hamlet say? "Look here upon this picture, and upon this" (the counterfeit presentment of two brothers). Were he speaking of real pictures he would have said: "Look at that one there and upon that," as he stood pointing to each. Then he describes them both, contrasting their features, and is most uncomplimentary to the reigning King: "Have you eyes?" He was "a Moor," and she was blinded. Now these gross blemishes would not be emphasised in what was a Court picture, where he would be exhibited as a personable man. He was therefore describing him from recollection. So when he speaks of his father as—all this would be said of a real person, but not of a picture.

"A combination and a form indeed
Where every god did seem to set his seal"

The late Wilson Barrett, in his London revival, conceived the odd idea of having two portraits on the drawing-room table, something in shape like cabinet "photos"! The modernity of this was striking. After all, the notion of visible pictures will, I fear, never be abandoned. It is too good a piece of "business," that pointing, &c. What is the obvious meansing? "Look here upon this picture and on this," says Hamlet; "This was your husband," and it is claimed he is pointing at the portrait. But then he says: "The combination of a form indeed where every god," &c. This seems superfluous in the presence of the portrait. But, above all, why would he describe the well-known faces to the wife of both as "the counterfeit presentment of two brothers"? When he goes on to depict the King—"Here is your husband"—he does not contrast his plain features with that of the brother. "Here is your husband—like a mildew'd ear blasting his brother." This is surely spoken as of one absent.

VI.

THE HIDING OF THE BODY.

Hamlet's dragging of Polonius's body away is most significant when we consider all that follows, and that the unhappy Prince was now filled with the idea of completely hiding his bloody act by the process of hiding away the body—"safely stowed," as he put it. We can imagine nothing more appalling than this.

But there is another important element to add to the horror. The King, when the killing of Polonius was told to him, seems to have been convinced that Hamlet thought he was behind the arras, and struck at him. This was sagacious enough, for Hamlet, as he dealt the blow, had exclaimed, "Is't the King?" The Queen did not however then tell her husband of this speech, who says in his terror,

O, heavy deed!

It had been so with us had we been there.

But it looks as though she did tell him later, for the King, when he meets Laertes, asks him if he had not heard that Hamlet, who had slain his father, "pursued my life," and Laertes answers, "It will appear."

It is clear that in the Court circle the feeling was that the Prince had aimed at the King's life, and that there was all manner of dark suspicions and whisperings. The King felt himself in serious peril, and exposed at any moment to some fresh attempt. He must either destroy or be destroyed himself. Then there was the sudden return of Laertes, inflamed with grief and fury, and pressing in a most alarming way for judicial investigation and punishment. This might seem a ready mode of extrication; but there was the general popularity of the prince, and the fond attachment of the Queen. What was he to do? He resolved to send him out of the country, and have him assassinated.

This third act holds a series of stirring and momentous situations, all linked together. There is the "play scene," as it is called, the Recorder's incident, the interview with the Queen, the King's Prayer, the killing of Polonius, the search for the body, and proposed banishment of Hamlet. All these tremendous things took place during one long fevered night, stretching perhaps to the "small hours" of the morning—the day breaking before the unhappy personages got to their beds.

And what a prodigious increase of dramatic effect, as one trouble succeeds the other without interval! This is no Utopian speculation, but the strict fact. When the play was done Hamlet discusses the result of his exposé with his friend, and is presently sent for to the Queen's closet. For she sees that the situation is too serious to rest there. When that interview is over she hurries straight to the King, and gives him the first news of her son's rash act. Then comes the hurried search for Polonius's body, the sending for Hamlet, the persistent enquiries and his stubborn refusal to give information. No one thought of looking for it in the chamber upstairs, where it lay for hours. Hamlet is then ordered away to England on the spot, and the King announces that he must set off that very night. What a gain if all these events were thus presented continuously in a solemn chain. What suspense—what mystery—what a restless feeling of having been up all the night. I do not know whether it has been calculated what length of time is covered by the action in Hamlet. It might be fixed, I think, at about three months or so. The important events in Denmark, as we have seen, followed each other closely, but there must have been two intervals during which there was a lull and nothing doing. There was the mission of the Ambassadors, who went and returned about the middle of the play. There was also the journey of Laertes to France—a very long one in those days, through rough northern seas—and his sudden return. And, finally, there was Hamlet's voyagé to England and his return. These occur at different periods of the play, and the interruptions might be nicely calculated.

As the poor distraught Ophelia both sings her ballads and offers flowers and talks at length, there is call for working all up into animation and into a picture of active insanity. This adds to the horror; for it offers contrast to the soft demureness and sweetness of the sane Ophelia.

The "mad scene" is a display of trance—as of one moving and talking in a dream. Madness is an agitated and varied thing. It has all sorts of moods, passing from fury to stony tranquillity. There are "hurries," quick utterances, slow ones, and eager gestures. "Pray you mark" should be eager and excited. "They say the owl was a baker's daughter," a grotesque speech, and to be said grotesquely. Never enough is made of the words, "Lord, we know what we are, know what we may be. God be at your table."

Two really highly important characters in the conspiracy against Hamlet are the King's instruments, Rosencrantz and Guildenstern. They have a regular history, then lend themselves, as his creatures, to the King's designs, come and go as he tells them, spy on the Prince, try to beguile him, and finally, being secretly appointed to murder him, lose their own lives in this service.

They help, in truth, to convey the idea of Hamlet's almost complete isolation, and of the general combination that was formed against him, the King aiming at his life with these instruments; old Polonius striving to entrap him for his daughter; Laertes incensed because of his treatment of her; his mother alienated because of his coarse attacks upon her character; and this pair of courtiers quite ready to put him to death. This notion of a general conspiracy should be emphasised everywhere. True, he had Ophelia and the faithful Horatio with him, but the former he had himself of set purpose shaken off.

They should be represented as prominent, showy figures—they should act their villainy. How thin and unmeaning always appears Hamlet's pressure on them to confess that they had been sent to "draw" him. They simply stand, looking on, behaving with due obsequiousness to the leading actor. The King should have originally instructed them for their mission with great mystery and importance, and they should have come to Hamlet with a crafty air, as though they really mean to get at his secrets. These men were capable villains; they stuck at nothing, and undertook to assassinate Hamlet as though it were some trifling commission. What playgoer, by the way, has ever known that arch stroke of the King's—the appointing of Hamlet as his Ambassador to England, the more readily to get him away. This assassination of an important personage on a foreign shore shows how little was thought of killing in those times.

It will be noted what a difference all these incidents must make in our view of the character and feelings of Hamlet. In the last scene he not only knew that his father had been murdered by the King, but that he himself had narrowly escaped being murdered at his instigation. And yet he could bring himself to comply with the King's wishes as to the match, and meet him with apparent friendliness. But it is plain that he was secretly hostile to him; indeed, he only addresses him once during the scene. It looks as if he suspected him, for he had a foreboding—all was "ill about his heart."

Again, Hamlet's going away—banishment rather—is glossed over in the common version as a sort of careless incident, one of small importance. After a short absence he "turns up" again at the graveside, and we think no more of it. No one asks why? But it was a much more momentous thing. His presence to the King had become a menace and a danger; he had found a clue to the great secret; he had killed Polonius; he was going about abusing the King, on whom he might next make a personal attack. Indeed, the King told Laertes that Hamlet was favouring Fortinbras, a foreign general, and might use him to destroy his rule: on all accounts Hamlet must be got out of the country, and when out of the country assassinated.

The confusion, therefore, and consternation of the King when Hamlet, whose destruction seemed a certainty, reappeared of a sudden in Denmark, was overwhelming. The danger was so imminent that he felt he must destroy him at once, or be destroyed himself.

This abrupt return of Hamlet, which in modern versions is simply announced by his appearance at the graveyard, is in the original prepared for in a dramatic way. We have the sailor coming from the vessel to deliver a despatch from Hamlet to his friend Horatio. A strange, mysterious letter it was, with "much to tell that would make thee dumb." He had boarded a pirate ship, he writes, but the vessel suddenly drew off and left him a prisoner. They had treated him well, and he had promised to write to the king on their behalf.

VII.—OPHELIA'S BURIAL.

We may wonder now that Hamlet was in possession of the full story of his uncle's villainy—the murder of his father, the planned murder of himself—that he could have trusted the King for a moment, or even have seemed to have forgiven him. But did he? Might it not have occurred to Hamlet that this fighting business might suggest some opportunity for vengeance; there is no evidence of this, but how likely it would be. Carte and tierce, cut and thrust, who knows what chance might offer? And he must have been of a too childlike simplicity to accept his rascally uncle's proposals seriously. But Laertes he did not suspect.

I think we may assume also that Hamlet's feeling to Laertes was not a very cordial one. The latter had nearly strangled him in the grave; his language had been insulting and overbearing; he had injured him in the person of his sister—a natural ground of dislike. It might be that the King had spoken truly when he said that Hamlet was jealous of Laertes's superior prowess with the sword, and was eager to give him a lesson.

Hamlet, when seeing Ophelia's funeral approaching, was able to make out at a distance that the rites were "maimed." This must mean that there was no religious procession, no cross, holy water, or possibly religious dress. There was but one priest, and likely enough no acolyte and choristers. The priest possibly omitted the "libera," "de profundis," and solemn prayers. The ordinary stage-manager's exhibition is quite the reverse of all this. He must have his super clergymen striving to look pious, &c. The bell, however, should toll at intervals. It is remarkable that the Queen at the graveside announces that the marriage with Hamlet had been all but settled. But why was Ophelia thus branded? She had not committed suicide. A branch of a tree gave way, she fell into the water, and was drowned.

Was Hamlet's extravagant burst at Ophelia's grave, we may ask, genuine or assumed? Did he pretend to feel this frantic grief, so that all thought that he had gone mad? When he first learned from Laertes's exclamation, "A ministering angel shall my sister be!" he merely says, quietly, "What, the fair Ophelia?"

THE next term of the Day School for Girls in connection with the Crystal Palace Company's School of Art, Music, Science, and Literature will commence on Monday, Sept. 23. The day and evening schools for men and women students will open on Monday, Sept. 30. The evening classes are a new departure. Many people have suggested the desirability of starting classes of this description, for in well-populated districts they are generally found to be well patronised. The following subjects will be taught:—Drawing from the antique, pianoforte, violin, singing, English class for foreigners, elementary class (conversation, reading aloud, correspondence—business and general), advanced class (study of English literature and composition), French and German.

AMONG the inaugural events fixed for the term will be a recital of the composition of Mr. S. Coleridge-Taylor, who is the Professor of Harmony at the schools. This will take place in the School Hall on Oct. 4, at 3.30. Invitation cards will be forwarded on application to the registrar. The fees of evening classes have been specially arranged to meet the needs of students who are engaged in business during the day. For prospectus and full particulars application should be made to the registrar, School of Art, Crystal Palace.

MONDAY being the Jewish New Year's Day, the Pavilion (Yiddish) Theatre, Mile End, was closed on that occasion, but reopened on Tuesday with an excellent performance of The Orphan, in which Mme. Diana Feinman appeared, supported by the Feinman Operatic and Dramatic Company. During the week Holy Sabbath and Shattered Lives have been played.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, Sept. 12.—As usual, the Comédie Française has been first in the field with a novelty, a three-act comedy by MM. Guiches and Gheusi, that met with an excellent reception. The idea of "every man living according to his own ideas of happiness" has been often developed by various playwrights, but as the before-mentioned authors deal with the question in a rather amusing form, we have no cause to complain. The expounder of this theory is François Desclos, married to the beautiful Henriette, whom, for a long time, he loved and admired. When, however, the story opens things have changed, for we hear François say to the pretty Pauline Clermain, "I no longer love my wife. She abhors me. If she has not deceived me already, it will occur soon. Tant pis! Let us all live our own lives. And you, Pauline, had better follow my example!" Pauline feels inclined to accept this advice. She is but a young girl, yet life has not dealt kindly with her. Jacques d'Arvant, François' friend, has secured her a place as clerk in François' office. She is an orphan and poor, but she is ambitious, and, having fallen secretly in love with the handsome Comte d'Arvant, she aspires to become his wife. She discovers, however, that Arvant does not think of her, and that his affections are centred on Henriette Desclos. Henriette has soon grown tired of the honest François, and the latter was right when he said that his wife abhorred him. Henriette is dazzled by d'Arvant's aristocratic manners. She is not yet his mistress, but she has arranged with d'Arvant to go to a watering-place where she will meet him. Pauline has discovered the plan, and from her François learns that conjugal misfortunes are likely to break soon over his head. Henriette thinks that the girl has been playing the spy and overwhelms her with reproaches, which are not merited, for Pauline only found out by chance the secret entente between Henriette and d'Arvant. Then follow two important scenes. François and Pauline are both very unhappy. Employer and employee console one another, and for the first time they discover that there is something more than ordinary sympathy between them. The next scene, between François and his wife, is more stormy. François knows that his wife is in love with d'Arvant, and as he has learned that she intends to spend a month with him in a watering-place, he thinks she may as well have the man all to herself, and for ever. "I make you a present of him," he tells Henriette; "let us divorce as quickly as posible." Henriette jumps at the proposition, and the play would have ended here if we had had to do with anyone else but d'Arvant. D'Arvant makes difficulties. Like many aristocratic and unprincipled roués, he strictly observes the forms of religion; and, as the Church does not sanction divorce, his religious principles do not allow him to marry a divorced woman. Poor François is disconsolate. He never suspected this difficulty. But François will not sacrifice his happiness to d'Arvant's scruples. He (François) wants to make Pauline his wife, and if the noble Count marries Henriette everybody will be happy. He therefore calls on the former, and, after some trouble, succeeds in extracting from him the promise that the moment their divorce will be pronounced Henriette will become Comtesse d'Arvant. The work was beautifully acted by M. de Féraudy, pathetic in the rôle of Desclos; by M. Duflos, a clever d'Arvant; by M. Numa, highly amusing as a playwriting stockbroker; by Mlle. Cécile Sorel, a beautiful Henriette; and by Mlle. Piérat, delightful and touching as Pauline.

AT the Palais Royal, M. Mouëzy-Eon read his new farce, Panachot, gendarme. The artists were delighted with their rôles, and they prognosticate a success for the piece. M. Lamy, that excellent actor, will create therein the leading part.

SOME time ago we announced in these columns that the first novelty at the Athénée this season would be a four-act comedy by M. Michel Provins. To-day I learn that the author has taken away his MS., and refuses to have his work produced at that theatre. Contrary to what was whispered, no fault was found with the piece. The trouble arose in consequence of two of the artists being dissatisfied with their rôles, which made M. Provins fear that they would not do justice to them.

"L'ANNIVERSAIRE" is the title of a new play by MM. Guy Serge and Georges Nonem, to be brought out at one of our boulevard theatres in the course of this season.

THE AMBIGU announces the last performances of L'Enfant du Temple, which has been kept running during the summer months. The first novelty there will be Le Curé de Foreville, a five-act drama by M. J. de Gramont. An altogether new cast has been engaged by M. Grisier, comprising Mlle. Didier, from the Odéon; Mme. Renée Bussy; M. Daltour; M. Bartel, the well-known comic actor; M. Bailly, and M. Morgan.

THE Théâtre Montmartre, that most Parisian of all Paris theatres, inaugurates its season with Denise, with special permission, of course, of M. Claretie, the work belonging to the Comédie-Française. Dumas' masterpiece will be interpreted by Mmes. Jane Myriell and Clarence, and by M. Jones Chandflort. We are also promised Les Saltimbanques, the well-known operette by Ganne, to be followed by Les Pauvres de Paris.

BOROUGH THEATRE, STRATFORD.

On Monday, Sept. 9, the Musical Play, "LA POUPEE."

This exceedingly pretty and entertaining piece is paying another visit to the Borough Theatre this week, and is meeting with much success. Mr. C. P. Levilly's company is responsible for its interpretation. Miss Stella Gastelle's long familiarity with the rôle of Alesia in no way detracts from the charm of her performance, and she is as firm a favourite as ever. Mr. W. H. Powell portrays the idiosyncrasies of Hilarius on the lines of his predecessors in the part, added to a breezy humour which is most acceptable, and his merry quips and cranks always compel laughter. Mr. F. Maxwell Stewart gives a highly-creditable rendering of Launcelot, although his voice is scarcely strong enough to do full justice to the numbers allotted to him. Mr. Ernest Torrance plays Father Maxime most appropriately; and "A jovial monk am I" is rendered by him in rousing style. Mr. Leon Simkin contributed a well-defined sketch of Loremois; Mr. Arthur Gibbons depicts Baron Chanterelle in capable comedy vein; and Mr. Vernon Reed plays with unctuous humour as Balthazar. Miss Dulcie Garland does exceedingly well as Mme. Hilarius; and Honri is smartly played by Miss Kitty Cavendish. Others who do well are Mr. Vernon Booth as the Notary; Mr. P. J. Bannon as Basilique; and Miss Frances Lane, Miss Belle Gray, and Miss Hilda Milburn as the Three Dolls. The music is done adequate justice to by the chorus, under the direction of Mr. Harry Rushworth.

LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, Sept. 9, the Musical Play, entitled
"A CHINESE HONEYMOON."

The enduring popularity of A Chinese Honeymoon is proved by the crowded appearance of the King's Theatre this week. Almost every playgoer must have witnessed the comedy by this time, and yet there was the hearty laughter just as if it were a new production. Mr. Milton Bode's company is quite up to the mark, and although all the artists are new comers, they play well together, entering whole-heartedly into the spirit of the farce. Mr. Rudolph Kloss makes a dignified and pleasant-voiced Emperor Hang Chow. As Chippie Chop, the Lord Chancellor, Mr. P. Allerton Turner makes the most of his limited opportunities, and a really funny Lord High Admiral Hi Lung, is Mr. Leonard May, whose exertions in seeking a wife for the Emperor land him into such difficulties. Mr. Harry Jennings is a satisfactory Tom Hatherton. Mr. Pineapple is rendered by Mr. George Rydon in bustling and humorous fashion, his attempts to avoid the meeting with the official mother-in-law being ludicrously expressed. Miss Rose Begarnie, a charming young actress and singer, plays Mrs. Pineapple to perfection, and is unanimously voted a success. Mrs. Brown, the official mother-in-law, is grimly personified by Miss Maud Adams, whose attitude quite takes the fancy of the audience. A palpable hit is made by Miss Gwennie Harcourt as the waitress Fifi, her cockney accent and quaint manner being considerably amusing. Miss Elsie Skillings is a fascinating Princess Soo-Soo. The four bridesmaids are brightly played by Mmes. Dorothy Radcliffe, Mary Gray, Cecily Leslie, and Phyllis Grosvenor. The chorus is quite adequate, and the dresses and scenery elaborate and picturesque. Mr. Edward H. Whitehall capably conducts the orchestra.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

On Monday, Sept. 9, the Comedy, in three acts, with music, written and composed by Paul A. Rubens, and entitled
"MR. POPPLE (OF IPPLETON)."

The laughter-loving patrons of the fine Holloway theatre during the week have been discovering, to their great delight, the humour of Mr. Poppleton (of Ippleton), and the observations of the unsophisticated Freddy of things in general and London in particular have caused the healthiest and heartiest laughter. Mr. Charles Frohman "presents," but it is the theatrical habit of Mr. Charles Macdona to "introduce," and his latest introduction to North Londoners is Miss Millie Hylton, who plays, in her own fascinating way the character of La Bolero. Miss Hylton is not by any means unknown to the dwellers in Holloway; but Monday was their first opportunity of seeing her at the local temple of the drama in a principal rôle in a musical play. La Bolero's song to Freddy quite captured them; but they were more than delighted with La Bolero's experiences as an actress, set forth in the famous song in the second act, to which the artist's rich endowment and wide experience enabled her to do complete justice. Mr. Arthur Longley is not exactly Mr. G. P. Huntley, and he has not that actor's delightful unconsciousness; but he manages, nevertheless, to make the part of Freddy Popple tell, in spite of lines that were not in the original scrip, and do not add to the fun of the piece. Mr. G. Carnelly Joye plays sufficiently well in the somewhat colourless rôle of Norman Popple; Mr. Sydney Young and Mr. James Stevenson, as those "rapid" old gentlemen, George Hennay and Henry Doring, are amusing. Miss Alice Rene and Miss Edith Grenfell impart more than usual significance to the parts of Mrs. Doring and Mrs. Hennay, being especially good in the second act. Miss Nellie Hodson as Louise secures nightly an encore for her messenger-boy song, and shares with Mr. C. E. Paton—an emphatic and droll Platt—the success of the duet in the second act. Miss Cora Lingard makes a graceful and winsome Violet Brinton; Mr. Douglas Phillips sings in spirited fashion as Jacques Kenyon. Messrs. Douglas Jefferies, Charles Joyce, Willie Kottaun, Leslie Steward, Louis Denver, W. H. Morgan, Archie Harrison, and Hubert Godfrey are seen to advantage in a number of minor characters. The play is well mounted, the girls of the Charity Theatre making a brave show, and the Motor Carnival in Act III. presenting a pretty spectacle. Mr. Charles Mann is the general-manager, and Mr. Wallace Stranack the manager for Mr. Charles Macdona.

THE CAMDEN.

On Monday, Sept 9,
THE MOODY-MANNERS OPERA COMPANY.

A special treat is provided here this week in the visit of the Moody-Manners company, which is always awaited with keen interest. Faust was chosen for the opening performance, and an immense audience was present on Monday. Mr. Charles Carter made an adequate Faust. Of Mr. Charles Manners' Mephistopheles it is now almost impossible to say anything fresh. However, it remains as finished a performance as ever, and full of subtle humour. Mme. de Vere Sapio was most successful as Marguerita. It is her first appearance in the rôle at this theatre, but she delighted everyone by her fine vocalization, and made a distinct success. Miss D. Harrow was good as Martha; while Miss Toni Seiter once again filled the rôle of Siebel in an able manner, singing delightfully. Mr. Lewys James was heard to great advantage as Valentine; and Mr. H. Brindle was good as Wagner. The chorus and orchestra worked splendidly, and secured excellent results; and Herr Richard Eckhold ably conducted.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, Sept. 9, the Drama, by Walter Melville, entitled
"THE WORST WOMAN IN LONDON."

The Worst Woman in London is once again pursuing her career of crime to the evident enjoyment of large audiences at Mr. Bailey's playhouse, and the numerous sensational situations in Mr. Walter Melville's well-known drama have proved quite as thrilling as of old. Especially exciting has been the murder by the "worst woman" of her husband whilst he lies asleep in bed, and her subsequent struggle with Philip Armstrong; but the greatest "thriller" has, of course, been reserved for the conclusion, where the heroine makes her escape from a burning house by sliding along a telephone wire in mid-air. Mr. Tom Taylor's company—a well-chosen and excellent one in every respect—is responsible for the play, the title-rôle in which is undertaken in most convincing fashion by Miss Olga André, a lady who is well-equipped in every way for this all-important part. Her portrayal throughout of Frances Vere is an easy and finished one, and her fine appearance, excellent elocution, and thorough insight into the character, enable her to realise most admirably this difficult and arduous part. Her accomplice in villainy, Vincent Lyle, is excellently enacted by Mr. Paul Barry Lewers, who indicates the sinister nature of this frock-coated scoundrel in no uncertain fashion; and a powerful and impressive portrayal of the ruined gambler, Philip Armstrong, is supplied by Mr. Leonard Booker. Mr. George Gaisford is an earnest and able exponent of the hero, Jack Felton, scoring particularly in the Hyde Park scene; and Mr. F. Vernon Travers is quite satisfactory as James Milford. Miss Elizabeth Watkins gains the sympathy of her auditors for her quietly effective performance of the sorely-tried heroine, Ruth Milford. Humorous interludes are provided by Mr. Will Corrie as Bob Goldfinch and Miss Polly Marsh as his wife Matilda, two kind-hearted show folk, especially laughter-compelling being the "love-making" of the couple in the Hyde Park scene; and a droll impersonation also is submitted by Mr. H. W. Monte as Hugh Drayton, a character that occasionally reminds one of the drunken old reprobate, Eccles, in Caste. The numerous other parts are all adequately enacted, and the drama is excellently staged.

THE CORONET.

On Monday, Sept. 9, the Comedy, entitled
"THE STRONGER SEX."

One of the conspicuous successes of the London season just concluded is being presented at the Coronet Theatre, where Miss Emma and Mr. Percy Hutchison this week started their second company in The Stronger Sex on a tour which promises to achieve results equally as gratifying as those attained by its predecessor. The playgoers of Mr. Robert Arthur's well-appointed theatre have before experienced the liberality and taste of the productions asociated with the name of Hutchison, and a house full and appreciative followed Mr. John Valentine's clever play with eager zest. Seldom have the conflicting interests of business and romance been so ingeniously entwined and the engrossing story told in such well-chosen dialogue, in which an acute sense of humour is revealed, has enthralled the audience completely. A wise choice has been exercised in the selection of the cast. The rôle of Mary, the simple, yet 'cute, New York belle, has been allotted to Miss May Blayney, whose youth and comeliness are invaluable in the part, and win for her at once a high place in favour. Miss Blayney has a singularly musical voice, which lends itself agreeably to the American twang; the little lady's artless examination of her husband's affairs in bankruptcy being rendered with many tuneful modulations, while the daintiness, which is a distinguishing phase of her acting, is the admiration of all. Admirers in plenty are also found by Miss Gladys Ffolliott, whose matured art in the part of Mrs. Van Garkerken proves of immense value. The number of actresses who can render the rôle of grande dame attractive is few, but Miss Ffolliott may certainly be classed among them. She makes up and dresses the part to perfection, skilfully allowing the sterling qualities of the outspoken elderly lady to peep out from beneath a veneer of arrogance and bluntness, with the result that she is taken unconditionally to the hearts of the audience, and shares liberally in the applause. Mr. D. Lewin Mannering, who has the direction of the stage, proves his ability in the character of the Hon. Warren Barrington. The sinister touch which Mr. Mannering gives to the part makes it a little difficult to reconcile the baronet's earlier conduct with the strict integrity of the later scenes, but the details of the rôle are skilfully filled in, and gesture and expression are fittingly employed. Oliver Thorpe, Mary's cousin, is buoyantly sustained by Mr. Stanley Harrison, who has an intelligent grasp of a part by no means easy to portray, and renders himself a general favourite. Miss Nancy Beresford makes an attractive and well-spoken Joan Forsythe, acting with emotional fervour and charming refinement in a series of scenes which teem with difficulty. The fun of the piece is broadened by the efforts of Mr. Reg. Van Ranney and Mr. George Herbert Kersley, as the pair of Jew moneylenders, who lost their nationality before the episode in which they are concerned had proceeded far, but quite maintained the drollery of the scene. Mr. Guy Leigh suitably embodies the rôle of Robert Forsythe; Mr. F. Storcham is able to extract humour from Jenkins, the groom's, brief but forcible profession of fidelity to his mistress; and Mr. E. Compton has a proper sense of his responsibilities as the butler, William. The aristocratic crowd of the reception scene are becomingly gowned, and comport themselves realistically.

The original London production has been secured in its entirety by Mr. Percy Hutchison, who has produced the piece, and the result is seen in a sumptuous setting, which gained well-deserved eulogy. The Stronger Sex, which is preceded by E. M. Bryant's farce, The Peacemaker, was rapturously received, and has started its tour most auspiciously.

BRIXTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Sept. 9, the Play, entitled
"THE LIGHTS O' LONDON."

Mr. Geo. R. Sims's enormously successful drama was once more presented to a Brixton audience on Monday, and once again drew an enthusiastic and delighted body of playgoers. Mr. Herbert H. Hollister, who is no stranger to South London, is responsible for the production, and it can honestly be said that both his company and the stage-management are admirable. It was also evident that the stirring scenes of the popular play had again a powerful influence. In the rôle of the unfortunate Harold Armitage Mr. C. F. Collings displayed histrionic gifts, his impetuosity in the first act in the stormy interview with his father and the blind devotion to his wife were well brought out. Admirable support was rendered him by Miss Jeannie Burgoyne as Bess. The pathos of the many situations in which the heroine is involved were capitally sustained by Miss Burgoyne; especially good was the lady in the scenes with the villain and in the Jarvis ménage. Clifford Armitage found a capital exponent in Mr. Herbert Morgan. The bad qualities of the villain were well shown without any tendency to overplay the character. Mr. Herbert Hollister was splendid as Seth Preene, whose love for his erring daughter and his remorse were well shown. Mr. Payne Fletcher was an amusing Jarvis; and adequate support was rendered him by Miss Nancy Neville as the buxom Mrs. Jarvis and by Miss Nellie Maynard as Shakespeare Jarvis. Mr. G. P. Lester was good as Marks; and Mr. G. Wallace deserves mention as the old Squire. Philosopher Jack found an ideal representative in Mr. Ernest K. Nelson; and Mr. Reginald Holmes was a cute detective. Mr. H. Pettitt displayed ability as Percy de Vere. Miss Kate Randolph well showed the vain and frivolous side of Hetty Preene's character. The remaining parts were well played. The scenic accessories were very good.

THE STANDARD.

On Monday, Sept. 9, the Drama, entitled
"THE EVE OF HER WEDDING."

Mr. C. Watson Mill is again responsible for the fare at the popular Shoreditch playhouse, The Eve of Her Wedding, an exciting and well-written drama, proving evidently greatly to the liking of the enthusiastic audience present on Monday evening. Their sympathies have very early in the play gone out to the cruelly-wronged heroine, Mavis Leverton, a part skilfully and effectively undertaken by Miss Marion Denvil, especially harrowing being the scene at the church porch, where she is accused of being unfaithful to her lover, the portrayal throughout being one on which the experienced and gifted actress is to be congratulated. Mr. Ashley Page makes a manly and convincing George Tremain, playing with all his accustomed ease and finish; and the callousness and hypocrisy of Dean Clifton are admirably indicated by Mr. J. C. Aubrey, the character losing nothing in effectiveness by the subdued methods employed by its interpreter. A decidedly meritorious portraiture of Paul Cairshaw, "the man with the scar," is that given by Mr. Bensley Evans; and Mr. Roland Daniels is responsible for an excellent embodiment of Dick Leverton, especially convincing being the young man's outburst of indignation at the conclusion of the first act. Mr. Johnny Chippendale contributes largely to the merriment of the evening by his humorous embodiment of Rudolph Earle; Mr. Frank Harrison submits an amusing and interesting portrait of the Secret Service agent, Giovanni; Mr. W. J. Holloway cleverly suggests the devotion of the poor cripple, Jack Herne, to Mavis Leverton, and gives an excellent impersonation throughout; and Squire Leverton has a robust and natural exponent in Mr. Eric Campbell. The adventuress, Renie de Telle, is quite safe in the hands of Miss East Robertson, who is to be complimented on a finished piece of acting; and Miss Mattie Everett presents a diverting portrait of Gwendoline Younger, an American damsel with a partiality for the nobility, no matter whether they be English lords or Italian counts. The other parts are all carefully and capably played, and the drama is staged with the completeness and realism that is always encountered at the Standard.

GRAND THEATRE, ISLINGTON.

On Monday, Sept. 9, the Drama, entitled
"DRIVEN FROM HOME."

After a lengthy lapse of time the above drama occupies the boards of this theatre, and shows no signs of falling off in popular esteem. Mr. Andrew Melville's company present it, and containing, as it does, some well-known names, the general performance is quite excellent. Mr. Felix Pitt as Anthony Raybrook, in the part of the somewhat unnatural parent, acts with force, and is to be congratulated on his success. Mr. Francis Everard as Walter Hatherleigh enacts that unfortunate man with a sympathetic touch that makes his performance very realistic. Mr. Charles Burdon as Geoffrey Waring plays the heavy rôle in the accepted style; and as Willie the Outcast Mr. Arthur F. Dudley submits a good character-study that merits much praise. Mr. Fred C. Imbert is capital as Anderson, and finds a capable ally in Miss Susan Bevan, who plays his wife. Mr. Edward Finlay as Saunders does not spare himself in delineating that particularly unpleasant character; Miss Clara Knowles is excellent as the relentless housekeeper, Barbara Ashdown; and Miss Muriel Dean, in the dual rôle of the Mother in the first part of the play and the Son in the second, is entitled to warm commendation, her entire performance being on a high level. A very large number of smaller parts are all carefully played by the remaining members of the company, and the mounting of the play is on a complete scale.

THE ELEPHANT AND CASTLE.

On Monday, Sept. 9, the Drama, entitled
"A WARNING TO WOMEN."

Described on the programme as "the celebrated Irish play," A Warning to Women is occupying the boards here this week. The production has been undertaken by Mr. John M. East, and reflects great credit on the theatre's general manager and his excellent stock company. Among other things, the piece deals with the pernicious effects of drugs and alcohol on the present and future generations. Mr. Frank Harding as Dr. Dread makes the most of his opportunities in a powerful manner; Mr. E. C. Matthews, in the rôle of an Irish piper and protector of the heroine, acts with the necessary touches of humour and pathos; Miss Cecil Cromwell gives a fine impersonation of the drug-consuming heroine, whose tribulations should unmistakably act as a warning to women; Mr. Fred Dobell is a fine old Irish squire, his assumption of despair at the thought of his daughter's malady and his own financial misfortune being cleverly depicted; Mr. Wm. Felton makes a pathetic blind hero; and Mr. E. H. Brooke, as his friend, gives a characteristic sketch of a young English nobleman. Miss Agnes Paulton is agreeably sympathetic as the younger daughter of the old squire.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Sept. 9, the Play, entitled
"UNDER TWO FLAGS."

The representations at the Dalston Theatre this week, by members of Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company, of Edwin Elsner's dramatic version of Ouida's novel, "Under Two Flags," are taking wonderfully. Miss Ida Molesworth captivates all as Cigarette. Her success in this part is undoubtedly complete. Mr. Mark Blow also scores heavily as Bertie Cecil Royellieu. The audience regard him all through as a daring self-sacrificing hero, and Mr. Blow never forgets, through all the varying phases of the part, that he is enacting the character of a gentleman. Mr. Roy Jackson's impersonation of Colonel Chanteroy, otherwise known as "the Hawk," is a clever piece of stage villainy, and he is (theatrically) detested in consequence. The Princess Venetia Corona is sweetly played by Miss Edith Coleman. Mr. Harry Benson, who appears as the valet, causes a good deal of laughter; and Miss Kitty Douglas (maid to the Princess) also contributes to the hilarity. The singing of Miss Douglas, it should be added, also meets with much favour. Lord Royellieu has a courtly representative in Mr. Charles Brooke; Mr. Dermot Fitz-Gibbon appears with credit as Cecil Royellieu; Mr. Austen Milroy as Lord Rockingham; Mr. Reginald Huntworth as the Marshal of France; Miss Joan Stern as the Countess Olga; and Miss Madge Stevens as Lady Beatrice Guinevere. The staging of the piece is most complete.

THE CROWN, PECKHAM.

On Monday, Sept. 9, the Musical Comedy, by Geo. Grossmith, jun., music by Ivan Caryll and Lionel Monckton, entitled
"THE SPRING CHICKEN."

Musical comedy and melodrama, when well represented, are alike popular at Peckham, as is evidenced by the crowded audiences which are flocking to see the above-named popular Gaiety success, performed by Mr. George Dance's company. Miss Violet Loraine, who was such a success as principal boy in the last pantomime here, makes a very prepossessing and tuneful Rosalie, and is warmly applauded on her entrance and throughout the piece. Mr. Percival Knight plays very neatly and with considerable humour as the terrible flirt, Gustave Babori, and Mr. H. Robert Averill acts and dances well as Boniface. Mr. Fred Payne contributes a performance of great merit as the eccentric Mr. Girdle, and his duet with Babori, "On a Sunday afternoon," is especially well rendered. Miss Nellie Wigley makes a handsome Dulcie Babori, and her two solos are very well given. Mr. J. D. Newton is a choleric old Baron Papouche, and Mr. Frank Altree causes much laughter as the German waiter, Felix. Miss Nellie Kavanagh is a winsome Mrs. Girdle, and sings a couple of topical songs with much point and cleverness. As the Baroness Papouche Miss Poppy Poole is well suited, and Mr. Louis Victor does well as Stephen Henry Girdle. Miss Lilian Errol makes an engaging little Emmy Lou. Some new songs and dances have been added to the original score, and altogether the performance goes with a bang from start to finish. There is an admirable full chorus, and special orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Fritz Hart. Mr. Harry Lyons is manager, and Mr. J. D. Newton stage-manager.

THE GRAND, FULHAM.

On Monday, Sept. 9, the Comedy, entitled
"BEAUTY AND THE BARGE."

Mr. Arthur Hardy's company in Messrs. W. W. Jacobs and Louis N. Parker's clever comedy, Beauty and the Barge, provides the attraction at the Grand Theatre this week, and has drawn large and appreciative audiences. Mr. Hardy's company is a very powerful one, and an admirable rendering of this piece is given. Mr. Blake Adams's impersonation of James Barley, captain of the barge Heart in Hand, is perfect, and he fully deserves the applause accorded him. Mr. Adams receives adequate support in the person of Miss Dido Drake as Ethel Smedley, who handles the part in finished style. Mr. Atherling Farrar is seen to advantage as Herbert Manners; as also is Miss Mary Pemberton as Lucy Dallas, Major Smedley's niece. The rôle of Major Smedley is admirably filled by Mr. Walter Pemberton. Mr. Aubrey Mallalieu portrays the character of Lieut. Seyton Boyne, R.N., with marvellous skill, his acting being effective both as a naval lieutenant and as a mate on a barge. Mr. Charles White as John Dibbs, the old gardener, causes great amusement, and the merriment is added to by Miss Kate Osborne, in the rôle of Mrs. Baldwin. Another character that causes considerable laughter is that of George Porter, the landlord of the Old Ship, a part skilfully undertaken by Mr. Ewart Drake. Mr. Horace Kenney and Mr. Fred Knight as Augustus (the barge hand) and Tom Codd respectively are both excellent. Miss Mona Robin as Mrs. Smedley and Mrs. J. W. Braithwaite as Mrs. Porter are well placed. The principal item of the programme is preceded by Jerry and a Sunbeam, in which Mr. A. Mallalieu as Jerry Corbet and Miss M. Pemberton as Mary Bellasis cause great amusement. The whole production is under the general-management of Mr. Blake Adams, the stage-management being entrusted to Mr. Atheling Farrar.

CRYSTAL PALACE THEATRE.

On Monday, Sept. 9, the Comic Opera entitled
"VERONIQUE."

Mr. Bannister Howard has proved conclusively that he knows what the public want, and in securing Mr. Charles Macdona's chief company in Veronique to open the autumn season at the Crystal Palace Theatre he has done wisely and well, a packed house being the gratifying result. The whimsicalities of Mr. Daley Cooper as Monsieur Coquenard kept the audience in roars of laughter from the rise of the curtain to its fall. Miss Mabel Lait sustained the name part sweetly, and with agreeable vivacity. The rôle of Florestan was ably filled by Mr. Arthur Stroud, several duets sung with Miss Lait being vigorously encored. Mr. Sidney Bracey was quite at home in the part of Seraphin, and the little dancing he did made one wish for more, Miss Elsie Probyn as Denise, Seraphin's bride, was charming; Mme. Coquenard was portrayed with suitable vigour by Miss Roberta Williams, full justice being done to the several pretty songs in the part. Miss Stella St. Audrie caused much merriment as Mme. de Champ d'Azur, and her rendering of "The Garden of Love" in the third act was perfect. Miss Constance Groves as the deaf aunt of Denise also caused much laughter. Mr. Oliver J. Round as M. Loustot made an adequate second to Coquenard, his energy being boundless and his drollery vastly amusing. The parts of Sophie, Elsie, Zoe, Irma, Lucille, and Heloise, florists in Coquenard's shop, were daintily sustained by Miss Kitty Ford, Miss Nancy Edwards, Miss Nita Glen, Miss Nina Nugent, Miss Kitty Cotter, and Miss Nellie Wilkinson. Mr. Sidney Darrell and Mr. Harry Kemp were realistic French waiters, and the parts of Octave and Felicien, friends of Florestan, were admirably embodied by Mr. Percy Latimer and Mr. Henry Hodgkins. The mounting is magnificent, and Mr. Howard is heartily to be congratulated on the extension of the success of his enterprise.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Hall Caine, entitled
"THE PRODIGAL SON."

It is seldom that Kingston playgoers have an opportunity of witnessing a drama of such absorbing interest as The Prodigal Son, which is being presented at the local theatre this week, and Mr. Peter Davey, the enterprising managing director, has been congratulated on having brought it to Kingston. An exceptionally powerful company engincered by Mr. Wentworth Croke is engaged. The two sisters, Helga and Thora Neilson, were most effectively portrayed by Miss Margaret Murch and Miss Maude Stewart Drewry respectively, both ladies giving evidence of histrionic abilities of a very high order. Mr. Henry Watson earned distinction in the part of Oscar Stephenson, and equal honours were gained by Mr. Hugh Montgomery in the part of Magnus. A fine picture of the Governor of Iceland was given by Mr. Richard A. Greene, Miss Barbara Gott playing with conspicuous ability the part of his wife. Miss Marie Harcourt became a great favourite in all parts of the house by her impersonation of the part of Margaret Neilson, the factor's daughter. Others deserving of mention were Miss Ethel Percival as Mme. Pandher, Miss Margaret Brodie as Goodrun, Miss Marie Rosine as Marta, Miss Gertrude Rose as Lady Slingstone, Mr. J. Poole Kirkwood as Oscar Neilson, Mr. G. Montagu Lane as the Sheriff, Mr. Chauncey Morris as Dr. Olsen, Mr. Chas. A. Maynard as Neils Finsen, Mr. Philip Renouf as the pastor, Mr. Frank Hill as the Director of the Casino, Mr. Frank Emery as Eric Armasson, Mr. H. Louis Wilson as the bank agent, Mr. Arthur H. Parkinson as the American Senator, Mr. Frederick Owen as a croupier, and Mr. Harold Edwin as Jon Vidalin.

THE SHAKESPEARE THEATRE.

On Monday, Sept. 9, the Play, entitled
"TWO LITTLE VAGABONDS."

The popular Two Little Vagabonds, by G. R. Sims and Arthur Shirley, from M. Pierre Decourcelle's drama, Les Deux Gosses, is proving a great attraction here, and crowded houses receive Hardie and Von Leer's company with great enthusiasm. The piece is admirably staged, and the acting all round is worthy of the warmest praise. Miss Violet Ellicott scores a decided hit in the part of the unfortunate Marion Thornton, the sincerity of her acting arousing the heartiest sympathy. A finished performance of the jealous George Thornton is given by Mr. Wilson Coleman, who quite realises the spirit of the character, and acts with an earnestness that carries conviction. Miss Josie Beltram acquits herself with much success in the exacting part of Wally, and the rôle of the more robust and generous-hearted Dick is cleverly assumed by Miss Marjorie Murray. Miss Helena Millais is thoroughly efficient as Barbara Scarth; and some welcome touches of humour are contributed by Miss Marie Pritchard in the low comedy part of Biddy Mullins. The part of Sister Randall, a hospital nurse, is capably sustained by Miss Lenna Vernon; Mr. Douglas Cecil as Captain Darville makes excellent use of his limited opportunities; and Mr. Joseph Brandon is satisfactory as John Scarth. An excellent character-study of the brutal Bill Mullins is given by Mr. John F. Traynor, who looks and acts the part to perfection. He is well supported by Mr. Frank Gordon as Dido Bunce and Mr. Fred Archer as the Coughdrop. Mr. E. P. Clift is general-manager and Mr. J. Galbraith acting-manager for Hardie and Von Leer.

SARAH SIDDONS'S TOMB.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I am glad to be able to report a most gratifying result of my recent appeal for the restoration of Mrs. Sarah Siddons's tomb in Paddington Churchyard, for Mr. Henry Siddons, great-grandson of the famous actress, has since come forward in the noblest manner by causing an entirely new monument to be erected over the resting-place of his illustrious ancestress, which now consists of a fine, handsome slab of beautiful white marble, containing the following inscription in large black letters:—

"Sacred to the Memory of SARAH SIDDONS, who departed this life
June 8th, 1831,
in her 76th year.
'Blessed are the Dead
which die in the Lord.'"

In order to protect the slab from any possible damage, an extensive oilskin has been placed over the grave, fastened on to the high iron railing which surrounds the memorable tomb.—Yours faithfully,

ALGERNON ASHTON.

"SARENNA."

English Opera, in One Act, by Hermann Löhr. Book by Avon Marsh. Produced by the Moody-Manners Company, at the Lyric Theatre, on Friday, Sept. 6.

Will Hendon ..... Mr. Joseph O'Mara
Michael Heard ..... Mr. Lewis James
Landlord of the Inn .... Mr. Charles Magrath
Ruth Hendon ..... Miss Primrose Hardinge
Sarenna ..... Miss Kate Anderson

Mr. Charles Manners' encouragement of English composers in the direction of a National Opera is admitted, and on the last night but one of his season at the Lyric he introduced to the musical public a one-act English opera, the score being by Mr. Hermann Löhr—whose graceful ballads can be heard everywhere—and the book by Mr. Avon Marsh. Mr. Löhr has a vein of melody, and his solos, duets, and choruses, if of no great originality, are invariably pleasing. Into the story the elemental passions of love and vengeance enter, as they do in I Pagliacci and Cavalleria Rusticana. The curtain rises on an English village in summertime, during the period of the Peninsular War. The young squire, Will Hendon, having betrayed the daughter of the village sexton, has gone to the wars. The girl, determined not to survive the disgrace, committed suicide, and is buried at the cross-roads. Michael Heard, her father, through constant grieving over the ruin of his beloved daughter, has become demented, and waits patiently for the destroyer of his happiness. He lives but for vengeance, and feels sure that the betrayer will be delivered over to him near the unhallowed grave of the wronged one. Hendon is quite a Lovelace apparently; for on his return to the village he, with unabashed impudence, brings with him a gipsy girl, named Sarenna, who provides her lover with drink by telling the fortunes of the harvesters. Meeting his sister, Ruth, Hendon, when warned by her that "There's one who will have life for life, and you a mark for a madman's knife," answers defiantly, "A silly tale as e'er I listened to! Remain I will! Be hanged to him! I am strong!" Hendon, moreover, contributes to his own undoing by his brutal treatment of Sarenna. Her blood is up when he strikes her, and drawing her dagger she would drive it into his callous heart; but refrains. The better way would be to betray him to the old man waiting for him at the cross roads. But Hendon, carousing with the villagers, incautiously reveals his identity, whereupon Michael Heard, forcing a passage through the crowd, plunges a dagger in his back. Sarenna, seeing her drunken lover slain before her eyes, makes her exit with a sustained hysterical laugh, and the curtain falls.

Mr. Joseph O'Mara, who has borne the principal weight of the tenor rôles during the Moody-Manners season, gave an excellent rendering of a martial theme, and his share of the great duet with Sarenna—the chief dramatic scene in the opera—added to his triumph. Miss Kate Anderson, in the gipsy song, "Twas in Toledo City," made an excellent impression, which was further emphasised by her rendering of the charming melody, "O, love unkind!" Mr. Charles Magrath's fine voice did complete justice to the "beer" song; and the scena for Michael Heard was admirably treated by Mr. Lewys James. The performance went smoothly under the capable direction of Herr Richard Eckhold; and the opera was received with unbounded enthusiasm, the composer and librettist appearing in answer to insistent calls.

Mr. Löhr's opera was followed by the opera, in one act, the text by Mr. R. Gatty, the music by Mr. Nicholas Gatty, entitled

"GREYSTEEL."

Gisli ..... Mr. Charles Carter
Kol (a Thrall) ..... Mr. Frederic Erle
Ari ..... Mr. H. Van Lachterop
Bjora (the Black) ..... Mr. G. Neilson
A Bearsark Chief ..... Mr. R. Brookes
Ingibjorga ..... Miss Enriqueta Crichton

The sub-title of Mr. Gatty's opera is The Bearsarks Come to Surnadale. It was produced originally at Sheffield, and was seen for the first time in the London district at the Crystal Palace on May 24 last year. The plot is based on Sir George Dasent's translation of the Icelandic saga of "Gisli the Soursop." Mr. Gatty has taken a hint from Wagner's Siegfried, for there is a magic sword which greatly influences the progress of the story. Some excellent and well-written scenes are scattered through this work, but it suffers by the inordinate length of some of the monologues, especially that of Gisli over the dead body of his brother. There is, however, great promise in Greysteel, and the composer should yet win greater fame as a writer for the stage. He has given us a fine piece of dramatic writing in Ingibjorga's lament over the body of Ari, with the accompanying choral dirge, and Kol's song to his sword Greysteel. This was exceedingly well sung by Mr. Frederick Erle, who succeeds Mr. Marshall Vincent in the part of Kol. Mr Hendrick Van Lachterop and Mr. George Neilson repeated their success as Ari and the truculent Bjorn; Mr. Charles Carter was an effective Gisli; and Miss Enriqueta Crichton considerably advanced her reputation by her dramatic treatment of the part of Ingibjorga. Mr. Harrison Frewin conducted.

THE TERRISS, ROTHERHITHE.

On Monday, Sept. 9, the Drama, by Geo. R. Sims and Wilson Barrett, entitled
"THE GOLDEN LADDER."

That The Golden Ladder is to the taste of the Rotherhithe audiences is very evident, and it is not to be wondered at, for this pretty romantic play holds the interest of all. As the Reverend Frank Thornhill Mr. Douglas Vigors enlisted the sympathy of the spectators, his acting being full of life and delightfully breezy. As his pretty and sorely-tried wife Miss Louise Hampton was admirable. She looked and acted the part to perfection. Michael Severn was very capably played by Mr. Fred Morgan; as, indeed, was that of the Greek adventurer, Peranza, by Mr. Edward Thane. One could not wish to see a more typical Yorkshireman than Mr. Goddard's Noah Learoyd; or a more representative banker than the John Grant of Mr. James Manning. Mr. C. Watts made a good gardener; and Mr. Bateman's Rao was a clever impersonation. The children's parts were well taken by Miss Lulu Bonas and Miss Elsie Jerrard. Mr. S. D. Mayne looked the British naval captain to the life, and Mr. Laurence, as Mr. Dennett, portrayed the French official very well. Mr. Newman Maurice as Samuel Peckaby kept the house on the giggle, and he was ably supported by Miss Lucy Beaumont. The play was well staged, the scenes in Madagascar being particularly pretty. That courteous manager, Mr. Will Taylor, always looks well to the comfort of his public.

"THE WHIP HAND."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I note in last week's Era a letter from Mr. Peter Davey, R C. Theatre, Kingston-on-Thames, in which he states that a play with the above title was produced in that neighbourhood in 1905.

I should be much obliged if you will insert this letter stating that my husband produced The Whip Hand, a three-act comedy, by Mr. and Mrs. Herman Merivale, at the New Theatre, Cambridge, fifteen or sixteen years ago, and afterwards toured in the provincial towns.—Yours faithfully,

MGT. GARTHORNE GRIMSTON.
(Mrs. Chas. W. Garthorne).

Mr. Pinero's play, His House in Order, was produced at Copenhagen on Saturday, and had a friendly reception from a full house.

PROFESSIONAL QUALIFICATIONS FOR ACTORS.

We print below the suggestions for the institution of professional qualifications for actors which have been the subject of some years' work in the Actors' Association, and was completed by the council of 1906. The present council desire to point out that they claim no credit and accept no responsibility for the "suggestions"; but think that in conjunction with the scheme suggested by Dr. Maddick they will serve as a basis of discussion.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE INSTITUTION OF PROFESSIONAL QUALIFICATIONS FOR ACTORS.

The question of qualification and registration of actors having been, from time to time, under the consideration of the Actors' Association, the council now beg to bring to your notice the following scheme, and to invite you to become one of the original members of the Senate, with a view to the completion of the scheme.

The president, vice-presidents, and council of the Actors' Association shall nominate twenty-five actors of not less than twenty years' standing as the nucleus of a Senate, who shall co-opt up to the full number within twelve months. The full number of the Senate shall be forty-five, with a qualification of twenty years' standing as actors. Vacancies, as they occur, shall be filled by co-option by the remaining members of the Senate within twelve months.

In view of the broad scope of such a scheme, it shall be in the power of the Senate to elect, if thought desirable, representatives of the allied arts of dancing, singing, and pantomime, who shall be of the same standing, viz., twenty years.

The senate shall confer diplomas. The prospect of obtaining at the earliest possible date the highest official recognition of the Senate, when it has justified its existence, shall be steadily kept in view. The Senate shall sit not less than twice a year to confer diplomas. The quorum of the Senate shall be one-third of its members.

The Senate shall appoint Boards of Examiners to grant certificates in various branches as hereinafter provided. There shall be three on each Board, no examiner being eligible to sit on more than one Board. Certificates granted by any Board shall be signed by all three examiners serving on that Board. Examiners shall not examine their own pupils.

The Boards of Examiners shall grant certificates in the following branches, and shall receive from the Senate instructions as to the standard to be exacted :—

1. Pantomime.—Pantomime is understood to mean the ability to convey meaning in silence by means of gesture and expression.
2. Elocution.—To obtain a certificate in elocution it shall be understood that the candidate shall, in the delivery of selected passages, give reasonable evidence of (a) General culture;
   (b) The capacity to impart dramatic value to the passages selected.
3. Singing.—To obtain a certificate in singing it shall be understood that the candidate shall, in the singing of selected passages, give reasonable evidence of (a) and (b) as above.
4. Dancing.
5. Character analysis and methods of interpretation.
6. Fencing.
7. Dramatic history and dramatic literature of Great Britain.
8. The language and dramatic literature of any other country.
9. History of costume.

If dancing is taken as one of the two qualifying subjects, a much higher standard of excellence to be exacted than if taken as a supplementary subject, i.e., really qualified solo dancer.

Candidates who hold certificates in branches 1 and 2, or 1 and 3, or 1 and 4, and who have adopted the profession as a means of livelihood for two years, with not less than forty weeks' full work, shall be entitled to the diploma of Student Associate, which the Senate shall confer.

Candidates who, in addition to certificates in branches 1 and 2, or 1 and 3, or 1 and 4, hold certificates in any three of the remaining sections, shall be entitled to the diploma of Student Associate after they have adopted the profession as a means of livelihood for eighteen months, with not less than thirty weeks' full work. That is, their additional attainments shall save them six months.

Student Associates shall be entitled to appear before the Senate for the diploma of Associate at the next session after they have adopted the profession as a means of livelihood, for a period of five years and 100 weeks' full work. They will be required to appear before the Senate in selected plays or scenes from plays, and they shall receive their diplomas if they shall be judged efficient by a majority of four-fifths of the members present.

Student Associates, who, in addition to certificates in branches 1 and 2, or 1 and 3, or 1 and 4 hold certificates in any three of the remaining sections, shall be entitled to appear for the diploma of Associate after they have adopted the profession as a means of livelihood for a period of four years. That is, their additional attainments shall save them one year.

A list of certificates held shall be enumerated on all diplomas.

All diplomas shall be signed, on behalf of the Senate, by a Registrar appointed by them, and shall further bear a printed list of the members of the Senate.

The Senate would have the power to withdraw from the official register the names of any holders of diplomas convicted by them of dishonourable conduct, or of conduct professionally disreputable.

FEES FOR QUALIFICATION, ETC. ALTERNATIVE SUGGESTIONS.

A.	£ s. d.
Examination fee for Student Associate	1 11 6
Qualification ditto	2 2 0
Examination fee for Associate	1 1 0
Qualification ditto	3 3 0

B.	£ s. d.
Examination fee for Student Associate	1 11 6
Qualification ditto	2 2 0

For all members of the A. A. who have paid one year's subscription to be reduced to £1 1s.

	£ s. d.
Examination fee for Associate	1 1 0
Qualification ditto	3 3 0

The Qualification fee to be remitted entirely to all members of the A. A., who have paid four years' subscription; subscription for a lesser number of years to be deducted from the £3 3s.

C.	£ s. d.
Examination fee for Student Associate	1 11 6
Qualification ditto	2 2 0

To carry membership of the A. A. for two years; or £1 11s. 6d. without membership.

	£ s. d.
Examination fee for Associate	1 1 0
Qualification ditto	3 3 0

To carry membership of A. A. for a further three years; or £2 2s. without membership.

It is, of course, understood that the Senate shall be composed of men and women of the highest professional attainments, and of the strictest integrity, and shall thus be of such weight that none will be reasonably able to cavil at the powers they have assumed. It is hoped that a seat on the Senate shall be regarded by players as the highest honour their fellow-players can bestow.

The possession of a diploma granted by such a body could not fail to be of the greatest value to every actor who has yet his position to make. A printed official list of all holding diplomas shall be published annually, and it is hoped that means may be found to prevent all not in the official list from describing themselves as actors and actresses.

The question of dealing with those who, at the date of the appointment of the first Senate, shall have been some time in the profession, is a difficult one; but it is suggested that all who, at that date, shall have adopted the profession as a means of livelihood, for five years, shall be entitled to the full diploma of Associate, without submitting to any test without payment; and all who, at that date, shall have adopted the profession as a means of livelihood, for two years, shall, after submitting to the tests enumerated, be entitled to apply for the full diploma of Associate at once—the question of payment to be considered later.

Present members of the profession may, by virtue of years of work, claim diplomas—after such periods of work as qualify new members—and have the privilege of lessening these periods by submitting to the same tests. It is, however, understood that any present member of the profession will, without having to submit to test, automatically be listed as fully diplomaed Associate after his five years and 100 weeks' full work be completed; or as a Student Associate after his two years' and forty weeks' full work be completed.

The disadvantages of granting diplomas without test are inseparable from the period of transition. The suggestions made appear to give to existing members of the profession the benefit of their years of service; while they would indirectly benefit materially from the check that would in future be brought to bear on those who propose to enter the profession.

The advantages looked for are :—Added dignity to the profession, limiting the numbers of the profession, practical extinction of bogus managements, and prevention of disreputable persons in police-court cases styling themselves actors and actresses.

To procure still further advantages for holders of diplomas it is further suggested :—

That the Senate should frame a definition of a standard company, say, as follows : Five, at least, must be Associates out of every ten. And of the remaining five, three at least shall be student Associates. Choristers and supers shall not be included in estimating the strength of a company.

That the Senate shall grant to managers of standard companies a licence to advertise their companies as such, the bond fides of their advertisement being readily tested by reference to the official register. Any manager proved to the satisfaction of the Senate to be advertising his company without justification shall be debarred from so advertising again for a period not exceeding five years.

That it shall be an expressed condition of the issue of every diploma that the holder shall not play in other than standard companies under pain of forfeiting his diploma for a period to be determined by the Senate.

The managers of companies would ultimately find it greatly to their advantage if these regulations came into force; while local managers, who have any regard for the quality of the work seen in their theatres, would be able, at least to some extent, to safeguard themselves by declining to book any but standard companies.

THE EIGHTEENTH-CENTURY STAGE.

Mr. H. B. Irving delivered, on Tuesday afternoon, an address to the students of the Leeds College of Dramatic Art, at the Alexandra Hall, reviewing the history of the stage in the eighteenth century. Mr. Irving observed that the eighteenth century witnessed the firm establishment of Shakespeare's supremacy as the greatest tragic writer the theatre had ever known—a supremacy due to the fact that he showed the greatest mastery of stage effect, of dramatic situation, of the union between poetry and drama, between great writing and great play-writing—a union which could only be achieved when poet and dramatist were equally blended in the composition of the playwright.

Poetic plays, however great as literature, had never held, and never would hold, the stage so long as they were undramatic in their treatment and construction.

With the exception of a few comedies of Goldsmith and Sheridan, the eighteenth century had bequeathed no living drama. Its wearisome tragedies, declamatory and unreal, devoid of literary beauty, dramatic characterisation or skilful construction, had passed away.

Of realistic drama, as understood to-day, the drama of actual life, the drama of which The Second Mrs. Tanqueray might be regarded as the typical English example, the eighteenth century knew not.

Shakespeare's plays constituted the supreme test of the actor's merit. The leading actors of the eighteenth century never played arduous parts seven times a week, they never played the same piece continuously night after night, for, perhaps, 200 or 300 nights. The two great London theatres—Drury Lane and Covent Garden—had stock companies such as sprang up later all over England and Scotland, where actors could learn their business by playing a variety of parts, and often playing them with the great actors of the day. Those were the conditions which present-day actors might envy, for they were vital to the education of the actor of the future. Shakespeare would never be killed by surrounding him with what was beautiful, but he would perish as a glory of the stage if we could not in the future give to our actors the training that would fit them to interpret him.

RECONSTRUCTING HAMLET.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—As to the best way in which to reconstruct an acting version of Hamlet, to which you call attention in your leader of Saturday, I think we get some indication in the first quarto, published in 1603, and I find, on referring to your printed copy of my paper that I then wrote :—"I look upon the first quarto as a more perfect impression of Shakespeare's dramatic conception of the play than our acting editions, because the latter, by omitting some of the persons represented, and also many of the lines that reveal the weaker side of Hamlet's character, have altered the story of the play, and placed the part of Hamlet in an aspect different from the one conceived by the author." This much-abused quarto has 557 lines less than our acting edition, and yet 254 of them are not in our acting edition at all, but are in the second quarto, or, rather, they have a meaning equivalent to lines in the second quarto, for unfortunately the text of the 1603 play is very imperfect.

When our playgoers become a little less frivolous it may be worth while for managers to look up this 1603 quarto. I never understood the real Hamlet until I read it. I think the play is not, as generally stated, a first sketch of the great tragedy, but that it is a cut-down and reconstructed version of the second quarto which the actors of the Globe Theatre probably made because they found the original a little long. The compression is so well managed, the altered place (to begin Act II.) of the "To be or not to be" speech, followed by the scene with Ophelia, is so decidedly an improvement, and the little introduced scene between Horatio and the Queen Mother so well calculated to remove ambiguities, that it is difficult to conceive why Shakespeare, in his fuller version, should not have retained them.—Yours faithfully,

WILLIAM POLL.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Problems put upon the stage have given rise to much heated argument, but the question contained A Mother's Sacrifice is one which will be found very difficult to answer, and is sure to cause much controversy wherever this admirable play is performed. The question asked is this : What should a woman do who is married to a drunken brute who, although ill-treating her and her child in every way, is cunning enough not to give her the opportunity of gaining a divorce? A good man, who has proved that he would give his life to make her happy, asks the wife to leave her brutal husband and go to him. She, putting the child's future before her own happiness, refuses, for she knows that the world would not take into consideration the misery she had endured, and her child's good name would suffer. From a moral point of view Mary Foster's disregard for her own happiness where her child's future is concerned is the only possible course she could pursue, but there are many who will take an opposite view.

Act I. shows the outside of De Lara's Grand Circus, wherein Mary Foster, her husband, little Doris, and their two apprentices, Tessy and Tim, are performing. Before her marriage Mary Foster was engaged to Jack Brenton, a baronet's son, who, valuing her happiness more than his own, gave her up when she fell in love with Foster, the famous circus rider. The circus has come to Brenton for the first time since Mary's marriage, and her meeting with Jack is brought about by the latter saving her from the ill-treatment of Foster. In this scene we are also introduced to Lady Brenton, who is Jack's stepmother, and who wishes to disgrace him in some way so that his father will disinherit him and leave his money to her own little son. To effect this she enlists the services of Foster, a man who years before had married and deserted her. The plot turns on the efforts of this precious pair to get Jack Brenton entangled in some scandal with one of the lady artists at the circus, and Jack's love for Mary Foster and his wish to take her and her child from their life of misery proves to be the very thing, for the proud spirit of old Sir John Brenton will not overlook the fact that his son is paying court to a married woman, and ultimately the haughty old baronet disinherits his son, the scene of their parting being intensely pathetic.

Later on Lady Brenton sends a message to Jack, supposedly from his father, asking him to call at the Manor. Jack does so, a quarrel ensues between father and son, and as Jack is warding off his father's blows, Foster, who is hidden behind the heavy window curtains, stabs the old man, who accuses his son of the murder. Lady Brenton, although no party to the crime, is aware that Foster committed it, and later in the play her knowledge is turned to the purposes of a most dramatic scene. After making all the reparation possible, she divulges the circumstances of the crime, showing how Sir John was forced back upon the curtains, from behind which Foster stabbed him, and just as she describes how the old man threw up his arms Foster, who has escaped from prison, and is now in hiding, kills her exactly in the same manner as he killed Sir John.

There is now no reason why Mary should not marry her faithful lover, and in the last act we see them preparing for the wedding, but the scoundrel Foster has to be reckoned with, and he endeavours to kill the woman to whom he has already brought so much misery. The fight between this half-mad brute and the woman who has now so much to live for is realistic in the extreme, and forms an intensely exciting climax to a really strong drama.

Miss Louie Adair as Mary Foster gave a superb performance, which gained the complete sympathy of the audience. As Jack Brenton Mr. Reginald Payne was everything that a hero should be, his manly appearance fitting him for the part, and his telling voice giving full value to his many fine speeches. Miss Evelyn Ward was most natural as Lady Brenton, her interpretation of a difficult part being excellent. Mr. Cecil Churton gave a thoroughly consistent performance as Sir John Brenton. As Richard Foster Mr. C. Douglas Cox proves what ability and experience can do with a part which might be easily overdone, but which, in Mr. Cox's able hands, stands out as a bold picture of the brutal husband. The comic element, as presented by Miss Daisy Byford, as Ann, the waitress at the Inn, and Mr. Herbert Stimson, as Jack Brenton's servant Peter, formed a well-balanced relief, and as Little Doris, Mary Foster's child, Little Winnie Crisp was a revelation as a baby actress, her extraordinary dancing with her brother and sister in Act III. being one of the features of the evening. If applause, tears, and laughter accorded to a play give any indication of success, then the new play should prove a veritable gold mine to Mr. Herbert Darnley.

Black Jack	MR. ALEXANDER MUNRO
Two Limber Thieves	MESSRS. LUGG and BARNES
The Angel	MISS DOROTHEA DESMOND

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The piece was produced by Mr. J. Maundy Gregory. The scene is laid in Indiana, and the idea is taken from Gene Stratton Porter's book "Freckles." It is concerned with an Irishman's care of some valuable oak trees, which a gang of thieves are anxious to steal, there being a great demand for veneer. In addition McLean has wagered a thousand dollars that no man can make his steward, the Irishman Freckles, dishonest, and take one of the precious oaks from the swamp. Temptation being indignantly rejected by Freckles, the gang resort to violence. McLean returns in time to save the situation, and Freckles, who is badly wounded, gains the confessed love of McLean's daughter, the "Angel," as the curtain falls. The piece is pretty and has literary merit, but some of the dialogue will have to go, and the strong situations be reached more quickly. There is some amusing chaffing of a ruffian named Black Jack by the "Angel," of which more might be made. The setting is good and unconventional, and the curtain had to be raised three times at the close on Monday. Miss Dorothea Desmond was picturesque and charming as the "Angel," and Mr. W. S. Ryott made Freckles a sympathetic character. Mr. L. Plummer was strong as McLean, and Mr. Alex. Munro was a powerful Black Jack. Mr. F. J. Bithell's subservient Wissner was well portrayed, and Mr. H. Lugg and Mr. Barnes had a considerable amount of business as the limber thieves.

"HER GREAT MISTAKE."

A Domestic Drama, in Four Acts, by Frank Stuart, produced at the East Oxford Theatre On Monday, Sept. 9.

Little Violet	MISS EDIE RUTLAND
Muriel Gillingham	MISS WINIFRED STUART

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Geoffrey Gillingham and Langley Hallam are two half-brothers, lieutenants in the army, Geoffrey wealthy and Langley poor. Langley nourishes deep resentment against Geoffrey for having married Muriel, the girl he himself had loved; and Geoffrey's cousin, Ena Moore, staying at Fairmanor, is also disappointed at not having married Geoffrey. The two worthies accordingly plot to upset Muriel's peace of mind, playing on her hasty temper. On the day the play opens there is a meet of the hounds, and Muriel, for the first time, is not with her husband. Sarah, the housekeeper, expresses to Murphy, the butler, her surprise, and Murphy sees how things are going, and speaks his mind about Langley and Ena Moore. The latter returns and tells Hallam that she is inclined to abandon the game of separating husband and wife, but Langley plays on her cupidity, and induces her to continue the plot against the pair; she explains to him how she managed, by giving way to tears, to get Geoffrey to comfort her, and even give her a sympathetic kiss at the moment his wife was passing, and, of course, created jealousy. Langley says he has even a better card to play, and makes her sign an agreement to pay him a certain sum when she secures Geoffrey for herself. Ena, then, by only partially explaining the reason of Geoffrey's conduct, makes Muriel so jealous that she decides to leave her husband; and Langley arranges with Ena to make it appear she has eloped with him. The hunting party return, and Geoffrey receives a letter telling him his wife has left him. He quickly recovers from the blow, and says he will bring her back to him again, but a telegram comes ordering him to join his regiment at once and sail for South Africa.

Hallam has taken rooms in an hotel in London in the name of himself and wife, of course, unknown to Muriel, but he lets her know that he has so arranged that people will believe she has stayed there with him. Scene III., at Waterloo Station, shows the meeting of Muriel with a friend, Mark Seaton, who tells her of her husband's departure for the front, and that her child has been stolen from her. At the scene of Westminster Bridge a woman who has been deceived by Hallam commits suicide, and her father vows vengeance on the unknown betrayer of his daughter.

Act II. takes us to South Africa, where there is a fight and a stormy court-martial scene, where, on his half-brother's lying evidence, Geoffrey is convicted of cowardice and dismissed the army. Act III. depicts Murphy's home, where Muriel comes, and by an accident a man is brought in dying, who, in his wandering talk, gives the clue to where her daughter is concealed; she rushes off to find her, and her husband then arrives and receives a forged letter to his wife, and learns the whereabouts of the child, who is shut up in an old house at Whitechapel. The mother arrives, and while she is being tormented by Hallam her husband enters, and struggling with the villain, throws him over the balcony. The last act is laid in Italy, where Geoffrey and his wife are living in exile. The brigands there capture Hallam and are going to hang him, when Geoffrey saves his life, but to no purpose, as the father of the girl who committed suicide reads his private letters, discovers that he was the man who betrayed his daughter, and shoots him, and the villain dies asking Geoffrey's pardon, and handing him a letter proving his innocence of the charge of cowardice of which he had been convicted at the court-martial.

Mr. Wm. Vane undertook the rôle of the hero, Geoffrey Gillingham, which he sustained with conspicuous success, his acting being very natural. The villain, Langley Hallam, could not have been in better hands than those of Mr. Rd. Vane, who had a powerful grip of the character. Mr. Sydney Ernest was natural and easy as Murphy O'Brien; Mr. Henry Rutland gave a powerful exposition of Bernar; Mr. H. P. Kennedy was well placed as Thos Jones; Mr. Sydney Gordon made the most of the kindly Major Downe; and Mr. Palliser Acock extracted all the fun possible out of Tony. Miss Ruth Zillwood, an actress of considerable power and ability, gave a clever portrayal of Ena Moore; Miss Grace Barton was effective as Lilith Bernar; Miss Ellen Beverley was humorous as Sarah Cooper; and Miss Edie Rutland made a charming Little Violet. Miss Winifred Stuart, the popular lessee of the theatre, endowed Muriel Gillingham with a quiet charm and grace that were especially pleasing and attractive; she never at any time forced or over-acted the part. All had a splendid and well-deserved reception.

Generally speaking, the play is attractive and should prove successful with a little more careful rehearsing. The court-martial scene is very convincing, and there is a lot of smart writing in the dialogue. The comedy might be materially added to with advantage. The scenery, which has been specially painted, reflects great credit on the artists, who appear to have done their work well, and have succeeded in producing some good effects; and there was no discordant voice in the hearty applause bestowed on the play at the finish.

"THE VAN-DWELLER."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Will you kindly allow me to call attention to a somewhat curious coincidence with regard to Mr. H. V. Esmond's new play produced at the Lyric on Tuesday? About three years ago I wrote a one-act musical sketch entitled, The Van Dweller, wherein a young nobleman, utterly weary of the sphere in which he was born, buys a caravan and takes a tour through "the green heart of England." At one of his halting places he is encountered by the daughter of the local squire, who takes him for a gipsy. The result is mutual love at first sight, and the squire's daughter having been delivered by the van dweller from the unwelcome attentions of a passing tramp, a denouement such a might be expected. Despite delay, I still hope to see The Van Dweller produced. The resemblance between my little piece and at least a portion of Mr. Esmond's play seems close enough to suggest flagrant plagiarism on my part, should I now succeed in getting a hearing. Therefore I ask to be permitted this explanation.—Yours faithfully,

FREDK. BINGHAM.

TOURING AND RESIDENT MANAGERS.

A CHAT WITH WENTWORTH CROKE.

If one were to try and interview Mr. Wentworth Croke in the orthodox way such as is known to the modern journalist, he would be putting himself to a very difficult task indeed, especially if he came with a set of pre-arranged questions. Mr. Croke is far too original and far-seeing to employ his time too long on questions of immediate moment. He takes time by the forelock, and dashes off into the future.

One does not need a second impression of him. There is nothing of a puzzling element about him. He is the acme of "a man with a purpose," and a thorough determination to carry it through to the very end, come what may. As an observer I have marvelled at his extraordinary method of handling great business problems, and bringing them to successful maturity. Although he has not always met with brilliant success, he has had the courage of his opinions and brought through the majority of his undertakings with a thoroughness which is always characteristic of the man. With the influx of great success such as he has obtained with The Christian at the Lyceum Theatre, a success unequalled in the history of the drama, he has not attempted to crow. With his unfortunate speculation with The Gay Lord Vergy he did not complain or utter one regret. He is an iconoclast.

Early in the week I called upon him at his lovely flat in Bedford-street, really with the object of getting from him a direct interview, but no sooner did I see him than he began to talk about his future plans. But I wanted to know more about The Christian. He would have none of it, unless it was about its future in the provinces.

I looked at the man quietly smoking his beloved pipe, and wondered what was hidden behind those kindly eyes and clear-cut features. There was nothing expressive of harshness; nothing to indicate the tremendous responsibilities of the keen touring manager. No; just a quiet calm and fixed look of a general, perhaps, on a battlefield—all self-possession.

A kind of nervous shiver ran down my back when he told me that in addition to The Christian at the Lyceum, the other version in the provinces, The Bondman and The Prodigal Son in the immediate neighbourhood of town, he had almost that moment bought what he termed a magnificent melodrama for production next autumn. This play is entitled The Withered Hand, and has been specially written for him by Messrs. Fred Kitchen and Charles Baldwin.

Then the conversation drifted on to the important question of touring. I have found that Mr. Wentworth Croke's ideas on the subject are not only practicable, but profitable. He believes that by doing a thing in a first-class manner, the profits will of necessity be very much smaller, but the reputation of those who are responsible for the production, and the dramatic fare, most assuredly reap the benefit from the majority of playgoers, who do not particularly care for quantity, but quality. There has this week been a lot of discussion about the negligence of the resident managers. It seems to me his contention is perfectly right.

When touring his companies he always sends a better company on a second than on a first visit. That is to say, he always gives an improved article. This is the case with the new version of The Christian, which he hopes to send into the provinces, lock, stock, and barrel. Mr. Croke has practically arranged for The Christian to tour for ten weeks in its absolute entirety, from the Lyceum Theatre, and will open either at Birmingham or Manchester, doing only No. 1 towns. His respect for the provincial audience is so great that nothing less than the absolute production shall be given for their approval or rejection. What more can be done to please the public?

It is of no use having a shopful of delicacies hidden in the cellar. Beat the big drum, and rely upon the policy of enterprise to secure the public support of your endeavours. Many and many a real good honest play has toured the provinces to milk-and-water audiences for the lack of "push." It is the quintessence of that very word that stamps Wentworth Croke as a brilliantly successful man of business. In his domestic life, and with his employes, he is governed by a spirit of whole-hearted kindness, tempered with a firmness, one might almost say, persuasiveness, that endears him to all. He is not possessed of any possible feature of the martinet, but he is just a man of purpose. And he knows it.

AMUSEMENTS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

DURBAN, AUG. 14.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. B. and F. Wheeler; Manager, Mr. J. G. Wybrow.—The eminent actress, Mrs. Brown Potter, and company, occupy the theatre here at present. The company opened to a good house on Monday with La Tosca. Mrs. Brown Potter as Floria Tosca proved herself to be an artist of power, her fine emotional acting making a complete success of a difficult rôle; Miss Price Owen made a dignified Queen of Naples; Mr. Charles Doran gave a fine rendering of Cavaradossi; Mr. Esme Percy was good as Angelotti; and the other parts were in capable hands. The staging was of the best. The répertoire of the company includes The Iron Master, La Marseillaise, and The School for Scandal.

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. J. Ferguson Brown.—This house of amusement is at present occupied by a variety company, under the managership of Mr. J. Ferguson Brown, jun. Miss Dollie Webb, an old favourite, scores heavily; Miss Lilian Stainbridge is the possessor of a fine cultured voice; Miss Beatrice Ray is here in living statuary; Mr. C. Throsby is a smart comedian; Mr. J. Ferguson Brown, jun., baritone, is a success; Mr. Chas. Leonard is a versatile entertainer; Mr. Leith Harvey, tenor, captivates all with his fine voice; Alphonso, trick cyclist and high pedestal balancer, executes some difficult feats; Mr. Alex. Gray is a clever roller-skate dancer; and the Leopolds, acrobats and dancers, also meet with well-earned applause.

PIETERMARITZBURG, AUG. 14. — SCOTT'S THEATRE.—Lessees, The Follies; Manager, Mr. J. H. Winterbottom.—The company consists of Mesdames Elwyn, Byrne, and Claire Ashton, and Messrs. E. C. Carter, Richard Bruckshaw, Andrew Weir, and J. H. Winterbottom. Miss Ethel Byrne is a chic comedienne, and takes well; Miss Claire Ashton is a dainty dancer; Mr. E. C. Carter, an old favourite, scores heavily; Mr. Richard Bruckshaw's fine tenor voice is heard to perfection in all his numbers; Mr. Andrew Weir is an accomplished baritone; Mr. J. H. Winterbottom is a quaint comedian; and Mr. C. C. Hammond is the able pianist.

CARLTON MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. W. F. Isaacs; Manager, Mr. Ralph Brown; Musical-Director, Mr. Roy Dobson.—This place of amusement is still drawing good houses. The star at present is Tommy Holder, whose numbers always meet with well-deserved success; the Harveys (ragtime artists) give a well-finished turn; Alf. Nolan is a smart dancer; Nellie Loveall an acceptable ballad singer; and Tommy Holder and company produce a laughable sketch, entitled Hurrah for Casey!

IN consequence of the enormous demand for copies of Mr. Hall Caine's play, The Christian, hitherto printed for private circulation only, the publishers, Messrs. Collier and Co., have decided to issue a popular edition at 1s. net. This edition will be on sale by the end of next week.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

MR. JOHN HARE has happily fixed no date for his adieu to the London stage, which, we trust, he may elect still longer to adorn, but the tour which he is about to start is intended to be his last. The tour will open at Bristol on Monday, Sept. 30, the répertoire for the week consisting of A Pair of Spectacles and A Quiet Rubber, Caste, and The Gay Lord Quex. Mr. Pinero's piece will not be staged till the Wednesday, but on the Monday the audience will receive a souvenir copy of the work containing photogravures of the author and Mr. Hare.

MR. ARTHUR BOURCHIER, freed from managerial care at home by the success of Fiander's Widow, starts his provincial tour, accompanied by his wife, Miss Violet Vanbrugh, at the Theatre Royal, Dublin, on Monday. A comprehensive répertoire includes Macbeth, The Walls of Jericho, The Arm of the Law, The Bishop's Move, The Duel, Doctor Johnson, and The Merchant of Venice. From Dublin the company proceeds to Manchester, where a three weeks' season will be played, and a new play in four acts, by Murray Carson and Norah Keith, entitled Simple Simon, will see the light.

MISS LENA ASHWELL will be "At Home" at a private view of the Kingsway, as the Great Queen-street Theatre is to be called, on Thursday, Oct. 3, from 4 to 7 p.m. Opportunity will then be afforded of noting in their completed state the extensive alterations and decorations, with which rapid progress is being made. Wednesday, Oct. 9, has been selected for the date of opening, when Mr. A. P. Wharton's play, Irene Wycherley, will be produced. Mr. Norman McKinnel, who acts as "producer," Mr. Henry Vibart, Mr. Dennis Eadie, Mr. C M. Hallard, Miss Muriel Wylford, Miss Frances Ivor, Miss Christine Silver, Miss Doris Lytton, Miss Gertrude Scott, Miss Nannie Bennett, and Miss Dorothy Brunt will be in the cast.

MISS ASHWELL has determined that her management shall be marked by distinctive as well as artistic features. New plays, by new authors when possible, will be produced, special matinées for special plays will be given, and it is proposed to present at times triple bills of original one-act plays on lines similar to those which have made famous the Grand Guignol Theatre, Paris. The orchestra at the Kingsway is to be composed of well-known young musicians. It will possess stringed instruments only, and special encouragement is to be given to the works of young British composers struggling to obtain a hearing.

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES has added to the attractiveness of The Merry Widow at Daly's by the inclusion in the cast of Miss Gabrielle Ray, who has taken up the character of Frou-Frou. Miss Ray appears in the second act with Mr. W. H. Berry in a duet, entitled "Little Simpleton," embellished by a dance in which success instant and complete was gained. In the third act of The Merry Widow Miss Ray has another "song and dance," in which her talents are conspicuously displayed, and the applause won by the gifted young artist was of the heartiest and most generous character.

MR. ARTHUR COLLINS'S production of The Sins of Society beats anything ever done in Drury Lane. Nearly all the "sets" for the fourteen scenes have been painted in the theatre, and so heavy is the machinery that an extra lift had to be fitted under the stage. Two hundred people are present in the Longchamps scene. Fourteen dogs of various breeds appear at the "freak" dinner in the third act, and each is prize-bred, some being really valuable. They have been living in the theatre for the past six weeks, in order to get them to associate without fighting. More than 100 fashionable dresses have been made for the ladies. The first arrival at gallery doors was at half-past seven a.m. on Thursday. Last week-end everyone concerned was given a well-earned holiday, and from Friday to Monday Drury Lane Theatre was, for the first time for weeks past, entirely free from noise and bustle.

MISS SOPHIE HARRISS, on a motor journey from Exeter (where The Prince of Pilsen is playing) to Torquay, one day this week, turned a corner and found herself close upon a group of children, who were peacefully playing in the middle of the roadway, oblivious of the vigorous sounding of the hooter. By skilful steering an accident was averted; but on resuming her seat after soothing the terrified youngsters, Miss Harriss scarcely knew whether to feel amused or indignant at her chauffeur's remark, "Thank the Lord, madam, the car has sustained no damage!"

MISS ALMA MURRAY, the experienced and accomplished actress, is back from her holiday. Miss Murray has derived great benefit from her vacation, and is, as she expresses herself, "keen for work."

MISS ELLEN TERRY'S vote came up for discussion before the Revising Barrister at Chelsea on Thursday. When the name of Mrs. Ellen Alice Wardell, King's-road, Chelsea, was reached, the Unionist agent suggested that the lady—who, he said, was so well known as Miss Ellen Terry—should have her name altered to Carew, as everyone knew that she had recently contracted another marriage. "What does it matter?" said the Liberal agent to his Conservative confrère. "You'll never get her to vote." As no official information of the change of name had been received, no alteration was made in the list.

MRS. ARTHUR COLLINS has been the victim of an audacious robbery, which took place during the répétition générale of the new drama, The Sins of Society, at Drury Lane on Wednesday. While Mrs. Collins was entertaining a large party of guests, including Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, in the royal box, her jewel-case, containing valuables worth £500, mysteriously disappeared from the royal sitting-room behind the box.

THE royal box is approached by a special staircase leading from a private entrance, and the door of the ante-room giving access to the royal box and the balcony is usually kept locked. On this occasion, however, for some reason, the door was left unlocked, and this seems to have given the thieves their opportunity. The attendants have been questioned closely, and are certain that only those holding invitation cards or ladies and gentlemen well known to them by sight were allowed to pass in. The matter, of course, was placed in the hands of the police, and Detective-Inspector Stockley, of Bow-street, is now in charge of the investigations.

THE ladies of the Lyceum Club gave a dinner on Monday to bid Godspeed to Messrs. Vedrenne and Barker on the occasion of the transference of their management from the Court Theatre to the Savoy. The chair was occupied by Mrs. Alfred Stead. In reply to a toast of "The Drama," Mr. Barker urged that women should take a larger share in the organisation of the drama. They might, he thought, do much for the economic organisation of the drama upon a proper basis. Unless the theatre could be bettered by proper economic organisation, all the artistic endeavour would go for nothing. If they looked after the economic condition of art, the rest of it would look after itself.

THAT eminent actor, Mr. William Mollison, has taken Dublin by storm. The Gaiety Theatre has been packed each night this week, and the utmost enthusiasm has prevailed. On Monday evening, at the close of the performance of Macbeth, the audience rose and cheered Mr. Mollison to the echo, and would not leave the theatre until he had made a speech. Press and public have been most enthusiastic over this gifted actor, who has earned a high place among leading Shakespearean actors of to-day. Mr. Mollison's tour extends till next June, and in the intervening time he will visit the principal theatres of the British Isles, making a two weeks' stay at both Manchester and Glasgow.

THE great surprise of theatrical London has been the re-opening of the Lyceum Theatre, and the enormous patronage they have secured with the new version of The Christian has eclipsed all records. Playgoers will remember this play as among the least successful of modern times in London, but it has been one of the greatest of provincial hits, and in its present form a long life may be predicted for it. It was, by the way, Mr. Wentworth Croke—who is the pioneer of all Mr. Hall Caine's plays—who persuaded the popular dramatist to re-write The Christian.

THE homely but vivid pictures illustrating Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch have appealed powerfully to the poorer women of London, who find in the hard-working Mrs. Wiggs a counterpart of themselves, but lack the means necessary to make her personal acquaintance. Mrs. Madge Carr Cook, the representative of the amiable lady, has therefore arranged for a special matinée to be given at the Adelphi Theatre on October 15. Mrs. Cook is to be the hostess for the occasion. A committee of clergymen, representing some of the poorest districts in the East End and other parts of London has been formed to select the guests. Mr. Tom B. Davis and M. Gaston Mayer are lending the theatre for the afternoon to Mrs. Cook, and to provide some of the expenses for taking fifteen hundred Mrs. Wiggses to the theatre the stalls will be reserved for people who wish to pay.

THE comforts of railway travelling were agreeably experienced on Sunday last by Mr. F. R. Benson's North Shakespearean Company, journeying from Ramsgate to Plymouth, and by Mr. Chas. Macdona's White Chrysanthemum company, en route from Eastbourne to Torquay. Both combinations changed at Victoria into the Great Western Railway Company's corridor coach, which ran "special" from that station by the short route via Castle Cary, the only stop being at Exeter and Newton Abbot, the train reaching Plymouth Mill Bay twenty minutes in advance of time quoted. Luncheon of five courses and afternoon tea were provided in the handsome dining car of the Great Western Company, whose energy in catering for theatrical traffic is the means of gaining added popularity for the system.

MR. D. LYN HARDING, who plays Ferrers, the evil genius in The Sins of Society at Drury Lane, had to contend against formidable odds at the first performance on Thursday, when he was the victim of a violent cold. Few in front could have imagined the suffering he was undergoing, and but for the efforts of Dr. Cathcart, the eminent throat specialist, he would have been unable to play. Mr. Harding is able to stick manfully to his duties, but it is a case of from bed to theatre and back again.

MISS AIDA JENOURE inaugurated with very great success, at a flying matinée in The Winter Gardens, Bournemouth, on Wednesday last (11th inst.), her new entertainment, consisting of a répertoire of old-time and modern French and English songs in costume. Judging by the enthusiastic reception accorded to such songs as "Le Roi a fait battre Tambour," "Colinette," etc. (from the répertoire of Madame Yvette Guilbert), "Lord Rendal," and other old-time English ballads, and the more modern "Just So" songs of Rudyard Kipling, Miss Jenoure's entertainment will be quite one of the features of the coming musical season.

MR. JERRARD GRANT ALLEN will produce Miss Gladys Unger's new play, The Knave of Hearts, at the Royalty Theatre, Glasgow, on Monday. It is claimed for this piece that it possesses the qualities which distinguished Captain Swift, Raffles, and Sherlock Holmes, and it will be sustained by a strong company, including Mr. H. A. Saintsbury, Miss Nina Sevening, Miss Haidee Wright, and Mr. Leon M. Lion. The Knave of Hearts may be expected in London in due course.

MISS MABEL HACKNEY (Mrs. Laurence Irving) has sustained a bereavement in the loss of her venerable grandfather, Mr. William Penrose, who died last week at Swansea. Mr. Penrose was nearly a nonagenarian, having reached the advanced age of eighty-nine.

THE enormous sum of £500 a night is to be paid to Signor Caruso, who has been engaged to sing at the Imperial Opera House, Vienna, for four evenings, beginning on Oct. 4. All the seats for the performance, it is stated, have already been disposed of.

MR. LEONARD WILLIAMS is concluding his second tour as Royal Keene in The World's Great Snare, and is to be credited with 140 performances of the part, of which he was the original.

A "SCHEME AND ESTIMATES FOR A NATIONAL THEATRE," compiled by Messrs. William Archer and Granville Barker, will shortly be published by Messrs. Duckworth and Co. The authors believe that the non-existence of any such definite and detailed scheme has been one of the main reasons why, out of all the money which is yearly devoted by private benefactors to public purposes, practically nothing has as yet come in the direction of the theatre. They have sought to supply a model, worked out in considerable detail, which may be realised by anyone who has the will and the means. The book was printed for private circulation three years ago, and in that form secured the approval of the late Sir Henry Irving, who joined with Sir Squire Bancroft, Mr. Pinero, Mr. Barrie, Mr. Hare, Mr. Henry Arthur Jones, and Mrs. D'Oyly Carte in signing a formal endorsement of the scheme. The forthcoming edition will contain a prefatory letter by Mr. Barker, in which such changes as have occurred in the theatrical situation since the book was written will be noted.

THE first night of the season at the Crystal Palace Theatre was an undoubted success. A crowded house on Monday night gave a hearty greeting to Mr. Charles Macdona's excellent company in that delightful comic opera, Veronique. Next week the Palace patrons have another treat in store for them, for Mr. Bannister Howard will present Mr. Macdona's company in The White Chrysanthemum, from the Criterion. The cast includes Miss Muriel George, Miss Rosa Sullivan, Miss Dorothy Sephton, Mr. John T. MacCallum, Mr. James Graydon, Mr. Melville Florance, Mr. Victor Kerr, and Mr. Jamie Dallas.

THE Rev. Forbes Phillips, who has contributed more than one play to theatrical lore, is organising a pageant to be held next summer at Gorleston, of which town he is the vicar. One scene will depict the Granting of the Charter to Yarmouth by King John, and in another a battle between Britons and Romans will be portrayed.

THE success of Fiander's Widow at the Garrick is materially assisted by the auxiliary departments associated with the theatre. The scenery of the Dorsetshire village, in which the whole of the play passes, is all from the brush of Mr. R. C. McCleery, whose artistic skill is revealed in every set. The art of the perruquier is exercised to excellent purpose by Mr. George Fox, who has produced some striking hirsute adornments; while the orchestra, which has the advantage of a Mustel Celeste organ and a pianoforte by Steinway, is directed with the care and ability for which Mr. Edmond Rickett is well and justly renowned. The scenery and draperies of the Garrick, it should be added, have been rendered fireproof by the Fire-Resisting Corporation, Ltd., of Fulham.

MR. FREDERICK HARRISON made an arrangement several months ago with Mr. Louis Calvert, by which Sweet Kitty Bellairs, a four-act costume play by Mr. David Belasco, founded on Mr. Egerton Castle's novel, "The Bath Comedy," was to be produced at the Haymarket, and the run of My Wife will, therefore, be concluded in a few weeks' time. The new piece has enjoyed a great success in America, where its picturesque incidents and charming comedy exercised a great impression. Miss Eva Moore will paly the title-rôle, and other important engagements are those of Mr. Louis Calvert, Miss Maud Hoffman, Mr. Eille Norwood, and Mr. Henry Neville.

THE alarm that was aroused on Monday by the news that Mr. Bernard Shaw had been lost in the recesses of the Welsh mountains was allayed the following morning by a telegram from the dramatist himself, who thus characteristically relieved public anxiety by wire:—"Search parties out all night in vain. Footprints traced four miles by lanterns' light. Grave anxiety. I attribute failure of search to my preferring to pass the night in a comfortable hotel. I find the moors too damp at my age.—BERNARD SHAW, Llanbedr."

MR. SHAW has been staying with his wife at Hafodybryn, Llanbedr, a few miles from Barmouth, in Wales, and started out at eleven o'clock on Sunday morning, intending to go as far as the Roman Steps and other interesting places in the vicinity. Arrangements had been previously made to join a party of Fabian friends at a certain spot, but having arrived first at the rendezvous, Mr. Shaw proceeded towards the Roman Steps, and about halfway he left a card pinned on a tree—"Gone on. Please follow." He, however, missed the turning, and, wandering in the Trawsfynydd direction, lost his way. Search parties, armed with lamps and dinner bells, were subsequently organised, three hundred persons taking part in them, and Mr. Shaw was at length tracked to the village of Dolgelly, where the searchers learned that the dramatist had been last seen sitting down to a substantial breakfast, and that he had subsequently left for home.

THE Playgoers' Theatre, which aims at the establishment of a permanent repertoire theatre, will take practical shape in Manchester on September 23, when an eight weeks' season will be opened at the Midland Theatre in that city. The programme for the opening weeks includes David Ballard, by Charles McEvoy, produced recently in London by the Stage Society; The Fantastics, Rostand's verse-phantasy, as translated by "George Fleming"; Mr. Bernard Shaw's Widower's Houses; Clothes and the Woman, by "George Paston," a recent Stage Society production; and an entirely new play, entitled The Street, by A. R. Williams Several one-act plays will also be produced, among them Maeterlinck's The Interior, The Great Silence, by Basil Hood, and Gentlemen of the Road, by Charles McEvoy.

THE manager of the venture is to be Mr. B. Iden Payne, an old Bensonian, and son of a Manchester clergyman, while in the permanent stock company, which is to be a feature of the theatre, will be found Miss Clare Greet and Miss Hilda Potter, who was for some time leading lady in Mr. William Poel's productions. In intervening weeks, tours will be arranged, and there will be a regular change of programme without regard to the success of any particular play.

MADAME ROSE ETTINGER, the well-known operatic vocalist, who was found a week ago in a bedroom at her lodgings at South Milton, near Kingsbridge, suffering from the effects of a revolver shot in her mouth, is making satisfactory progress, but the injuries to her mouth are very serious. A prolonged examination has been made for the purpose of locating the bullet, but without success.

THE funeral of the celebrated composer Edvard Grieg took place at Bergen on Monday in the presence of a large assemblage. The first part of the service was held in the Museum of Art and Industry. Among those following the coffin besides the members of the family were General Nissen, who represented King Haakon, and representatives of the German Emperor, the Norwegian Government, and the Storthing. On the arrival of the cortège at the crematorium, the officiating minister delivered an impressive address, and after a hymn had been sung the body was placed in the furnace. In depositing a wreath on the coffin, the representative of the Emperor William spoke of the deep sorrow of the Kaiser and the German people at Grieg's death.

A SHORT time ago a correspondent inquired for a dramatic club performing the plays of Shakespeare. The "Shakespeare Players," a club having for its main object the regular performance of the plays of the poet, has been founded. The subscription for the first fifty members is half a guinea, and the hon. sec. is Mr. Rowland Harman, St. Olave's, Compton-road, Winchmore-hill, N. The club will endeavour to found a scholarship for the dramatic education of promising players, the award to be publicly competed for.

MR. LUSCOMBE SEARELLE, who has been laid up at the Cottage Hospital with three broken ribs among other injuries, as chronicled in a recent issue of The Era, is now on a fair way to recovery. Owing to the remarkable success of The Christian at the Lyceum his poetical and musical drama, Mizpah, will not be produced till after the pantomime, which it will follow. Mr. Searelle leaves for the South of France next week, where he will put in the winter, and also put the finishing touches to his new poetical drama founded on the Creation and entitled In the Beginning, which is scheduled for production in New York in March next.

ON another page will be found the suggestions for the institution of professional qualifications for actors, which have been the subject of some years' work in the Actors' Association, and were finally completed by the council of 1906. In issuing the "suggestions" the present council claim neither credit nor responsibility for their production, but express the opinion that in conjunction with the scheme recently outlined by Dr. Maddick they will serve as a basis of discussion.

MR. GEORGE BROOKS has been engaged by Mr. Ernest Carpenter to play Mrs. Crusoe in the forthcoming pantomime at the Lyceum Theatre.

THE Moody-Manners season of English opera just concluded has been a success from an artistic, but not from a financial, point of view. "I think the public will agree that the performances were exceptionally good," said Mr. Charles Manners, "but in looking over the balance-sheet I find we are £800 on the wrong side. I am still hopeful of English opera in London, nevertheless, and my faith is shown by the fact that I have arranged with Mr. Tom B. Davis to give another season next year at the Lyric. What has specially surprised me is the lack of public interest taken in new works. On Friday I produced two one-act operas by native composers, and our takings were no more than £57. In Germany or Italy the house would have been sold out."

MR. ALFRED NORTHWAY and Mr. W. V. Garrod celebrated their 500th presentation of The Prodigal Parson at Leigh on Thursday, having toured the piece for 83 weeks without a break. Brought thoroughly up to date and with a new plant of printing, the piece is playing to better business than ever, and advance bookings extend many months ahead.

"PETER'S MOTHER," under the management of Miss Emma and Mr. Percy Hutchison, is still meeting with wonderful success in the provinces, and is now entering upon its many return visits. Last week the Midland Company was honoured by the presence of H.R.H. Princess Henry of Battenberg at Ryde, while at Scarborough a fashionable audience included Lord Hawke and Lord Dalmeny. The Hutchison management started another company of The Stronger Sex at the Coronet on Monday, and met with an enthusiastic reception. Mr. Otho Stuart's original London production is carried by this company, and the dresses, from Messrs. Jay's, which cost over £1,000, will no doubt add to the attractiveness of the play in the provinces as they did in the Metropolis.

MR. WENTWORTH CROKE has engaged Mr. F. B. Farrant, a well-known touring manager, to represent him during the run of The Christian at the Lyceum Theatre.

MR. AUGUSTE VAN BIENE finds his time so fully occupied with The Broken Melody, which despite its 5,000 representations still stands high in popularity, that he has determined to confine himself to that play, and to dispose of the drama, The Musician's Romance, of which he holds the rights. The play is one of the finest that emanated from the pen of the late Frank Harvey, and it should soon be put into active service by responsible managers who know its worth.

MR. G. CARLTON WALLACE is producing a new play, called The Lancashire Lad, on Monday at the Victoria Theatre, Broughton. One of the scenes is a realistic representation of an episode on the North Pier, Blackpool. A strong company has been engaged, and many dates have already been booked.

MR. RONALD BAYNE and Miss Evelyn Hope have been engaged to play Prince Othmur and Countess Shulah in the Lyceum success, Her Love Against the World, during the suburban tour, starting at Brixton on Monday.

MR. W. R. MARSHALL, of Mr. Norman V. Norman's company, met with a painful accident last week, which necessitated the amputation of one of the fingers of his left hand.

MR. NORMAN V. NORMAN has been kept out of the cricket field all the summer owing to an injury to his hand, sustained at hockey last spring, but was able to play for his company against the Bromsgrove Cricket Club a few days ago. As evidence that his hand has not lost its cunning, Mr. Norman took six wickets for 41 runs, and going in last, scored 11 out of a total of 51. The Bromsgrove Club scored 124.

MESSRS. HENRY SWINERD AND J. W. CORDINER open their tour of the musical comedy, The Girl from Japan, on Monday, at the Theatre Royal, Dover. The production will be on first-class lines, neither trouble nor expense having been spared by Mr. Cordiner, under whose direction the play will be toured. New scenery has been specially painted and an electric light plant and floral decorations will also be travelled. The piece, which will be represented by a company numbering forty, has been produced by Mr. H. Buckstone Clair, and a long tour, including most of the best theatres, has been booked.

THE Teddington Tradesmen's Exhibition will be held in the Clarence Hotel's beautiful grounds the first week in October. The Carey Concert Combination will perform, under the able direction of Mr. Pat Carey, and the Blue Hungarian Band, directed by Mr. Sydney Hemming, is due twice daily. As this is the first exhibition the Teddington tradesmen have ventured upon, the special efforts of Mr. Judd Green, the lessee, will greatly help them, and, given fine weather, a very satisfactory result may be expected.

MR. WILFRED STANFORD has forwarded to the secretary of the Actors' Benevolent Fund a further sum of £1 19s., which he has collected in the box at the Camden Theatre. Mr. Cecil Beryl has also sent 19s. 6d., collected by the same means in the Theatre Royal, Brighton, box.

WE regret to record the death of Mr. Herbert J. Montague, acting-manager of the Clydebank New Gaiety Theatre, who passed away on Friday, the 6th inst., from pneumonia, after a short illness. The funeral took place on Tuesday at Kilbowie Cemetery, the cortège being followed by the staff and a large number of friends. Wreaths were sent by Mr. R. C. Buchanan, managing-director of Scotland's provincial theatres, Mr. William Strang, the staff, Mr. Gray, and others. The deceased was for many years acting-manager for the late Osmond Tearle.

MRS. CROWE (Miss Bateman) has returned to town, and reopens her dramatic school on Sept. 23. At her well-appointed academy of acting Mrs. Crowe gives a finished training, as is proved by the fact that three of our most promising ingénues—Miss Dorothy Minto, Miss Anne Brett, and Miss Viva Birbrett—were all taught by her. The three young ladies mentioned, all acting at present in London, are only a few of the many who have learnt the rudiments of their art in this excellent school.

MISS LOUISA PEACH will terminate on Sept. 21 at the Theatre Royal, Sunderland, a special seven weeks' engagement with Mr. Harry Foxwell for the heroine, Mary Barnard, in A Broken Heart, owing to Mrs. Foxwell taking up the part from that date. Miss Peach has met with great success in the different towns she has visited, and expresses her thanks to both Mr. and Mrs. Foxwell for a happy and comfortable engagement.

PATRONS of the Grand Theatre, Croydon, may be assured of an enjoyable and exciting evening on Monday, Sept. 23, when Mr. Wentworth Croke will present that stirring drama, The Bondman, by Hall Caine. The production comes direct from Drury Lane, with all new scenery, dresses, and effects, and no expense has been spared in securing a first-class company. Miss Grace Chalmers has been specially engaged for the part of Greeba.

MR. GEO. TESTO SANTE'S novel circus drama, The Life of a Showman, has been revised and re-written by Mr. Chas. Darrell and Mr. G. T. Sante. An already strong play is thus greatly improved, and is meeting with great success in every town it visits.

MR. F. R. GWYN-RICHARDSON, who has been stage-manager for Mr. Frank Bertram for several tours, has been specially engaged by him for general management for his The Breed of the Treshams tour.

A GREAT success has been scored by Mr. Norman V. Norman with Mr. Sheridan, which the popular actor-manager has added to his répertoire. The charm and grace of Miss Gladys Unger's pretty play is irresistible, and has been much appreciated everywhere.

MR. GASTON MAYER will introduce several novelties during his forthcoming season of French plays, which starts at the New Royalty Theatre on Monday, Sept. 30. Foremost amongst the attractions will be the original version of Le Duel, by H. Lavedan, in which M. Le Bargy will make his reappearance in London. Mlle. Piérat, who recently appeared with great success in Paris in the principal part of Capus's Notre Jeunesse, will play the part of La Duchesse de Chailles. The rôle of Monseigneur Boléne will be in the capable hands of the veteran artist M. Albert Lambert, père; and M. Marquet, who will be remembered as one of Mme. Sarah Bernhardt's leading men, has been engaged for the part of Docteur Morey.

THE second production consists of Le Gendre de Monsieur Poirier, by Emile Augier, and M. Le Bargy and Mlle. Piérat will conclude their engagement with a performance for one night only of the Marquis de Priola. During the third week of the season Mlle. Franquet, who is to be leading lady at the Théâtre Antoine, will appear, and Mlle. Guett, of the Palais Royal and Mlle. Cécile Didier, the charming ingénue from the Odéon, have also been engaged. Mme. Renée Villars, a most promising pupil of Mme. Céline Chaumont, will make her London début in Fableron's Pendant le Bal. Subsequently M. Galipaux, who is justly considered the drollest comedian of France, will return to the Royalty, where he will be seen in Le Contrôleur des Wagons-lits, La Famille Pont-Biquet, and Médor—three plays which are entirely new to London.

MME. SARAH BERNHARDT will make her bow at the New Royalty on Oct. 21 in Sardou's La Sorcière. During the first week of her stay Mme. Bernhardt will be seen in Paul Hervieu's Le Réveil, a new play which was produced with considerable success at the Comédie Française, and which has not been seen in London.

"BARRY DOYLE'S REST CURE" will be produced at the Court Theatre on the 25th inst. On the first day of October a series of eight matinées will be begun of The Incubus (translated by Laurence Irving from Les Hannetons, by Brieux), the cast including Mr. C. V. France, Mr. Leonard Calvert, Miss Mabel Hackney, and Mr. Laurence Irving. The two last-named artists will also appear in The Phœnix, a one-act piece, also from Mr. Irving's pen, which was produced a few weeks ago at the Coronet.

MR. STUART'S choice of a successor to Barry Doyle's Rest Cure has fallen upon Lady Frederick, a play by W. S. Maugham, which will be given in the evenings, with Miss Ethel Irving in the title-rôle. Lady Frederick is a play of a light and agreeable description, developing the story of a lady, who, taking pattern by David Garrick, makes herself appear to disadvantage in the eyes of a youthful suitor, whose advances she wishes to repulse. The series of Incubus matinées will be followed in due course by a four-act piece, entitled Hamilton's Second Marriage, by Mrs. W. K. Clifford.

MISS WINIFRED PLAUSON, who was for five seasons with Miss Olga Nethersole, has just concluded an eight months' engagement as Mrs. Morrison, the adventuress, with Miss Annie Hughes in Tommy.

THE Principal of the Leeds College of Music, Mr. George Haddock, died on Thursday afternoon at the age of eighty-four. He was an enthusiastic collector of violins, and published a number of works.

MRS. ADNEY PAYNE, who, under the professional name of Ethel Earle, has brightened many a production, some time since announced her intention of returning to the stage, and her services may now be secured for pantomime or musical comedy. Mrs. Payne, besides being an engaging actress, is an accomplished harpist and vocalist.

MR. OTTO C. CULLING, proprietor of the Theatre Royal and Opera House, Bury, is progressing favourably—a condition of things that is giving much satisfaction to his many friends.

AMONG the romantic costume plays to be produced by Mr. Maundy-Gregory in the spring is A Friend of the People, adapted by H. A. Saintsbury from the novel by Miss Mary C. Rowsell, who has also collaborated in a play founded upon the theme of "The Marseillaise," entitled A Song fo Liberty. It is probable that the latter, which, by the way, has been accepted for immediate performance in Stockholm, will also be produced by Mr. Maundy-Gregory in the English provinces.

REHEARSALS have already started for the Maundy-Gregory Christmas pantomime. It is estimated that a production quite on the same lines has not been seen in the provinces for nearly twenty years, and by its means vivid memories of their childhood will be recalled to the "grown-ups." An exceptionally clever comedian has been engaged for the Dame.

THE first London performance of the musical comedy by Owen Trevine and St. John Hamund, entitled The Scarlet Patrol, with music composed by Owen Trevine, will be given at the Fulham Theatre on Monday. The company is a strong one, including the well-known artists Leonard Russell, St. John Hamund, Elsie Cooke, and Arthur Stigant.

MR. PERCY FITZGERALD, whose interesting article on "The Real Hamlet" we printed last week, is a voluminous contributor to theatrical literature. He has been in his time dramatic critic of several important London papers, and is the author of biographies of actors of the last generation, of a history of the Gilbert and Sullivan opera, and many erudite and "up-to-date" works too numerous to mention. Some years since we discussed his ingenious theory of the optics of the stage; and there is no doubt that his eloquent protest against the inattention to detail in scenic art has had much to do with the marvellous improvement in this direction which has taken place within the last twenty years. Mr. Fitzgerald is still hale and hearty, and we hope it will be many years yet before he lays down his well-practised pen.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

A Trio of Great Ones.

MR. BEERBOHM TREE has been telling a Daily Telegraph representative of an experience the eminent actor had on his recent visit to Germany. "I met there," said Mr. Tree, "a famous actor and producer. Anxious to draw him out, I boldly said, 'I suppose you are rather inclined to hold the British drama in considerable contempt.' 'On what grounds,' he returned, 'do you base that supposition?' With an air of perfect gravity I replied, 'Because I have been led to believe by sundry articles in London papers and magazines that the British drama is moribund, while that in Germany and France is, on the other hand, flourishing apace.' The bait took. 'On the contrary,' my companion warmly insisted, 'the opinion here is quite the reverse. Germany produces next to nothing; France sends us still less; as a matter of fact, we rely almost exclusively on English productions. Our three great dramatists to-day are Shakespeare, Bernard Shaw, and Oscar Wilde.' 'It is long since I became aware that Shakespeare was a German,' I said; 'but I did not know until now that the other two playwrights you mention were also compatriots of yours.' I am bound to say," added Mr. Tree, "that so cogent were my friend's arguments, so conclusive his reasoning, I was, in the end, well-nigh constrained to acknowledge he had right on his side!"

A Local Hit.

"WHILE I was playing Elsie, the romantic love-sick schoolgirl, in Miss Emma Hutchinson's A Squire of Dames touring company," writes Miss Fay Rivington, "an amusing incident occurred. We were at a theatre at a large town in the North of England. The comedy was quite above the heads of our audience, and had never before fallen so flat in our nine months' tour. All Mr. Carton's delightfully subtle wit went for naught; and even my breakdown in sobs, at the end of my song 'Good-bye,' which usually elicited roars of laughter, went without a smile or a hand. We dragged on wearily until the fourth act, where Professor Dorole (my father) tries to induce me to relinquish my intention of becoming a hospital nurse. He says: 'I intended to take you to the pantomime next winter, and I was reading in a newspaper the other day that next year's pantomime is likely to surpass all previous efforts.' Upon which the house broke into a loud and long burst of applause. We stared at each other in amazement, and the other members of the company not on in the scene rushed to the wings to see what had happened. At last it dawned upon us that the yokels supposed the line had been inserted to advertise the next local panto. We finished the scene with difficulty."

Plenty of Incident.

THERE is nothing like a stirring "contents" bill. The following is extracted from a burlesque programme of Mr. "Blougham Moore's" new play of stupendous interest, Why Girls Leave Home; or, No Wedding Cake for Her, produced at the Theatre Royal, Richmond, on Monday:—Act I., Gloom. Scene 1—The Village Green. The Discovery of the Gold Mine. The Curate's Guilty Secret. The Dog Fight. Murder of the Old Squire. General Rejoicings. Scene 2—Alone on the Pacific. The Last Drop of Water. The Marriage Chimes. Thrilling Rescue on Marconi's Aeroplane. Scene 3—St. Paul's by Night. The Fight on the Roof. The Missing Will is lost at last. "Great Scott, 'tis a Forgery, but no one saw me do it." "No, but I saw you put the Poultice on the Canary." "You? and who are you?" "Narko, the Idiot Witness." Act II., Despair. Scene I—Maiden Lane. "Tell him I refuse his vile offer." (Two seconds are supposed to elapse.) "Besides, it's not enough." Scene 2 — The North Pole. The Annual Regatta. The Obstacle Race. "Take back your Penny on the Bottle." "See, I have set fire to the Iceberg." Scene 3.—Cranberry Mansions. "I must and will see him." "Over my dead body first." Struggle for Dates and Death of the Good Agent.

Closing Time.

QUITE a storm in a teacup, says a Spanish correspondent, has been raised over a new law just come into force in Spain enacting that all theatres in Madrid shall be closed down at 12.30 prompt. Formerly no time limit existed, and the theatres closed at 12, or 1, or 2, as it suited their convenience. The managers are expressing their feelings on the matter somewhat freely, and not a few unpleasant things are appearing in the Press. The Heraldo of Madrid, devoting a column and a half to the matter, says, that to oblige the management of the "zarzuela" (short musical comedies) theatres to close at 12.30 is tantamount to prohibiting and exterminating this kind of play; that it is absolutely impossible to terminate the third performance by 12.30; that to make this class of theatre (which predominates at present here) pay, it is essential to have four shows a night, as the two first are so poorly attended; that the receipts depend almost entirely on the third and fourth; that to suggest commencing at 8 o'clock when the people will not go before 11 is puerile; that the whole affair is ridiculous, and, finally, that the law should be brought to bear on the various managements to compel them to commence the different functions at the hour announced, instead of an hour later as sometimes occurs, which would be far more sensible than interfering with public rights as to closing time. The Eslava, which ignored the intimation on the opening night, and closed at five minutes to one, was fined 500 pesetas.

Artists and Environment.

MR. WENTWORTH CROKE, in an article on "Touring" in the Free Lance, is particularly strong on the question of "Dressing Rooms." He says:—"I am a great believer in environment. A player's performance must in a great measure be a reflection of his or her surroundings, and taken generally actors and actresses are a peculiarly artistic, and, shall I say, super-sensitive people; and when they have to dress, as is too often the case, in a white-washed cellar with no ventilation, they cannot be expected to give the same performance of quality as if their surroundings were suitable, and they were treated as human beings and not as wild beasts."

Herman Merivale's Objection.

MR. A. STANDEN TRIGGS writes:—"In Mr. Peter Davey's letter on The Whip Hand in your recent issue, he says, 'That there may be no possible misunderstanding, I desire to let it be known that a play called The Whip Hand was produced by amateurs in this neighbourhood in the autumn of 1905,' &c. With the same excellent intention I would trespass on your courtesy to state that The Whip Hand, a play by the late Herman Merivale, was first produced at the Devonshire Park Theatre, Eastbourne, under my management, by Mr. Charles Garthorne and company, on a certain Easter Monday, at least a score of years since. This I do remember: Mr. Pascoe Bioletti was a member of the company, and Mr. Merivale took some extraordinary objection on the evening of the production to Mr. Bioletti's 'make-up.' With characteristic emphasis he so repeatedly urged his views on this comparatively minor point to Mr. Garthorne that at last this ever-courteous actor-manager was constrained to say, 'Merivale, if you don't go round to the front and sit down I shall not ring up the curtain.' 'Do you mean that, Charlie?' 'I do, indeed.' 'Then, good-night.' The impetuous author took his hat and stick, marched straight home to Upperton, and The Whip Hand was produced in his absence."

The Sins of Society grips one's interest at the opening. Lady Marion Beaumont has been gambling at bridge, and has trenched on the fortune of her younger sister, Lady Gwendolen Ashley, for whom she is a trustee. Noel Ferrers, who wants to marry Gwendolen, suggests to Lady Marion that she shall obtain from a moneylender named Morris a loan of £7000 on the security of a valuable tiara lent to Lady Marion by a rich friend, Lady Goldbury; and—while Morris's back is turned—shall substitute for the box containing the tiara a similar one cleverly weighted with coal. The fraud is carried out; Lady Marion loses at racing, and is unable to redeem the pledge; the lender's suspicions are excited; and Lady Marion, driven to desperation, drugs him in his cottage near Windsor, and escapes with the box to the riverside, where she hands it over to Gwendolen's lover, Sir Dorian March, who, pursued by the police, dives into the river over a weir, and subsequently escapes from the country by taking the place of a deserter about to sail on foreign service on the s.s. Beachy Head. We witness the embarkation of troops, and the getting under weigh of the vessel. A marconigram is received, and Sir Dorian is about to be detected, when the ship in the fog strikes upon a rock. The women and children rush for the boats, while the soldiers, rallied by Sir Dorian, stand to the salute upon the decks as the Beachy Head goes down—her boilers bursting as she sinks—Dorian saving himself by clinging to a spar. He goes to South America, and Gwendolen, believing him to be dead, consents to marry Ferrers and save her sister from exposure by the villain and punishment by the law. The sacrifice, however, is made needless by the good-natured Lady Goldbury, and her odd admirer, James Hogg, who open the incriminating box—which was thrown to Hogg by Sir Dorian before his dive—and replace the coal with the tiara. The wedding of Gwendolen to Ferrers is stopped; the villain is discomfited; and the lovers are united.

Strong as the drama is, the remarkable effect which it produces is greatly due to the superior quality of the acting. Artists who have won their spurs in other ranks of their profession are found in the cast of Sins of Society, and give a reality to the authors' personages and a convincing effect to their dialogue. That admirable comedian, Mr. Albert Chevalier, has a refined and subtle humour; and it might have been feared that his style would have been too reserved for Drury Lane. Exactly the opposite was the result. Not a line, not a gesture of the part of James Hogg was lost on the acute and observant audience that witnessed the performance of Mr. Cecil Raleigh and Mr. Henry Hamilton's work on Thursday. And Mr. Chevalier's rendering of the rôle was not only diverting—it was intensely human. We sympathised to the uttermost with Hogg's feeling of being snubbed in Society; we admired the cheerful perseverance with which, under the influence of his love for Lady Goldbury, he pursued his amorous aim; and the little parvenu's expressions of affection for the only man who appreciated him and treated him as a fellow-creature were delivered by Mr. Chevalier with the genuine pathos of which he is such a practised and expert exponent. Nothing could have been better for the fortunes of the play that this inclusion in the cast of one of the most subtle and ingenious comedians of our day. His return to the dramatic stage was a happy event; and the enthusiastic welcome which he received on Thursday showed how eager the audience were to assure him of their affection. It is always a critical task to make the villain of a melodrama possible as well as execrable; but Mr. Lyn Harding as Noel Ferrers did it without apparent difficulty. The supercilious manner which Ferrers uses to his equals as well as to his inferiors; his cool, deliberate craft, and his utterly callous unscrupulousness were shown by Mr. Harding with an ease and emphasis which left nothing to be desired. From the first he struck the right note; and never in the course of the performance did he caricature or exaggerate. Well-clad and groomed, and plausibly deliberate in manner, the evil genius of Lady Marion Beaumont moved through the play like a creature of dark and remorseless fate. We have rarely seen an evil-doer of drama so realistic and yet so repulsively polished and imperturbable. Mr. Julian L'Estrange as Sir Dorian March was a handsome, manly, and straightforward soldier—chivalrous, brave, and affectionate. Mr. Austin Melford once more proved his claim to honourable mention by a very fine impersonation of the noble-hearted parson, the Rev. Martin Hope. He displayed deep feeling where it was demanded, and looked the high-minded, dignified, and deeply conscientious clergyman to the life. There could be no doubt whatever of the complete success of Mr. Melford's impersonation, replete as it was with all the best characteristics of his ripe and practised art; and his imposing presence was not the smallest factor of this result. His delivery of the stinging sermon in which the "sins of society" are attacked was a splendid sample of earnestness, elocution, and elevated sentiment. The part of Mr. Morris was played by Mr. Oscar Adye with an artistic reserve and restraint which deserve the warmest praise. The money-lender was made just the "superior person" of his class who would deal with aristocratic ladies in difficulties; a man who accepted his position and took it with a quiet firmness and a calm self-respect which were admirably indicated by the actor, who showed strong dramatic power in the scene in which Morris is struggling against the increasing influence of the drug. Rarely has a situation been handled with more skill and cleverness both by authors and the actor, the gradual yielding to the morphine influence being depicted with truth and subtlety. Miss Constance Collier is in her element on a large stage like that of Drury Lane; and her superb appearance and grand physique had their full value in the rôle of Lady Marion Beaumont. Vigorously dramatic, and at the same time various and judicious, Miss Collier made a powerful impression throughout. She bore herself like the grande dame Lady Beaumont is supposed to be; and the passionate anxiety and moral anguish of the unfortunate woman were shown by Miss Collier with an earnestness and energy which won the reluctant sympathy of the audience. Her broad dramatic treatment of the part proved as irresistible as her appearance and bearing were imposing and appropriate. Miss Fanny Brough's rôle of Lady Goldbury fitted her exactly; and those who know—and who does not?—how brightly quaint and brusquely droll Miss Brough can be in a character of the "lively original" sort can imagine how peal after peal of laughter echoed each of Lady Goldbury's observations. Miss Adrienne Augarde's petite figure and dainty and demure beauty won all hearts from her first appearance on the stage as Lady Gwendolen Ashley; and her delicate femininity and sweet and gentle humour combined with her pleasant rendering of her song in the second act to make her one of the "great favourites" in the cast. Miss Lucy Sibley as Caroline, Duchess of Danebury, hit off exactly the manner and appearance of a well-known personage; Miss Frances Leighton's performance as Mrs. Murgatroyd deserves very warm commendation; and Miss Hilda Stewart's Lady Cirencester left little to be desired. Every part in the piece down to the smallest received careful consideration; Mr. Arthur Poole's Mr. Thesiger was a creditable bit of work; Mr. L. Ashton-Jarry gave a characteristic embodiment of Vicomte Villette; Mr. Arthur Leigh was good as Colonel Bryan; Mr. Isidore Marcel's Snowey Templer did him great credit; and Mr. Harry Brett contributed a neat performance as Bates. Miss Muriel Langley played Lady Normanton with skill; Miss Olive Palmer supplied a praiseworthy rendering of Mrs. Burton Rocketter; Private Baines had an able exponent in Mr. Alec Davidson; as Downes Mr. Edward Morgan hit off the little character well; Mr. Howard Russell was efficient as a Butler; Mr. Arthur Wellesley's Lord Enderby gave complete satisfaction; Mr. Fred Penley played the Captain of the Ship soundly and ably; and Mr. Richard Norton and Mr. Bogue were good as footmen.

The scenery and mounting were of the stupendously elaborate sort which defies description. The actual scenes were splendidly painted. Mr. Henry Emden's marvellous reproductions of Longchamps and a Thames Weir by moonlight—with real water; Mr. Bruce Smith's ss. Beachy Head; and Mr. R. McCleery's country sets being fine examples of what our English scene-painters can do when backed by such a liberal manager as Mr. Arthur Collins. To his superintendence, to the stage-management of Mr. Ernest D'Auban, and to the assistant stage-management of Mr. Edward Spiller may be attributed the wonderfully smooth way in which the complicated crowds were grouped and mashalled. Mr. J. M. Glover's incidental music was, as it always is, the work of a musician and an expert in orchestration. The Sins of Society had a wildly enthusiastic reception, and is certain to be a great success.

Mr. Arthur Collins had a hearty call at the end of the second act; and all the principals were summoned again and again at the close of one of the finest productions ever seen at Drury Lane.

THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD.

On Monday, Sept. 9, the Drama, entitled
"SENTENCED FOR LIFE."

Mr. Bulmer's company in Sentenced for Life provides the attraction this week at the Stratford Theatre Royal, and is proving a capital draw. Mr. William Bradford depicts Captain Paul Derrick very powerfully, and Mr. Conrad Heywood speaks his lines well as Lieut. Roy Stillwell. Mr. Terence Hyde plays with much feeling as Parson Orris, and Mr. Howard Keene gives a clever sketch of Henry Beckwith. Mr. Harry Cooke is droll and amusing as Percy M'Gentle, and the two convicts, Bill Sharkey and Toby the Tadpole, have mirth-provoking representatives in Mr. H. P. Warburton and Mr. Reg. Oldroyd. Mr. R. B. Nevill is a satisfactory Sir Wallace Stillwell; Mr. Archie Scab does well as Duffy; and Mr. Wm. Matherson plays Warder Beake. Miss Maud Warburton is a sympathetic and charming Adele Gray; Miss Mabel Tremere makes a very appropriate Kate Rennel; Miss Mary Dalby is natural as Lady Stillwell; and Miss Kitty Huntly fulfils all requirements as Lady Gray.

MISS ALICE CRAWFORD as Glory Quayle in The Christian at the Lyceum takes full advantage of the opportunity to dress the part elaborately. The first costume consists of an Empire gown, made with much simplicity and worn with a wonderful girdle. The second dress is a beautiful one of the most peculiar and lovely shade of golden brown, with a soft clinging skirt striped from the high back to the hem in front in a charming and most original manner. The stripes on the bodice are arranged over a plainly swathed bodice. A simple chiffon vest and high collar complete this robe, and there is a sweet toque to match. The third dress is of an artistic shade of Reseda crêpe de Chine, over a slightly deeper shade of soft brown silk in the form of a graceful Princesse robe. The front panel and deep epaulette of this creation are embroidered with a floral design to harmonise with this exquisite tone of colour. A finely-tucked vest and under-sleeves is worn with this dress. Miss Mary Fisher, of Bedford-street, W.C., has designed and executed the dresses.

CLERGYMEN AND "THE CHRISTIAN."

An audience of clergymen assembled in the Lyceum Theatre on Thursday afternoon to pass judgment on Messrs. Smith and Carpenter's production of The Christian. Hundreds of ministers of all denominations with their wives and children came from all parts of the world, and the house was crowded in every part. There were two Colonial Bishops in the audience, a coal-black clergyman from South Africa, a yellow clergyman from China, a copper-coloured clergyman from South America, a negro preacher from the United States, representatives of the Salvation Army and the Church Army, prison chaplains from all parts of England, dozens of hospital nurses, Sisters of Nazareth, lady-helpers from homes for fallen women, and contingents from every religious denomination in Great Britain. At the fall of the curtain at the end of each act there were many calls for the principals, and the heartiest applause for the management at the end of the play. Mr. Hall Caine was unavoidably absent from illness, but sent from his Isle of Man home the following telegram, which was read by the management at the conclusion of the play:—

"If the audience are so good as to ask for me to-day will you kindly say that The Christian is first of all a drama, and the love story of John Storm and Glory Quayle is the root of the whole matter.

"If my boy and girl are not interesting to you, if you do not love them and like them, if you do not laugh with their joy and cry with their griefs, if they have not added two more to the number of your personal friends, so that Glory is your Glory, and John Storm your John Storm, my social propaganda goes for nothing, and as a dramatist I have failed.

"But if all these are as I could wish them to be, then I know that by the help of my two leading actors, by Mr. Matheson Lang's powerful and winsome personality and Miss Alice Crawford's beauty, pathos, humour, and charm, I have won a victory over your affections whereof no adverse critics or unscrupulous critics can ever rob me.—Hall Caine."

The following opinions on the play have been received by the management:—

"A play of great interest and power, presented by superb and sympathetic acting. Audience evidently deeply impressed."—John Hodgson, Netherwasdale Vicarage, Cumberland.

"Strong, fearfully true, and calculated to effect untold good."—George Jepson, 42, Santos-road, Wandsworth.

"A distinctly ennobling play."—H. F. Hayward, The Vicarage, Bussage, Glos.

"Most powerful in execution, perfect in detail, sympathetic, and appealing. In a word, a great play."—Rev. F. J. Pegg, 3, Huguenot-mansions, Wandsworth, S.W.

"Marvellous production. Most powerful and realistic performance, showing life as it is. The drama surpasses all of its kind that I have ever seen."—Rev. John Elkin, late of Sydney, Australia, now of 31, Powis-square, London.

"It is full of dramatic power, and personally believe and hope it will have a good and powerful influence." Rev. J. H. Barnett, Sarratt Rectory, Rickmansworth, Herts.

"Most interesting, and must enlist the sympathy of the clergy."—John Kingston, R.N., Eversley, Southall.

"An excellent play, well acted, and equivalent to many sermons."—Rev. Harry E. Stevens, M.A., Lauriston, Disraeli-road, Ealing, W.

"Most convincing and excellent. Acting splendid."—W. H. Fisher, 13, Gaisboro'-road, Bow.

TRADE UNION CONGRESS.

The business of the Congress, continuing from our last report, provided occasion for further speeches from the representatives of the Theatrical and Music Hall profession. A resolution dealing with arbitration in disputes was discussed at length. Mr. Frank Gerald supported the proposal, on behalf of the Actors' Union, but admitted that the acceptance of arbitration in the recent music-hall dispute was a mistake and its effect disastrous. He however thought that the methods outlined in the resolution were a safeguard against the misuse of the principle, and he thought it desirable that every peaceful means should be tried to avert strikes. In the vote that followed the variety artists, musicians, and stage employees voted together against the resolution, and the Actors' Union delegate—a curious comment upon the arbitration proceedings in the music-hall war. The vote of the Congress was:—For the resolution, 343,000; against, 1,300,000, a most decisive sign that arbitration is not popular in Labour circles.

Mr. J. B. Williams, the general secretary of the Musicians' Union, was one of the successful candidates for election to the Parliamentary Committee of the Congress. Membership of this committee, representing as it does the whole of the organised forces of Labour, is one of the cherished honours in the Trade Union movement, and Mr. Williams is to be congratulated on his success. Mr. D. Shackleton, M.P., is the chairman of this committee, and was elected one of the delegates to attend the American Federation of Labour Convention to be held next month. The next Congress will be held at Nottingham.

MATINÉES of The Girls of Gottenberg start at the Gaiety this afternoon. It will be the first morning performance this season, and will be followed by a matinée on each succeeding Saturday.

"UNDER THE GREENWOOD TREE."

Comedy, in four acts, by H. V. Esmond, produced at the Lyric Theatre on Tuesday, Sept. 10.

Sir Kenneth Friarly .....MR. ERIC MATURIN
Mr. Knapton Bowles ..MR. T. GIDSON WARREN
J. G. M. Hylton, Esq., .. MR. CHARLES CHERRY
Dago ..... MR. TOM MOWBRAY
Dawes ..... MR. W. J. YELDHAM
Griggs ..... MR. GEORGE BLUNT
Mrs. Knapton Bowles .....MISS H. M. FRASER
Peggy Ingledew ..... MISS MARY JERROLD
A Gipsy Woman .....MISS ADA KING
Mary Hamilton .....MISS MAXINE ELLIOTT

Miss Maxine Elliott could hardly have chosen a more engaging and delightful entertainment with which to open her season than Mr. H. V. Esmond's pretty comedy, which had a very cordial reception on its production at the Lyric on Tuesday. Everyone has been talking, of late, about "living the simple life"; and the demand for caravans is steadily increasing with the development of the craze. So the time was ripe for the production of a play on the subject, and the theme was well suited to Mr. Esmond's style. The first scene is the study in the town house of Mary Hamilton, a very wealthy young lady, who is, naturally, beset by suitors. The only one whom she likes is young Sir Kenneth Friarly, and her feeling for him is purely Platonic. He proposes to her; but she treats him with a sisterly kindness which greatly depresses him. Miss Hamilton's secretary, Peggy Ingledew, a quick and matter-of-fact young person, "has her eye" on Sir Kenneth; and some of the most amusing passages in the play consist of their squabbles and flirtations. Mary is suddenly struck with the idea of leaving London, and living "under the greenwood tree," so as to get away from Society, and to live in communion with the birds. In the second act we find her and Peggy in the New Forest, with a caravan, and Sir Kenneth as a week-end visitor. Mary has camped by the side of a stream in which she bathes, wearing a becoming costume; and the chauffeur of her motor-car acts as her messenger and general assistant. Sir Kenneth's hopeless love for Mary is not extinguished, but he is more and more attracted by Peggy's smart, practical style, and by her appreciation of his qualities. Mr. Hylton, the owner of the property on which the caravan is "pitched," comes to order the supposed gipsies off his ground; and, meeting with Sir Kenneth, who has assumed a corduroy suit of clothes to please Mary, orders his servants to arrest him. In spite of Sir Kenneth's struggles and protestations, he is dragged away, and locked up in the nearest gaol. Hylton knocks at the door of the van, is astounded by the apparition of Mary, and falls in love with her on the spot. She invites him to come to dinner with her the same evening. When Peggy hears of Sir Kenneth's arrest, she rushes off to bail him out, leaving Mary to receive Hylton alone. He believes her to be a gipsy girl; and she explains the lobsters and the silver at dinner by allusions to the thieving habits of her "people." Hylton is horrified at the thought of so much loveliness combined with such dreadful dishonesty. He excuses this, however, on the ground of her bringing-up; and under the influence of irresistible passion, proposes immediate marriage to her. Mary, on her part, has fallen in love with Hylton, and accepts him. After he has gone, the caravan is attacked by real gipsies, who gag Mary and tie her to a tree, knocking down Hylton, who returns to her rescue, leaving him senseless. Peggy returns with Sir Kenneth, out on bail, and releases Mary, who gives Hylton a dose of opium; and the trio carry him into the caravan, Mary watching on the steps in the moonlight. In the end, of course, all is explained, and Mary and Hylton and Peggy and Friarly pair off.

Under the Greenwood Tree is written with all the delicate fantasy of which Mr. Esmond has supplied us with so many samples; and a mere scenario can give but a poor idea of the pleasant playfulness, the lively humour, and the merry inventions of the piece. Now and then a note seemed to jar a little; but any such defects can easily be removed. The drugging of Hylton, and Mary's handling of his arm were out of tune with the serious interest which preceded; and there was a little too much of Miss Hamilton's rapture about the pleasures of life en plein air. Taken as a whole, however, the piece is a thing of pure delight, and the audience at the Lyric on Tuesday enjoyed it immensely.

The result was greatly due to the fine personality of Miss Maxine Elliott, who made a gipsy maiden quite calculated to turn the head of any young and spirited country squire. Miss Elliott's appearance in a pretty bathing-dress, and in some very picturesque gipsy costumes, was perfectly bewitching; and she acted with her accustomed skill, earnestness, and freedom. It needed an artist of some strength to fill the part satisfactorily; and Miss Elliott carried the audience away by the spontaneous impulse of her acting, and by the poetic grace of her share of the love scenes. Mr. Eric Maturin enacted Sir Kenneth Friarly with a quaint and delicate originality which was very acceptable; and his style—important in a character of this kind—was unimpeachable. Mr. Charles Cherry was happily selected for the rôle of J. G. M. Hylton. His love-making was ardent without being exaggerated; and he managed to carry it on to the poetic and romantic plane which was required for the full effect of the scenes. Miss Mary Jerrold made an unmistakable impression as Peggy Ingledew. She had the audience with her from first to last; and all Peggy's lines were given their fullest worth by this clever actress, whose bright and smart method was very well employed. Miss Jerrold's impersonation was valuable in keeping things going; and laugh after laugh was evoked by her droll and piquant impersonation. She made herself immensely popular, and the success of the production was greatly due to her efforts. Mr. T. Gideon Warren and Miss H. M. Fraser did all that was possible in the subordinate rôles of Mr. and Mrs. Knapton Bowles; and Mr. Tom Mowbray was highly commendable as the leader of the larcenous gipsies. Mr. W. J. Yeldham was entirely efficient as Dawes; and Mr. George Blunt made the little part of the chauffeur Griggs clearly memorable by his comic repose and demurely funny delivery. Miss Ada King being an active and villainous-looking gipsy woman.

The scenery had a great deal to do with the success of the piece, Mr. Walter Hann's interior being all that could be desired, and Mr. Hawes Craven's New Forest set, with its realistic foxgloves and quivering rushes, being a gem of woodland beauty. Mr. Felix Edwardes's stage-management ensured the smoothness of the production, which was received with hearty cordiality. Under the Greenwood Tree is likely to be very popular at the Lyric.

DRESSES AT THE PLAY.

Miss Constance Collier, at the Pontifex Bridge Club, in Sins of Society, at Drury Lane, wears a charming gown of apricot tussore, the bodice of which is covered with old-coloured lace, the skirt being trimmed with a fine piping of "macaroni" work. The sleeves are long. A cream crinoline hat, lined with white satin, and lifted right off the face in front, is worn with this. The crown is wreathed with ivy. Miss Collier is also seen in a white evening gown of thick meteor, cut on Princess lines, and embroidered with lattice work of silk and silver, the embroidery being arranged to form a little jacket coat finished with very long tails. Miss Collier's Longchamps gown is of pale blue tussore. The long coat is pointed in the front and embellished on the revers with "macaroni" work done very finely. The flat pockets at the side are fastened with three large embroidered buttons. The hat worn with this is a large capeline in pale blue straw, draped with a blonde tulle veil, which hangs down to the waist. Two aigrettes of pink roses make a pretty trimming at the sides, and another bunch of roses fastens the veil at the back.

Miss Collier wears at the opening of Act II. a pale pink crêpe de Chine garden frock, trimmed with an appliqué of guipure and bands of striped pink and white silk, bordered with rouleaux of crêpe. A simple garden hat of the capeline order is of pink straw; black velvet strings pass round the crown and cross at the back, where a huge La France rose fastens them. A Princess satin evening gown, embroidered at the foot with sprays of flowers in three shades of purple velvet and mousseline de soie, a purple stone illuminating the centre of each flower, is worn in the second scene of this act, with a handsome cloak of black chiffon velvet, heavily embroidered in black and gold. Miss Collier has also a cerise ninon gown, the skirt encrusted with dyed filet lace of the same rich cherry shade. An entire over-coat of cerise guipure, bordered with a margin of cerise mousseline, edged with cerise bobbles, is worn over this in a peplum effect. The yoke and under-sleeves are of spotted silk net. A black drawn tulle hat, lined with geranium satin, and bound with black taffetas, and trimmed with four black plumes, accompanies this. She also wears a simple little black gown, made with large flat tucks on the bodice, and worn with a tiny white collar. The hat is a small grey straw, entirely covered with spreading black wings. Miss Collier, in the last act, has a grey crêpe de Chine frock, the trimming of which is of cream silk filet lace, embroidered with gold. A grey satin hat, trimmed with grey feather, which falls over the shoulder, completes the toilette.

Miss Augarde has a white cloth Princess gown, trimmed with beautiful Indian embroidery, in shades of blue, and old silver buttons. The large white hat is lined with white satin and trimmed with a big bunch of black and yellow daisies. A pale green crêpe meteor gown has a high waistband and an Empire back. Miss Augarde's Grand Prix gown is of rose-pink chiffon, trimmed at the foot with thick guipure, edged with pale mauve. The large hat is of pink drawn chiffon, edged with gathered silk, and trimmed with a huge bunch of mauve convolvulus, heliotrope, and roses. A dainty white ninon gown, encrusted with lace, has a waistbelt of golden brown. Pale blue ball fringe trims a smart little pale blue cloth gown, which has a cross-over vest of Chine mirror velvet. Miss Augarde's wedding gown, in the last act, is of heavy ivory crêpe de Chine, made in plain Princess style.

Miss Fanny Brough's first dress is of pale mauve chiffon, with trimmings of very coarse filet lace dyed to match, and inserted medallions of dyed guipure. The large mauve hat is lined with black taffetas and covered with drooping wistaria and choux of black. Her evening gown in the next scene is of soft pink satin, made with an Empire effect, and trimmed with ivory silk net embroidered with tiny flowers. Long tassels of the pink fall from the side. In Miss Brough's Grand Prix toilette she wears, over a soft cream lace robe, a coat composed of panels of pale lemon cloth and pastel-blue silk, richly embroidered on every panel with blue silk. The hat is a black four-cornered crinoline, bound with black satin.

THE ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

The usual weekly meeting of the Council of the Actors' Association was held on Tuesday, when there were present:—Mr. Fewlass Llewellyn (chairman), Mr. Henry W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Miss Rose Matthews, Messrs Arthur Applin, Lewis Casson, C. F. Collings, Fred Grove, Edmund Gurney, Roy Horniman, and Chas. Cruickshanks (secretary). The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

The Hon. Solicitors reported that they had had further correspondence in a case of recovery of arrears of salary, and had received and submitted to the member concerned an offer of gradual payments. They had also seen and advised another member.

The Secretary stated that Mr. Fredk. Morland wished for information as to the duties and work of commissioners, and the matter had been placed on the agenda at his suggestion. It was agreed the matter should stand over until Mr. Morland be present.

The question as to the election of a committee to consider Mr. Applin's agency scheme was discussed, and ultimately it was agreed that no such committee should be elected, but that the whole matter be referred to the Finance and General Purposes Committee.

The Chairman read a letter from Miss Margaret Parker stating that she had tendered her resignation as a member of the "Social" Committee, as she was going to Australia at the end of the year, and her time till then would be taken up in making preparations.

The Secretary was authorised to purchase a copy of the "Medical Directory" for 1908.

It was decided that the secretary should proceed to the sale of the £83 2s. 2d. 2½ per cent. Consols purchased April 14, 1904.

Dr. G. Thorp Harding, of Stockport, Dr. Ferguson, Douglas, Isle of Man, and Dr. Leonard F. Houghton, of Weston-super-Mare, were elected hon. medical officers to the Actors' Association. Mr. Fewlass Llewellyn agreed to see Dr. Gibbs Bent, of Southfields, as to his appointment as H.M.O. to the Actors' Association, and as no member of the council would be visiting Glasgow in the near future, it was agreed that the secretary should, if possible, find a member who would be visiting there shortly to whom might be deputed the duty of interviewing Dr. Hepburn as to his appointment in the same capacity.

The Chairman reported a conversation he had had with certain members of the Actors' Union Committee on the matter of the election of medical officers, and submitted a proposal. It was decided after some debate that the matter was bound up with the question of the possibility of future amalgamation, and could not be dealt with at present.

At the request of the hon. solicitors a member attended before the council with regard to an alleged breach of contract, and the case was investigated. After some discussion the hon. solicitors received instructions.

The Secretary was directed to write to Mesdames Edyth Olive, Winifred Mayo, and Phyllis Relph, and to Messrs. Robson Paige, P. L. Julian, and F. Cremlin, asking them if they would serve, if elected, as members of the "Social" Committee of the Actors' Association.

John W. H. Sutherland was nominated for election to the association.

DEATH OF WYBERT ROUSBY.

Mr. Wybert Rousby, whose death in Guernsey on Tuesday we regret to record, was born at Hull on March 14, 1835. His father held a responsible position in the world-famed print and colour house of Blundell, Spence, and Co., now a large limited company. Young Rousby made his first appearance in public at the age of fourteen, under the name of Master Edward Boothby, in the character of Romeo, before an audience of nearly 3000 people, he achieving an immediate and distinguished success. His youthful efforts attracted the attention of the lessee of the Theatres Royal at York, Hull, and Leeds. The veteran Mr. Caple, who had acted with the Siddons, with Kemble, Kean, and all the great actors of their time, took the boy under his fostering care, tutored him in the rudiments of his art, and grounded him thoroughly in the principles of elocution, as practised by those who had in many cases founded distinct schools of their own. When "young Boothby" made his first appearance on any stage at the Queen's Theatre, Hull, in the character of Romeo, on Monday evening, July 16, 1849, the Le Clercqs were engaged to produce several characteristic and original ballets.

Before attaining the age of sixteen, young Rousby had appeared in the towns above-named, and also in Glasgow, Edinburgh, Liverpool, and many others, in the characters of Romeo, Hamlet, and even of Shylock, Othello, and Macbeth. About this period he was also so fortunate as to meet with Monsieur Le Clercq, maître de ballet at the Italian Opera, father of the late Carlotta and Rosa Le Clercq, who initiated him into the mysteries of "Plays without words." At seventeen Mr. Rousby figured at Sadler's Wells, under his own name, supporting the distinguished actor Phelps, as Laertes, Lysander, in The Midsummer Night's Dream, and other characters of similar importance. At eighteen he took the position of leading actor at the Theatre Royal, Jersey, after which he soon became a successful "star," obtaining the soubriquet of "the Kean of the Provinces." Returning to Jersey in 1860, after an absence of seven years, he turned his attention in his leisure hours to the art of dramatic reciting. Mr. Rousby appeared on the London stage in those plays of importance first produced at the Queen's Theatre in which his wife played the leading rôle. In Mr. Tom Taylor's drama 'Twixt Axe and Crown he was in the original cast as Courtenay; in Joan of Arc, by the same author, he played, on the occasion of its first performance, the part of La Hire; and (at the Princess's Theatre) in W. G. Wills's drama Mary Queen of Scots the part of Knox. In February, 1871, Mr. Rousby appeared at the Queen's Theatre as Orlando in a revival of As You Like It, Mrs. Rousby playing Rosalind; in April, 1873, at Drury Lane Theatre, he sustained the part of King Lear in a revival of Shakespeare's tragedy, his wife acting Cordelia.

An event in Mr. Rousby's career, which he recalled with great pride and pleasure, was the receipt of an offer from John Knowles, the proprietor of the Theatre Royal, Manchester, to impersonate Romeo in the grand revival of Shakespearean plays at the poet's tercentenary. Henry Irving was the Mercutio; Charles Calvert, Friar Laurence; Fred Everill, Benvolio; Mrs. Calvert, Juliet; Miss Bienhardt, Lady Capulet; and Mrs. Raymond, the Nurse. Mr. Rousby was specially engaged for the part of Harry Kavanagh in the original production of The Peep o' Day, Lagardère in The Duke's Motto, and Bob Brierley in The Ticket-of-Leave Man, also sustaining the same character in Liverpool. After many years of active work in the provinces he returned to Jersey as leading actor. Here he devoted his time to dramatic recitals, and eventually he became proprietor of the Jersey Theatre and lessee of St. Julians, Guernsey. It is just nine years ago that the veteran actor retired from management to take a well-earned rest, and a farewell performance was given at Jersey by Mr. and Mrs. Rousby. They were assisted by Mr. Ben Greet and Miss Madge McIntosh. It was on this occasion that the theatre staff presented an illuminated address and gift to their esteemed chief and a handsome gift to his wife on their relinquishing the cares of management to Mr. Sidney Cooper. A similar farewell was given at Guernsey, this being Mr. Rousby's last professional appearance.

At the height of a long run, and the once rejected author was not only commanding his own terms, but the man who had walked seventy miles without a decent meal or an encouraging smile had more good dinners now than he could possibly eat, and sat bathed in the adulation of his friends, the circle of which extended even to Royalty itself.

Let anyone thoughtfully sit down for a moment and bring to mind what such people as the Kendals have within themselves to insure their life-long success. First, perfect health, possession of every faculty. The literary man and the maestro may work somewhat fitfully, as the painter finds himself at his easel, en dishabille, making a master stroke when the mood is upon him.

On seeing the elder Miss Blossom enter, exquisitely dressed, all freshness, all magnetism, all buoyancy, who among the audience suspected Mrs. Kendal had spent two exhausting hours that afternoon in arranging the setting of the scene? And in that as everything.

After the physical comes the mental. One is useless without the other. We all know the Kendals' perfect acting, but to some the very faultlessness makes it appear easy to attain, and lookers-on rest at that, forgetting the natural gifts, the intellect, the years of study, the education, the accomplishments that enabled them to gain distinction and retain it.

Mrs. Kendal is fair enough to bear inspection in the full light of day, and while the actress might be accredited with adventitious aids, there is no mistaking the woman in society, fresh and wholesome looking, holding about her by genuine charm the best circle in the room as she discusses fluently with the ordinary foreigner as well as her own countrymen, besides being a most brilliant raconteur. After her first visit to America, she was constantly called upon to relate some of her experiences. Lacking Mrs. Kendal's quaint humour, I have no excuse for repeating the following, were it not for the moral conveyed, which taught me how to try and see familiar things with strangers' eyes. For surely I had many a time gone from Boston to Washington and never thought twice about "this novel method of American progress," which, when related to the

MR. AND MRS. KENDAL.

By right of inheritance, says a writer in an American paper, no one stood more directly in the line of succession on the stage than Madge Robertson. She came of a family of actors, as did Mrs. Fanny Kemble, Mrs. General Lander, Mrs. Fiske, Miss Viola Allen, Joseph Jefferson, William Warren, and hundreds of others, who can all boast of ancestors who lived hard, intellectual, self-respecting lives, and handed down names their descendants may well be proud to honour.

A characteristic remark of Mrs. Kendal's is perhaps worth quoting as a daughter's worthy tribute to a parent, if nothing more. At a reception in New York some few years ago a lady was overcomplimenting the actress, regardless of taste, and in her general dissection of her "admirable" qualities she dwelt upon the word "virtue." Mrs. Kendal's rapier was none the less pointed because sheathed in a velvet scabbard, as she smiled down upon the speaker and replied in a low, sweet tone, though distinct enough to be heard by everybody: "Don't insult me by saying I am a respectable woman! As my father's daughter, what else could I be?"

She was Madge Robertson when I first saw her at the Haymarket Theatre, London. And so many of the best actors had at various times served in the ranks of her father's company that upon her entrance among them on the London stage she was hailed as "the Child of the Regiment" and petted accordingly. Her proud allusion to her father that I have quoted meant, let me say, more than might at first appear. Mr. Robertson carried on years of theatrical management in the English provinces, holding up the highest standards, artistically and morally. He brought up and educated a very large family, to whom his example proved a sterling investment. For while poverty was many a time familiar to him and his, anything approaching sloth, debt, or dishonour never was and never could be. I have spoken elsewhere in brief of the success of Tom Robertson, the eldest son; how opportunity came in answer to his knock at the gate, for we must seek if we would find. At the very time I saw Madge Robertson playing with Mr. Sothern at the Haymarket her brother's comedy of School was little group on "the other side," caused speechless wonder and amazement.

Mrs. Kendal described, first sitting book in hand, absorbed in what she was reading, until glancing up she found herself alone with the porter, to whom she addressed the inquiry, "Why have they stopped?" "Here's where we go on to the boat, madam." "On to the boat? Good gracious, hand me my things down from the rack." The porter's assurance that her things were all right was no satisfaction to an old soldier who wanted to keep his kit under his own eye. "Where is everybody? Where is Mr. Kendal?"

The official tried to console the lady by the statement that he "guessed the gentleman had gone on to the boat with the others."

"But do all the passengers go on the boat?"

"Yes, madam; you're going right on now!"

And sure enough the train began to move. "What do you mean? Going, this car—going?" "Yes, madam; the whole train goes!" "On the boat?" "Yes, madam, here we are!"

Mrs. Kendal said her horror was beyond words, and clutching her valuables she dropped back into her seat awaiting the inevitable, for what could follow the putting that enormously heavy train upon a boat but the sending it to the bottom of the river with all its human freight?

But Mr. Kendal appeared, as Mr. Kendal is wont to do, at the auspicious moment, never failing to bring composure and serenity, and together they went on deck to witness "a wonderful sight." Here was the dauntless little Maryland tugging along as if it were mere child's play for her to stack all those huge cars, float them for an hour as she skirted the big city of New York, and carry them into harbour at the last in safety.

There are not a few who recall the widening of Tremont-street in Boston and the setting back of the Hotel Pelham at the expense of the city. And among such, credence will be given to the traveller's narration, who had been most hospitably entertained on her previous California tour, and now on a return the following year was again sought out and invited to a formal luncheon by the charming hostess. Allowing only time to arrive at the correct moment the honoured guest was dismayed to find she would be late, since the approach was certainly not the one she had chant thinks he has enough on his hands if he attends to this alone. Many a man of affairs is immersed in his own family estate. The actor, as a rule, has but little comprehension of this financial qualification. Mr. Kendal is the rarer, then, in meeting the demands at every point! As a business man he ranks with the most able, as well as the most just and generous. What is more, in matters pertaining to the business of others, whereas some are apt to give an abrupt and discouraging verdict in such a harsh and cruel way as to almost paralyse any future effort, Mr. Kendal has by a kind word of advice put more than one young man on the right road, and by a timely suggestion enabled him to find the key to a difficult situation that not only sustained him in the present, but led him on to success in after life. It is well known that the secret of the sincere esteem that all feel for William Grimston Kendal lies in his rare courtesy, at all times, under all conditions—a never-failing courtesy, given to his King no more than the humblest applicant who seeks him out. And here, as in all else, the wife is her husband's fitting mate, working hand in hand with him, following his lead, or able and ready to take the initiative when it is hers to work out alone, never flinching from duty, never taking the refuge of the ordinary woman in little indulgencies, but starting off at half-past eleven o'clock at night on her husband's arm, his companion in the walk they generally take to the hotel after the performance. One rather severe night a friend offered to drive her home. "No, no, she and William enjoyed the brisk trot in the fresh air," so they ran off together in the snowstorm, like good comrades as they were.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

[We do not answer inquiries by post. In all letters the names and addresses of inquirers must be given as a guarantee of good faith. Initials only or pseudonyms will be used in the answers if so desired.]

MUROS.—1. The licence of the Lord Chamberlain must be obtained before the copyright performance. 2. In order to keep up the character of a public performance it is usual to have the parts separately represented. 3. There is no need for anyone actually to pay for admittance; it is only necessary that any of the public should have the right to enter on payment.

EMPIRE THEATRE (Newcastle-on-Tyne).—The lady you mention would probably give you the information you seek. Write her care of the Empire Theatre, Leicester-square, W.C.

FRANK COUCH.—The Alhambra, Shoreditch, gave three performances nightly; but we cannot give you the date of their discontinuance or their inauguration. H. Barton Baker's "The London Stage" would be able to supply a good deal of the information that you require about saloons and theatres. For the rest, we can only refer you to the Reading Room of the British Museum. No really good account of the "beginnings" of the London halls has been written as far as we are aware, though Mr. Douglas Stuart, 28, Wellington-street, Strand, has done something in this direction. Some particulars of Evans's, the Coal Hole, and Paddy Green will be found in "My Lifetime," by John Hollingshead.

L. R.—Mrs. Ponderbury's Past was originally played on Nov. 2, 1895, at the Avenue Theatre. In Dahomey was produced at the Shaftesbury on May 16, 1903. We are unaware of the length of the run. Possibly Witmark's, 136, Shaftesbury-avenue, might be able to inform you.

T. H. ROCHFORD (Dublin).—You will discover the number (approximate) of music halls in the United Kingdom by reference to "The Era Almanack" of 1907. Of the number in the other countries we have but a limited knowledge.

E. R. BEAUMONT (Theatre Royal, Leicester).—We should say that the house had a Royal box; for the Princess Victoria (afterwards Queen) visited it in 1833, when it was re-christened the Victoria.

CHRIS BAKER.—We are quite unable to inform you as to the whereabouts of the lady. Inquire of Mr. Harry Randall.

A. M. BROADHURST (Cricklewood).—Enoch and Sons, 14, Great Marlborough-street, W., hold the publishing rights; but they themselves cannot give information concerning the acting rights. Inquire Dramatic Authors' Agency, Tavistock-street, Strand; French's, Southampton-street, Strand; or François Cellier, Belmont, Cranes Park, Surbiton.

MABEL FAIRCHILD.—In order to secure your rights you must register both the copyright and the performing rights in your piece at Stationers' Hall. Write there for the necessary forms. You can apply to the Court for an injunction against anyone infringing your rights.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER,
BY ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B.

Chapter I
COPYRIGHT AS OPPOSED TO PERFORMING RIGHT.

Chapter II.
PERFORMING RIGHT.

Chapter III.
INFRINGEMENT AND REMEDIES.

Chapter IV.
MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.

Chapter V.
INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT.

"The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," by Albert A. Strong, LL.B., solicitor, author of "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" office), seems to be the one compendious and indispensable authority on the subject, as vexed as the "Bermoothes" and as tortuous as a Chancery suit, that has long been wanted. It is in every essential a text book for the perplexed layman, and no solicitor or barrister worth his salt ought to think of taking or appearing in "proceedings" without consulting its pages. It must suffice, after what has been said, to state little more than that the contents include five chapters, respectively named "Copyright as Opposed to Performing Right," "Performing Right," "Infringement and Remedies," "Musical Copyright," and "International and Colonial Copyright." The work, for all its precise authority, is not dry reading. The statutes, with the elucidatory notes, necessarily impose a task on the reader which takes some tackling, but they had to be there. The cases adduced, however, are full of interest. Certain of them might fitly find a place in the romance of copyright. There was the fight of Charles Reade with George Conquest over "It's Never Too Late to Mend," for instance, and the equally interesting conflict of Mr. J. A. Cave with Chatterton over "The Wandering Jew." The latter was a famous battle. Chatterton took it to the House of Lords, and was finally beaten, to the unspeakable relief of Mr. Cave, who is never weary of relating the story. Had the result been otherwise, it would have meant his ruin. I well remember meeting him on the day of his victory and "crashing a cup with him" in honour of the same. "The Law of Copyright" is dedicated to Mr. A. W. Pinero.—Sportsman.

Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.

Copyright confusion is, like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr. Albert A. Strong's new work, entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr. Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his text-book on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" Office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases, what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full of interest.—Referee.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
The "Era Annual" for 1907 is now out. It is full of good things, and will be eagerly perused by all who are interested in dramatic and musical affairs and personnel. Portraits of, and original contributions by, several public favourites and managers appear, including Miss Ellen Terry, who tells "How I Spend My Day"; Mr. Frank Cooper, Mr. Arthur Collins, Mr. Charles Collette, Mr. Frank Curzon, Mr. Matthew Brodie, Miss Constance Moxon, Miss Edith Cole, and Mr. Tom Craven. There is, in addition, the usual store of miscellaneous theatrical information which is indispensable to all who are interested in tage matters.—Liverpool Post, Jan. 26.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
A capital shilling's worth is the "Era Annual," with its valuable lists of new plays produced during the year in London, the provinces, Berlin, and Paris. In contains, also, many readable articles by stage favourites, notably a characteristic contribution, "How I Spend My Day," by Miss Ellen Terry.—Daily Express, Feb. 2.

TEACHING PLAY-WRITING.

Mr. CYRIL MAUDE'S suggestion that the art of writing plays might be taught by means of lectures and able instruction is one which affords food for reflection and discussion. Mr. ALFRED C. CALMOUR is distinctly of opinion that the technical part of the trade can be so taught; and his little book on "Practical Play-writing" was an endeavour to supply the "long-felt want" of a guide to the aspiring but inexperienced dramatist. Mr. JEROME K. JEROME is the author of a very amusing and cleverly-written little volume on the same subject, penned in a spirit of pleasant irony, which makes it doubly acceptable. And there are others.

We cannot say, however, that we consider these books, clever as they undoubtedly are, of much practical use to the budding playwright. They bear much the same relation to the art of play-writing as Sir JOSHUA REYNOLDS'S books and Mr. CLAUSEN'S admirable lectures do to that of painting. Mr. CALMOUR'S plan, it seems, was first to hit on an initial dramatic idea, then to elaborate a skeleton plot, and next to develop this into a completed scenario; after which his young dramatist was to "marshal his incidents into acts." Mr. CALMOUR also made the ingenious suggestion that, having completed an act of a play, the writer should get someone who "could not read dramatically" to read it to him. "By this means," said Mr. CALMOUR, "he will arrive at the very worst aspect of his effort, and will be enabled to tell where the dialogue wants cutting. It is not a bad plan," continues the teacher, "when one can victimise one's friends, to drop in after dinner, and get them to take small doses of the play, watching observantly whether your pathetic or comic scenes produce their intended effect or deep slumber." This, at any rate, is a definite, if slightly dangerous, suggestion.

The essential truth about playwriting is that where a strong dramatic instinct exists the tricks of the trade can easily be acquired; but that it is impossible by teaching technique to engender observation, invention, and creative ability. The most gifted "born dramatist" needs to be acquainted with technique, and the only school that exists is the study of practised playwrights, not in the library, but in the theatre, followed by actual experiment in play-production. Most dramatists have made their preliminary essays in the Theatre Royal Back Drawing-room, and have unconsciously imitated the master of the art in vogue when they commenced operations. But the best training of all is to see your immature and amateurish efforts knocked into shape by the practised hand of some experienced actor or stage-manager.

We talk and write of the "drama" as if it were "one and indivisible"—as if there was only one drama with only one set of rules. But there are many kinds of drama, and the rules for the making of them are as numerous. At one end of the scale is the highly intellectual piece, the sort of piece which ought to be played, as Mr. BERNARD SHAW puts it, to a pit full of philosophers; at the other is the crude "carpentered" melodrama which delights children of the larger growth. The methods which are suitable for the one are utterly inefficacious with the second. In the one case we want close observation, mental ability, and a moderate use of technique; in the other, technique is all-important—the workmanship is essential and the artistry is subordinate. But even in this instance the technique is not the part which is of prime importance. There must be material to work upon before the manufacture can commence.

It is true that, in melodrama, a great deal of this material is only "re-cooked cabbage"; but there must be something besides this to make up the dish, and that something must be supplied by the author's brain. Where there is the dramatic instinct, the "sense of the theatre" can be easily acquired. The trouble with most of the MSS. that are submitted to managers is that the authors lack, not the theatrical but the dramatic faculty. Given a thoroughly human and really dramatic play, though full of solecisms in arrangement and construction, any practical stage-manager can soon "knock it into shape." Whenever one tries to lay down a fixed rule for the writing of plays, one is met with an example to the contrary. "All the academies in the world," says Mr. CALMOUR, "will not make a man a fine painter or sculptor; will not give him a sense of colour, or of form, or composition. But teaching will make him conversant with the A B C of the art which he aspires to learn." A pupil who only knows his A B C is not, however, of much importance. The chief qualification of a dramatist is imagination. He must be able to see his stage set with the scene he requires, to hear his personages talking, and to see them, in his mind's eye, in action. This is what distinguishes the dramatic from the narrative gift. The novel may be observation passed through the medium of an undramatic temperament; a play must be life passed through the medium of a dramatic one. Other things being equal, this is the essential difference between the people who can write plays and those who cannot. From the writer with the theatrical instinct and only a dash of the dramatic we get the cheapest form of crude melodrama; from the author with the dramatic instinct, but without the theatrical, we, at the worst, get plays which, with a little pruning and altering, can easily be made into interesting dramas. It is not chiefly a question of knowing when to bring down your curtain, or of Right Centre and Opposite Prompt Entrance. It is a question of the raw material which we call Life passing through a temperament and being converted in passing to certain uses. And the only education which can be suggested is a constant study of the best models. The student must, as it were, take his technique in through the pores. It is impossible to be constantly seeing plays without imbibing certain principles; and if one cannot write a good drama, attendance at the theatre will, at least, establish a standard in the mind, and enable the student to realise his incompetency. The people who make the labour of the managers' play-readers so heavy are not so much ignorant of technique as ignorant of what has been done on the stage already, ignorant of Life, and, above all, ignorant of their own ignorance.

MISS PEREIRA ON DRAMATIC ART.

I certainly maintain (said Miss Joan Pereira in a recent debate at an Actors' Association "Social") that the dramatic art in England at the present time is deteriorating when compared with that of France and Germany. Firstly, because the average actor seldom makes a fundamental study of his part. Secondly, facial expression and by-play are often ignored, or, what is more frequent, they are an unknown art. Thirdly, deportment is in a great many cases not thought necessary, and what to any other nation is the more palpable the Englishwoman is so used to outdoor sports that, however good she may be at tennis, hockey, and cricket, once in a drawing-room her train, her movements, the handling of bric-à-brac necessitates a different style.

It is but fair to say in regard to these statements that there are brilliant exceptions which even a Continental star would find it hard to outshine—therefore, to quote the English grammar, these exceptions prove the rule.

I said the ordinary actor seldom makes a fundamental study of his part, and here I lay stress on the actor of experience—the much-belittled amateur will take the trouble to study the character of his part; it is a novelty to him. But the actor has suddenly a part offered to him, say, a French character part—he is rushed for it, must get his props, &c. He is a quick study—one primary point in his favour. Now there remains only how to impersonate the Frenchman. "What shall I do?" he asks himself. "I never played a Frenchman. Ah, here comes Jones—the very man! Do tell me how you would play this part—it is a Frenchman."

"My dear fellow, just go and see Jenkins at the Frivolity. He is ripping in that part. Copy him, and you'll do all right." The actor goes and does so, never for one moment reasoning if the said characters coincide as to the period, the mannerism, &c. England is insular, and therefore a Frenchman to an English audience is a Frenchman.

Of course, not everyone has the good fortune to go abroad and study the customs of the people, but there is a great opportunity for all that to read the books of the country, translations if you cannot do so in the original, and so become familiar with the temperament and surroundings of the character one has to impersonate.

May I give an illustration of the French stage-manager in a small town in the south of France? He was producing a play, and in it there was a scene—a dinner-party at an English country house. We rehearsed, and when the dinner was over the stage-manager asked the hostess, together with the ladies, to leave the dining-room. "Messieurs, you remain."

"Why?" queried one artist. "Ah!" said our French stage-manager, "in England when people of quality dine en compagnie, the ladies withdraw to the salon, and the men remain seated at table to drink whisky. Ah oui!" and turning to me, he said, "N'est-ce-pas, mademoiselle? It is always so?"

Now, I know this man had never been in England, spoke but a few English words, and I asked him after the rehearsal where he got his knowledge from. He showed me with a chuckle an old Tauchnitz edition of one of Mrs. Henry Wood's novels.

"Vous voyez, mademoiselle—I read the English authors, all!" And I dare say that scene impressed the native audience the more because it had an English atmosphere. And to bear out my argument, may I quote the Referee, which, in criticising the Haymarket production of My Wife, singled out Mr. Fred Lewis's interpretation of a Frenchman? "The character is very well observed." Moreover, Mr. Lewis shows that you do not want French or broken English either to convey the sense of French character.

My second argument to the leading question: Facial expression and by-play are often ignored, or what is more frequent, they are an unknown art. The great fault in this respect lies with the stage-manager. He is the man to watch, correct, and insist on expression; but how often does he not even notice it, or, if he does, passes it over? "Rather have my stage properly set—much more important."

A pretty face and a good figure are a great recommendation to an actress. "Yes, she looks pretty; she'll do," says the manager. "Here is the part." The lady dresses the part well, looks it, and speaks her lines extremely well; but the expression—the soul that should speak out of her eyes—it is so often absent.

Of course, we all know, that unless facial expression, say, in tragedy, is well held under control, it becomes a grimace. Lessing, in his "Laokoon," tells us that tragedy best expresses is through the eyes, the eyebrows—in fact, let the mouth remain in repose.

Now, the pretty actress, knowing that facial expression, unless carefully studied, becomes a distortion, reasons: "I won't use any at all, and so be on the safe side." Her manager may be disappointed when he sees her from the front, but he too will shrug his shoulders and say, "A pity, but she looks pretty."

Again, the stage-manager may ask the "heroine" to make much of her big scene. "Let yourself go, miss——"

Imagine her scene: A ruined home, a broken-hearted wife bidding good-bye to her husband who is leaving his homeland. The actress speaks lines with power, she clutches her hair, utters agonising shrieks, and finally she swoons. But how much more true to life would it be if the said actress, when playing at Liverpool, had watched the departure of an emigrants' ship at the landing-stage—the stony look on the wife's face, the utter despair, the great loneliness, all so forbidding and tragic in their aspect that the very Deity would shrink from intruding on her in her great grief.

Now I am coming to the deficiency of "by-play." I mean particularly how to listen when someone else is speaking. I maintain in most cases it is the facial expression of the "thinking parts" which is absolutely necessary to make a point go. Have we not often watched a provincial play and felt sorry for the leading character? Say the scene is a court of justice. The accused is pleading hard his cause, but, Mon Dieu! his hearers—the face of the judge and jury, often played by minor actors, void of expression, and if it happens to be the acting-manager—who very often plays a part in the last scene—why, he will count the house to make sure his returns are all night!

Thus I could enumerate dozens of cases, but they are obvious to us all.

Therefore it is imperative that the stage-manager should impress on his artists, from the pretty leading woman down to the "responsible actor," that facial expression is a great factor in the art of acting. Thus an impossible dramatic situation would be more effectively played than by shouting, ranting, and throwing one's arms about as so often is the case.

I remember when I was studying in Paris we had lessons in dramatic art from an actress from the Théâtre Française. At our second lesson, to our disgust, we were each given a slip of paper, and on it was written "Au revoir."

"Mesdames," said the French actress, "please go home and study this word, and at your next lesson will you express 'Au revoir" in seven different ways?" and that was all we got for our ten francs a lesson. I don't think I have since gazed so long in the looking-glass and studied my face. There were the haughty, the sad, the coquettish, the affectionate, etc., etc., "Au revoir" to be expressed, and our features to be worked upon, and ma foi! at the next lesson was not the said French actress most sarcastic, and would suddenly interrupt our facial "Au revoirs" by exclaiming: "Mais, mais, qu'est-ce que cela veut dire que cette grimmace là."

These were happy days, and we liked to study dramatic art in spite of the dreaded uncomplimentary remarks.

My last argument:

Deportment is in a great many cases not thought necessary, but to the English woman is essential by nature of her outdoor exercises.

I will leave the English actor out of the question. For an Englishman never was "Un homme du salon"; he dresses, walks, and pursues his own hobbies like a true Briton, and is likewise the admiration or envy of other Continental nations. Thus in any and every salon he will always remain "Un Anglais pur et simple."

But with the English actress it is different. She dons a Paris gown, impersonates a fascinating Italian, or a languishing Spaniard, and her grace is essential, for she is vying with the nations to whom these attributes are second nature. An English actress has a good many points in her favour—she is tall, svelte, of a rare colouring, and so on—but natural grace, which her Southern sisters possess, to her is often denied, therefore, she should cultivate it in her dramatic pursuits.

You may often overhear the exclamation when abroad as an Englishwoman passes:—

"Mais qu'elle est belle," but the very neat remark will be "Ciel! qu'elle est gauche!"

I will not say the English actress is awkward, it sounds harsh, but "gauche"; perhaps of later years the general tendency to out-door sports among women may have conduced to it. Let the actress stand in front of a big looking-glass and watch her movements, the practise of how to wear a long train without the inevitable actor stepping on it and using bad language. All these little, very little, items help to keep up Great Dramatic Art on a level with other nations, some of which are outstripping us.

THE costumes in Attila at His Majesty's are marked by richness and beauty. Miss Lily Brayton as Ildico makes a lovely picture in her classical tunic of blue cloth, draped over a robe of lighter blue, and fastened on the shoulders with bands of turquoise. Over the head is thrown a veil of fine blue cloth, and the hair, worn in two long plaits, is tied at intervals with bands of blue ribbon. Heavy rings of silver are worn in each ear. Later in the play Ildico appears in a long tunic of geranium-coloured cloth, only relieved by a black shawl worked with large medallions in gold, her ornaments being of the same precious metal. Her next appearance is in a tunic of gold and purple, slashed into tiny points, edged with gold braid, and worn over an under-robe of very rich purple cloth.

ILDICO'S bridal dress is a beautiful robe of cloth-of-silver, almost hidden by a tunic covered with large silver sequins. From her shoulders falls a long, square train of silver cloth, worked in silver and lined with scarlet, and the lining is powdered with tiny silver sequins. With this very beautiful dress Ildico wears a heavy jewelled ornament to fasten the bodice, massive bracelets on each arm, and a jewelled crown.

MISS IRENE ROOKE, as one of Ildico's attendants, wears a curious dress of blue linen, with the bodice partly made of brown leather, half hidden under a long tunic of green linen, which is fastened at the sides with clasps of silver. The sleeves also are very quaint, being made of green and blue beads sewn together to make squares. In the part of the queenly Kerka Miss Mary Rorke wears a tunic of dark blue cloth, heavily embroidered in gold. This tunic is worn over a robe of dark blue cloth, arranged with long hanging sleeves of blue gauze, and over the head and around the neck is gracefully twisted a sling-scarf of blue gauze. The costume is finished by a quaint cap of black and gold, surmounted by a gold crown.

ONE of Miss Fanny Brough's gowns in The Sins of Society is of brown tussore, trimmed with soft satin, in lighter shades and golden-brown lace. She has also a striped black chiffon gown, with a trimming of chiffon painted with rich yellow roses, and a band of silver tissue at the hem, with a white straw, covered with yellow tulle to match the gown, and trimmed with a big bunch of roses and convolvulus. Miss Brough's dress in the last act is in pale blue cloth, the coat having a cutaway effect, and the shoulder seam is quite new. With this is a toque of grass-green straw, trimmed with choux of green and a bunch of coque feathers.

"THE GAY GORDONS."

A Play with Music, in Two Acts, book by Seymour Hicks, music by Guy Jones, lyrics by Arthur Wimperis, C. H. Bovill, P. G. Wodehouse, and Henry Hamilton. Produced at the Aldwych Theatre on Wednesday evening, Sept. 11.

Peggy Quainton .....MISS ELLALINE TERRISS

Mr. Seymour Hicks is the magician who is able to put new vitality into musical plays, and to laugh at the forebodings of quidnuncs fond of proclaiming the inanities of a form of theatrical production of which—whatever its failings—the public are far from being tired. The usual complaints tabulated are want of plot, lack of sustained dramatic interest, flabbiness of dialogue, and absence of coherence; but these faults cannot be charged to The Gay Gordons, produced on Wednesday evening at the Aldwych with all the pleasant accompaniments of success; for in the latest production there is a capital story, a plethora of sentiment, not a little pathos, and a pretty touch of romance that might go to the making of a first-class comedy. Indeed, at times one becomes so interested in the development of character and the sundry happenings that the introduction of a topical song is to be regarded as a banality not to be tolerated.

We are in the picturesque regions of the Scottish moors on the 12th, and o'er the heather-clad boulders of a finely painted and constructed scene that does immense credit to the brush of Mr. R. C. McCleery comes the skirl of the pibroch. We are in the vicinity of the cottage of Widow Janet McCleod, whose boy, Angus Graeme—not her son, as she is loth to confess—is a private in the Gordons. At the opening of the piece we learn that there have been inquiries concerning the lost heir to the estates of Meltrose, and the shrewd Scotchwoman has forwarded to a firm of solicitors in Edinburgh a tin box containing papers that establish the identity of Angus as the young Earl of Meltrose. But before the fact becomes common knowledge Angus has fallen in love with the daughter of an American millionaire, Peggy Quainton, who intends disappointing the anticipations of her friends on the other side of the Atlantic by marrying a man without a title. With this end in view she changes dresses and positions with Victoria Siddons, the daughter of a Punch and Judy proprietor, and acts as "help" to Mrs. McCleod. Outside the cottage takes place quite an idyllic love scene that removes The Gay Gordons far from the commonplace atmosphere of an ordinary musical play. Angus wins his suit: the beggar-maid will see him again on the morrow.

Ere the sun rises again he is proclaimed Earl of Meltrose, and in his fear of losing the Cophetua of the cottage he, too, changes places with a private of his regiment; but the "gaff is blown" by the Punch and Judy showman, and Peggy, much chagrined at the non-success of her romantic plan, resolves to change again and become her own brother. Eventually she is persuaded by the Earl, and the two plight their marriage vows in the presence of witnesses.

The second act opens with a scene so richly endowed with beautiful women, lovely toilets, and smart uniforms, and, moreover, so heartily reflecting in its opening number the loyalty of clan to laird and King, that it should become the talk of London. "For Scotland and King" sounds exactly the correct note, and Mr. Hicks, who had very little voice left to sing it on Wednesday evening, recited to the musical accompaniment. But Mr. Hicks has very rightly and properly left the most interesting numbers to his popular wife; and her personal triumph must have afforded her overwhelming proof that Londoners have a special affection for Ellaline Terriss—for the highly gifted and winsome creator of so many musical comedy heroines. The scenes between "the happy pair" were beautifully played. Tenderness and pathos animated the scene where the remains of a picnic are attacked by the lovers; and the affectionate episode between Angus and his foster-mother enabled that excellent actress, Miss Rosina Filippi, to show the touch of sincerity that marks the experienced artist. To return to Miss Terriss. She has an exquisite scene with the cottage children, who play "see-saw" while she sings a number by that title. Another lyric that falls pleasantly on the ear and enables her to wheedle so prettily is "Daddy, do"; but "Humpty and Dumpty" in the second act will become a more popular number than either of the other two. "You, you, you" is a fascinating lilt for the lovers that arises out of the situation. When disguised as an officer she sings, "Everybody loves one up in London" with delightful chic. Miss Sidney Fairbrother and Mr. Fred Emney proclaim the value of the more robust school of comedy by their really unctuous and highly amusing performances as Nervy Nat Siddons, the Punch and Judy proprietor, and his wife, Charlotte, who asserts that there is too much competition in the show business—what with Bernard Shaw and Hall Caine. Mr. A. W. Baskcomb submits a very clever study of the inert and melancholy Edward Siddons, the assistant showman who looks after the moke, an interesting quadruped; Mr. William Lugg is a genial, kindly, and sympathetic American father as Andrew Quainton; Mr. Lawrence Caird makes the most of his limited opportunities in the second act; Mr. J. C. Buckstone is pawky as the lawyer, Archibald Speedy; and Mr. William Bishop as a corporal is responsible for a Highland reel that brings down the house. Miss Zena Dare is quite herself as Victoria Siddons, and has little chance in the stupid number, "I am a honeypot." Miss Barbara Deane has two excellent numbers in the "White Heather" song and "A summer night"; and Miss Georgina Delmar sings very charmingly a pretty opening song. A capital concerted piece is "Our Show," in which the humour will be bound to increase with repetition. Misses Katie Butler, Vera Morris, and Sylvia Storey distinguish themselves in small parts; and Highland lairds are effectively presented by Messrs. Cecil Kinnaird, Kenneth Maclaine, Arthur Royd, and Mervyn Dene.

The dances and choral effects have been arranged by Edward Royce, the dresses are specially designed by Wilhelm, and the smart and handsome uniforms have been supplied by Morris Angel and B. J. Simmons and Co. The performance was musically directed by Mr. Frank E. Tours, who secured an excellent ensemble. The Aldwych should require no new attraction for some time to come.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

A special general meeting of the Variety Artists' Federation is to be held at the Camberwell Empire to-morrow (Sunday). Mr. Joe O'Gorman will take the chair at four o'clock. The principal business will be to decide on the methods to enforce the Award. Proprietors and managers are cordially invited.

No surprise will be felt that the management of the Palace, Stoke Newington, has passed into the hands of Mr. Jack de Frece, as it was well known that the bookings have always been done in connection with the Walter De Frece Circuit. Mr. T. J. Robinson is the acting manager.

Miss Vesta Victoria, who sails for America to-day, under engagement to Klaw and Erlanger, will open there with two of the Monte Carlo Publishing Co.'s songs, "Will he answer 'Goo-Goo'?" by Ballard Macdonald and Donovan Meher, and her already great American success, "I've told his missis all about him," by Harrington and Tate. Miss Victoria will also sing no less than six of Harrington and Tate's newest songs.

Miss Ada Reeve, accompanied by her husband, Mr. Wilfred Cotton, and Messrs. Harry and Dick Preston in the motor-boat, My Lady Ada, swam on Wednesday at Brighton from the Palace Pier to the West Pier in 32½ minutes. A very fine record.

Mr. Alfred Lester will appear on September 23rd in a new and revised version of that funny sketch, A Restaurant Episode, in which will be introduced Miss Florrie Wakeman, an actress of French descent. This lady will play the part of the visitor to the restaurant, the happenings therein being considerably amplified, with a special regard for humorous business.

Mr. Arthur Williams and company are to appear on Monday at the Palace Theatre in That Brute Simmons, is an adaptation of one of Mr. Arthur Morrison's "Tales from Mean Streets." Mr. Williams will be assisted by Miss Carlotta Zerbini and Mr. Lytton Grey. Mr. Williams's first appearance on the stage proper was at the Theatre Royal, Gravesend, on December 26th, 1861, when he appeared in a heavy "thinking part." Seven years later he came to London, and has played over 1,000 parts during the past twenty-five years at all the principal theatres both east and west.

Miss Carlotta Zerbini, who makes her début in variety, is, of course, well known to playgoers in her connection with the productions of Messrs. Harrison and Maude at the Haymarket, and in The Dairymaids at the Apollo. She comes of a famous musical family, and in her early years on the stage played heroines in English opera. She will repeat at the Palace her triumphs as Mrs. Simmons, her original part.

Curtain-raisers from the regular theatres are finding a new environment at the variety houses. Besides the production of That Brute Simmons at the Palace, Punchinello, an adaptation from the French by Mr. Hubert Carter, a young actor who has done excellent work in Shakespearian productions, is to be given at the Hippodrome on Monday. The little piece first saw the footlights in Liverpool, and was produced in London at the Grand, Fulham, on Sept. 11, 1903.

Miss Marianne Caldwell will make her first appearance on the irregular stage in the part of Nanon; the young author will resume his original part, the title-rôle; Mr. Edward O'Neill will be the Diderot; and Mr. Frank Forbes-Robertson, the bearer of an honoured name, will play Etienne, the secretary. The plot revolves round an eccentric will, and the scene is laid in Diderot's study in Paris in 1750. Diderot was the famous writer of Le Paradoxe du Comédien.

In The Avalanche, which is to be produced on Monday week, Mr. Lauderdale Maitland is to make his first appearance at the Hippodrome, and will play the part of André, the Swiss guide. Mr Maitland, though quite a young actor, has had some valuable experience, and has been touring for some time in melodrama. His hero in One of the Best established his reputation as an accomplished representative of romantic parts.

Miss Janet Alexander, who also goes to the Hippodrome from the legitimate stage, in The Avalanche, won her reputation in London when she played the part of the heroine in Boyle Lawrence's piece, A Man of His Word, produced by Mr. Herbert Waring at the Imperial Theatre. Previous to this Miss Alexander had played Beatrice in a representation of Much Ado by the Oxford University Dramatic Society.

Mr. Bransby Williams, who is this week at Norwich, is due on Monday at Ipswich, where he will stay at the Great White Horse, sleeping in the famous Pickwick room. While in town on Monday he was recognised by many of his friends when riding in a motor-car belonging to no less a person than S. F. Edge, who placed it at his disposal, thereby enabling him to enjoy a fine run through the Eastern Counties.

A concert party at Selsey that had not done good business last week found a friend in need in Mr. Bransby Williams, who worked a show for the unfortunate artists, and afterwards went round with the collecting box. One well-known gentleman gave him £5, and the collection had the desired result of helping the stranded ones out of their difficulties.

Mr. Herbert Shelley, who had no less than three pieces from his pen accepted for production this autumn—one at a West-End theatre—starts a short tour at the Palace, Blackpool, on Monday next, with his Irish protean play, Dan the Outlaw. He has lately fitted many of our leading artists with successful songs, including Miss Marie Studholme in My Darling. A busy man truly!

Miss Margaret Ashton, who has this week been appearing at the Chelsea Palace, remains at the Tivoli until the end of the month, when she will begin a provincial tour. The charming American soprano, who has in preparation several new songs, has been greatly gratified by the reception awarded to her famous march song, "When Tommy Atkins marries Dolly Gray."

A special set of pictures was shown on the Palace Bioscope on Monday depicting the scenes and incidents of the start for the race for the blue ribbon of the Atlantic between the Lusitania and the Lucania. The huge proportions of the former vessel are made clear to the audience, and the picture also shows in comparison the German rival which has hitherto held the record.

The Empire obtained from the Cunard Company special and exclusive facilities for pictures of the Lusitania, and their operator travelled to Ireland and obtained some very interesting pictures at Queenstown.

Years since the late Ambrose Maynard, or the gentleman who acted as his ghost, wrote a farce for the music-halls, entitled Pepper and Salt, in which first the Twin Brothers Wems and then the Twin Brothers Clayton played the title-rôles. It was a real "comedy of errors." The servants' parts were originally played by the Sisters Mario (Dot and Minnie), who had to give up their engagement in order to appear in Drury Lane pantomime.

Mr. Eric Longden, from the Britannia, Hoxton, has been appointed manager of Mr. Frank Macnaghten's Lincoln house, the Palace, and has already ingratiated himself into the esteem of habitués.

The registered directors of the Devonport Empire, £15,000 (£1), are Mr. Alfred Moul (of the London Alhambra) and W. Firth, and the agents are to be Messrs. F. Rosen and D. G. Bliss, who are concerned with the Palaces, Aberdeen and Dundee.

Mr. Geo. Saphrini will commence his third season at The Palace, Boston, on Sept. 30. During the vacation a new gallery and stage have been built; the place has been decorated throughout; and a new heating apparatus installed.

Mr. Nat Clifford was unable to continue his engagement at the Liverpool Tivoli after Wednesday evening owing to sudden illness, resulting from a stroke. Ernie Myers, engaged at the Lyric, deputised.

The date of the opening of the new music-hall, the Pavilion, now being erected by Messrs. Broadhead, in Lodge-lane, Liverpool, is provisionally fixed for Dec. 23 next. An army of workmen are engaged in the work of building.

Our readers will sympathise with Mr. T. Hargreaves, the genial and enterprising proprietor and manager of the Empire Theatre of Varieties, Rochdale, in the loss he has sustained by the death of his wife, who passed away on Thursday after a lingering illness borne with fortitude. The interment takes place at the Rochdale Cemetery to-day.

The Palace Theatre, Derby, reopened on Monday evening. The enterprising proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes, has spared nothing, and the building will now bear favourable comparison with any provincial hall of a similar size. Nearly £1,000 has been expended, and the improvements effected were fully appreciated by two packed houses on the opening night.

The increased comfort was also the subject of much favourable criticism. The new stage is a great improvement, and the admirable scenery and new act drop add lustre to the various "turns." Another striking feature is the artistic decoration of the proscenium in cream and gold, colours that are also employed extensively throughout the interior, which is illuminated, as of yore, with vari-coloured electric bulbs, the effect being delightful.

After undergoing a very serious operation, which happily proved successful, Mr. Hugh Wigglesworth, the well-known variety and concert agent, is now slowly recovering at Dr. Robertson's Nursing Home, 180, Abbey-hills-road, Oldham, and would welcome a cheery line from any of his old friends. A few years ago Mr. Wigglesworth was the general manager of the Morecambe Pier and Pavilion Co., Ltd.

On Friday in last week at Margate an unusually large number of visitors and townsfolk attended the annual combined entertainment by the two concert parties conducted by Mr. Will Edwards and Mr. Randall Jackson respectively, and a goodly amount resulted to provide toys, books, etc., for crippled children in the various local charitable institutions. The collections and donations amounted to £46.

The staff of the Palace, Lincoln, had their annual outing on Sunday, thanks to the generosity of Mr. Frank Macnaghten, and a very jolly day was spent at Cleethorpes. Ample provision was made for the entertainment of the visitors, and at the close a warm vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Macnaghten. Mr. Eric Longden, the new manager, was assiduous in helping on the enjoyment of the party.

Mr. Jack Macdermott, the popular manager for Messrs. Adeler and Sutton at the Pier Pavilion, Rhyl, was accorded a benefit on Thursday, the 4th inst., when his many friends rallied round him in great numbers. Several presentations and speeches were made during the evening, and a capital programme was contributed to by Messrs. Edwin Adeler, W. G. Sutton, Charley Harvey, Kennedy Allen, Clifford Morgan, Frank Hook, G. B. Bartlett, Cecil Warwick, Jas. A. Lawe, and Misses René Steadman, Kitty Allen, Annie Coxen, and Aline Sudbury.

There was a motion in the Chancery Division on Thursday on behalf of the managers of the Cottage Hospital at Clacton, to restrain the proprietors of the Palace in that seaside resort from carrying on their entertainments in such a way as to be a nuisance to the inmates of the hospital. The plaintiffs complained principally of the noise occasioned at the confetti fêtes. Mr. C. J. Mathew, on behalf of the defendants, said the directors of the Palace had arranged that the entertainments should cease after the 21st of September when the season would practically close, but he could not give any undertaking on the part of his clients. His lordship said he would not grant an injunction. He would direct that there should be a speedy trial of the action. In the event of the entertainments being continued after the 21st of the month, the plaintiffs should have liberty to renew their application.

Zona Joy's musical, terpsichorial, polyglot, mélange "school" will start its second tour on Oct. 7, visiting Liverpool, Manchester, Glasgow, and principal towns only. The company travels ten, all of whom will be seen in pantomime this coming season.

The funeral took place at the Burnley Cemetery on Monday of the late Mr. Nathan Greenwood, who was for seventeen years the caretaker of the Victoria and Empire Theatres, Burnley, and who died somewhat suddenly on Wednesday, the 4th inst. The deceased was a man well known in the profession and highly respected. Mr. Horner, the lessee and manager of the above theatres, greatly deplores the loss of a faithful servant—one in whom he could put implicit trust. He was 49 years of age. Besides the immediate relatives who attended, there were Mr. W. C. Horner, Messrs. T. Nuttall, and T. Thornton. Six of the theatre staff acted as bearers. Amongst the many and beautiful floral tributes received was one from the deceased's fellow-workpeople.

On her recent tour through the provinces La Milo has triumphantly vanquished narrow-minded objectors, and at her first appearance at the Alhambra on Monday she will realise in a novel series of poses some of the most beautiful and world-renowned works of art, and will conclude her performance each evening with her impersonation of Lady Godiva.

Mr. Harry Lowther, author of the successful sketch, Barmaids, writes: "Some time ago a theatrical parody entitled 'Laddie' appeared in a Manchester paper. I have heard it sung at dinners and suppers; I have heard it recited at a music hall; I have had it whispered in my ear by a friend, who, with a 'don't-praise-me-old-man-I-hate-it' sort of air, informed me that it was a little thing that he'd just dashed off. It may be interesting to some of your readers (the dashed-off gentleman in particular) to know that the wee parody was written by me." The fact may be interesting to a few of our readers; but we "hae oor doots."

Mr. Will Oliver ("Wee Wullie"), who looks a braw laddie in kilts, and has taken the title of the Laird of Brixton, has returned from the Land o' Cakes to his beautiful Lowland castle, Spot Lodge.

The Music Hall Ladies' Guild regrets the omission of the names of Miss Diana Hope and Mrs. Monte Bayly from the list of guests at their opening, and desires to thank Rev. W. Cree, Rev. Stephen Barrass, Rev. Donald Hole, Mr. Frank Gerald, Mr. Ernest De Vere, and other ladies and gentlemen for their kind letters of regret.

The Guild returns thanks to Miss Millie Payne and Mlle. Haydee for gifts of clothing, and announces its first general meeting for Wednesday, Oct. 9, at the Canterbury. Miss Lily Burnand will take the chair.

The dinner to be given to Mr. Frank Gerald at the Criterion Restaurant to-morrow evening will be attended by representatives of the variety, musical, and theatrical professions and a number of representatives of Labour, including several Members of Parliament. Mr. Cecil Raleigh will preside, and Mr. George Gray is to be the vice-chairman. Some interesting speeches are expected from those who will propose and support the toasts. Many well-known artists will contribute to a concert that will follow. Application for tickets (5s. each) should be made to-day at 29, Wellington-street, or such tickets as are available may be obtained at the Criterion (Jermyn-street entrance) on the evening. The dinner is timed for 7 o'clock, or 7.30.

Quite unknowingly Mr. Joe Elvin was on Monday the cause of much dissatisfaction at the Duchess, Balham, where he is playing The King o' the Castle as the last turn on the programme. Owing to his other engagements he was quite unable to reach Balham at the time fixed for his turn. The orchestra gave a selection, and after a somewhat lengthy wait a notice appeared on the cinematograph sheet to the effect that he would not appear. Then came more pictures. The audience, of course, were not satisfied; but after a mild protest they quietly dispersed. Just, however, as the house had almost emptied itself the motor-car of the great comedian was espied coming down the road. Immediately there was a perfect stampede back again to the hall. After a wait of a few minutes Joe's number was signalled amidst terrific cheering; and people toppled over each other in their anxiety to get a seat. Such enthusiasm is rare, and is only to be gained by London's greatest favourites, who always do their utmost to keep faith with their beloved public.

"Pharaoh's Daughter," a sketch which was copyrighted last week, is to be produced at the Camberwell Empire on Monday by Miss Ethel Ra-Leslie, who appears in the title-rôle. The lyrics and music are by Joseph Tabrar. Mr. Wensley Russell as Prince Rameses, Mr. Frank Lester as Ptolemy, Mr. R. Stockwell as a "Slave," Miss Ruby Davis as a Grecian dancing girl, and Miss Elsie Melbourne as Hataska are in the cast.

Hengler's Cirque has been so rapidly transformed under the direction of Mr. Hancock that it will reopen on Saturday, Oct. 5. Beketow's famous Russian Imperial Circus Company from Buda-Pest will be the attraction. In this elaborate show are over a hundred highly-trained horses, ponies, zebras, dogs, bears, elephants, and two hundred artists presenting every conceivable kind of skilled gymnastic exhibit. A large contingent of drolls will make things merry.

Miss Betty Ohls, a bright American soubrette, will make her first appearance on the London stage at the Empire on Monday, and will give a short répertoire of songs in French and English after the style of Yvette Guilbert.

The Empire Theatre is at present showing a series of pictures of the Morocco crisis, with all the stirring incidents at Casa Blanca. These pictures have been specially procured by an operator on the scene of action with the war correspondents. The camera pitched in the trenches distinctly shows every movement of the guns when firing. These pictures met with a hearty reception on their first appearance on the screen on Friday, the 6th inst.

The élite of the profession visiting Brighton, with no exceptions to speak of, make a point of sojourning at the now well-known "home from home" facing the Bodega in Ship-street, presided over by Mrs. George Le Brunn, and the kindly hostess's visitors' book will one day be worth a goodly sum when the autograph hunters get wind of it. It would seem from a perusal of its pages that as though every artist of prominence in the theatrical and variety world had stayed there and vied with each other with brilliant epigram, smart bon mot, and straightforward testimony in expressing their appreciation of comfort enjoyed whilst under the lady's hospitable roof.

The following (taken haphazard from its pages) over the autograph of a well-known littérateur, is a fair specimen of the encomiums in which the book abounds:—

If thou would'st live to eighty-six
To Brighton hie thee strait,
And stay atte Shippe-street's ship-shape house,
Ye number's sixty-eight—
To beat its comforts there are none;
'Tis kept by Mistress George Le Brunn.

Mr. Fowler Thatcher, who has played in the production of new sketches each week for several weeks, had even a swifter experience last week. On Saturday at one o'clock he received the part of Henry Drinkwater in Tom Conover's sketch, The Drink Cure, and at the Britannia matinée on Monday at 2 o'clock, exactly 49 hours afterwards, he played it with most gratifying success. On Monday he received a wire at his house at Hammersmith at 11.30 a.m. He packed, caught the 1.30 at King's Cross, arrived at 5.15 in Leeds, where Mr. McKenzie met him at the station with the part he had to play. On the same evening at 7.30 (with one run through in the dressing-room) he opened at the Leeds Varieties in The Belle of Barcelona. Certainly he had played the part for a few weeks over a year ago, but the piece had been considerably altered.

Now we have the Twin Sisters Clifton in a hilarious novelty, How Papa Found His Twins, which is meeting with much success at the Empress, Brixton, this week. The Twin Sisters are supported by Mr. Arthur St. George, the author. The sketch is being much sought after.

Mr. J. W. T. Bennett has applied for a licence for stage plays, music, and dancing for a building to be known as Dream City, to be built in Battersea Park-road, on the site of the old waterworks, an extensive site, with a fine river frontage. We are given to understand that the Dream City is to follow on the lines of the White City, Salford. We wonder if it is to be a revival of the glories of North Woolwich Gardens in the days of William Holland.

Mr. Charles Beecham's complimentary benefit is to take place on the evening of Thursday, the 26th inst., when among the entertainers will be Joe Elvin (in a special sketch), Harry Tate, Little Tich, Will Evans, Victoria Monks, Alec Hurley, and Marie Lloyd. A fancy dress ball will follow the entertainment, and a magisterial permit will allow the numerous friends of the beneficiaire to hold high revel until 4 a.m.

Mr. Willie Freear, another member of the famous family that has given us the incomparable comedienne, Louie Freear, has been entertaining the Jersey folk with most gratifying success. Willie takes little jaunts round the world—it's a way he has—and has amused all sorts and conditions of men and women, white and coloured, and if his drollery should ever fail him—a most unlikely contingency—he should make a good lecturer on ethnography. The Jersey folk are delighted with him.

Mr. W. G. Gilmore, solicitor, of The Grange, Stockport, the managing-director of The Empire, Stockport, was married at the church of the Holy Fame, Manchester, on Wednesday, to Miss Clara M. Matthews, niece of Mr. and Mrs. Bronnell, of Upper Brook-street, Manchester. After the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Bronnell, and in the afternoon the bride and bridegroom left for Killarney.

Messrs. John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate are now busily engaged on yet another sketch, this time of a dramatic nature, dealing with an incident connected with life in Oregon, a State in the western part of North America, which sketch is entitled Linus. This important work, which has been specially commissioned by Mr. Louis Jensen, proprietor and manager of Miss Ella's famous lion show, is being written round a noble horse of the same name, remarkable for the possession of quite extraordinary equine beauty, and has the distinction of having a double mane, both mane and tail being far longer than those possessed by the rest of his race. This famous animal, which was purchased for no less a sum than 10,000 dollars, has been exhibited at the World's Fair.

As is by this time, no doubt, well known, the Blackpool Tower Company have sustained a serious loss in the death from a disease, the nature of which has not yet been ascertained, of a number of their valuable lions and tigers. Mr. James Walmsley, the manager of the department, has written to Mr. E. H. Bostock, the well-known showman, explaining the symptoms, and inquiring if he could throw any light on the affair. Mr. Bostock has replied that he could not. He has lost animals in a similar way himself, and although he has had post-mortem examinations on the bodies he has been unable to receive any satisfactory enlightenment on the nature of the disease.

Phillips and Terry successfully produced a comedy duologue, entitled Jack's Wife, at Barnard's, Chatham, on Monday. It is written by Geo. Hagar Robinson, who is now playing the part of Hunkerdunkus Jones in Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch at the Adelphi Theatre.

Mr. Edmond Bosanquet has been unfortunate enough to lose the last of his gold medals. He discovered his loss on Saturday night at Liverpool. It was presented to him at a farewell dinner given at the Palace Hotel, Edinburgh, on his leaving there to take up the position of musical director at the Empire, Liverpool. It is only two years since Mr. Bosanquet's fiddle-case was broken open at the Crystal Palace and three medals stolen.

Whimsical Walker will shortly sail for America equipped with a couple of sketches from the pen of Brien McCullough. On Aug. 30, at the Britannia Theatre, the Whimsical One presented Brien with a scarf pin, set with diamonds, emeralds, and sapphires as a further acknowledgment of his appreciation of the work done for him.

Last Sunday was a red-letter day in the East End of London, when Messrs. Macnaghten, Barrasford, and Baugh put their heads (and purses) together, to give one day's exquisite happiness to about 500 children—waifs of the Hoxton slums. The children were taken in brakes to Hackney Marshes, where the proprietor of The White Hart gave the little ones a hearty welcome and permitted them to rollick about on the wide-spreading marshes. A substantial dinner was provided before play began, and after amusements were exhausted the youngsters came back, as hungry as ever, to a fine tea in a handsome marquee erected for the occasion by the proprietors.

The main expense of the day was borne by the gentlemen mentioned, who must have been amply rewarded by the whole-hearted enjoyment of the children. The entire staff of the Britannia, Hoxton, gave generous assistance, and worked with a will to make the day the success it turned out. This is a continuation of a charity organised by the proprietors of the Britannia, who, during the winter months, supplied no fewer than 14,782 free dinners to the very poorest of the waifs and strays of that overcrowded district.

It is nearly two years since The Cruise of H.M.S. Victory, under the command of Mr. Arthur Watson, was successfully launched at the Camberwell Empire, and it speaks volumes for the vitality of the good ship that it returns to its old moorings this week. The Victory has had a fine tour of the provinces within the last few months, and has greatly benefited in every respect. Mr. Watson, Miss Flo Stanley, and their talented company are to be congratulated.

The New Hippodrome at Warrington, the latest of the Macnaghten houses, is rapidly approaching completion, and the opening night is fixed for the 23rd inst. We stated last week that the management would be in the hands of Mr. Harrison, of the Palace Theatre, Halifax, but a re-arrangement has been effected, and the onerous duties will be discharged by Mr. Sydney Arthur, who will be remembered by Londoners during the early days of the Macnaghten proprietorship of the Bow Palace.

The staff of the Surrey Theatre went to the Crown Hotel, Broxbourne, on Sunday, the party arriving at 11 a.m. The time before dinner was spent in various sports—football, cricket, and boating, and inspecting the beautiful gardens. The host provided an excellent dinner, to which everyone did ample justice. Mr. Frederic Baugh took the chair and Mr. Chas. R. Craig the vice-chair, and they were supported by several special friends. After the usual loyal toasts, Mr. Baugh proposed the health of Mr. Frank Macnaghten. To the toast of Mr. Fred. Baugh, Mr. Chas. R. Craig did complete justice, and Mr. Baugh expressed his pleasure at being present. After a very pleasant drive round the country tea was provided, and the party arrived at Liverpool Street Station highly pleased and satisfied with their day's enjoyment.

Miss Elsie Kerry, that chic and versatile comedienne, leaves to-morrow the scene of her most recent success at the Empress, Brighton, for a brief sojourn in her native land, making her first bow in the capital of Ulster. She opens on Monday next at the Hippodrome, Belfast. Thence she will proceed to her native city of Dublin, where, at the Tivoli, she will not fail to be accorded a caed mile failte. Miss Kerry's répertoire has some catchy Irish and coon melodies, the interpretation of which has made her so popular.

The latest quotations for music-hall shares are are follows:—Alhambra, 1⅞; Canterbury, ½; Empire (15s. pd.), 1⅝; Do. (10s. pd.), 1; Lon. Pav. Ord., 4⅜, Do. Pref., 4⅜; Lon. Coliseum, ⅞; Metropolitan, ⅜; Moss Empire, 4⅜; Do. 5 p.c. Pref., 3⅞; Oxford, 5⅜; Palace, 14s.; Tivoli, 5⅜; Var. Cons. Theas., 14s. 6d.

It is probable that the new Empire ballet, now in active rehearsal, will be produced at the end of the present month. It bears the tentative title of Covent Garden. The scene will be near the famous theatre on the night of a ball, when the masqueraders are just leaving. They will be attired as the leading characters in different well-known comic operas; and Miss Adelina Genée will appear in a series of quick-change representations reminiscent of the chief incidents in each work, each character being introduced with suitable music selected from the play. She will also introduce a coster dance. The scenario is by M. Wilhelm, and the work is to be produced by Mr. Fred Farren.

An interesting wedding took place on Thursday at St. John's Church, Blackpool, between Mr. Geo. Bernard, the well-known vocal actor, and Miss Florence Astin. The ceremony was conducted by the Vicar of Blackpool. The happy couple were the recipients of many handsome presents and congratulations, and left for the North of Scotland during the afternoon.

The Hippodrome, Gillingham (Kent), which has been closed for the past six months, is announced to re-open on Sept. 23 by the Southern Amusements Co., Secretary Mr. W. Pocock. The management has been placed in the able hands of Mr. W. J. Mackay (of sketch fame), who has made himself so popular.

Mr. E. C. Clayton, of Western Bank, Sheffield, well known locally as an expert bioscope operator, has just finished another twelve months' engagement with Mr. T. Allan Edwardes, at the Palace, Attercliffe, this making a lengthy run of over two and a half years without a break. His weekly item in the programme at this popular house is a special feature, and always meets with hearty recognition, as the selection of pictures presented are to the popular taste and up-to-date.

Mr. Julian Clifford's two benefit concerts at Harrogate were a great success both from a financial and an artistic point of view. The programmes in both shows were long and varied. At the evening show Mr. Clifford was presented with a handsome silver cigar-case, suitably inscribed, by the members of the municipal orchestra, and a cigarette case from the Kursaal staff; while "a few admirers" presented a very handsome ivory bâton, heavily mounted with gold. Mr. Julian Clifford suitably replied.

At the Ealing Hippodrome on Friday, the 6th inst., Miss Dorothy Wadmore, who for some years has been one of Mr. E. W. James' assistants, both at Ealing and at Balham, took leave of her comrades of the staff, and at the same time made her début upon the variety stage. Mr. Sam Lyons, who now represents the "Bonnie Goodwin" interest, has already two sisters of the young artist under his direction, and forms a high opinion of her "possibilities." She is possessed of an excellent voice and has an altogether chic personality. She was the recipient of two beautiful bouquets, and subsequently—in the saloon of the theatre—Mr. E. W. James presented her, on behalf of the staff and some friends, with a gold watch, wishing her at the same time all possible good luck.

Mr. Matthew Brodie, on Monday, will revisit the Palace, Camberwell, the scene of his first triumph with The Drummer of the 76th. Mr. Brodie will continue to play Napoleon until the end of next year, when he enters into a long engagement with Mr. Oswald Stoll, for the Empires, Ltd., to play David Garrick, the Actor.

We regret to hear that Mr. George Robey, who was performing at Nottingham Empire last week, was badly bitten in the thigh by a dog on Friday. He was surgically treated, and it is satisfactory to learn that no untoward complications are feared. Mr. Robey is at Leicester this week.

Mr. F. A. S. Stern, on behalf of Mr. Joseph Davis, applied on Friday, the 6th inst., for a music and dancing licence for the East Ham Palace of Varieties, High-street North. The place, he said, had been erected last year at the cost of thousands of pounds, and a dramatic licence had been granted to the place. Under this licence intoxicants could not be sold on the premises, and it was not desired to sell them. The house would hold 1,800 people, and there were twelve exits, through which, if the house were full, it could be emptied in three minutes. The house had two performances a night, and statistics for the last nine months showed that over 485,000 had patronised the performances. The committee adjourned the application.

Mr. Harry Fragson, after an absence of more than two years, once more appeared before the Paris public last week at the Scala Theatre, which had doubled its prices on the strength of the event. That the management were justified in this action was proved by the circumstance that every seat was booked despite the increased price. Mr. Fragson sang five songs, and the reception accorded him was extremely gratifying. Among the audience was M. Henri Rochefort.

"During the recent music-hall strike," says the Daily Telegraph, "it was urged that one of its results would be to bring to the front a large quantity of unknown and unexploited talent. There seems to be a general idea that somewhere or other lie concealed various men and women prevented by cruel circumstances and the irony of fate from showing the world the cleverness which is in them. From time to time experiments are made with new people, and they very rarely prove successful. We know of no brilliant performer whom the late strike was instrumental in introducing to fame. As a matter of fact, the old stagers still 'top the bill.'"

Mr. Charles Relf, late of the Royal Albert, Canning Town, looking hale and hearty, was an interested spectator last Saturday at the entertainment given by Mr. Harry Gold's Serenaders on Margate Sands.

In the enormous crowds which assemble at the Crystal Palace, money and articles are always being lost, and afterwards restored through the medium of the lost property office. On the occasion of Brock's Benefit, however, on the 5th, an unusually big find was reported. Mr. A. E. Dally, who is employed by the Tonic Sol-fa Association, and resides at 251, East India Dock-road, Poplar, E., went to the Crystal Palace lost property office, and handed in a purse which contained over £30. Most of the money was in gold, and it was well that it came to the hands of so honest a man as Mr. Dally. Strange to say, no application has yet been made to the company now waiting for a claim.

Wednesday is the day of the great Carnival, Confetti Fête and Dance in the North Tower Gardens and North Nave of the Crystal Palace. Wet or fine it will take place, and a rollicking evening is promised. Proceedings will commence at six o'clock, and dancing will be from 8.15 to 10.30. Handsome prizes will be given in the usual ladies', gentlemen's, advertising, comical, and children's classes.

Professor A. Attilla is now the director of the Crystal Palace Schools of Physical Culture in the North Tower Gardens. He is the best-known expert in physical culture, and is a specialist in hygiene and curative physical exercises. All particulars can be obtained from him.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

MISS MARIE LLOYD has just published two new songs with Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter, viz., "And the parrot said——," by Worton David, and "Rum-tiddley-um-tum-tay," by Fred W. Leigh. The music of both is from Orlando Powell's facile pen. The American public have taken so kindly to coster songs, as was evidenced by Miss Alice Lloyd's triumph with "Never introduce your bloke to your lady friend," a song which enshrines one of the late George Le Brunn's finest melodies, that Miss Marie is likely to essay in the States her great success from the same pen, "Folkestone for the day," and Henry E. Pether's rollicking number, "With my little bunch of daisies in my hand."

New dances which have taken first and second prizes at the recent conference of the British Association of Teachers of Dancing are "The Mayfair Cotillon," invented by G. F. Childs, and "The Military Lancers," invented by H. R. Johnson, the music of each being by Clement Harris. Both are published by Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter, who are also issuing "The Casino Two-step," invented by Mme. H. R. Johnson, the music also by Clement Harris, and a new dance, invented by E. Letournel, fils, and with music by Etienne Chapiet, entitled "Entente Cordiale," so it is on the cards that the good feeling between the nations will not only be kept up by "hands across the sea," but by myriads of twinkling feet in countless ballrooms.

AMONG new songs about to be issued by Mr. David Day's firm are "When the summer breezes blow" (sung by Arthur Lennard), by Worton David and Sam Mayo; "Loo Brown" (Paul Mill), by Searson and Dix; "Whack-fol-the-diddle-ol-the-di-doh-day" (Fred Earle), by Fred Murray; "When I come back to Barcelona," by Mellor, Lawrence, and Gifford; "Kiss the girl if you're going to" (Miss Marie Kendall), by Barnes and Weston; "At the sign of the Bluebell Inn" (Harry Lauder), by Lindsay and Lauder; "Te-um, te-um, te-ay" (Dan Crawley), by T. W. Connor; "Come in—the water's fine," by Castling and Murphy; and Gus Elen's new song, "The coster's pony," by Bateman and Pether.

ONE of the most catchy march numbers which Messrs. B. Feldman and Co. have issued for some time is entitled, "I've been to Africa," and is now being sung with great success by Miss Hilda Jacobsen. The words and music are by A. E. Sidney Davis and H. E. Darewski, who were jointly responsible for Feldman's last year's winner, "Au revoir, my little hyacinth," which is still being whistled and sung about the streets of provincial towns.

AMONG the Shapiro, Von Tilzer Music Co.'s latest songs are "I'll take her to Jamaica" (Wells and Everard), "Come with me, Dearie" (Bagley, Moore, and Moret), "Sunray" (David and Lyle), "Won't you be my Prairie Flower" (Butts and Rule), and last, but not least, "My gal in Valparaiso" (Murray and Lyle), which Mr. Herbert La Martine has been making a special feature. Performers should not fail to write in for copies, as only a few permissions will be granted.

WE have received copies of two excellent songs, published by Joseph Williams, Limited, 32, Great Portland-street, which will doubtless prove popular during this forthcoming pantomime season, viz.: "The Sweetest Song," by Kit Emby; and "Reminiscences," by Stephen Esipoff. The first-named, in slow waltz time, is published in three keys, and we feel convinced it will be a very great favourite amongst principal girls and boys during the forthcoming season. Besides, it has this advantage, it is a song that can be sung either at a music hall or in the drawing-room.

MISS WINIFRED HARE will introduce a new song next week, entitled "As I gaze in those dear dreamy eyes," which has also been featured for some time with great success by Clark and Hamilton. The publishers are Shapiro, Von Tilzer Music Co., Ltd.

MISS LILIAN LEA has just accepted for early production a new song entitled "Way down the old canal." This is yet another number from the prolific pen of that well-known trio, Messrs. Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford, and is published by the Shapiro, Von Tilzer Co.

ALTHOUGH professional copies of the charming song, "Bayou," written and composed by Harry Marlow, and published by the Monte Carlo Publishing Co., have only been issued a week, in addition to being snapped up by scores of prominent principal boys and girls for pantomime use, the song is already being nightly featured by Miss José Collins, who opens with it shortly at the Tivoli and Oxford (in addition to Harrington and Tate's piquant number, "My Cuban girl," published by the same firm), whilst Miss Kathleen Gray will also sing it when she opens at the Metropolitan in a week or two's time. With such clever exponents "Bayou" should speedily be launched into the popularity it deserves.

MR. ERNEST HOGAN, one of the most famous coloured artists in America, will specially feature two of the Monte Carlo Publishing Co.'s songs, to wit: "The coon's conscience," by Barnes and Weston, and "Bayou," by Harry Marlow, during his extensive tour with Klaw and Erlanger's "Vesta Victoria All-Star Company." Miss Victoria herself is specially taking these two songs over for Mr. Hogan, and Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter will issue them in America, by special arrangement with the Berners-street firm.

ADVICES from America just to hand record the phenomenal success achieved by Miss Claire Romaine on her opening night in the land of Uncle Sam. This talented artist is equipped with three of Messrs. John P. Harrington and James W. Tate's most sparkling and characteristic numbers, viz.: "That's what little Willie wants to know," "Hurry up, Walter!" and a great new coster song, entitled "He's jest the bloke for me," which latter promises to eclipse in popularity the sensational American success, also from Mr. Harrington's prolific pen, "Never introduce your bloke," in the States.

MR. R. G. KNOWLES, on his return to the land of his birth, will specially produce two of Messrs. John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate's songs, and sing them throughout the length and breadth of America. These two numbers, which are written in a characteristically Knowlesian style, are respectively entitled, "The diner, the dinner, and the doctor" and "Girls, be on your dignity," and give the talented American comedian illimitable scope for the display of that trenchant humour which is so peculiarly his own.

MAURICE SCOTT AND ALF. E. RICK'S tuneful chorus ditty, "Swing me higher, Obadiah," is rapidly climbing the ladder of popularity, and will undoubtedly be one of the favourite pantomime numbers this season. The Star Music Company expect a big rush for this song.

MR. STEWART D. WRIGHT is at present temporarily assisting in the advertising department of a well-known Glasgow firm of advertising contractors to the Scottish Theatres and Music-hall circuits.

PARIS VARIETY GOSSIP.

THE Folies-Bergère opened its doors for the season on Saturday last. The "clou" of the evening's entertainment was a charming ballet-pantomime, Plaisir d'Amour, written by the celebrated journalist and poet, Catulle Mendès. The struggle between Love and Misery over the existence of Pierrot and Columbine is the theme of the scenario. Misery seems to be the winner, for Columbine is untrue to Pierrot, who in his turn is driven to murder. But all comes right in the end (as it should in all well-regulated pieces), and the pair become happy in the Paradise of Love. The chief honours of the evening went to M. Séverin as Pierrot, Mlle. Renée Maya as Columbine, and Mlle. Pomponette.

THE Apollo and its basculo are once more in motion, and the Rue Clichy is looking bright again; for with the Casino de Paris closed it has been wearing a sad expression of late. Certain alterations have been effected since last season, which have added to the seating capacity.

AN excellent show was presented, the company being composed of Miss Ruby Helder, the girl baritone, who caused a little gasp of wonderment when she entered after singing a few bars off the stage; Miss Rosita Schirmay, with several Hungarian dances; Wilys' Circus, in which several clever dogs go through their tricks without their trainer appearing on the stage to direct them; Morton and Elliott, two gentlemen who play and give imitations on mouth-organs, and sing whilst tearing some very ordinary-looking paper into all sorts of fantastical designs; Mlle. Miette, seen some time ago at the Leicester-square Empire, who sings her attractive songs, accompanying herself on the guitar; Tiller's Apollo Girls, who sing of the troubles of Bill Simmons, with an unconquerable desire to dance whenever he heard a band; the Three Tauberts, in a musical act; Morris Cronin and his company of jugglers, old favourites with Parisian audiences; and Hymack. Hymack certainly caused the good Parisians to stare by his quick changes and his multiplication of suits, sticks, and gloves.

THE Olympia is expected to open about the beginning of next week with the revival of The Belle of New York.

THE Alhambra was re-opened by Mr. Tom Barrasford on the 1st inst. with a very good show. The bill includes the Leslie Brothers, in their funny musical act; the Ethairiens, burlesque magicians; Carl and Mary Ohm, with their wonderful trained animals; Keen and Waller, with an amusing acrobatic act; Newell and Niblo, American instrumentalists; the Onlaw Trio; Rastus and Banks; the Richards' Trio; Dora Martini; Dan Robins; and M. Selbo.

THE popular White Coons at Weston-super-Mare are under the proprietorship of Mr. Jesse Temple, and not under the management of Mr. Walter Judge, who is in no way connected with the combination.

AT the Alhambra on Saturday evening stirring and exciting pictures of the recent fighting at Casa Blanca were displayed from the biograph, and met with a most cordial reception.

LONDON MUSIC PUBLISHERS AND MR. STANLEY E. MULLEN.

At a meeting of London publishers of popular music at the Holborn Restaurant on Thursday, Sept. 12, 1907, a very cordial vote of thanks was unanimously accorded to Mr. Stanley Mullen, of the firm of Stanley E. Mullen and Co., of Melbourne, Victoria, on the eve of his return to that ever-flourishing Commonwealth, for his good services in extending the popularisation of their publications in the Antipodes. Mr. DAVID DAY (Francis, Day, and Hunter), in proposing the vote, said that there was a long-standing friendship of many years between Mr. Mullen and himself, that their business relations together were always exceedingly satisfactory, and that their close companionship as president and secretary of the Musical Copyright Association for the Suppression of Music Piracy was one of the greatest pleasures in the life of the speaker, as it gave him every opportunity of discovering Mr. Mullen's very excellent qualities. In continuation, he said that when in the autumn of 1904 Mr. Mullen, whose health had unfortunately given way, was ordered by his medical adviser to seek restoration in Australia, it gave him great pleasure, on behalf of his firm, to give his friend a commission as traveller, and thereby very pleasing results soon followed. At this time, to combat music piracies, it had been found necessary to appeal to the public by issuing Sixpenny Popular Editions of successful musical publications, and pioneers were wanted throughout the world to properly exploit them, ordinary music dealers looking at them somewhat askance, and perhaps naturally so, their shelves being stocked with high-priced editions.

Mr. Mullen readily proved himself the Australasian pioneer, and his firm are now disseminating these popular editions broadcast down under, to the entire satisfaction of the London publishers.

He (Mr. Day) was more pleased than he could possibly express in words to know that Australia had done so much for his friend's health, and tendered him his sincerest congratulations, together with every possible good wish for the prosperity of the firm of Stanley E. Mullen and Co.

In conclusion, on behalf of the London publishers, he would ask Mr. Mullen's acceptance of a tiny emblem of their appreciation of his good services as the Australasian pioneer of "Sixpenny Pops."

Mr. B. FELDMAN (of the firm of B. Feldman and Co.), in seconding the vote, said that he found a certain difficulty, as he had to follow the very able speech of their mutual friend, Mr. David Day, with which he was sure everyone present was in entire accord. Speaking for himself, and also on behalf of his partners, he thought that "deeds speak louder than words," and Mr. Mullen would appreciate that, as a full agreement had been entered into between the two firms. Mr. Feldman then remarked that all present who had had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Mullen on business matters must have been struck by the clear grasp he seemed to have on all points, and he hoped that he would soon have the pleasure of meeting their guest again under equally pleasant circumstances, as it was always delightful to meet old friends, and he, for one, was proud to refer to himself as such. The popular edition had arrived in Australia to stay, and, as Mr. Day had said, Mr. Mullen was to be heartily thanked for his good services in that direction. In conclusion, Mr. Feldman, on behalf of himself and his firm, in which he was sure all present, as well as all absent friends, would heartily join, wished Mr. Stanley Mullen the best of health, and, in fact, "the best he could wish himself," and also made a graceful allusion to Mrs. Mullen and the firm of Stanley Mullen and Co.

Mr. FELIX MCGLENNON, of McGlennon's Publishing House, said he was pleased to be present to mark his appreciation of Mr. Stanley Mullen as a brother Irishman. Ireland was a wonderful country, and her products were no less wonderful—pigs, potatoes, porter, potheen and peelers, priests, parsons, politicians, poets, and—pioneers. It was in the latter category that he hailed Mr. Mullen. The Irish part of him, Mullen, guaranteed the Hibernian enthusiasm that enabled great ideas to be conceived; the English end of him, Stanley, gave him the splendid tenacity that will hold on to a successful finish. He knew Mr. Mullen as a mighty pirate hunter prior to his departure for Australia, but it was quite by accident that he met him at Francis, Day, and Hunter's recently on his visit home. He casually mentioned that he had a catalogue of Irish national songs that he though there was a public for in Australia, but another firm had been for some years considering the matter. He asked Mr. Mullen if all Australian publishers thought in centuries. A contract was fixed up there and then, and the firm of Stanley Mullen and Co. will earn the appreciation of Irishmen and Irishwomen who love their country, its music, and its literature, by placing on the Australian market a very fine catalogue of Irish national music, ancient and modern. Mr. McGlennon went on to observe that he had in contemplation the publication of an Album of Irish Songs, the words by the veteran Irish poet T. D. Sullivan, the music by himself. "Do you know Sullivan?" says I to Mullen. "Do I know Sullivan?" says Mullen. "Feel that hole in my head." "I explored," said Mr. McGlennon, and, sure enough, there was a small valley in the Mullen cranium. "Do I know Sullivan?" he repeated, "Sure, I was at a political meeting in Dublin some years ago, and D. T. was the speaker. I was cheering his remarks enthusiastically," says he, "when I got a crack from a blackthorn from someone of a different way of thinking. Yes, indeed," says he, "I do know T. D. Sullivan," and the firm of Stanley Mullen and Co. will have great pleasure in exploiting Sullivan songs in Australasia.

Mr. JOHN P. HARRINGTON, representing the Monte Carlo Publishing Co., said: As one of the oldest song-writers and youngest publishers in England it gave him the liveliest pleasure to thoroughly endorse the many encomiums which the previous speakers had passed upon Mr. Stanley Mullen, none of which were, he considered, more than that gentleman was adequately entitled to. So energetic and far-seeing a gentleman as Mr. Mullen was likely to be a great power for good to English song-writers in the near future, by materially extending the vogue of the compositions they were responsible for and making the names of many of them "household words" in the daughter country as they were here. And, speaking personally, Mr. Harrington said, I have nothing but warm thanks to extend to Mr. Mullen and the firm of Stanley Mullen and Co. for the way in which they had taken up and exploited in Australasia two songs of my own. And, in conclusion, I can conscientiously say that I am voicing the sentiments of the other members of my firm in wishing Mr. Stanley Mullen "God speed" to Australia, and assuring him that we rest secure in the belief that he will do much to cement the bonds now existing between English publishers of cheap popular music and the Australasian music-buying public.

Mr. BENNETT SCOTT, speaking on behalf of the Star Music Co., Ltd., expressed a wish that Mr. Mullen would make his visits to the Old Country very frequent ones; and, continuing, said, "The previous speakers have somehow chosen nearly all the nice things I intended to say myself, but I would like to give you an idea of the impression Mr. Mullen created on his first visit to our offices. He struck me as being essentially a hustler—a 'live man,' and a typical pioneer, as Mr. Day so aptly puts it.

"If our friend will forgive me, I may say he impressed me as being determined to get his own way, and, in parenthesis, I may add he got it, as far as I was concerned. By his choice of location, Australia gains a valuable worker, and England is the loser. Though our acquaintance has been short, it has been a very pleasant one, and I trust will continue for many years."

Mr. MULLEN declared himself deeply moved at this kindly recognition on the part of the publishers. The design of the emblem he considered a most happy one. He confessed upon first sight of the crossed axes he had thought they were intended to represent battle-axes. He was, however, delighted to see they were much more peaceable implements, viz., the axes of the Pioneers, and emblematic of the work which he had carried out in Australasia. He assured them that the edges of these axes would always be kept keen and bright.

There was no doubt that there had been, as Mr. Day said, a feeling of apprehension on the part of music dealers as to the advisability of introducing the sixpenny popular music into the Australasian Colonies. He, himself, had certainly met with most strenuous opposition from two or three firms; but now he believed everybody over there began to see that their introduction would be of as great benefit to the music trade as the sixpenny popular novel had been to the book trade. This trade expected nothing but ruin when the first batch of sixpenny popular books were issued. Results had proved that their fears were utterly groundless, and music-sellers were beginning to see a parallel blessing in the Sixpenny Pops. He was not going to deny that this improvement in their sight had been effected only by vigorous treatment. He assured the publishers that now he was happily supported by his partner, Mr. Charles Von Myling (a man of untiring energy and indomitable will, and one of the keenest business men he had met in Australasia), he had every confidence that their future efforts would be crowned with great success. To all present, to whom Mr. Day was well known, it was needless for him to enlarge upon the pleasure and gratification he felt at Mr. Day's remarks concerning the personal friendship between Mr. Day and himself. One of the greatest treats which his return to England had afforded him was the joy of again grasping the hands of David Day and his wife—kindliest of ladies. Apart from any personal affection for Mr. Day, he felt sure that no one present lost sight for one moment of the fact that he was the champion of the music trade against piracy, and fought for some time single-handed. Also they must not forget that he it was who conceived the idea (some thirty years ago) of issuing cheap editions, and that it was entirely due to his enterprise that the experiment so successful for all of them had been made, and Mr. David Day had conclusively proved himself the pioneer of Sixpenny Pops.

In conclusion, he begged to tender his most hearty thanks to all taking part in this pleasing vote, and his very best wishes for the prosperity of the popular publishers of good old London.

THE annual picnic connected with the staff of the Theatres Royal and Grand, Bolton, will take place to-morrow, Sunday.

MR. STANLEY E. MULLEN.

MR. HARRY LESTER, the secretary of the Terriers' Association, had an exciting experience on Monday night. As he was coming home over Westminster Bridge about 11.15 p.m., he observed when nearing St. Thomas's Hospital a woman climbing over the parapet with a view to committing suicide. He made a rush, and with the assistance of another passer-by pulled her back. As she commenced to struggle they held her on the ground till a constable came and in the end took her away to the station on the ambulance. She appeared to be about thirty years' old, and was partially intoxicated.

MR. ROBERT FORSYTH, manager of the Victoria Pier, Folkestone, is being congratulated on all sides on the success of his efforts in placing the Pavilion in the forefront of successful entertainment enterprises on the coast. Many of Mr. Forsyth's personal friends hinted at financial loss, but we are glad to hear that in every way the Pier has come out on top. Mr. Forsyth is great at competitions, and his last beauty show for gentleman was commented on by nearly every daily and weekly paper in London. Folkestone obtained a free advertisement that is bound to prove to her advantage.

REV. J. PAGE HOPPS, the well-known Unitarian preacher, has engaged the Euston for eight Sunday evenings, beginning Oct. 27. There will be a preluding house-to-house distribution of invitations, hymns that will be sung at the service, &c.

LONDON HIPPODROME OUTING.

The words of Mr. Hayden Coffin's old song, "Sunshine above and sunshine in their hearts," might be quoted with reference to the state of the weather and the feelings of those who last Sunday journeyed with the Hippodrome staff to Horley, Surrey way. The occasion was the annual outing, and, as ever, Mr. Fred Trussell, the manager, piloted the party to enjoyment and led the way wherever there was a chance of making merry. Mr. Arthur Hicks, his assistant, at a very early stage of the proceedings got to work in his quiet way to make everyone thoroughly happy.

At the early hour of 8.30 the entire party met at Victoria, and the L. B. and S. C. Railway saloons placed at Mr. Trussell's disposal were soon filled with young people intent on enjoying themselves. The journey to Horley was enjoyable but uneventful, and at the station brakes met the train, and the party were taken for a delightful drive through picturesque Bletchingley and so on to Nutfield and back to the "Chequers" at Horley by 1.30.

The dinner, excellently served, was very welcome by this time—pure Surrey air does sharpen the appetite—and then in the greatest good humour Mr. Trussell rose to propose the principal toasts of "The King" on the one hand and "The London Hippodrome Directors and Staff" on the other. He said:

"Ladies and Gentlemen,—For the sixth time it is my privilege to propose this toast at our annual outing. Many changes have taken place since we first met together, more particularly in our directorate and the conditions under which we work with our governing body, but I do not think in the whole of that period we were ever so comfortable in that present as we are at the present moment. Of course I come more in contact personally with my directors than you do, and I am pleased to think that a spirit of mutual confidence—not to say affection—exists which makes my working life a pleasure from day to day, and through me it has, I believe, the same effect upon you. I am sorry that we have to chronicle the loss of one or two good friends during the past year. Firstly, Mr. H. C. Wild, to the regret of every one of us, was unfortunately compelled to resign. These breaks always bring an element of sadness, and in the case of Harry Wild I know that that feeling has been very keen with us all. We are also sorry at having lost our Press Manager, Mr. Harry Garrick, but are glad to know he is doing well and that he has been so ably followed by a gentleman with the charming personality and untiring energy of his successor, Mr. William Bennet. I am sorry we are about to lose Mr. Weaver, the second in command of our box office, but as he is leaving on his own accord to improve his position under Mr. Vedrenne, of the Court Theatre, we can only wish him from the bottom of our hearts a complete success in his new undertaking. I regret the absence of my old friend Frank Parker, who is unavoidably absent to-day. He would have been with us but for the rehearsal of The Avalanche, which compels his attendance at the Hippodrome to-day. All I can say is I hope The Avalanche will be an even greater success than his many productions that have gone before have been, and of which we are all so proud.

"Dealing with my present staff, I turn at once to my immediate colleague, assistant manager, and very good friend Mr. Arthur C. Hicks, than whom I do not think it would be possible for any man in my position to find a more loyal lieutenant or one who throws himself heart and soul into carrying out my wishes in the best interests of the company.

"Mr. Charles Richards, as the head of the box office, has worked with me now, side by side, for twelve hours per day for six years, and considering the length of the period I feel I am justified in saying, and have the right to say, I know Mr. Richards inside out, and in so knowing him I have learned to respect him and appreciate his services more and more as the years have gone by "Mr. Redfern, our treasurer, who is unfortunately unable to be present to-day, sends us a charming telegram of congratulation and kindly wishes, and I am sure you would like me to reply to that, wishing him and his wife and their newly-arrived little baby all they can wish themselves.

"For the actual staff under Mr. David Thompson, staff superintendent, and my young ladies I believe I could scarcely hope to find a better, and I am proud to feel that although I have occasionally to hold the reins of government somewhat tightly, I really rule in the hearts of my people, and that a spirit of mutual affection is a strong link between us. (Loud cheers.)

"In conclusion, I hope you will have a very happy day, and that I may long be spared to hold the honourable position of manager of the London Hippodrome, and to take my position as chairman of this delightful annual gathering." (Loud cheers.)

Mr. Arthur Hicks proposed the health of "The Chairman" (Mr. Trussell), and Mr. Chas. Richards also had something to say about this gentleman.

Speechmaking finished, the entire party indulged in a very fine programme of sports, directed by Mr. Arthur Hicks, the results being: 100 yards flat race handicap: Thompson, 1; Stephan, 2; Thomas, 3. 100 yards high weight scratch race (over 15st.): Thompson, 1; Oliver, 2; Harris, 3. Half mile handicap (all ages): Birch, 1; Stephan, 2; Green, 3. 100 yards three-legged race: Birch and Thomas, 1; Green and Coghlan, 2; Millichap and Thompson, 3. Ladies' egg and spoon race: Sandford, 1; Darvill, 2; Newman, 3. One mile race: Green, 1; Birch, 2; Hamilton, 3. Two miles scratch bicycle race: Rice, 1; Birch, 2; Goodyear, 3.

THE last stage in the demolition of the partly-constructed Eiffel Tower at Wembley was reached on Saturday, when the remaining "leg" was blown up with roburite. To facilitate the demolition, huge cable chains had been attached to the steel-work and then to neighbouring trees. At the base of the tower was placed a large quantity of roburite, and in the afternoon this was exploded by means of an electric battery. There was a loud report, the vibration being felt for miles around, and the tower—200ft. high—crashed to the ground. The felling process was attended with complete success.

THE British Cinema Company, Ltd., are giving at the Balham Empire a matinée performance at three o'clock on Oct. 9 in aid of the Lord Mayor's Cripples' Fund.

SHAUN GLENVILLE has been released from his engagement in the music-halls as far as this year is concerned by Mr. J. F. Elliston, with one week's exception, in order that he may continue his impersonations with the Brothers Luck.

THE Northampton Polytechnic Institute, Clerkenwell, have, in co-operation with the Kinematograph Manufacturers' Association, arranged classes designed "to give operators a knowledge of the theory of optical projection, so far as is useful in their practical work, and opportunity of seeing optical and kinematograph projection under special conditions." A course of lectures on the principles of lantern and kinematograph projection has also been arranged, the fees being 7s. 6d. to members of the Institute and 10s. to non-members.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE PARAGON.

Mr. Frederick Maxwell and his company, including Miss Lois Du Cane, are presenting the dramatic episode, The Girl I Love, in fine style at the above establishment. The story tells how the sister of a Gordon Highlander is killed by her betrayer, who imitates the brother's voice to the blind grandfather, and tells him that his grandson is the murderer. Having heard quarrelling between them previously, the old fellow believes the villain, and the brother is arrested for murder. Having pledged his word to his sister to keep her trouble a secret, he accept the blame, and is transported for life. The second scene is the convict settlement, where a mutiny arises. The villain arrives on the scene, and arranges for the murder of the innocent convict, but meets with disaster himself. Some very thrilling situations include the flogging of a soldier. The character of the Colonel's daughter is admirably played by Miss Du Cane; and Mr. Maxwell as the soldier is superb.

Mr. Billy McClain and company in The Hottest Coon in Dixie provide an excellent number, the three ladies and gentlemen giving some clever dancing and singing; Mr. McCain works his "Preacher" song capitally, and receives a good reception. Mr. Will Evans as "Flora de Dindigul" is extremely funny, his ballet dance with the assistance of six "ballerina" causing shrieks of laughter. Mr. Herbert Lamartine furnishes a delightful turn, his expert dancing and his singing of "I've got a girl in Valparaiso" and "Lindy" obtaining rounds of applause; Messrs. Drew and Alders, with special properties and scenery, are very interesting; the business with the ship set in the drop cloth is original and clever. A number of smart gags and a neat dance are also included in their entertainment. Mr. Dave Carter (the Irish tenor) possesses an exceptionally good voice, and uses it to advantage in "When you know you're not forgotten by the girl you can't forget" and "Terry" for which he is well applauded.

The Tom Bryce duo, assisted by Miss Price, in a musical comedy sketch, A Three-handed Game, are very interesting, some excellent singing and good comedy being indulged in. Mr. Herbert Shelley, in "Charles the First," does some capital acting and singing, which is well appreciated; Yorke and Weston (Phyllis and Albert), in song scena, The Country Maid, combine some smart dancing and singing with droll witticisms. Miss Bertha Stuart (Scotch ballad vocalist) renders delightfully "Marching home again" and "Caller herrin'"; Mr. Carson Hicks executes a novel ragtime dance cleverly, and sings a little coon song, "The old log cabin." Les Fleurs are a couple of capable Anglo-Continental artists who represent Spanish, German, French, and other nationalities in song and dance; and Miss Madge Beresford sings tunefully "It wasn't quite the thing that she required" and "If you don't want lots of gold." Ruffell's Bioscope gives some interesting films, The Smoking Chimney and The Joker being specially attractive. The popular manager, Mr. Chas. Beecham, takes his benefit on Sept. 25, and a big night is anticipated.

HOLLOWAY EMPIRE.

A capital programme is that submitted at this popular home of vaudeville this week. Place of honour is taken by Fred Karno's new production, London Suburbia. The sketch deals in a satirically-humorous way with the peace and happiness that characterises suburban life. The first scene, which shows three villas, displays the everyday life, with its attendant distractions in the shape of butchers, coalmen, greengrocers, street singers, and German bands, to say nothing of the servants. The second scene shows the three back yards with the washing, carpet-beating, and neighbourly bickering, the whole show concluding with a very realistic fire. The company is a very hard-working one, particularly the two male members who play servants. The scenery is very good, and the music is also of value to the production. A large audience greeted the progress of the performance with unbounded laughter, being apparently not altogether unacquainted with many of the little episodes that are so truthfully depicted.

Harry Thurston in a burlesque of the "Silver King" does fairly well. Takio is a very clever Japanese mimic of sounds with an acceptable sense of humour. His imitations are throughout very realistic, the final one of the Japanese canary being especially good; his reception was most cordial. Charles Kilts and Rhoda Windrum in "The Cuckoo" made a distinct hit; the plot turns upon the embarrassments of an officer who conceals an old flame of his in an empty grandfather's clock in order to escape meeting his fiancée who calls at an inopportune moment. Both artists work very hard, and are well assisted by another lady, who is not billed, the curtains being taken at the conclusion of the turn. Miss Lucy Weston in two songs catches the fancy of the house; the first, "She Wasn't Sure," is well sung, and her second, "When You Walk Down the Strand," gains a big reception.

The three Dumonds in a vocal and instrumental act make a good impression, the violinist being a particularly clever soloist. Charles Vincent makes himself a general favourite; a parody on "Sing Me to Sleep" is funny, and is followed by a medley song, rattled off in capital style. The Vernons, Xylophone soloists, prove themselves capable musicians in a couple of selections, and had to concede an encore. The chronomegaphone, showing Harry Lauder, although billed, was not included in the programme. The bioscope is good this week, and Mr. Russell's orchestra, as usual, excellent. Business is most gratifying.

THE PALACE, STOKE NEWINGTON.

The reins of management of The Palace, Stoke Newington, passed on Monday last into the hands of Mr. Jack de Frece, who signalised the event by putting forward an exceedingly strong and attractive programme for the present week. Unfortunately Morcashani (La Belle Creole) was, owing to indisposition, unable to appear, but more than adequate deputies were secured in Alfredo Mardi, the blind Italian violinist, whose skilful and masterly playing finds much favour; and Topsy and Asher, two coloured entertainers whose turn, consisting of song and dance, add not a little to the brightness of the show. Montague Biggs, female impersonator, cleverly assumes the style and manner of a lady, and would score still more heavily were he provided with a better song. A great reception is accorded to the ever-popular Tom Leamore, who contributes two songs in his characteristic and irresistibly comic style, the second, a ballad of the mock-pathetic order, being especially good. Holden's wonderful mannikins take a large share of the evening's success, and as a marionette show would certainly be hard to beat. The figures are manipulated with wonderful skill, and the lifelike performance they go through on the well-appointed little mimic stage forms one of the most attractive and amusing items of the bill. A turn much to the liking of the audience is that provided by Miss Dora Lyric. Miss Lyric sings two songs, "When the lilac blooms in springtime" and "I'll tell Tilly on the telephone," and the choruses of both of these are most enthusiastically and vociferously taken up by the members of the audience, most of whom seem to be already well acquainted with this lady's songs. Cedar and Elgar appear in a cross-talk sketch, In Days of Olde, much of the dialogue of which is funny. Mr. Mark Leslie sings a coon song, and is deservedly applauded for the neat dance with which he concludes his turn. The Alskarno Trio provide some clever tumbling and risley business, and prove themselves expert acrobats. The banjo-playing of the Three Sisters Chester, with accompanying dance, the ballad-singing of Miss Florence Leonard, and the sketch of Edwards and Dacre are other attractive items in the programme, which is completed by the Palace Pictures, the films shown this week being "The Gipsy's Bride" and "The Baffled Burglar." Mr. Dan Rynfelt is now the musical director of the Palace, and the comfort of the audience is still happily looked after by Mr. T. J. Robinson with all his customary courtesy and zeal.

EALING HIPPODROME.

Blithesome, supple, and nimble of toe, Miss Edie King is a bright particular star here this week. In her "Dance of the Nations," whether it be a Dutch clog, a Spanish bolero, or a sprite dance, her delightful footing is an artistic triumph, and, surely, Terpsichore must have presided at her birth. In her songs, "I've travelled in all sorts of places" and "Darby and Joan," she is equally happy, and scores an emphatic success. The romantic history of the Prince and Princess de Broglie is familiar to all and sundry. The Princess has a powerful voice, some of her upper notes being exceptionally clear and melodious. In her rendition of "The sun is fading," "Is this a dream," and "Annie Laurie" she wins much sympathy. The Prince occupies the conductor's chair during the turn. The Three Laurels in their "original speciality on the ping-pong table" show some remarkably expert work, their "hand-jumping" being a notable feature, while the fooling of the "fool" of the trio is exquisitely funny. Lennie and Hast, who have been welcomed at Ealing before, repeat their poetic fantasy, The Sea Nymph. Mlle. Roza's Hippodrome of Canines is a finely staged dog act, and the scene glitters with polished metal and electric lamps, her apparatus making a brave show indeed. As the clever doggies mount staircases, gallop over hurdles, and race upon revolving tables a most brilliant effect is produced. Mr. Herbert Rule is, as he is named, a quaint comedian, and he makes for laughter the instant he appears upon the stage. He has two humorous numbers, "John was a triumph of work" and "There is no use in letting you know I am married." Bliss and Bliss, who are funny in their cross-talk, have besides a capital number, "When we are engaged at this hall." Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope is again in evidence, and furnishes some excellent films, Lost in the Alps, wherein the St. Bernard dogs show some life-saving methods, while the vagaries of the Floor Polisher cause roars of merriment. Mr. E. W. James, assisted by Mr. H. Blight, continues to direct the fortunes of the Hippodrome.

DUCHESS, BALHAM.

Crowded houses are twice nightly testifying their appreciation of the fare provided here this week, and on the occasion of our visit standing room only was the order throughout. Joe Elvin, who is at the top of the bill, is undoubtedly the great attraction; supported by a capital company, he is this week presenting his new sketch, The King of the Castle, which can certainly rank with his many other successes; as the King of the Castle, a man without any "go" in him, Mr. Elvin is screamingly funny, and fairly convulses the house with his whimsical performance. A prominent place in this week's entertainment is taken by the bioscope, which is showing a series of pictures of the greatest interest; a humorous series is that entitled "Late for Lunch," which is followed by one depicting His Majesty the King on board the "Dreadnought." From the reception of the King and other Royal personages on board, the pictures pass to the representation of the big gun practice, showing the target with the number of hits, and wind up by depicting His Majesty congratulating Admiral Sir John Fisher upon the result attained.

Harry Tate's No. 1 Company are again presenting the irresistibly funny episode Motoring, which is going as well as ever; revised and kept thoroughly up-to-date, it causes the utmost amusement, the various "passers by," not forgetting the small boy with the mouth-organ, all contributing their quota towards the result achieved. Sid Bandon, a character comedian, sings a very amusing number entitled, "I gave it to Auntie Jane," the reception extended to which is so cordial that the comedian might well oblige again. A number that is not on the programme, but which is excellently received, is that supplied by Miss Lily Eyton, a dainty comedienne; the possessor of a sweet and tuneful voice, she sings a Dutch song in a very taking manner, and on concluding has many times to bow her acknowledgments. Little Cliff, the boy artist, has a very amusing number about "How He Sat on the Tack," followed by a Hebrew serenade entitled, "Something for Nothing," which has a very flattering reception; the clever juvenile brings his turn to a conclusion with some neat and clever dancing, which gains deafening applause.

Lilian Elfreda is supplying clever imitations of several of our leading music hall artists, prominent amongst others being Marie Lloyd, Kate Carney, Harry Lauder, and George Bastow. Professor Duncan's collies show almost human sagacity in their intelligence, and earn for their master much applause. Nat Watkins, a grotesque comedian, has a couple of very amusing numbers, which are both well received, and his quaint manner is certainly a great factor in their scoring ability. The orchestra, under the baton of Mr. Kennedy Russell, are well together in their overture "William Tell," and add considerably to the evening's enjoyment by their careful attention to the various wants of the artists. Mr. L. Westcott Hicks, and his assistant, Mr. Arthur Vernall, deserve praise for the way they cope with the huge business they are doing and the perfect order they maintain.

THE QUEEN'S, POPLAR.

A most enjoyable evening may always be spent at this comfortable hall, where the current programme is interesting and well varied. A capital hit is made by Mr. R. Lomas, who is natural as Jacko, the man monkey, his aerial feats on a perpendicular rope and perch being extremely clever; Mr. Tom Woottwell, evidently a great favourite here, is enthusiastically received for his "Blow'd if I didn't wake up" and "Oh! dear"; while the Five Bombays are successful with their various harmonious items, including "As I sat by the old churchyard" and "I ain't agoin' to book you any more." Applause greets the efforts of Messrs. Milsted and Bell for their smart musical comedy scena, The Belle of Arizona, which is picturesquely dressed; and a popular turn is provided by Mr. Will English, who sings "Daisy" admirably, while his smart patter and eccentric dancing cause roars of laughter. The Bob Hanlon troupe contribute a series of sensational gymnastic acts on the high bars with spirit and ability; and Miss Bessie Benson is warmly received for her singing.

A pantomime sketch, embracing both humorous and dramatic business, entitled The Bank Clerks, is well played by Messrs. Charles Baldwin and company, who do not spare themselves in their efforts to amuse; and a fine reception is accorded the strongly-written episode, A Son of the People, in which a finished portrayal of Ivan Briloff is presented by Mr. J. G. Grahame, jun.; and Miss Zerlina Harrington displays talent of a high order in her impersonation of the Countess Olga Karovitch; while Mr. George Wallace is a suitable Pitonet. The piece was capitally staged, reflecting credit on all concerned. The pictures on the Bioscope are always a source of gratification; and Mr. Fred Venton has the orchestra in fine form, their playing of the march, "Whitehall" (Kottaun) and "Whistling Polka" (E. Solomons) being extremely good. The energetic general-manager, Mr. Jack Woolf, and the assistant acting-manager, Mr. Morris Abrahams, do everything that is possible for the comfort of their clientèle.

"BEACON BELL."

A Dramatic Sketch, by Wal Pink, produced at The Shepherd's Bush Empire, on Monday, Sept. 9.

Tom Eldon ..... Mr. Dick Cruickshank
Alice ..... Miss Florence Creagh
Squire Haydown ..... Mr. Arthur Stratton
Ex-Sergeant Roberts ..... Mr. A. E. Mayne
Pesla ..... Mr. Frederick Loyd
Randski ..... Mr. Wm. P. Sheen

The busy pen of Mr. Wal Pink, so often employed in the cause of merriment in providing the popular Cockney comedian, Mr. Joe Elvin, with comic sketches, is this time responsible for a dramatic playlet, and his latest production, Beacon Bell, reveals the experienced hand throughout, being full of telling lines and sensational incidents, and exactly suited to a variety audience, judging from its gratifying reception at the Shepherd's Bush Empire on the night we witnessed it. The action, which takes place near Penzance, opens in the smithy of Tom Eldon, whose wife Alice is mourning his supposed death in the war. An unwelcome suitor appears in the person of a foreign spy, but his offer of marriage is indignantly declined by Mrs. Eldon. A kindly commissionaire also pays the widow a visit, but as she has been led to suppose that he is the bearer of an offer from the Government to relieve her of one of her children, he also is treated with coolness. Sorrow quickly gives way to joy when Alice learns that her husband is alive and well, and there are congratulations all round when Tom is restored to the arms of his devoted wife. The squire of the village then proceeds to tell the assembly that England is in danger of invasion, and in order to be prepared someone must be stationed at Storm Point to ring the beacon bell immediately the first boat crosses the bar in order to rouse the neighbourhood. Tom is chosen for the post, but his enemies determine he shall quickly receive his quietus. The spy places some dynamite on the anvil, but things do not turn out quite as expected, for the comic Jew villain strikes the blow prematurely, and the smithy is completely wrecked. The spy next prevails on the Jew to drug some coffee which Alice is taking to her husband, and Tom is also secured, and appears to be completely at the mercy of the evil-doers. He manages, however, to release himself, and turns the tables on the Jew, but the drugged coffee has begun to take effect on him, and he is scarcely able to move. A boat is crossing the bar, and Tom is powerless to act, but the familiar strains of "Ring the bell, watchman," are heard "off," his memory returns, the bell is set ringing, beacon lights are shown all round the coast, and England presumably is saved, the spy being shot by the squire ere the final fall of the curtain. Mr. Fred Ginnett's company is responsible for the production—an excellent one in every way. All enact their parts in praiseworthy and convincing fashion, and the Jew villain is responsible for a little comic relief. The playlet is admirably staged, the last scene being an especially effective picture.

THE PRINCE'S, POPLAR.

The programme at this handsome hall upholds the high standard of excellence for which it is noted since the style of entertainment has been changed. The chief feature this week is the military drama, Drummed Out, which was received with prolonged and hearty applause on Monday by an overflowing audience, who followed with keen attention the incidents of a simple but strong dramatic story. Mr. A. C. Lilly repeats his admirable performance of the part of Troop-Sergeant-Major Usher, and his characterisation gains great praise; Mr. W. G. Blunt is thoroughly at home as Colonel Herbert; and his son Bertie is capably enacted by Miss Minnie Russell; Mr. C. J. Erskine scores as Trooper Roberts; while Miss Stella Carmichel is powerful as Ethel; Miss Kitty Kirwan is good as the garrulous Mrs. O'Flanagan; and Master Fred Thompson is successful as her grandson Tommy. The mounting and uniforms are in every way satisfactory, while the degradation scene is well arranged.

A marvellous acrobatic exhibition is provided by the Abdullah Arabs; and the Sisters St. Julian, duettists and dancers, keep the house delighted all the time they are on the stage by their bright singing of "Will you miss me when I am gone"; Mr. L. B. Athol supplies a vigorous song, "Sides"; and a particularly clever ventriloquial turn is given by Mr. Tom Edwards, whose smart patter is loudly applauded.

Mr. Dan Thomas and Miss Daisy Yates are warmly received for their scena, Twankey's Laundry, in which they introduce a great deal of genuine humour; and Miss Alice Maple is heard to advantage in "Lily"; Miss Venie Clements renders "After lost man" in her usual bright manner; and An Artful Husband, on the Bioscope, is provocative of much merriment. The orchestra are responsible for some good work, while the genial and courteous general-manager, Mr. C. Melville Lurring, spares no effort towards the comfort of his patrons.

ALEXANDRA PALACE.

The popular North London Palace was en fête on Saturday, when the benefit of Messrs. James Pain and Sons, the well-known royal pyrotechnists, resulted in one of the most largely attended pay-days on record. The amusements provided were of the usual excellence, and the Coldstream Guards' band were with others there to do duty. In the afternoon on the South Front were the daylight fireworks, amusing to both old and young, and including grotesque figures of Chinese idols, antediluvian animals, flags of all nations, and juvenile toys. Long before dusk the lake enclosure, brilliantly illuminated, was rapidly filling, and before the time of the evening display every reserved seat was taken. A noted feature was the night ascent of the accomplished Alexandra Park aeronaut, Auguste Gaudron, in his mammoth balloon with an electric fiery "waterfall" in mid-air. The set pieces were remarkable specimens of fire effect. "The Temple of Heaven, Pekin," with its terrace of innumerable steps leading up to tier after tier of Oriental architecture, was wonderful, and another realistic picture was the collision of two goods trains. The aerial wonders were a replica of those given before His Majesty the King at the recent Royal Squadron Regatta at Cowes. The wheel devices showed sun, moon, stars, and revolving gyroscopes, and were marvellous specimens of the excellence to which the art of pyrotechny can be brought. A more successful exhibition has never been carried out in the Alexandra Park.

"A SISTER'S HONOUR."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I wrote a letter in your last issue, re A Sister's Honour. In justice to myself, may I trouble you once more to allow me to state that my sketch was altered after I had sold the entire rights to Mr. Norman G. Acton, and without my knowledge or consent?—Yours faithfully,

KITTY LOFTING.

The Truth Company, Theatre Royal, Margate.
September 10, 1907.

At the Alexandra Palace Theatre last Thursday, The Geisha Boys, who have been running a very successful season, took their second annual benefit, and were rewarded by a bumper house. Among the chief items of a programme made up of no fewer than twenty-four turns may be mentioned Mr. Cowan Firth, the gifted baritone singer and quaint story-teller, The Grantons (duettists and dancers), Wal Briscoe, George Reeves, Eddie Williams, Prof. Charles, Tom Mason, Harry Williams, and a whole host of clever people. The benefit was in every respect a notable success.

FILM GOSSIP.

Showmen will read in this column news with regard to the best and newest films in the market. Most of these films we have seen ourselves, and can confidently recommend showmen to add them to their stock, either by purchase or hire.

A decade has scarcely elapsed since the introduction to the public of the cinematograph, yet widespread as its popularity already is, a future lies before it to which no limits can be placed. The most remote corners of the earth have been penetrated in order to put events in their actuality before the amusement world, but the art is capable of being turned to still more useful purposes. The Kaiser, in ordering special cinematographic films of the German naval and military manœuvres, has been manifestly moved by a desire to preserve records of important movements in the life of a great nation, which may prove valuable in the training of his soldiers and sailors. As a technical and scientific educator, moreover, the cinematograph is unequalled by the painted picture or the spoken word, and to the study of natural history, geography, the customs of other countries, and even the work of the laboratory and the operating theatre, the moving picture must in the near future render inestimable aid.

The Charles Urban Trading Company.

Meanwhile, the efforts of the foremost firms to provide interest, instruction, and amusement for their numerous patrons are not allowed to abate. Comedy and tragedy are equally represented in the two latest productions of the Urban Company. The former element is abundant in The Suffragette Wife, in which a hen-pecked husband is ordered by his wife to accompany her on a "shopping" tour. From store to store the meek husband is led, parcels being added at each establishment. Eventually, a cab is hailed, but the driver steadily refuses to take such a load, and the poor husband, derided by the passers-by, staggers homeward, where he collapses on the carpet. The scenes are quaintly constructed, and compel constant laughter.

Touching and dramatic episodes are contained in the series entitled Good for Evil, which represents the meeting between a fair lady and a handsome swain. The gentleman, however, proves fickle, and so disastrously does his conduct act upon his sweetheart that she pines away and dies. Subsequently the gentleman meets with an accident while out in his motor, and is brought maimed and motionless into his house, where a festive scene is in progress. Medical assistance is sought, and the doctor, who hurries to the wounded man's aid, proves to be the father of the broken-hearted girl. Recognising his daughter's faithless wooer he refuses to treat the case, and hurries off, but his better feelings prevail, and he returns and makes the necessary efforts to save the man's life. Subsequent pictures show the visit of the wounded man to the doctor's house, his eventual forgiveness, and the visit together to the loved one's grave. The exciting events have been admirably acted in a series of picturesque surroundings, and the sentiment of the scenes is such as to take a popular audience by storm.

Pathe Freres.

An exceptionally attractive series of pictures are now on hand at the enterprising Pathé Frères' commodious premises in Charing Cross-road, each possessing the photographic quality and steadiness for which the firm is renowned. The Fortune, one of the latest productions, may be recommended for the ingenuity of its setting, while the situations of The Blacksmith's Revengo are thrilling in the extreme. Picturesqueness is secured in An Indian Idyll, a tale of Eastern craft and revenge, followed by a series of characteristic scenes, and an unlimited supply of films of the most varied and comprehensive description are at the disposal of novelty-seekers.

The Vitagraph Company.

A thrilling tale of the Western wilds is presented in an elaborate film which the Vitagraph Company has recently produced, called The Easterner. A motor-car is seen for the first time outside a typical Western saloon, and cowboys, Indians, and Mexicans crowd around and examine the "Devil Waggon." Bad Bill, a notorious character, now rides up, and after contemptuously regarding the automobile, announces that he bets his horse can beat it in a race. A wager is laid, and all repair to the starting-point. The horse gets a handicap, and Bad Bill starts down the course like an arrow shot from a bow. A few seconds later the auto leaps forward like a projectile, and both are lost in the dust. Round and round the course they flash, the brave little horse straining every muscle and nerve, but the powerful motor drives the car at a pace with which no horseflesh can compete, and the auto crosses the finishing line winner by a good margin.

All hands return to the hotel, when Bad Bill enters looking for trouble. The Easterner, after pocketing his winnings, politely offers him a drink, but Bill dashes the glass to the floor and reaches around to his hip pocket. The Easterner is too quick for him, and without removing his hands from his pockets "covers" the Westerner. The saloon keeper disarms Bill, and the motorist coolly draws from his pocket a large banana, which he peels and eats with evident relish. Then, throwing the banana-peel in the Westerner's face the young man from the East strips off his coat and tells Bill he will fight him "man fashion" with bare fists. The men form a ring, and after a fierce and exciting fight Bad Bill is knocked out.

The Starving Artist; or, Realism in Art, exploits an original vein of humour. A poor artist gazes hungrily from his garret at a butcher's shop across the street, where the sight of a link of sausages makes his mouth water. An idea strikes him, and rapidly painting on a blank canvas a life-like representation of a section of the brick wall with the sausages standing out in bold and artistic relief, he stealthily crosses the street and substitutes his painted provision for the real ones, which he conceals under his coat. Hastily returning to his attic, he finds he has no means of cooking his ill-gotten meal, but, nothing daunted, he hangs them across a canvas and paints underneath it a fire so realistic that it bursts into flames, and the sausages are soon merrily sizzling. Meanwhile, the butcher has discovered the deception, and, supported by a policeman and a crowd of people, is soon hammering on the artist's door. The ingenious painter hastily hides his sausages, and drawing down the window shade paints a very natural-looking open fireplace thereon, afterwards hiding in a cupboard. The door is burst open, and the butcher and his followers crowd into the room, and rush into the supposed open fireplace, only to fall headlong through the window to the street below, while the starving artist triumphantly emerges and devours his sausages with great relish.

New Bioscope Trading Company.

A new machine has just been perfected by the New Bioscope Company, which, while securing steadiness for the picture, ensures strength and durability, and lightens the labours of the operator. No departure from the ordinary dog-movement of the bioscope is made, but engineering principles have been applied in its construction, so that the machine differs in several important points. An adjustable pressure in the "gate" while running has been secured, thus obviating weak bow springs which generally tear the films, and the top and bottom spool arms have improved fastenings, which prevent them working loose. A new idea has been employed by which the shutter gearing is made to move easily, and the smooth running of the machine is also aided by a very fine fly-wheel, which attains so great a momentum that the work of the operator is appreciably minimised. By an ingenious improvement in the gearing the obnoxious "back-lash" which usually makes so early an appearance is averted, thereby rendering the picture much steadier on the screen. The machine, which is named the New Bioscope Dreadnought, is a model of solidity and compactness, and may justly bear out the claim of the proprietors that it is the best and cheapest in the market.

Mr. Harry Nathan, of Ruffell's Bioscope Syndicate, will have the sympathies of all in the loss of his wife, who passed away at Kent House, New Beckenham, on Sunday last, at the age of 49. The funeral took place at Abney Park Cemetery on Thursday.

Exhibitors and operators are reminded that applications for the first examination to be held under the management of a joint committee of the Kinematograph Manufacturers' Association of Great Britain and the Northampton Polytechnic Institute must be received early next week. The scheme presents obvious advantages to all concerned in the industry, and will give confidence to managers engaging animated picture shows as well as to the public attending them. Impartial examiners have been appointed, who will supervise the candidates setting up and working machines under ordinary conditions, and question them to ascertain their practical knowledge of their duties. Two grades of certificates will be issued to successful candidates, and their names will also be placed on a register of certified operators. Full information, together with forms of application, may be obtained from the secretary, Mr. J. Brooke Wilkinson, whose address is Holborn Restaurant, London, W.C.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

The relations of the artists, musicians, and stage employees with a number of managers is somewhat strained, and reports are spread that managers are not adhering to the award, or are acting in a vindictive spirit towards those who took part in the recent strike. In some cases both musicians and stage employees who did not take part in the fray, but answered the appeal of the managers involved to stand loyally by them, have been subjected to a reduction of pay where their wages were more than the minimum fixed by the award.

For the first time in the history of the two places of amusement, the staffs of the Hippodrome and Grand Theatre, Southampton, amalgamated for their annual outing, which took place last Sunday. The experiment was a complete success. The party, which numbered over sixty, left Southampton in brakes shortly after nine o'clock, and proceeded via Millbrook, Redbridge, over to No Man's Land. After a delightful drive in glorious weather, dinner was partaken of at The Lambs. Mr. Harold P. Howell, manager of the Hippodrome, occupied the chair, and proposed the toast of Messrs. Mouillot and De Frece, which was drunk with enthusiasm. A cordially-worded letter was received from Mr. A. Weston, regretting his inability to be present, but wishing the combined staffs every success.

After dinner various sports were indulged in, including a wrestling match between Fireman Pledger and Mr. Russell, who both turn the scales at 16st., which ended in a win for the fireman. Tea was served at five o'clock, and the return journey started from Bramshaw at seven o'clock, the party arriving at Southampton at 9.45, after spending a most enjoyable day. Every credit is due to the executive, who worked hard to secure the success of the season. They included Messrs. H. P. Howell, manager, Hippodrome; F. Ball, assistant manager; F. Masters, stage manager; H. Thoburn, electrician, Hippodrome; J. C. James, secretary; and G. Benns, treasurer.

The Tunbridge Wells Opera House staff enjoyed their annual outing on Sunday at Hastings, when the party, numbering fifty, dined together at the Castle Hotel. Mr. W. Gunnell presided in the unavoidable absence of the esteemed lessee, Mr. Welton Dale, whose health was cordially drunk, and Mr. W. E. Urquhart made, as usual, a most genial vice-chairman. The toast of "The Staff" was acknowledged by Mr. C. Walker.

The staff of Collins's will give a special matinée to-day, the proceeds of which are to be devoted to the annual outing. Many well-known artists will appear. The prices of admission will be as usual.

Under the capable direction of Mr. Alfred Moul Julius and Agnes Zancig visited the Castle Theatre, Richmond, on Wedensday, and drew together crowded houses. And what a wonderful show they give! Despite criticism, abuse, and not a little praise, their show is pre-eminently one of the most mystifying on the road. "It is quite simple," naïvely confesses Mr. Zancig in making his modest bow to the audience, "you can all do it yourselves; it's very simple, just a question of concentration." And then Mr. and Mrs. Zancig get to work, and amaze everyone. Question and answer follow with lightning rapidity; a watch number, a charm, a ring (of course, Madame can tell the initials), a card, a gold nugget from the colonies, a horseshoe, and so on. Never once did the little lady on the platform fail, and then, having demonstrated "how simple it was," this marvellous pair began to juggle with figures. Numbers were written on a slate, and Madame retired behind the scenes and called out the totals with wonderful accuracy.

In addition to their own performance they have the co-operation of a host of clever people in the programme. Miss Ethel Grimes, light soprano, charmed everyone by her selection from Mignon—"Je suis Titania" (Ambroise Thomas), and her work was characterised by wonderful accuracy and an astonishing vocal compass. Miss Grimes will assuredly be heard of again. Not a whit less dainty was Miss Katie Moss. Mr. David Brozell, baritone, sang "Eyes that used to gaze in mine" in fine style, and the humours of the programme were supplied by Mr. E. Thornley Dodge. The Zancigs' tour has for its business manager Mr. Sydney Paxton—a gentleman whose wide experience should contribute largely to its success.

Mr. Tom Jones, the Welsh comedian, has just published with Messrs. B. Feldman and Co. two songs by Will Hyde, entitled "The Welshman's trip to London" and "Johnny Morgan's sister." Mr. Jones, who has been topping the bill at several houses on the Stoll tour, and who at the Swansea house recently had to make a speech in his native tongue, will be heard in London shortly. The artist has had much experience on the theatrical boards, his last rôle being in The Fight for Millions. Mr. Milton Bode has cast him for "Dame" at the Cardiff New Theatre.

Miss Bertha Stuart, the Scotch lassie, who is working the Tivoli and Paragon this week, is scoring her usual success. She remains in London until the New Year, having bookings at all the best halls.

Eric, the ventriloquist, during his stay on the Moss-Stoll tour dispensed with the usual automata and gained great praise for his genuine ventriloquial abilities.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD.

Fairs Ahead.

THE fairs ahead for next week are:—Alford on the Great Northern; Barnstaple on the Great Western and South-Western; Farnworth on the Lancashire and Yorkshire; Ilkley on the North-Eastern and Midland; Langwith (Notts) on the Midland; March on the Great Eastern and Great Northern; Hemel Hempstead on the Midland; Newcastle (Staffs) on the North Staffordshire; Sidmouth on the London and South-Western; Haltwhistle on the North-Eastern; Ottery St. Mary on the London and South-Western; Penn (Bucks) on the Great Western; Second Lee Fair; Ware on the Great Eastern; Bury on the Lancashire and Yorkshire; Sidbury on the Great Western; Amersham on the Metropolitan; Atherstone on the London and North-Western; Beaminster on the Great Western; Staines on the Great Western and South-Western; Worcester on the Midland and Great Western; Backwell on the Great Western; Bude on the London and South-Western; Hayfield on the Great Central; Lewes on the London, Brighton, and South Coast; Longtown on the Great Western; New Mills on the Lancashire and Yorkshire; Pateley Bridge on the North-Eastern; Ratcliffe (Notts) on the Midland; Reading on the Great Western, London and South-Western, South-Eastern, and Metropolitan and District; Rushden on the Midland; Stockport on the London and North-Western; Ayr, N.B., on the Glasgow and South-Western; Aberdeen on the Caledonian, North British, Great North of Scotland, and Deeside; Moss of Ballock; Castle Douglas on the Glasgow and South-Western; Tredegar (Monmouth) on the London and North-Western; and Llandudno on the London and North-Western.

LORD JOHN SANGER'S circus visited Gillingham, Kent, on Saturday last, and gave two performances to good audiences.

"Fasting Man" at Aberdeen.

MONS. BEAUTE, who holds the world's record for prolonged fasting, began a 35 days' fast at Humber's Waxworks on Monday evening. The ceremony of enclosing him in the glass case where the time will be spent was witnessed by a large crowd. Previous to that Mons. Beaute was examined by a local medical man and declared to be in good health. He weighed 11st. 6½lb.

Cleckheaton Feast.

THE shows and other amusements at this Yorkshire fair were Farrar and Tyler's cinematographs, J. Crighton's similar concern, C. Relph's freak exhibits, Ben Howden and Son's motor-cars, Relph and Pedley's motor-cars, Harness's ostriches, Corrigan's steam swings, T. Proctor's park swings, Holdsworth's shooting gallery and throwing games, and stalls by many caterers.

Killamarsh Feast.

LAWRENCE'S cinematograph and Sedgemore's model of a coal pit were the shows at this feast. The machines were those of Messrs. Alf. Twigdon, James, and Jervis; shooters, cokers, and varieties by Messrs. Hall, Bishop, Day, Harvey, and Warwick.

NEATH great September fair opened out in brilliant weather on Monday. But the chief day was Thursday, when an enormous crowd invaded the ancient borough. The attractions seem more numerous than ever. Six great bioscope shows—Haggar's No. 1 and 2, Wadbrooke's, Dooner's, E. Danter's, and Crecraft's—some of the most beautiful pictures imaginable are shown to great crowds. In the machine list we have John Studt's beautifully decorated motor-cars, Hy. Studt and Son's motor gondolas and zoological machines, and S. White's tunnel railway, also helter-skelter; while E. Danter must not be forgotten with his switchback. The little folks are well provided for with Matthews's, Buttin's, and North's juvenile machines. The noble art of self-defence is represented by Frank Gess, Scarrot, Jim Sullivan, and Thomas. Prince Samonda's home of mystery is also a very smart show. The lady palmists are welcome visitors meeting old friends and making new ones. Messrs. North, James Day, Wm. North, Freeman, Roberts, Taylor, Buttin, Boswell, J. Jones, Wm. Jones, S. White, J. Danter, and E. Danter are represented by shooting galleries, jungle shooters, mollies, cokernuts, strikers, swings, &c. Big wheel by J. North, jun., and Roberts; photos by Fosset and Oulson. Messrs. Hy. and John Studt generously gave free rides to the cottage homes, workhouse, and reformatory lads. All the big shows gave them a long and enjoyable entertainment, then they were allowed in the swings and cokernut shooting, which completed a real happy time. Many thanks are due to the showmen who so kindly contributed to the happiness of the above children of the State.

PROFESSOR CLARENCE'S No. 1 Wild West Show was also in attendance, and gave an attractive variety performance. Chas. Blower's varieties was another strong attraction.

NOTICE of an important meeting of the above Union will be found in our advertising columns this week. The place of meeting is Farnworth, near Bolton.

Menagerie Mystery Solved.

FROM expert evidence received respecting the cause of the sudden and mysterious death of eight of their menagerie lions and tigers, the Blackpool Tower management are now satisfied that the theory of poisoning is groundless. Pneumonia, following on a rare form of distemper, seems to be generally agreed upon by the veterinary surgeons called in as the explanation. One menagerie proprietor communicated with (Mr. Bostock) replies that he has had similar trouble with a number of his forest-bred beasts, and has been helpless in the matter of remedy. All the Blackpool animals did not die of the malady. Two suffered so severely that they were destroyed.

Aylesbury.

ON Thursday, Friday, and Saturday (to-day) Messrs. Barker, Thurston, and Sons' gondolas visited the town, being stationed in the Market-square. Mr. Charles Thurston's original Royal Show also paid a return visit on the same dates.

A MEETING of the committee of the Bioscope Operators' Association was held on Tuesday last at 29, Wellington-street Strand, when a number of applications for membership were considered. The recent fire at a cinematograph exhibition in Newmarket was discussed, and the secretary instructed to write a letter to the Press giving the views of the association on the matter. Mr. Weeddon, the hon. secretary, having to leave town on business for an indefinite period, Mr. J. S. Henry was elected to that office, a hearty vote of thanks being accorded to Mr. Weeddon for his past services. The next meeting will be held on Sept. 24, at two o'clock.

THE SHOWMEN'S CHAPLAIN.

SON OF A SHOWMAN AND BORN AT A FAIR.

Very interesting to showmen are the following warmly appreciative remarks, which have appeared in the London Tribune of the 9th inst.:—

"The public have recently been interested in fairs. Barnet Fair has provided much newspaper 'copy' and several interesting illustrations. Mitcham Fair has induced someone to issue writs to the showmen warning them off the ground. But the dispute at Mitcham promises to be amicably settled. It may be matter for surprise with many people that the nomadic dwellers in caravans, who travel from fair to fair and provide all its fun—its roundabouts, shooting galleries, and shows—are organised in a guild, with solicitors, Parliamentary agent, and a chaplain. The Rev. Thomas Horne is the senior hon. chaplain of the guild, a duly ordained clergyman of the Church of England, and, moreover, born and bred in a showman's caravan.

"This is the story Mr. Horne told a representative of the Tribune: 'I was born at Nottingham Goose Fair in 1849. My father was lecturer for Wombwells, and afterwards for Manders's menagerie. He was a zoologist of some repute, and became attracted to the Bohemian life. No; the lecturer performed his duties inside the booth and not outside. When the company had assembled he described the animals in the cages—an office that was fairly remunerative. My father died when I was eight years of age, but my mother, who, however, did not belong to the showmen's fraternity previously, continued to travel with the shows. Here, too, I remained until I was 17. Then I came under the influence of a vicar of Leeds—Dr. Woodford, who afterwards became Bishop of Ely. This resulted in my receiving a theological training, and eventually returning to Leeds as a parochial lay helper. At length one of the vicars in the city promised me a title if I could pass the necessary examination. I managed to do this. After preaching in the street and on the kerbstone for several years, was at last allowed to preach in the pulpit. Thus I received my first curacy.

DEFENDING THE SHOWMAN.

"'Then the late Mr. George Smith, of Coalville, began his crusade against the showmen and their children. Knowing them as I did, I spoke and wrote against his proposals whenever and wherever I had the chance. Having been brought up with showmen I knew them better than most people. They were powerless to defend themselves, and I saw that unless someone defended them from the proposals that I considered unjust they would be swept out of existence. Some of my friends said to me, "You are a silly-billy! Why did you speak of your origin in a caravan like that? No Bishop will give you preferment after knowing the facts of your life." But whilst a few spoke in this way, a still larger number cheered me on, whilst the showmen rallied round me, only too glad to find someone to defend their interests.'

"From that time Mr. Horne has allied himself with the welfare of his own people. Bishops have given him their blessing, his brother-clergymen in all parts of the country have co-operated with him in his work, and now the showmen are organised into a guild—the Showmen's Guild—which supports them in many ways. It is their trade defence union. It watches their interest in Parliament. If a corporation endeavours to interfere with a fair the guild has a word or two to say in the matter, and over and over again has protected this large class of travelling showmen, numbering, it is estimated, 70,000 people.

HOW THE GUILD CAME ABOUT.

"The guild itself originated through the sagacity of Mr. Frederic H. Pedgrift, manager of The Era, who is one of the guild treasurers, and has successfully piloted it through many difficulties and discouragements. Practically speaking, Mr. Pedgrift and Mr. Horne carry on the organisation of the guild. Wherever, also, the chaplain goes as the spiritual adviser of the showmen, he invariably holds one or more meetings to advance the interests of the guild.

"Mr. Horne is the showmen's chaplain in a very real sense. On the fair ground he holds special services for their benefit. He has prepared a special service which has been approved by the Archbishop of York. He christens their babies, he is called to their weddings, and comforts them when they are sick and dying."

LICENSE THE OPERATORS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—The Bioscope Operators' Association some time ago, suggested to the London County Council that they should insist upon operators being able to satisfy the officials of the Council entrusted with the control of such matters, as to their qualifications to operate a Bioscope or similar animated picture machine.

We venture to say that it is desirable in the public interest that all licensing authorities should insist upon operators using these machines on licensed premises furnishing some proof of their qualification for such work.

I may add that no operator is eligible to join this Association unless he has had, at least 18 months' and for some classes of work, two years' experience. The policy of the Association being to protect the interests of the competent operators, all qualified operators are urged to become members.—Your faithfully, S. J. HENRY, Secretary.

World's Fair.

MR. E. T. READ, the up-to-date lessee of the above great London Christmas annual, has for a long time past been actively engaged arranging some exceptional big features for his forthcoming twenty-ninth consecutive fair, having been away from England for quite a long period looking for and securing some new big special attractions for his fast-approaching season. The aerial shows, always a great feature, will be particularly so this season, he having arranged with a first-class company of male and female Continental artists, who will make their first appearance in England, and whose performances are not only of a most sensational character, but absolutely the supreme acrobatic achievement of the era. A new departure is also being made in the circus company, Mr. T. E. Read having made special arrangements with Mr. E. H. Bostock, of the "Zoo," Glasgow, to provide an entirely new company of equestrian star artists, also of great Continental repute in their various lines of performance. In fact, Mr. Read is making several important and improved alterations this year, and with Bostock and Wombwell's menagerie, the finest and largest travelling museum of natural history in the universe, and popularising the dancing propensity of a large section of visitors by adding a commodious free dancing saloon, and possibly calling into requisition the new large annex now in course of construction in the hall, should, and undoubtedly will, prove the most successful fair ever held within the walls of this, the largest and most accessible place of entertainment in London, for sixpence admission.

THE great annual pleasure fair known as St. Giles's Fair was held in the spacious boulevards of St. Giles's-street, Oxford, on Monday and Tuesday this week. The weather was magnificent each day, and the attendance enormous, so that the numerous shows did a roaring trade. Jacob Studt's magnificent cinematograph show occupied a commanding position, and drew full houses, as also did the cinematograph shows of Thurston's, Ball, and Taylor, and Chipperfield's show; while the steam roundabouts and the new favourite "helter-skelters" did a splendid business.

HOLBECK FEAST.

To trace the evolution of a modern fair is always an interesting essay in history. To the expert in that special branch of historical research called Sociology it is a most fascinating study. Leeds, like Manchester, Liverpool, and Birmingham—and, indeed, all our great centres of industrial life—has absorbed a number of smaller towns and villages on its borders. The name of the old township remains, but the village as a separate community has ceased to exist. The big town, stretching out its tentacles, has fastened upon the village and absorbed it. One result of the growth of large towns and the absorptions of the adjoining villages has been the saving of the open air amusements and fairs of the people.

The fair, that (until the big town could no longer provide it a site in its centre) had been the people's birthright, was by mistaken zealots abolished—abolished under a profoundly serious economic error, an error that utterly disregarded the social elements in industrial life. Leeds in the early 'seventies of the last century abolished its fair, and the Corporation no longer felt it their duty to provide for the amusements of the toilers. The success of the reactionaries as regards the fair ground was complete, the triumph of the apostles of the deadly dull cult of life seemed to be complete, but after events falsified this expectation. Manchester abolished its fairs, Birmingham abolished its fairs, Liverpool and other large towns followed suit. Great London Town was the leader in this reactionary policy.

It seemed to be established as a fact that fairs in big towns could serve no useful purpose: that whilst they might linger out a miserable death in country places, the big towns had outgrown the fair.

The Fatal Error of the Zealots.

They thought that if no facilities were given the people in the towns to hold the fairs that there would come a natural and proper end of the fairs. In their mistaken prejudice and ignorance of the real needs of the people they imagined that the people would take no further thought or pains in the matter; but it was not so.

The people loved their fairs, and had the reforming zealots understood the people they would not have abolished the fairs, but would have continued the wise and statesmanlike policy of cities like Nottingham, Oxford, Peterborough, York, Wakefield, Hull, and Gloucester; towns like Halifax, Bradford, Huddersfield, Dewsbury, and other places. They would have retained full municipal control of the fairs, and would have benefited public funds by the tolls and rents arising from its yearly occurrence.

Manchester, Leeds, and Liverpool, like London, abolished their great town fairs, under the mistaken impression that the people had outgrown them. The fanatics and faddists and the ultra-puritans forgot that recreation is a law of growth, and is just as necessary to a healthy human society as food, fresh air, and pure water. They also forgot that so necessary and so insistent are these great well-springs of human progress that both consciously and unconsciously human beings (both young and old) seek them and never rest until nature is satisfied.

Economic Values and True Wealth.

The men who regarded money spent on pleasure as economic waste have lived to repent them truly of their folly. No economist of to-day who is worth his salt will defend the fallacy of "the dismal science," that "cessation from toil" is wastage of the wealth fund of the nation. We have changed our standard of true values. It is not the aggregation of wealth, numbered in pounds sterling, that is the measure of the natural well-being; but it is the betterment, the uplifting of the people, that is the real objective of our enterprise. We count now the education, the culture, and the opportunities of a fuller life for the mass of humanity as being the real tests of social and national progress.

We see indications of this better frame of mind, this altruistic readjustment of economic values, on all sides of life. Municipalities supply now some of the erstwhile luxuries of life free to the people—good music in public parks, cheap transit to country places, access to our noble rivers, libraries, picture galleries, technical and intermediate schools. The recognition of the economic truth, that time to live, time to think, at least is of equal value to time for work. This is the difference potent for good that marks our age off from the bad old days, when "work, work," and again "work" was the economic creed of the apostles of "the dismal science."

The Revolt of the People.

When the City Fathers, in their economic blindness, tried to abolish the fair they forgot the necessities of human life; they forgot that a healthy and a full life demands something more than a mere Sabbath every first day of the week; that rest from labour is not recreation, nor is it recuperation. They forgot, too, the subtle correspondence between body and mind.

The economic value of laughter, of play, of recreation in a true sense are now fully recognised by all the real leaders of the people. The creed of the early Victorian economists is now dead and buried in the limbo of lost faith. We are actually teaching our children in our normal schools play-acting, singing, dancing, and out-of-door games and amusements. We teach our children as much through the eye as by memory. Nay, all really successful school method is a wise combination of both ideas. In fact, the clever teacher is essentially a clever showman. He most demonstrates his lesson, as well as state its terms in word formula.

The Wisdom of the Fair.

Instead of the craft of the showman—"teaching through the eye"—being obsolete, it has become more and more a power for good in the life of the people. The teaching value of modern fairs in incalculable. The cinematograph is just on the threshold of truer lines of development and usefulness as an educational factor.

The Kaiser and the Cinematograph.

The Tribune, in a leader on the cinematograph says:—"In ordering special cinematograph records of the German naval and military manœuvres, the Kaiser has evidently not been actuated solely by the prospect of an evening's pleasant entertainment at Wilhelmshöehe. Our Berlin correspondent's telegram indicates that his Majesty hopes that the pictures will convey really useful information, and is in general among those who are disposed to take the cinematograph's possibilities more seriously than the show-loving public at present does.

"Since the eye must always be the greatest avenue of direct knowledge, it is scarcely possible to set bounds to the cinematograph's possibilities.

"The last number of the Mercure de France, in a bright little article by M. Remy de Gourmont, remarks that in France as in Germany it seems likely that the cinematograph threatens serious rivalry to the theatre where the spectacle is the thing.

"But some have had dreams of vastly-improved cinematographs and gramophones which will provide the theatre of the future with perpetual reproductions of a perfect representation of a play, acted once for all by a company of stars at their very best. Incidentally, the actors would be freed, after this one ideal performance, to rehearse another play up to the point when it became equally fit for enduring machine record, while, in place of his present fleeting fame, the actor's triumphs would survive for all time.

"More extensive and important are the possibilities of the cinematograph as a popular, or even as a technical and scientific, educator. Every experienced lecturer knows the value of the magic-lantern, whether his theme be the wonders of the microscope or the fiscal question. It might almost be said that the cinematograph film is as great an advance upon the motionless photographic lantern slide, whether from the point of view of attractiveness, or in respect of showing the actual thing, as the lantern slide was on the spoken word.

"M. de Gourmont speaks prettily of the emotional effect produced upon him by seeing a little shrub by the side of the Zambesi Falls trembling to and fro in the cinematograph picture, just as it did in the real wind and spray. When the colour difficulty has been solved, geography, natural history, the customs of other countries, can be taught with a vividness of which we have little conception as yet. For all we know, the cinematograph may become a valuable ally even of the laboratory and the operating theatre. With the aid of telephotography, it may show audiences of the future the great events of their time at the very moment of their occurrence."

Later Developments.

We may usefully venture here to supplement the somewhat limited scope of the Tribune article. Telephotography is already in extensive use. "The Series of Pictures on Bird Life" now being shown at the Palace Theatre, London, were taken by that wonderful invention. No other method was possible. The ordinary bio-camera could not have taken near enough to make a picture. The birds would have taken flight at once either at the sight or sound of the camera under ordinary conditions. It was telephotography that availed the intrepid naturalists Messrs. Pike and Sanders again with regard to colour. Messrs. Pathé Frères have for all practical purposes overcome the colour difficulty. Their unique invention of mechanical colouring of films enables them to place on the market a splendid series of coloured films, and these films are coming rapidly into general use.

The educational value of the living picture is no longer a question of the future, but is a present fact. We can see it at any fair we care to visit. We have seen it in "The Urban Scientific Research Pictures" at the Alhambra for years past, and at the leading London and provincial variety theatres. Again as a moral teacher the living picture is fast becoming the ally of the pulpit and the platform. Witness the high appreciation of the public of such powerful films as "The Passion Play," "The Life of Christ," and the lives of the Old Testament worthies. It is not that the cinematograph will arrive. It has already arrived, and is already a potent teacher of the people.

The Shows at the Feast.

The cinematograph palaces were the well-known concerns of William Murphy, Ben Howden and Sons, Monte Brothers, Relph and Pedley, and John Crighton. Five shows of the highest repute on the great show grounds of the country.

Chipperfield's French Menageries, Texas Bill's Wild Beast Show and cowboy experts, D'Osta's Telepathic Marvel, Westray's Freak Museum, Weston's Boxers, and Westray's No. 2 Show, the Novelty Booth, and C. Ralph's Entresol Museum, "Under the Willow Pattern Plate," completed a big list of shows at the Feast.

The Whirligigs and Roundabouts.

Motor-car sets by Murphy, Howden and Sons, Marshall and Son, Waddington and Sons, Relph and Pedley, and flying motors by G. Redfearn; sets of ostriches and other weird birds by Messrs. Waddington, H. Marshall, and P. Collins; yachts in the air and yachts on the sea by Waddington and Dobson; steam swings by Corrigan and Sons, Amos, T. Burgin, W. Shaw, and Morley; park swings and high fliers by Redfearn, Morley, Proctor, T. Burgin, E. Hughes, Dobson, and Corrigan; the tunnel railway by R. H. William; Lieske's big wheel; the Apline glissades by Corrigan and Sons and H. Powell; miniature motor-cars, pony roundabouts, and gem swings by Doubtfire, Howden, Thomas, Gladstone, J. Seed, jun., Johnson, Cooper, and C. Blakey.

Bazaars, Pannum Stalls, and Varieties

By Messrs Gladstone, Seed, Howarth, Wright, Lee Hartley, Cooper, Morley, Masney, Gilbert Holt, Bradley, and Waugh Bros. The photo booth was by Gunthorpe, and pot bazaars by Messrs Wilson and Cavanagh.

Shooters and Throwing Games.

Nowhere else in Yorkshire can be seen a better or a bigger crowd of novelty-providers than the fun merchants at Holbeck Feast. Amongst the motley throng were Messrs. Jameson, Radcliffe, Thompson, Cutler, J. Seed, Dobson, Thomas and Son, with shooting concerns; and Messrs. Turner, Burgin, Joy, Houldsworth, H. Powell, G. Campbell, Rhodes, W. Steward, S. Doubtfire, Corrigan, Gladstone, Dobson, and others with variety sheet-stall and penalty frames. The refreshment booths were by the B.W.A., and Messrs. Bates, Hodgkinson, Hughes, and Hutchinson.

The fair was admirably arranged on the breezy moor under the expert direction of Mr. Wm. Murphy (lessee of the fair) and his ground manager, Mr. J. Gladstone. All Leeds came out to see it, and in this year's fair a record has been established in popularity and in the high-class nature of the shows and amusements at the fair.

THE ELEVATION OF THE SHOWMAN.

DISTINGUISHED PATRONAGE.

One of the most surprising events in the history of showmen occurred last Sunday, when, in the palatial Town Hall of Oxford, never before let for such a purpose on the Sabbath, Mr. Jacob Studt, the pioneer of all bioscope concerns, was successful in obtaining permission to present Messrs. Pathé Frère's great Passion Play, which has caused so much sensation wherever shown.

The entertainment was under the distinguished patronage and presence of His Worshipful the Mayor of Oxford, together with the Council, Sir Walter Gray and party, and the élite of Oxford and district.

In addition to the pictures, the programme was augmented by Miss Florence Thompson, a young soprano of much promise, whose rendering of "The Lost Chord" and "Flight of Ages" was much appreciated, and, notwithstanding a goodly number of placards displayed throughout the hall forbidding applause, she was most generously recognised for both items, as was also Mr. Leo King, the noted baritone vocalist, for his very pleasing singing of two beautiful ballads. The gentleman at the organ, a well-known musician of Calne, distinguished himself greatly by his classic rendering of several masterpieces, and his general accompaniment throughout the evening.

Of the pictures we have only one expression to make—"they are perfect." We have seen many here, but the Passion Play is incomparable, and what added still more to the realism of the marvellous pictures was the manner in which the lecturer, Mr. Fred C. Gillieston, of Barry Dock, minutely described them throughout. Seldom, if ever, has an audience been so greatly impressed as was this one on Sunday night last, many, indeed, being moved to tears by the speaker's touching attributes and sympathetic allusions to the various episodes depicted so faithfully on the pictures of the Life on Earth of the Man of Sorrows.

Altogether, the entire programme was beyond praise, and says much for the enterprise of Mr. Jacob Studt, whose very pertinacity and dogged perseverance has placed him on the top rung of the ladder of fame in the world of showmen, amongst whom, in this particular line, he has now no equal.

THE SHOWMEN'S GUILD AT LEEDS.

The occasion of Holbeck Feast was an opportunity not to be missed by the Executive of the Guild for meeting the principal showmen on the great Yorkshire Round. In accordance with the plan of campaign in the interests of the show business decided upon at the general committee meeting held in Manchester at the beginning of the year, Holbeck Feast was fixed upon as one of the important places for a sectional gathering of fairground traders. The afternoon conference was held in the splendid new show of B. Howden and Sons.

The chair was taken by Mr. J. W. Waddington, a vice-president of the Guild, and one of the principal roundabout proprietors on the Yorkshire Round. The showmen present were: H. Ashington (V.P.), B. Howden (V.P.), Messrs. J. and R. Monte and T. Burgin, members of the committee; and Messrs. G. C. Campbell, G. A. Howden, J. Relph, W. Fisher, W. Steward, J. Westray, G. Wright, E. Thompson, C. Relph, and many others.

The Rev. T. Horne's Address.

As the principal object of the conference was to explain to the Yorkshire showmen the propaganda and defence work of the Guild, the Chairman called upon the organising Chaplain to open the conference. Mr. Horne dealt in detail with the aims and objects of the Showmen's Trade Defence Society, and laid particular stress upon the constant need for vigilance to safeguard the interests of the showground business from the attacks of public bodies and prejudiced individuals. He instanced the very recent correspondence of the Guild executive with the Home Secretary with regard to proposed additional bye-laws interfering with show business promoted by the County Council of Chester. He explained the method by which smaller public bodies, such as parish councils, rural and urban district councils, could obtain bye-laws through the larger and more important public bodies, such as County Councils. The most glaring instance of a small local body after failing to get the additional powers they desired in a private Act of Parliament, then trying to attain their object by using the County Council, was the Wallasey case. Showmen would remember that the Guild had spent over £100 in preventing the Wallasey District Council getting additional powers in a private Bill they promoted to penalise the show business at New Brighton.

The showmen defeated the penalty clauses of the private Bill, and naturally expected that there the matter would rest. But no; the District Council set to work to obtain the bye-laws they wanted through the County Council. The recent bye-laws of the Chester County Council, amended by the Home Secretary upon the petition of the organised showmen, only came into use in February last. They did not contain a bye-law touching roundabouts, swings, or shooting galleries. The principal bye-law affecting the show business was the usual one dealing with musical instruments, and that bye-law was amended by the addition of the well-known saving clause exempting fairs, feasts, wakes, and public festivals from its operation. He only dwelt upon the new set of bye-laws promoted by the County of Chester to enforce the necessity for their Guild to be in efficient working order at all times to deal with the enemies of their business. He had no doubt whatever that the Home Secretary would recognise the justice of their claim, and that the new set of bye-laws would be amended and brought into uniformity with the first set of bye-laws by the addition of the saving clause exempting show business at times of fairs and public holidays.

The Organising Chaplain then reviewed the work of the Guild with regard to Mitcham and other threatened fairs. He also pointed out the value and importance of fostering an intelligent and fully-informed public opinion with regard to the showmen's life and business, and expressed his personal conviction that the best method of doing this was the much appreciated and eminently successful series of Guild services which he had held at a number of important fair centres this year.

The address was listened to with the greatest attention, and was frequently marked by appreciative applause.

The Chairman's Speech.

The Chairman expressed the deep interest that he and all engaged in the show business felt in the splendid work done by the Showmen's Guild, and particularly the constant work of their great friend and leader, the Rev. T. Horne. It was for them, he insisted, to see that their Trade Defence Society was not crippled for want of necessary means to carry on its work or for the active assistance of themselves at all times when called upon. He commended the work of the Guild to all Yorkshire showmen. Its past record was the best proof of its ability and usefulness.

At the request of Mr. Horne the chairman asked for names to be nominated as the Yorkshire Committee of the Guild. This nomination of committees on each of the great rounds was done at the suggestion of the general committee in order that local interest and responsibility might be fostered and increased. He asked, therefore, that names of representative showmen should be suggested by that meeting which would be practically the open and public nomination of the Yorkshire members of the Executive Council of the Guild.

The Conference and its Speakers.

Mr. James Monte opened a most useful discussion on the question of sectional committees. He advocated two possible plans, both of which met with considerable, but, on the whole, friendly criticism. The first plan was that there should be twelve Yorkshire committee men—eight for the Leeds Circuit, which practically means the whole of the West Riding showmen, and two each for the North and the East Ridings of Yorkshire. Mr. Monte's second suggestion was—that a consultative committee to confer at all times of emergency with the officers of the Guild should be formed, and that it should consist of the four principal roundabout proprietors and lessees of fairgrounds in Yorkshire.

This second proposal was dismissed after discussion on the ground that it was not in accordance with the democratic basis of the organisation, which aspires to be representative of all kinds of amusement caterers and fairground traders.

Mr. G. C. Campbell's Speech.

They had to clearly bear in mind, he told the conference, that all sections of the show community were equally concerned in, and ought to be equally interested in, the work of trade defence. He, therefore, was in favour of a representative committee that would include stallholders as well as roundabout proprietors and showmen. He could see no reason why, when it was remembered that most of the Riding masters were already on the Executive Council of the Guild, that the two ideas set out in Mr. Monte's speech should not be usefully combined.

Mr. T. Burgin and other Speakers.

Mr. Burgin began by expressing his satisfaction that the nomination of committee men was being left to the members in open meeting at a big fair on the rounds they travelled. Although he and others had been nominated and elected on the Executive Committee, it had been done apparently at the last moment by the Manchester committee, and it had been a source of regret to him and other committeemen that the nomination had not taken place under more popular and democratic conditions. He supported the idea of the open nomination, and trusted that an excellent list of names would be the outcome of their conference.

Mr. B. Howden also supported the idea of open nominations at local centres.

The Rev. T. Horne, in closing the discussion, suggested that the chairman should ask for names with particular regard to the West Riding Division of the county: that the names for the East Riding and the North Riding sections should be left to the forthcoming meeting at Hull Fair, and that the whole question be adjourned to that meeting.

Mr. Horne's proposal was seconded by the Chairman, and supported by the conference. The following names were then nominated to serve on the Executive Committee for 1908:—Messrs. Corrigan, G. Wright, T. Burgin, J. Monte, R. Monte, G. Howden, W. Fisher, W. Turner, E. Thompson, J. Relph, and W. Pedley.

The Chairman moved a hearty vote of thanks to the Rev. T. Horne, which was passed with great applause.

Mr. Horne, in briefly responding, moved votes of thanks to the proprietors (Messrs. B. Howden and Sons) for the use of their show, and to the Chairman for presiding over the conference.

Both votes were passed with acclamation, and the conference terminated.

Showmen Guild Services.

Co-operating with the parochial clergy, the Rev. T. Horne took part in two services. The afternoon gathering was at three o'clock, and held in Randall Williams' cinematograph theatre. It took the form of a lantern service. The address to the beautiful series of pictures thrown on the screen was given by the Rev. S. F. Sykes, Vicar of Holbeck. His subject was, "From strength to weakness, illustrated by the life of Samson," and "From weakness to strength," illustrated by the beautiful series of pictures, "The Story of the Cross."

The evening service was in the same show, and the preacher was the Guild chaplain, the Rev. T. Horne. The show-booth was crowded to its utmost capacity. The Vicar of Holbeck conducted the service. The choir of St. Helen's (one of the district churches of Holbeck) led the congregational singing.

Doncaster Fair.

Every great St. Leger week Councillor G. T. Tuby (whose centre of work and enterprise is Doncaster) holds the principal position at the Races' Fair. Messrs. Tuby and Sons provided cinematograph theatre, switchback motors, steam horses, big boats, and other fair-ground novelties. The other providers of novelties were Prof. Ruby, with X-ray marvels; Farrar and Procter, with cinematograph; White, with two shows, the dime museum and novelty booth; Holland, with Japanese airship; Ruby, with No. 2 show; Messrs. Pullan, Brannan, Lever, Doubtfire, Calver, Farrar, Holdsworths, Fisher, Walker, Illingworth, Bliss, Walser, and others.

The Northwich (Cheshire) Fancy Fair and Carnival was held in the Green Dragon field, the attractions consisting of P. Collins's No. 3 motor-cars, Miss M. Collins's jumping horses, and juvenile sets. The shows were Scott and Sagar's premier exhibition of animated photography, and Mrs. H. Simons's ghost exhibition. Swings were by Miss M. Collins; also the Winchester ranges and shooting-galleries. The stalls were by J. Fletcher, T. Hall, J. Dearden, T. Clought, and Willie Hill. The weather being very fine, record business was done by the roundabouts and shows.

We greatly regret to announce the death of Mr. Bertram Washington Rose, who was very greatly interested in the Mammoth Fun City, and acted as chairman of its directors. Mr. Rose, who had been suffering acutely for six months, after a desperate operation for cancer, died in the early hours of Friday morning last. Mr. Rose was no more than thirty-three years of age. He was greatly esteemed by his friends. His illness was borne with admirable courage. At the close of the last fair at Olympia he was unanimously elected President of the Guild, a unique distinction for one whose first venture in the way of popular entertainment it was. He was very proud of the honour. Mr. Rose was buried at Ilford Cemetery on Tuesday.

FOOTBALL.

Bristol X.L.C.R. II. A.F.C. v. Harry Hare's Orchestral Band and Theatricals. Played on Clifton Downs, Saturday, Sept. 7. Miss Lillie Belding kicked off. J. Aubrey scored the only goal for Bristol X.L.C.R. The following were the teams:—

Bristol X.L.C.R.—W. J. Horton, goal; F. Thorne (captain) and E. Smith, backs; F. White, F. Hodges, and E. Poole, half backs; J. Aubrey, A. English, W. Lloyd, B. Davies, and E. Taylor, forwards.

H. Hare's Band and Theatricals.—H. Whalenn, goal; A. Hamlin (captain) and A. Mattock (backs); Denmore, Addison, and F. Stevens, half backs; P. Hewlett, H. Edwards, E. Bowman, S. Richards, and C. Whalenn, forwards.

Referee, H. Belding; linesmen, H. Hare and L. Clayton. Result:—Bristol X.L.C.R., 1 goal; H. Hare's Orchestral Band and Theatricals, nil.

Harry Belding's Athletic Team v. Bristol Early Closers' A.F.C.—Played on Clifton Downs on Wednesday, Sept. 4. Harry Belding was hurt during the second part of the game, and had to retire, his place being taken by Fred B. Nicholas, the popular goalkeeper of the Music Halls Athletic Club, who happened to be watching the match, and the goals were scored by Joe Lacey, Jack Aubrey, Harry Slade, and George Hedges (2). The following were the teams:—

Harry Belding's Athletic Team. — H. Belding (captain), goal; A. Hamlin and A. Cox, backs; F. Stevens, E. Poole, and H. Slade, half backs; J. Lacey, D. O'Connor, P. Reardon, E. Belding, and J. Aubrey, forwards.

Bristol Early Closers.—D. Mackie, goal; G. Hedges (captain) and H. Turner, backs; T. Willis, S. Coombes, and W. Vowles, half backs; A. Rossiter, F. Lucas, G. Bartlett, W. Denty, and E. Brooks, forwards.

Referee, J. Leonard; linesmen, H. Hare and A. E. Bailey. Result:—H. Belding's Team, 3 goals; Bristol Early Closers, 2 goals.

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

MELBOURNE, Aug. 1. — Her Majesty's Theatre. — Lessee, Mr. J. C. Williamson; Business-Manager, Mr. George Tallis. — The Ragged Earl was presented for the first time on Saturday evening to a packed house. As the devil-may-care Earl Mr. Andrew Mack pursued his triumphant course with all his art, his vivacity and good spirits keeping the interest unflagging till the end. In addition to "My Dudheen," Mr. Mack sang two waltz songs of his own composition which met with genuine approval. Mrs. Jane Keeton, in the part of Kathleen Fitzmaurice, demonstrated clearly her capacity for higher flights than that of a mere central figure in Irish melodrama. The character of Sir Henry Hardcastle was capably presented by Mr. Alsop. Messrs. Cambourne, Monley, and Aveling had evidently taken great pains with their respective studies of a tenant, footman, and process-server. The piece was excellently mounted and dressed, and was received by the fine house very favourably.

Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Rickards; Business-Manager, Mr. Fred Aydon.—A bountiful programme was submitted to a large audience on Saturday evening. Mr. Hamilton Hill, the Australian baritone, made his re-appearance after an absence of some eight years, and was accorded a flattering reception. What was already recognised as a promising voice has become robust and sweet, and Mr. Hill sings with that facility and grace which only experience can produce; he was twice encored for his excellent singing. Techoco's cats, with their clever performances, are still a great attraction. Miss Bijou Russell is presenting a budget of new coon songs; Little Baby Watson has fairly captivated the public with her song, "I'm going to meet Gertie to-night"; Mr. Carden Wilson gives a number of imitations of well-known actors; while Ernesto, Fred Bluett, the Rosebuds, Les Warton, Claude Leplastriere, and a host of other artists contribute pleasing turns to an exceptionally strong bill.

Gaiety Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Joe Solomons.—New arrivals here on Saturday included Miss Nellie Hill, Miss Bella Perman, and Mr. Harry Leggett, all of whom were accorded good receptions.

SYDNEY, Aug. 6. 1907.—La Mascotte was revived by Mr. J. C. Williamson at Her Majesty's after twelve years' silence. Miss Florence Young was a brilliant success as Bettina. Nothing that she has ever done quite equalled this impersonation, and her voice grows richer than ever. Mr. George Lauri made rollicking fun out of Laurent XVII., as usual, and never let the business flag. Mr. Claude Bantock is the Rocco of modern times, unctuous and ripely funny. Mr. Reginald Roberts sang the music of Pippo, a tenor in a baritone part; and Mr. Arthur Crane made a hit as Prince Frittelini; and another well-acted and well-sung part was the Fiametta of Miss Evelyn Scott. The revival was directed by Mr. Gerard Coventry.

The Ward-Willoughby-Palotta comedy combination came back to the Criterion on the 3rd, opening in Mr. Hopkinson. The principals, Hugh J. Ward, George Willoughby, and Grace Palotta had hearty welcomes back, and in their respective rôles of Mr. Hopkinson, the Earl of Addleton, and the Duchess of Marlborough, kept a packed house roaring and simmering from curtain rise to curtain fall. Mr. Reginald Wykeham, Miss Lillian Scaife, Miss Olive Wilton, Mr. Warburton Gamble, Mr. Bonfield, and Mr. Harry Overton, made up the personages necessary to the development of the ingenious and uproariously comic plot. The great charm of these performances is the very finished care with which everything is done by the experienced participators, the scenery and belongings being all that can possibly be demanded.

Mr. William Anderson concluded his season at the Criterion on the 2nd with the seventy-second consecutive performance in Sydney of The Squatter's Daughter, when Miss Eugenie Duggan and the authors, Messrs. Edmond Duggan and Bert Bailey, were called upon to make speeches amid a scene of intense enthusiasm.

Miss Florence Baines, announced as "the lass that set London laughing," brought a complete English company to the Palace to play Miss Lancashire, Limited. The Governor was announced to be present, but through a breach of etiquette on the manager's part in announcing vice-regal patronage, His Excellency declined to attend. The theatre was filled by a fashionable audience, as on all "command nights," and great preparations in the way of decorations had been made. Miss Florence Baines, as the Lancashire lass posing as a lady, made the farce-comedy go for all it is worth, and she was ably supported by Miss Nellie Birchenough, Mr. Richard C. Hicks, Mr. Burt Burton, Miss Geraldine Douglas, Mr. Johnson Weir, Mr. Patrick Evans, Miss Muriel Johnstone, Mr. Walter Hicks, Mr. J. H. Booth, and Mr. John Price.

At the Royal Messrs. Meynell and Gunn changed their bill to The Great Awakening on the 3rd, with Miss Maud Hildyard as the adventuress, Lola. She dresses, acts, and speaks well, and is a success even in loud melodrama; and Mr. Charles Vane, Mr. Conway Wingfield, Messrs. Will and Charles Bovis, Miss May Congdon, and Miss Violet Dene are all utilised in the improbabilities and exciting episodes of the play, just the sort to make money with in Sydney.

The Tivoli has its programme fully supplied by Mr. Harry Rickards, with ever coming and going artists of the highest qualifications in their respective lines. The latest comers are Lex McLean, a "strong man" from Scotland, and Dunbar and Blake, acrobats. The Svengalis are still here, and still great favourites. Messrs. Ernest Fitts and Hindmarsh Jamieson sing duets; a little girl called Laurie is an expert contortionist; and Will Lochraine and Michael Nolan add to their admirers at each performance. The Misses Eileen Lyons, Olive Robinson, and Agnes Hazel sing their songs acceptably, and a great bill is the result.

Mr. George Rignold made a successful reappearance as Jeson in Mr. Bland Holt's production of The Bondsman on Saturday night.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL LAW.

BY A. A. STRONG, LL.B. (LOND.), SOLICITOR.

Your book will, I am sure, be a valuable aid to all managers and actors.—Sir Henry Irving.

Mr. Strong states the whole case very clearly.—Illustrated London News.

Should be found very useful.—Pelican.

Should prove perfectly invaluable.—Weekly Sun.

Furnishes useful information.—Daily News.

The work succeeds in making plain the thorny legal path that every manager and artist must tread, and by a timely consultation of its pages they may avoid much misapprehension and trouble.—Star.

Mr. A. A. Strong has compiled an exceedingly useful volume dealing carefully, intelligently, and fully with the law bearing upon things theatrical. As a book of reference this excellent digest will be found invaluable.—The Era.

Mr. Oscar Hammerstein, the famous New York impresario, has announced that he intends to "erect houses for grand opera and grand opera only in the fullest sense of the word, in Philadelphia, Boston, Washington, Chicago, St. Louis, and Cincinnati."

The second raffle for Mme. Phœbe's hat, originally won by Mrs. Fred Ginnett, and again placed at the service of the Federation by that lady, came off on Wednesday. Mr. Malcolm Scott drew the numbers in the presence of Mrs. Fred Ginnett, Miss Anna De Gray (secretary of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild), and several artists, No. 91 proving the winning number. An additional £6 5s. is credited to the funds of the Federation as the result of this second raffle.

AMERICAN AMUSEMENTS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—The Dairymaids, produced last week at the Criterion Theatre, is a most agreeable and entertaining mixture of mirth and melody. According to the newspapers it is a musical farce "of the familiar English type." This is another way of saying that it possesses a certain charm and tastefulness and an air of refinement that is usually lacking in the musical pieces made in New York and Chicago. The native drama may be flourishing, but the Americans themselves admit that their musical plays are simply "not in it" with the London productions. The American composers seem to think that because the average New Yorker likes noise everywhere else he must perforce like it in the theatre, and arrange their compositions accordingly. Ergo, the musical pieces that Mr. Charles Frohman brings over here from London every year are successful by contrast, for they charm the senses of an audience already satiated with noise before it enters the theatre. The music of The Dairymaids is delightful, and the comicalities of Mr. Huntley Wright as Joe Mivens and Mr. George Gregory as Sam Brudenell provoke continuous laughter. Miss Julia Sanderson as Peggy, Miss Bessie De Voie as Winifred, and Miss Flossie Hope as Eliza made themselves great favourites by their singing and dancing. The Dairymaids should have a long run.

Mr. John Drew began his sixteenth annual engagement at the Empire Theatre last Saturday, appearing in the four-act comedy, My Wife, adapted from the French of MM. Gavault and Charnay, by Mr. Michael Morton. In this piece Mr. Drew returns to the field of light comedy, in which he has been so successful in the past, and the unmistakable signs of success that attended the opening performance showed that his new vehicle had been happily chosen. Although the fashionable Empire Theatre was reopened a fortnight earlier than usual the house was crowded, the votaries of art and fashion being sufficiently numerous to create the accustomed air of interest and brilliancy. Mr. Drew acted the part of Gerald Eversleigh with his usual skill and finish; and Miss Billie Burke, as Beatrice Dupré, was charming.

There has been quite a run on college plays since George Ade's piece, The College Widow, basked in the sunshine of popular favour at a metropolitan theatre for an entire season. The seats of learning, where the curriculum seemed to be mainly composed of football and boat-racing, having had their innings, the college playwrights have turned their attention to the institutions devoted to the science of soldiering. Thus, we have had The Boys of Company B, with Mr. Arnold Daly, and now we have Classmates, with Mr. Robert Edeson. Classmates is a four-act play, by William C. De Mille and Margaret Turnbull, with the opening scene laid at the West Point Military Academy. The plot is the familiar one of the love of two men for the same woman, but it is worked out with sufficient adroitness to make the story ring true.

Duncan Irving, cadet, first-class, is expelled from West Point for striking Bert Stafford, an old enemy, and his rival for the hand of Sylvia Randolph, a friend of the Stafford family. Prompted by jealousy, Stafford has plied Irving's father with cocktails until the old gentleman has made an exhibition of himself at a particularly unfortunate moment, and for this crafty move on the part of his rival young Irving lands a stiff punch on his face, which causes temporary blindness. Upon his recovery he joins an expedition to South America, but before going Sylvia promises to marry him. In the meantime, he has lied to her about Irving, putting him in the worst possible light. Presently word comes that Stafford is lost in the jungle. Irving offers to go in search of him, but tells Sylvia that his quest is made entirely for her sake, and with the desire to set himself right in her eyes. He does not know that the girl has engaged herself to Stafford. Sylvia, however, resents his offer, and taunts him with being actuated by a desire to place her under an obligation to him. She gives him to understand that she does not intend to be won by any such method, and finally tells him of her engagement to Stafford, bidding him, if his search is successful, tell her lover that she is waiting to carry out her promise.

The next act is laid in a South American forest. Irving and his two comrades have been deserted by their Indian guides, and, wandering away from the river, are themselves lost in the jungle. Stafford, nearly dead, is found, however, and when the two men meet their hatred of each other is expressed in emphatic terms. Both know they cannot live unless relief comes quickly; but even that does not lessen their bitterness. Irving gives his rival his last drop of brandy, saying that he hates to do so, and delivers the message from Sylvia. Stafford, a cad always, gloats over the message and the fact that his rival is the bearer of it, and utters more lies to pierce Irving's soul. When it is apparently all over with them, Irving climbs a palm-tree and hoists a white shirt-sleeve, and a heliograph, flashing through the trees, tells them that a rescuing party has seen the signal. In the last act Sylvia dismisses her unworthy lover, and promises to marry Duncan Irving. As the latter, Mr. Edeson acted with a convincing sincerity and a manly earnestness that could not fail to win the sympathies of an audience. His success was emphatic. Mr. Wallace Eddinger, as Bert Stafford, and Mr. Frank McIntyre, as a fat cadet, named Bubby Dumble, were particularly good in their respective rôles. While it is not another Strongheart, the play has all the attributes that make for an enduring popularity.

"The Other House," described as a fantastic comedy, and written by Harry and Edward Paulton, has just been produced at the Majestic Theatre, with Mr. Richard Golden in the principal rôle. Daniel Hake, of Rhode Island, inventor of dye-stuffs and other things, finds himself pressed to the wall by his relentless enemy, Jabez Vennamy, a "loan shark," and variously described as a toad, a viper, and a skunk. In the hope of saving his daughter from want, it occurs to Hake to sell himself to the evil one. He is not aware that a certain manufacturer is interested in his inventions and has been trying to communicate with him. It appears that the letters sent by the manufacturer have been burned by an innocent domestic, who thought they were "no good." At the very moment, then, when Hake is offering to sacrifice himself, the lights being turned down, there appears on the scene a gentleman with a Van Dyck beard and other accessories, which, with the red light from the glowing coals, literally make him look like the devil. The gentleman, it turns out, is the aforesaid manufacturer; but this fact Hake does not discover at the moment. The visitor induces Hake to sign a contract with his firm, and promises that in future he shall not want for anything. Then he retreats through a window opening into the garden, and a peal of thunder and properly-subdued Faust music are provided to intensify the delusion.

In the meantime, Hake's daughter has been telling the family troubles to her sweetheart, a son of the manufacturer, of whose identity, however, she is in ignorance. This generous young man sends, bright and early in the morning, a van-load of furniture and clothing, before the senior Hake is up. But when he awakes he manifests no surprise. It is part of the compact. The slimy Vennamy, however, has been robbed of a large sum, and when Hake hands him a cheque to cover his indebtedness, Vennamy at once accuses the poor old inventor of theft. It now remains for Hake to prove his innocence, and to realise his mistake. All of which is eventually accomplished after he has passed through a series of ludicrous adventures.

The piece provoked no end of laughter on the opening night, and met with the sort of reception that usually betokens success, but the newspaper verdict was not so favourable.

Miss Virginia Harned appeared last night at the Herald-square Theatre in Edmond Guiraud's dramatisation of Tolstoi's "Anna Karenina," the American adaptation of which was made by Thomas W. Broadhurst. The play tells the story of the love of Anna, wife of Alexis Karenin, a minister of the Czar, for Prince Vronsky. Anna's passion for Vronsky is revealed at the Imperial races, when Vronsky fails to take one of the hurdles, and is thrown beneath his horse's feet. Proof is afforded the husband that his wife is in love with Vronsky; but, in spite of her pleading, he refuses to consent to a divorce or let her go. Tired of her existence with a cold, scheming diplomat, the unhappy wife resolves to burst the bonds of conventionality, and she and Vronsky flee to Italy. The falseness of her position weighs heavily on her mind, and the torture of being separated from her son prompts her to return to Russia and endeavour to obtain a legal separation. Meantime, Vronsky's increasing indifference tells her that she is about to lose the love for which she sacrificed all, and in despair she destroys herself beneath the wheels of a locomotive.

Miss Harned's embodiment of Anna Karenina taxed her emotional powers to the uttermost, but her portrayal was lifelike and convincing, and evoked enthusiastic applause. Mr. John Mason as Alexis Karenin, and Mr. Robert Warwick as Prince Vronsky, were very successful in their respective impersonations.

Miss Grace George, during her forthcoming tour of the principal cities, will be seen in four plays, which she expects to produce in London next spring. Two of the plays are new, one being by Clyde Fitch and the other by Jerome K. Jerome. Mr. Fitch's play is designed to provide Miss George with a rôle that will give her a wider range than Divorçons, without carrying her into the emotional excesses of Frou-Frou and pieces of that kind. Mr. Jerome's play is called Sylvia of the Letters, and is a comedy of character, with scenes laid in New York. Miss George will appear for the first time as Beatrice in a handsome revival of Much Ado About Nothing, in which Mr. Frank Worthing will play Benedick. She will also revive either The Love Chase or The Belle's Stratagem—probably the former if Mr. Brady is able to engage a well-known English actress of comic parts whom he has in mind for the rôle of Widow Green. Miss George's appearance in Ibsen's The Lady of the Sea is another event that may be looked for before the season is over.

CRICKET.

Misses Cecilia Fowler's and May Fisher's Ladies' XI. v. Bristol X.L.C.R. and Harry Hare's Orchestral Band Athletic Clubs.—Played near Clifton Downs on Aug. 31. The gentlemen batted with broomsticks, and bowled left-handed. Miss Cecilia Fowler played a fine game for her side, and Harry Belding distinguished himself on the gentlemen's side. Scores:—

NEW PATENT.

The following is an abridged description of a patent, specially compiled for The Era by Messrs. Hughes and Young, of 55-56, Chancery Lane, London, W.C., of whom our readers may obtain all information and advice relating to British and foreign patents, designs and trade marks free of charge.

11,351.—Fire-proof materials. C. Schafer, 5, Peterstrasse, Nürnberg, Bavaria, Germany. Wire netting is covered with a mixture of chalk and honey, with or without glue, for the manufacture of fire-proof theatre decorations.

"HER PERFORMANCE."

The following monologue, with the above title, by Mr. J. H. Wrangham, will be interesting to our readers as dealing with the dramatic career:

"HER PERFORMANC." A DRAMATIC TRIFLE.

Characters.

Joy Despard (a girl who is prematurely old because she has never been young).

Scene: An ordinary set. Accessories: The largest pier glass possible, placed anglewise R., so that the audience can see the reflection in it; large arm-chair facing it. Screen L. When curtain rises, Joy Despard is discovered seated in chair, with her elbows on her knees, regarding her reflection in the mirror. She is singing a verse from Madam Chaumont's "Toujours Amour."

Joy.

That is sentiment, and spells fun and frolic, gay flowers and Paris. This is seriousness and precision, dull, grey, London, and grave issues. Nurse says everything has gone to red ruin—of course, my only friend (looking at mirror), she didn't quite phrase it that way, but she meant it. Daddy, poor old daddy, says the dogs of war are loose. He can't forget he was once a Shakespearean actor; and creditors clamour. He puts an adjective before the creditors. Chère Amie (looking still at the mirror), do you know what that adjective is? No, you don't, so I will tell you. It's a sheep's mother, and the dictionary says the precise appellation for the lambkin's maternal point is dam—D-A-M, dam; and that's what father says, dam creditors, dam the stage, dam the world, dam everything! Only, you see (still looking at mirror), you can't mint dams into coin, and the baker wants coin, the butcher is eager for "ready," the grocer demands oof, and with Nonconformist directness, cash; and our landlady perspires up four flights of stairs twice a day to snare the "oof bird." I wonder if that bird will ever fly again. Daddy is downhearted, and mother is so sick she hasn't heart enough to powder her face; she only wants to die, and in the interval she wants sweetbreads for breakfast in bed and one of Hall Caine's novels, because they remind her of the Bible, and there isn't one in the house. The situation is with me—up till now they have given me everything. A day nurse, a night nurse, Irish lace, and patent milk; after, a convent school; and since then pretty frocks, merry parties, a glance at society, a glimpse at Bohemia; in fact, they have given me all those things nature can dispense with—and now the "debacle." They've chucked up the sponge, so I must do something. The vital question is, what? I don't know enough to be a servant, and my petticoats frou-frou, and my face is clean. Besides, I can't wait; I've never waited for anything in my life, and I shouldn't like to sleep as our Marchioness does, with her head under the sink, though she is the mother of seven. I might be a typewriter, but there is one insuperable obstacle to that—I can't type. There is only one alternative—the stage; and I ought to have "a flair" for it. I was almost born in a green room, and, perchance, cradled on "rose-pink." I can sing, I can dance, I can act. Only daddy says there is no paying talent on the stage that is not in big letters, and there's "sheep's mother" little talent that is as big as its letters. Also (looking in her purse) my whole worldly wealth is eleven denarii and that wont buy many posters. Yet one never knows one's luck. Without money there might be a little niche for me in the temple dedicated to the Cinderella of the Arts. I read the other day that there were four thousand virtuous women on the stage, and four actresses. Now, if I was facile, I might thaw the managerial ice and become an artist. The personality who is called Terry or Bernhardt, Patrick Campbell or Rigane; not Miss Fluking Iron, of the Frivolity, who married a Peer and made a commotion in the Strand, and lived ever after on her one theatric success. I'll do it. To-morrow I will call on Mr. Charles To and Frohmann. I'll sing to him in my best frock and a picture hat. I wonder if this would go. Perhaps it might. I'll do him a Spanish song and dance. (She goes behind screen, and, while changing, repeats last verse. She re-enters in costume, and does her dance. When finished, she once more sits down in front of mirror.)

What do you think of that? Now, one is dead, and another has fled, and the other has not arrived in her stead. Will I do? With my heart on my lips I appeal to the great, big, generous public, who recognise good work, no matter by what medium it is produced; to the self-respecting lovers of art, whether that art is on view at a Dime Museum or the Palace of Dives; to the patrons who make the thorny path of Bohemia rose-scented, who pay their money honestly at the box. The old creeds are dead, the new shibboleths may be as vain, but they are quick. The audiences pay the piper; let them call the tune. Of course, I may fail; probably I shall fail. But I shall have sung and danced to the best of my tiny talent for love's sake—for the sake of those near and dear to me who have fallen by the way. Perhaps the superfine critic thinks Punch has no feelings, as the great Dr. Johnson said of the greater little Mr. Garrick. And why should not a kid, a little kid, fail? Even if it is so, I shall still have a shot in my gun. I should buck up, and say to myself these people have never heard the elocution of heredity, and I should burst into Shakespeare like this, as Rosalind, in As You Like It, and have one more hit at their hearts. (She slips on a white dress and bridal headgear.) Did she not say, that jewel of Shakespeare's women:—

"It is not the fashion to see the lady the epilogue, but it is no more unhandsome than to see the lord the prologue. If it be true that good wine needs no bush, 'tis true that a good play needs no epilogue. Yet to good wine they need good bushes, and good plays prove better by the help of good epilogues. What a case am I in that am neither a good epilogue nor cannot insinuate with you on behalf of a good play. I am not furnished like a beggar; therefore, to beg will not become me. My way is to conquer you, and I'll begin with the women. I charge you, O women, for the love you bear to men, to like as much of this play as pleases them. I charge you, O men, for the love you bear to women (as I perceive by your simpering none of you hate them) that between you and the women the play may please. If I were a woman I would kiss as many of you as had beards to please me, complexions that liked me, and breaths that I defied not; and I am sure as many as had good beards, or good faces, or good breaths, will, for my kind offer, when I make curtsey, bid me farewell."

But (and she tears off head-gear) that was Rosalind—that was the Swan of Avon, and I am only a little child, trying hard to do something to help those I love. God help me to succeed. (She falls crying on the chair.)

(Curtain.)

Indispensable! Rayne's "Pocket Date Book." Contents: Map (19in. by 10in.), showing the distance betwixt the various music halls at a glance. Will tell if one hall is within the barring radius of the other, thus saving fears, worry, and anxiety. All about artists' luggage, list of clubs, information about stamping contracts, foreign money table, London music halls and theatres, their telephone numbers, list of brougham proprietors, list and address of photographers, size of theatrical printing paper, names and addresses of theatrical railway managers, &c. Price 1s., post free. The proceeds from the sale will be divided equally amongst the two great charities of the dramatic and musical professions, the Actors' Benevolent Fund and the Music Hall Benevolent Fund. "The Era" Buildings, 5, Tavistock-street, W.C.

THE "REAL" ATTILA.

Attila's fame, says Sir Edward Creasy, in his "Decisive Battles of the World," has not come down to us through the partial and suspicious medium of chroniclers and poets of his own race. It is not from Hunnish authorities that we learn the extent of his might: it is from his enemies, from the literature and the legends of the nations whom he afflicted with his arms, that we draw the unquestionable evidence of his greatness. Besides the express narratives of Byzantine, Latin, and Gothic writers, we have the strongest proof of the stern reality of Attila's conquests in the extent to which he and his Huns have been the themes of the earliest German and Scandinavian lays. Wild as many of these legends are, they bear concurrent and certain testimony to the awe with which the memory of Attila was regarded by the bold warriors who composed and delighted in them. Attila's exploits, and the wonders of his unearthly steed and magic sword, repeatedly occur in the Sagas of Norway and Iceland; and the celebrated Niebelungen Lied, the most ancient of Germanic poetry, is full of them. There Etsel, or Attila, is described as the wearer of twelve mighty crowns, and as promising to his bride the lands of thirty kings, whom his irresistible sword has subdued. He is, in fact, the hero of the latter part of this remarkable poem; and it is at his capital city, Etselenburgh, which evidently corresponds to the modern Buda, that much of its action takes place.

When we turn from the legendary to the historic Attila, we see clearly that he was not one of the vulgar herd of barbaric conquerors. Consummate military skill may be traced in his campaigns; and he relied far less on the brute force of armies for the aggrandisement of his empire, than on the unbounded influence over the affections of friends and the fears of foes which his genius enabled him to acquire. Austerely sober in his private life, severely just on the judgment-seat, conspicuous among a nation of warriors for hardihood, strength, and skill in every martial exercise, grave and deliberate in counsel, but rapid and remorseless in execution, he gave safety and security to all who were under his dominion, while he waged a warfare of extermination against all who opposed or sought to escape from it. He watched the national passions, the prejudices, the creeds, and the superstitions of the varied nations over which he ruled, and of those which he sought to reduce beneath his sway: all these feelings he had the skill to turn to his own account. His own warriors believed him to be the inspired favourite of their deities, and followed him with fanatic zeal: his enemies looked on him as the pre-appointed minister of Heaven's wrath against themselves; and, though they believed not in his creed, their own made them tremble before him.

In one of his early campaigns, he appeared before his troops with an ancient iron sword in his grasp, which he told them was the god of war whom their ancestors had worshipped. It is certain that the nomadic tribes of Northern Asia, whom Herodotus described under the name of Scythians, from the earliest times worshipped as their god a bare sword. That sword-god was supposed, in Attila's time to have disappeared from earth; but the Hunnish king now claimed to have received it by special revelation. It was said that a herdsman, who was tracking in the desert a wounded heifer by the drops of blood, found the mysterious sword standing fixed in the ground, as if it had been darted down from heaven. The herdsman bore it to Attila, who thenceforth was believed by the Huns to wield the Spirit of Death in battle; and the seers prophesied that that sword was to destroy the world. A Roman, who was on an embassy to the Hunnish camp, recorded in his memoirs Attila's acquisition of this supernatural weapon, and the immense influence over the minds of the barbaric tribes which its possession gave him. In the title which he assumed, we shall see the skill with which he availed himself of the legends and creeds of other nations as well as of his own. He designated himself "ATTILA, descendant of the Great Nimrod. Nurtured in Engaddi. By the Grace of God, King of the Huns, the Goths, the Danes, and the Medes. The Dread of the World."

Herbert states that Attila is represented on an old medallion with a Teraphim, or a head, on his breast; and the same writer adds: "We know, from the 'Hamartigenea' of Prudentius, that Nimrod, with a snaky-haired head, was the object of adoration to the heretical followers of Marcion; and the same head was the palladium set up by Antiochus Epiphanes over the gates of Antioch, though it had been called the visage of Charon. The memory of Nimrod was certainly regarded with mystic veneration by many; and by asserting himself to be the heir of that mighty hunter before the Lord, he vindicated to himself at least the whole Babylonian kingdom.

"The singular assertion in his style, that he was nurtured in Engaddi, where he certainly had never been, will be more easily understood on reference to the twelfth chapter of the Book of Revelation, concerning the woman clothed with the sun, who was to bring forth in the wilderness—'where she hath a place prepared of God'—a man-child, who was to contend with the dragon having seven heads and ten horns, and rule all nations with a rod of iron. This prophecy was at that time understood universally by the sincere Christians to refer to the birth of Constantine, who was to overwhelm the paganism of the city on the seven hills, and it is still so explained; but it is evident that the heathens must have looked on it in a different light, and have regarded it as a foretelling of the birth of that Great One who should master the temporal power of Rome. The assertion, therefore, that he was nurtured in Engaddi, is a claim to be looked upon as that man-child who was to be brought forth in a place prepared of God in the wilderness. Engaddi means, a place of palms and vines, in the desert; it was hard by Zoar, the city of refuge, which was saved in the vale of Siddim, or Demons, when the rest were destroyed by fire and brimstone from the Lord in heaven, and might, therefore, be especially called a place prepared of God in the wilderness."

It is obvious enough why he styled himself "By the Grace of God, King of the Huns and Goths"; and it seems far from difficult to see why he added the names of the Medes and the Danes. His armies had been engaged in warfare against the Persian kingdom of the Sassanidæ; and it is certain that he meditated the attack and overthrow of the Medo-Persian power. Probably some of the northern provinces of that kingdom had been compelled to pay him tribute; and this would account for his styling himself King of the Medes, they being his remotest subjects to the south. From a similar cause he may have called himself King of the Danes, as his power may well have extended northwards as far as the nearest of the Scandinavian nations; and this mention of Medes and Danes as his subjects would serve at once to indicate the vast extent of his dominion.

The extensive territory north of the Danube and Black Sea, and eastward of Caucasus, over which Attila ruled, first in conjunction with his brother Bleda, and afterwards alone, cannot be very accurately defined; but it must have comprised within it, besides the Huns, many nations of Slavic, Gothic, Teutonic, and Finnish origin. South also of the Danube, the country from the river Sau as far as Novi in Thrace was a Hunnish province. Such was the empire of the Huns in A.D. 445; a memorable year, in which Attila founded Buda on the Danube as his capital city; and ridded himself of his brother by a crime, which seems to have been prompted not only by selfish ambition, but also by a desire of turning to his purpose the legends and forebodings which then were universally spread throughout the Roman empire, and must have been well known to the watchful and ruthless Hun.

FIFTY YEARS OF THE DRAMA.

Kind expressions from Authors and Managers.

SIR SQUIRE BANCROFT.

"I congratulate you on your 'Fifty Years of the Drama': the list must prove both interesting and useful to lovers of and workers for the stage."

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES.

"I think the new feature of The Era is most interesting and useful. A list of plays produced from 1850 to 1900 will certainly be of great service to a very large number of your readers."

MR. EDWARD TERRY.

"An admirable idea, and will prove a most valuable record."

MR. FRANK CURZON.

"Your list, I think, will be most useful for reference."

MRS. W. K. CLIFFORD.

"I think the list will be immensely useful."

MR. SYDNEY GRUNDY.

"Your list will be exceedingly useful. But, of course, there is no reason why old titles should not be used again. Indeed, some day we shall have to go back to them. Some of our modern titles, when they are not mere proper names with an adjective attached, display the desperation of the dramatist in too ludicrous a light. Such a title as 'The Importance of Being Earnest' amounts to a misdemeanour."

MR. ARTHUR W. PINERO.

"The list of plays produced during the last half-century is a most valuable record. The thanks of those interested in the theatre are due to The Era for this and many other enterprises."

MR. ALFRED SUTRO.

"The list you are compiling will be of very great benefit, and I am looking forward to the time when it shall be complete, and obtainable in pamphlet form."

MR. ARTHUR BOURCHIER.

"Mr. Arthur Bourchier thinks the list very useful indeed."

MR. JUSTIN HUNTLY McCARTHY.

"I have watched with the greatest interest the progress of your alphabetical list of the plays published during the last half of the nineteenth century. It is a most useful undertaking, and when it appears in volume form it must prove of great value to all who are concerned with the drama."

MR. ISRAEL ZANGWILL.

"The list of plays will be very interesting and useful when published in complete form. The etiquette of the profession apparently still allows of novelists' titles being used by playwrights. Thus, The Master, which will appear in your list as a play by somebody else, is the name of a book of mine; while the new play, Noah's Ark, has the same title as a shorter story of mine."

MR. ARTHUR LAW.

"The publication in The Era of a list of plays produced during the fifty years, 1850-1900, is an excellent idea, and will be most useful to authors who may be in doubt as to their right to a certain title. When it is issued in book form I shall be very glad to possess a copy."

MR. TOM GALLON.

"Your idea seems to me to be a most excellent one. Quite apart from the fact that there is always a difficulty in knowing what titles have been used, there very often arises the question of when and where a play was actually produced—a question difficult to be answered. Actors and authors should alike be grateful to The Era."

MR. HAROLD MONTAGUE.

"I think the idea of printing a list of plays produced during the last fifty years an excellent one. It should be of great value to authors."

MR. ARTHUR SHIRLEY.

"The list of produced plays was not merely a happy thought, for the same idea has probably occurred to many, though until The Era carried it out no one took the pains to collect and publish such a truly valuable record.

"Managers, dramatists, as well as would-be authors, will henceforward have a long list of titles to refer to, and there will be neither reason nor excuse for encroaching on pre-existing copyright in play titles. What a lot of trouble it should save us all!"

MR. WALTER MELVILLE.

"I think it shows great enterprise on the part of your journal, and likely to prove most useful and at the same time interesting to the general profession."

MR. ARTHUR MORRISON.

"The list you are publishing will be a most valuable work of reference to everybody taking an interest in the stage, and I have no doubt that when it is published as a book you will find its success warrant you in issuing fresh editions from time to time, with the information brought to date in each case."

MR. J. J. DILLEY.

"The idea is an excellent one, and there can be no question at all of the usefulness of such a summary."

MR. COSMO HAMILTON.

"I think that your new feature is an excellent and most useful one. A list of plays produced during fifty years is interesting not only to the playgoer, but essentially so to the manager and the playwright. They will only have to consult it to be sure that a title has not been used before."

MR. CHARLES H. E. BROOKFIELD.

"My attention has been called to your list of plays produced between 1850-1900. I have no doubt it will prove interesting and useful to many."

MR. F. FRANKFORT MOORE.

"The list of plays produced during the past fifty years, now appearing in The Era, will, I am certain, prove, when completed, extremely valuable to everyone associated with the drama in England. I am convinced—and I have had a considerable amount of experience in this direction—that it will be especially valued by all writers upon stage matters. The advantage of being able to refer at a moment's notice to the criticisms upon the production of various plays in various newspapers must be apparent to everyone. If such a list had been in existence some years ago I would have been saved a vast amount of worry and vexation of spirit. The Era has once again proved itself appreciative of the conditions under which the best interests of the drama in England are maintained."

MR. LOUIS N. PARKER.

"I think your list of plays, produced between 1850 and 1900, will, like the other contents of your paper, be invaluable."

A play in ten thousand.—Bristol Magpie.
Stands alone as a daringly original play.—Hastings Advertiser.
Appeals with irresistible force to the emotions.—Bristol.
It is one of the most vigorous plays which have been placed before the public of late years, and moreover it is a play with a purpose.—Folkestone Express.
Is elevating in tone.—Folkestone Express (second notice).
It is therefore a high compliment to the adaptation to record that the ordeal was encountered with success and without violation of the most sensitive nerves.—South London Observer.
The daring originality of the plot, the wonderful word colouring, the powerful characterisation, and the general high tone of the work at once seized upon the public.—Weekly Review.
It is one of the most interesting plays of recent years. . . . It is a piece which holds the house, which fascinates, which leads to deep reflection by all who see it. The theme is entirely novel, the piece brilliantly staged, and the acting superb.—Folkestone Herald.
From the rise to the fall of the curtain the interest of each incident is most absorbing.—Brighton Times.
Constitutes one of the most portentous subjects a dramatist has ever had to handle.—Brighton Standard.
The story is living and soul-stirring in the fullest sense. . . . The dialogue is brilliant and effective.—Bristol.
It will prove a democratic success. . . . It is powerful and original. . . . The general treatment of the subject is full of vigour and effectiveness.—Sheffield Independent.
And that opinion must be that a more remarkable, brilliantly-conceived, interesting, and in a great measure educative play one has not seen for many a day.—Daily Telegraph, Coventry.
The play is a most remarkable one. . . . that it is admirably conceived and is as educative as it is interesting.—Crewe Guardian.
The play must be pronounced a success.—Eastern Mail.
The subject matter is unconventional and even startling. . . . and certainly forms one of the most powerful sermons ever preached from the stage.—Southend Echo.
It is a remarkable play. . . . the daring vivid originality of the play. . . . It is an absorbing production.—Staffordshire Sentinel.
One of the most powerfully tragic of stories.—Blackpool Gazette.
It is a work of remarkable power, thrilling human, and above all a play with a moral.—Blackpool Herald.
One of the most thrilling plays extant.—Blackpool Times.
The play is a most enthralling one.—Birkenhead News.
A remarkable play. . . . It is a most striking production.—Wigan Examiner.
A play that should be seen. . . . A really remarkable play.—Portsmouth News.
A play of excellent qualities.—Hampshire Post, Portsmouth.
Fascinated by the striking and daring incidents . . . it is a truly wonderful story, and no one can see "When it Was Dark" without feeling and being the better for it.—Hampshire Advertiser.
There can be no difference of opinion as to the moral effect of such a play. . . . It is a thrilling story. . . . It is a powerful play.—Southampton Times.
Scores of others to the same effect.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
"The Era" Annual deservedly ranks high as a record of the passing theatrical show. The new issue, in a comprehensive survey of the drama, mentions in proper order all the productions and revivals of the year, both at home and abroad and gives a list of the theatres and music halls of the United Kingdom, with the names of their respective managers. The lighter side of the publication, to which many well-known managers and performers contribute, is of exceptionally high literary merit.—Morning Leader, Jan. 21, '07.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
"The Era" Dramatic and Musical Annual for 1907 is up to its usual standard—in fact, it is, if possible, smarter than ever. There is an excellent budget of articles from the pens of Miss Ellen Terry, Miss Cicely Richards, Miss Pollie Emery, Messrs. Frank Cooper, Arthur Collins, Charles Collette, Frank Curzon, Edward German, Cliff Ryland, and many others. The illustrated obituary, the alphabetical list of plays produced in London and the provinces, and all the other valuable features of the Annual are as complete as ever, and make this handbook extremely useful not only to members of the profession, but to the infinitely wider circle interested directly or indirectly in the drama.—Whitehall Review.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
Once more, stuffed with good things, "The Era" Annual appears from its office at 5, Tavistock-street. The edition for 1907 is as nicely got up as its predecessors, and, in addition to a calendar and other theatrical memoranda, contains two lists of the year's productions, one arranged under the names of the theatres and the other alphabetically. In addition there are a number of striking or humorous contributions by leading actors and actresses—Miss Ellen Terry, Mr. Frank Cooper, Mr. Frank Curzon, Mr. Arthur Collins, Mr. Charles Collette, Miss Alma Murray, and Mr. John Lawson are among those who have contributed bright experiences to this up-to-date shilling theatrical handbook.—Star, Jan. 22.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
Another book which calls for attention is that excellent and almost indispensable work of reference, "The Era" Almanack and Annual. In this handy shillingsworth one has a complete record of the past dramatic year, and the arrangement is so admirable that no time is lost in finding the desired subject, title of play, revival, or new production, and all that appertains to the drama of the year. The same remark applies to the information concerning the stages of Paris and Berlin; and I should like to see next year the American stage included, because it is becoming so intimately allied with our own, by reason of the production of plays, the interchange of actors, and the comprehensive interests of managers. In addition to the solid pages of facts, there are included short tales and stories by well-known actors and actresses, and altogether the book is one which should find its way into the hands of all genuine lovers of the drama.—Morning Advertiser, Feb. 23, '07.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
"The Era" Annual for 1907. 1s. "Era" Office, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C. Once again this useful publication comes out with its useful tabular information concerning things dramatic, such as the date of the production of new plays and important revivals produced at the London, provincial, and Paris theatres. In addition are many portraits and short stories given over the signatures of many prominent theatrical and music hall people, and a variety of other interesting matter.—Financial Times, Jan. 21 '07.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office.

Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns.

Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT,
MR. S. GETHING,
Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT,
MR. T. GERALD MORTON,
Empire Palace, Leeds.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT,
MR. HATTON WHARTON,
Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, AND DISTRICT,
MR. ALBERT BULMER,
The Empire, Liverpool.

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT,
MR. J. CHRISTIE,
The Empire, Cardiff.

LONDON DISTRICT,
MR. WILLIAM COLLINS,
The Empire, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

THIS WEEK'S NOVELTIES.

THE FORTUNE.

Code Word, COMEDIE.

A little country maiden listens and watches with wide-open eyes to the wonderful things shown her by an old witch. She sees the various cards, representing all stations of life, and one by one the persons appear. A prince and princess, followed by all their long train of followers. The young girl recognises her own face in the face of that lovely princess, when suddenly the scene changes and another lover is by her side. The prince is mad with jealousy, and has the princess thrust into an outer dungeon.

The young girl is in the midst of these various impressions when a young peasant stops and asks his way. The young girl, recalling the sad and terrible story she has just seen, rushes away in fear and trembling.

AN INDIAN IDYLL.

Code Word, COMMERCE.

Messaouda, walking on a terrace, drinks in the lovely air and perfume of choice flowers. A cavalier comes down the path leading to the terrace, wraps the young Hindoo in his cloak, and together they walk up and down, he whispering sweet nothings into her shell-like ear.

On a wall overlooking the terrace a native, clad and hidden just to the eyes in a long loose mantle, is watching and listening. Suddenly, without the slightest warning, he rushes on to the terrace and stabs the cavalier in the back. Is he dead or not? Patiently and lovingly Messaouda watches by the bed of her beloved, while the father joins their hands.

The native, however, is not satisfied yet, and attempts again to take the life of this brave cavalier, but the Hindoo girl is too quick for him and gives him a fatal blow.

General rejoicings at the wedding of the young couple.

THE BLACKSMITH'S REVENGE.

Code Word, CHRONIQUE.

A big, strong blacksmith at his forge, shoeing the horse of a young lord. During this process the young lord is chatting with the blacksmith's wife, sitting at work at her cottage door. How nice to listen to the talk of this fine, handsome young man. She is overwhelmed with his attention, and promises to meet him.

The blacksmith has his suspicions, however, and follows the two in a summer-house. He finds the two together, tears them apart, and boxes the ears of the young lord, who does not attempt to retaliate, seeing the giant proportions of the blacksmith. Notwithstanding this mishap, the young man again tries to see his lady-love, and hangs about, but this time the blacksmith is on his track, and together they go to the forge, where they fight a duel with hammers. The delicate and fragile young man quickly falls under the huge strength of his antagonist, and drops to the ground a mass of lace and ribbons.

VITAGRAPH FILMS.

FOUR PENCE per foot nett.

THE EASTERNER: A TALE OF THE WEST

Copyright, 1907, by The Vitagraph Company of America.

Outside typical Western hostelry—A group of cowboys and Mexicans are startled by sudden appearance of automobile (first they've ever seen) with a young "Easterner" and his bride as occupants—"Bad Bill," a notorious character, appears—His horse shies at strange vehicle—Bill contemptuously glances at auto, and offers to race his horse against machine. Wager is laid and exciting race ensues in which horse is bested—Back to the hotel—Wager is paid—Defeated man enters in bad humour—Attempts to shoot young bridegroom—Held up himself—Autoist agrees to fight "man fashion"—Easterner soundly thrashes "Bad Bill."

A GENUINE "VITAGRAPH" HIT. Length 475ft.

THE STARVING ARTIST: OR, REALISM IN ART.

Copyright, 1907, by The Vitagraph Company of America.

Poor artist in garret room bewailing his ill-luck—Looks out of window, sees links of sausages hanging in butcher's shop across the street—Paints on canvas a realistic picture of same—Substitutes painting for real article—Returns home—No means of cooking ill-gotten meal—Paints a fire on canvas so realistically that flames burst forth—Butcher discovers deception, suspects artist, summons officer, and starts for thief—Artist hears searching party—Paints open fireplace on window shade—Butcher, officer, and followers see apparent opening, rush in, fall through window into street below while artist devours sausage with evident relish.

NOVEL—ORIGINAL—AMUSING. Length, 650ft.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERCARN.—PUBLIC HALL.—Proprietors, Abercarn Public Hall Co., Ltd. — The season was opened here on the 13th inst by Mr. J. Bannister Howard's company in The Silver King, and packed houses were drawn both on that and the following evening. Mr. E. Stanton Sharp appeared in the title-rôle, winning admiration for his excellent acting; Miss Florence Radcliffe, who gave a sympathetic rendering of Nellie Denver; Jackes, a very popular character, is undertaken by Mr. Roland Howard; and the Spider, in the hands of Mr. Paul Beckett, was all that could be desired. Other characters are in capable hands, and the piece is appropriately mounted.

ABERDEEN.—HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Adair Nelson.—Mr. George Alexander's company, in His House in Order, is again warmly welcomed. Mr. Stephen T. Ewart continues to play the part of Hilary Jesson with his customary power and restraint; Nina is charmingly presented by Miss Grace Armytage Noble; Mr. Edward Pearce is as effective as ever in the character of Filmer Jesson; Mr. George Fitzgerald is the same stately old humbug, Sir Daniel Ridgeley; and Miss Augusta Haviland and Miss Blanka Stewart give first-rate portraitures of the feminine Ridgeleys. Mlle. Lilli Kear makes an amusing Thomé; and Miss May Harris acts very intelligently as the boy Derek.

PALACE THEATRE. — Lessees, The United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—Miss Florrie Forde continues to delight the audiences with her songs; Mr. Burt Shepard is perhaps more popular than ever; Mr. Fred Land's eccentricities are highly relished; Lyster and Cooke, the "musical astronomers," give a very enjoyable turn; Little Vio-lette is a dashing male impersonator and dancer; Duncan and Godfrey make a success with their coster comedy, Me and 'Er; Mr. George Bernard is a good actor-vocalist; Mr. Arthur Goodman, a smart comedy juggler; and Bolano receives hearty applause for his dexterity as a juggler and equilibrist.

BEACH PAVILION.—Proprietor, Mr. David Thomson.—This entertainment is usually crowded to the door at both of the daily performances. Mr. Jack Marson is one of the newcomers. His voice is heard to fine effect in a variety of popular songs. The other members of the company continue to increase in popularity.

ABERTILLERY.—THEATRE METROPOLE.—Lessees Messrs. Carlton and Duckworth; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. W. Ventom.—The Power of Gold is being played here this week by Mr. Frank Ayrton's company. A pleasing performance is given, and the setting and dresses are distinctly good. Mr. R. F. Stacy's representation of Paul Judson leaves nothing to be desired; Mr. Frank Ayrton as Sammy Smudge and Miss Madge Seymour as Norah Donnelly are highly diverting; Mr. George Lyttleton is good as Hadgi Zambra; Miss Amy McNeill as Lady Brandon has a powerful part, and plays it exceedingly well; Mr. Frank Holyoake as Mark Harley is good; Miss Lily Prescott as Meg Judson engrosses her audiences; and Mr. W. Victor and Little Prudence also do their share capably.

PAVILION.—Lessees, Messrs. E. and H. Tilney; General-Manager, Mr. E. Pryce.—The chef d'œuvre on the bill this week is provided by the Brothers Luck, who evoke screams of merriment in The Demon of the Cellar. Allsopp and Bekwith in duo comedy are distinctly clever and amusing; the Two Errolls give a farcical turn; Dai Daviss, with his patter and whistling, keeps the house in a roar; the Sisters Charnley, with song and dance, are very good; the Wambas are funny and skilful on curious musical instruments; La Belle Lily and Albert give an expert gymnastic turn; Florence Inman is excellent in coon songs; and the Pavilion Bioscope completes an entertaining bill.

ACCRINGTON.—PRINCE'S THEATRE. — Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Barnes.—The Prodigal Parson is being presented here by Messrs. Alfred Northway and V. Garrod's company. The title-rôle is cleverly interpreted by Mr. Garrod; Enoch Jaggins finds a capital exponent in Mr. Fred Beckett; and the part of the brother, Ben, is successfully portrayed by Mr. A. Tomlin; while Mr. Owen Remonde does justice to the part of Phil Drive. The part of Fern Godley is pleasingly played by Miss Bertha Kingston; Miss May Grayce is an able representative of Gretchen von Crans, and Miss Violet Jeffries gives an excellent impersonation of Myrtle Godley.

HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, Messrs. Willmot, Vandy, Potter, and Weisker; Director, Mr. F. Willmot; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Mould.—The Original Ten Loonies head the bill here, and prove most amusing; Ariel and Astarte are talented gymnasts; Frank Coyle pleases as usual; Violet Morgan and Jack Ford give a capital turn; Henriquette Maude, the Little New Zealand Girl, meets with success; Three Royal Temples merit praise as Welsh duettists; Clifton and Gibson are an amusing pair of comedians; the Varleys prove capable duettists. The Bioscope pictures complete the bill.

ALDERSHOT.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Acting-Manager, Mr. Gladwin.—The Eve of Her Wedding is being sustained here by a powerful company, led by Mr. Wilson Benge. Mr. Benge as Tremain was most effective; as Mavis Miss Sadie Smith, in her portrayal of temporary mental derangement, showed an emotionalism which stamped her as a clever actress; as the adventuress Miss Madeline Raby was distinctly good; Mr. Henry Lloyd made a clever villain; Mr. Chas. Groves, jun., as Cairshaw was cool and clever; Mr. David Battie made a dashing Giovanni; and Mr. Chas. H. Gallin portrayed the wastrel son very naturally; Kinkie, the unruffled Yankee girl, had an able exponent in Miss Charles Digby; Jack Hearne was well played by Mr. Arthur E. Holland; and in the dual part of Squire and Bill Groggins Mr. Arthur Keand did well.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Revill. — The Silver King, played by Messrs. Polini and Melford's company, is a popular attraction here this week. A very fine interpretation of Wilfred Denver is given by Mr. Fred D. Daviss; Miss Adah Barton appeals successfully to the sympathies of the audience as Nelly Denver; Mr. E. J. George is still the unapproachable representative of the faithful old servitor, Daniel Jaikes; good work is done by Mr. L. St. George Lowther as the Spider; and as his accomplices in crime, Messrs. G. Belmore, A. Wright, and F. Kingsley, as Corkett, Coombe, and Cripps, are adequate. Mr. Byron Pedley is a smart detective; and able impersonations are given of minor parts. Miss E. Temple is amiable and true to a bad husband as Olive Skinner; and Misses Flossie H. Daviss, Louie Hale, Bessie Wright, and Mary Simpson also act creditably.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech.—The programme is good for the week, and opens with an expert comedy turn on the rings by Rinlo and Zinlo. George Edney sings patriotic songs, dressed neatly in naval costume; Ariston's Cats are undoubtedly well trained; and Dolly Ross gives a smart coon song and dance. The farce, entitled The Will, by R. Cameron Matthews, is well presented by the author and Misses B. Armytage, A. Graham, B. Deares, and Mr. B. W. Allison; Horace Sade is a nimble dancer; Larry Lewis is a singing comedian with a quiet, but effective style; Kendrick and Laura are popular as ever in song, dance, and dialogue; the Wakomie Brothers are remarkably good in instrumentation; the Geni Family (ten performers with three ponies) present a really smart "show"; and the pictures of the Bioscope are up to date.

ATTERCLIFFE.—PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES. —Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Lacy Lyne; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Bert Lester.—An excellent programme is provided here this week, large audiences being the result. Mr. Charles Dixton and company in a sketch full of laughter-provoking situations, entitled Uncle Obadiah, hits the popular taste, and the parts are all well played by Messrs. W. H. Bradford, Barry Keay, Charles Dixton, Misses Edith Madelle, Emily Kelsey, and Flo Harris. A pleasing item is that supplied by Miss Maude Mortimer, a charming vocalist, whose songs are highly appreciated; Lachie Thomson's "top weights," Tom and Neil, give an interesting exhibition of club-swinging, boxing, and wrestling; Mr. E. C. Clayton's Attergraph pictures include a dramatic story, "Just in Time"; a hearty reception is accorded to Mr. Percy Farrimond, Lancashire singing collier; Vincent, acrobatic table expert, is paying a return visit; Allen and Hall are a couple of amusing comedians; and the Three Behans are good in their quick-change singing and dancing speciality.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS. — ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone. —Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company in Peter's Mother is here. Mr. Ernest Ruston is in every way admirable as Sir Timothy Crewys, Bart.; and Miss Violet Ley is a centre of interest as Lady Mary Crewys. The part of Peter Crewys is artistically done by Mr. E. F. Meads; and the John Crewys, Q.C., of Mr. Henry Renouf is a finished performance. Mr. William Mallalieu as Doctor Birch and Mr. Townsend Whitling as Dr. Blundell are also conspicuously successful. Chalk and Cheese, by Eille Norwood, precedes.

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Lessees and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge.—Mr. Lawrence Brough's company in The Lady of Ostend is here. Mr. Brough plays the original part of Le Baron de Longueville with admirable verve, and Mr. Henry Hampson does the merchant, Dick Whortles, to perfection. Mr. Dan Rose is excellent as Joseph Carbrory, and Mr. Watkin Wynn is a capital Toby Krockitt. Miss Maud Buchanan, in the title-rôle, is a charming actress; Miss Vera Vallis is a winning Millie; and Miss Kate Mitford is a good Dorothy Whortles. The piece is preceded by Margaret's Stratagem.

BARRY DOCK.—THEATRE ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. R. Horrocks.—This popular place of entertainment continues to draw crowded audiences, and the bill of fare provided gives universal satisfaction. Selections from the standard operas are given under the direction of Mr. Frank Pemberton, late of the Moody-Manners Opera Company, with Miss Evelyn De Lara as prima donna, assisted by Miss Vera Vizard (contralto) and Mr. Albert Chapman from the Carl Rosa company. On Monday Maritana was presented, and on Wednesday Il Trovatore, The Bohemian Girl being announced for Friday. Clarke's Nippers, with their club juggling and ball-punching, are decidedly clever; Frank Lyndo, a versatile comedian; and Mlle. Ada Gately, lady juggler and swinging wire artist, assisted by Mme. Ella, are also well received. Stuart and Stuart, entertainers; Julian Mack, "the suffragette"; and the new pictures on the Electric Bioscope, are highly appreciated.

BATH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Egbert Lewis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lewis A. Long.—The first musical attraction for the autumn season is Veronique, which has been received with great cordiality by good houses throughout the week. Mr. Charles Macdona's company is a particularly strong one, and includes a great Bath favourite in Mr. Daley Cooper, whose inexhaustible energy and spontaneous humour find full play in the character of Coquenard; and, together with Mr. Oliver J. Round as Loustot, is the life and soul of the piece. Mr. Sidney Bracy is excellent as the bridegroom Seraphin; and Florestan is undertaken with both vocal and histrionic success by Mr. Arthur Stroud. A fascinating Veronique is found in Miss Mabel Lait, her singing, acting, and dancing securing her warm approval; Miss Stella St. Audrie scores a legitimate hit, her comedy acting being admirable; Miss Elsie Probyn makes an engaging Denise. On Monday, in the absence of Miss Roberta Williams, the rôle of Agatha was played by Miss Marie Wyse, who must be congratulated upon stepping into the breach with such pleasing results. The chorus and orchestra, under Mr. Victor Champion's direction, added to the enjoyment of a delightful performance.

PALACE THEATRE. — Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Schuberth.—Leoni Clarke is once again exhibiting his wonderful army of trained animals, which is a turn that always creates great interest in old and young alike; Miss Cora Duncan and Mr. Albert Brasque present their playlet, A Society Butterfly, with success; the Brothers Adderley, in their musical comedietta, An Officer's Servant, are well received; Will Driscoll, the swell comedian and clever dancer, is always welcomed in Bath; the Sisters Lytton, in the vocal duets, harmonise effectively; Dale and Vale, as pedestal and step-dancers, maintain their position; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux continue to please with new subjects. Amy Bellwood, comedienne and dancer, secures many admirers.

ASSEMBLY ROOMS.—The National Animated Picture Company are remaining here for another week, putting on The Life of Christ as the leading draw. On Thursday a matinée in aid of the Mayor's Hospital Fund was arranged, the staff having generously given their services for the occasion.

BEDFORD. — ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham-Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter R. Wilson.—This week Mr. J. M. Barrie's Walker, London, is being presented by Mr. Arthur A. Horner's company. The staging is excellent, a houseboat on the Thames being charmingly depicted. Mr. Harry C. Morton successfully impersonates Jasper Phipps, the modest scheming hero; Mr. W. Rene Hammersmith puts plenty of go into the part of Reynard von Burg; Mr. C. H. Hughes, as Kit Upjohn, has the sympathies of the audience in his attempt to win the love of the beautiful B.A., who in turn is prettily presented by Miss Katherine Parry; Mr. Forrester Harvey is a boyish as well as a boisterous W. G., and Mr. Charles Middleton is good as Ben, a boatman; Miss Ruby Hamilton Belasco, as Mrs. Golightly, proves to be an accomplished actress; Miss Eleanor Papera is a vivacious Nanny O'Brien; and the humorous character, Sarah Rigg, is very cleverly handled by Miss Jennie Douglas-Hicks. The curtain-raiser is Curing a Husband.

BELFAST.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. M. McCann.—There have been many representations of Macbeth in this city, but certainly Mr. William Mollison is to be congratulated on the scholarly manner in which he impersonated the rôle on Monday. Throughout his work was superb. Miss Evelyn McNay in the part of Lady Macbeth rose to a high level of dramatic power; Mr. W. A. Makersy's Duncan was also good; and the Macduff of Mr. William Calvert was also noteworthy; Mr. Whitford Kane, a native of the district, played as the first Witch, and was clever in every way. The other pieces performed include The Bonnie Brier Bush, Hamlet, and As You Like It.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. Fred W. Warden; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris.—The Six Brothers Luck top the bill here in their pantomime absurdity Blazes. Sammy Shields, comedian, is heard to advantage in his songs and football stories; Carrie Laurie's Miniature company, in a sketch, The Belles of the Kitchen, take well; as do the Grisse Trio in an acrobatic speciality; José Collins, a pretty comedienne, is encored; the Sisters Edwards, a couple of good duettists and dancers, captivate the house; and also appearing are Charles Lilburn and the Palace pictures.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Will Sley; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Downs.—Wilson and Waring, in A Bit of Nonsense, are top of the bill here; that pathetic play, The Little Colonel, played by Ernest Montefiore and company, takes very well; Chas. Fisher's company, in The Music Master, bring down the house; Zanfretta and Napio's musical act is smart in every way; a gymnastic novelty is provided by the Four Rio Brothers; and P. A. Hopo, vocalist; Harry Wright, comedian; Nellie Gannon, serio; Harry Conlin, comedian; and the Hipposcope pictures make up a good bill.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. John A. Walker.—Miss Queenie Leighton takes premier place on the programme here, and her songs are much admired; a laughable sketch, Captain Cupid, is well played by Geo. C. Dougherty and company; the musical act of Will Cornish is smart; the speciality of the Calcotts is a good item on a well-balanced programme, which includes Bert Danson, Will Montgomery, Tom Wootwell, and the Empire picturcs.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. S. Neill.—The Alhambra company this week is playing The Woman in Black. The company all do well in the drama, notably Messrs. Fred Terriss (Frank Edenbridge), Cyril Grier (Count Ivan), Tom H. Solly (Bob Stokes), with the Misses Nina Blake-Adams (Ruth), Kathleen Magee (Countess Marie), Mattie Crawford (Gwenny), and Alice Clarke (Mrs. Mendall). The Short-sighted Sportsman forms the subject of the Bioscope picture.

BILSTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Battersby.—Messrs. Fred Acton and H. C. Nash are presenting Between the Lights. Mr. William R. Winning undertakes the heavy lead, and makes Stanley Crofton the rogue he is supposed to be. The actor who works most effectively in the piece is Mr. Frank Orchard, in the dual rôle of Oswald Warren and Ben Armley; whilst Mr. Edward Stream uses his opportunities to the full as Captain Hinton. Mr. Fred Acton enacts Jimmy Tickle, and Misses Phyllis Elton, Fanny Williams, Millie Doris, and Winifred Acton work with a will towards the success of the drama.

BIRKENHEAD.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL — Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Grant; Secretary, Miss Isabel Morris.—Mr. Silvanus Dauncey and Mr. V. Leveaux's company are fulfilling a highly-successful return engagement with The Walls of Jericho. Mr. Wilfred E. Payne secures the sympathies and interest of the audience throughout by a clever and artistic impersonation of Jack Frobisher. He is admirably supported by Miss Dora Hole, who, as Lady Alethea, plays a difficult part with much skill and effect; Mr. E. Spencer Geach unmistakably scores as Hankey Bannister; the Marquis of Steventon is appropriately enacted by Mr. W. Kingsford Pearce; and Miss Margaret Murray as Lady Westerby, and Miss Elsie Ross as Lady Lucy Derenham are efficient. Other parts are adequately represented, and the production is carefully staged.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke.—One of Fred Karno's companies is presenting the mirth-provoking sketch, The Bailiff, with great success. Mr. Fred Kitchen sustains the title-rôle with great verve, and the production goes with a rare swing from start to finish. Mr. Tom Costello, the popular comedian, is on a welcome return engagement; and Mr. Charles Norton, mimic; Miss Gertie Gitana, comedienne; the McConnell Trio, in their sketch, Mrs. Skinner's Lodgers; Miss Elly Adair, comedienne and dancer; and Brown's Royal Bioscope complete an excellent company.

OLYMPIAN GARDENS, ROCK FERRY.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton.—The popularity of the Pierrot entertainment here continues unabated.

THE TOWER, NEW BRIGHTON.—Manager, Mr. William Holland.—The comic ballet, Monte Carlo, the ballet divertissement Wonderland, a strong variety show, and a host of competitions continue to attract crowds of visitors.

BIRMINGHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Tom B. Davis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Philip Rodway.—The Cingalee has returned here with Mr. Charles Macdona's company. Miss Marjorey Grey shines among the ladies with her fascinating picture of the Cingalese girl, Nanoya; Miss Lydia Flopp is rapturously applauded for her graceful singing and dancing as Peggy Sabine; Miss Cora Mansell is successful as Lady Patricia; and the pas seul in Act II. by Miss Violet Hope (the charming Angy of the play) is very popular. Mr. Wilfred Heath makes a devoted and melodious lover as Harry Vereker; Mr. Milroy Cooper does well with the part of Boobhamba; Mr. W. J. Austin is among the most successful as Bobby Warren; Mr. Frank Sutton scores as Sir Peter Loftus; and Mr. Tom Payne keeps the audience in laughter with his merry humours as the Baboo lawyer, Chambhuddy Ram.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs. Rodgers, Limited; Manager, Mr. J. F. Graham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Johnston. — The Moody-Manners Opera Company opened here to a good house on Monday with Aida, so successfully revived on the last visit here. Mme. De Vere-Sapio once more held her auditors in delightful thrall with her perfect exposition of the title-rôle; Mr. Joseph O'Mara gave the music allotted to Radames with splendid tone and manly feeling; Miss Toni Selter achieved a genuine success as Ammeris; Mr. Chas. Magrath was impressive as the King; Mr. Lewys James was both vocally and dramatically excellent as Amonasro; Mr. Charles Manners sang in his fine, sonorous style as the High Priest; and Miss V. Brown succeeded as the Priestess. On Tuesday, and for the first time in the provinces, Madame Butterfly was given, when Mme. Fanny Moody, whose impersonation scored alike in the tragic and the lighter passages, was supported by Mr. O'Mara, who as the hero won further honours, and a splendid all-round cast. Lohengrin, Tannhäuser, La Bohème, and Faust are also in the programme.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Lester Collingwood.—Her Love Against the World, with the hall-mark of its Lyceum success, has brought crowded houses to witness the fine efforts of Messrs. Hallatt and Howard's company in this popular play. Miss Grace Heywood gives a capital impression of the Princess of Idalia; Mr. Frank E. Petley brings down the house with his fine manly acting as the Earl of Strathmere; Mr. Mayor-Cooke gives considerable colour to the schemes of Prince Ulric; Mr. W. H. Hallatt lifts the part of Prince Otamar into much prominence; Mr. Fred Emery is clever in his treatment of Prince Maurice; Miss Gertrude Price appears as Shula with distinction; Miss Julia De Esco shines as the dancer, Corona; Miss Rossie St. John is happy in her acting as Nello; and the Misses Lizzie Lennon and Hettie Ferguson as the maids, and Messrs. Henry B. Lewis and J. Fulton Millar as Henrick and Fritz, light up the play with some clever flashes of humour. The remaining rôles are in excellent hands.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Andrew Melville; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hindle Taylor.—The Female Swindler is being played by Mr. Tom H. Taylor's company. Miss Cecilia Dare assumes the characteristics of Lu

Valroy with much power and ease; Mr. Joseph Miliane embodies the rôle of the detective, Coulson, in a particularly able manner; Mr. Stanley Radcliffe makes the rascally character of Geoffrey Warden sufficiently bad and clear; Mr. Frank Woodville hits off the rôle of the receiver, Mikestein, admirably; Mr. Henry Wright as "the ambitious young man" plays four distinct parts with a fine appreciation of scope; Miss Jessie Belmore wins sympathy for the rôle of May Andrews with her charming acting; Mr. Walter H. Domoney is quite at home as the lover, Harold Travers; Miss Jessica Ford is well in the running as Mary Ann Mee; and the other characters are good.

CARLTON THEATRE, SALTLEY.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Alexander.—Her Marriage Vow is given here by Mr. Edward L. Garside and Mr. J. Forbes Knowles and company. Mr. Garside's acting as Gilbert Carlton is marked with all the success that is to be expected of this tried and popular actor; Mr. George Beverley has calculated his opportunities as Ned Benton to a nicety; Miss Ruth Shepherd as the wife comes in with some touching scenes; Mr. J. Forbes Knowles as Daffy Dan is well liked; Miss Nelly Garside's efforts in the fun-making as Maggie are wholly successful and well recognised; Miss Nelly Shirley presents Hester Norton in a very acceptable light; Mr. Dan Ryan is a valuable and humorous contributor as Larry Leary; and Mr. Walter Wilby as Jim Burke, Mr. Wilford Bailey as Eben Chubb, Mr. John W. Rider as Walters, and Miss Annie Beaumont as Almira do good work.

THEATRE ROYAL, ASTON.—Lessee, Mr. Charles Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Whittles.—The Power of the Cross is represented here by Mr. Lingford Carson's company. Mr. George A. De Gray clothes his assumption of Curzola with absorbing interest and mystery; Miss Marie Menzies as the heroine, Margaret, exercises all her wonted fascination; Miss Lilly Roselle exhibits more than ordinary skill in her delineation of Rita Lascelles; Mr. Frank Brunell as Gerald Fairfax and Mr. Alexander J. Haviland as Leslie Fairfax are both worthy; Miss Phyllis Vaughan as Blanche Kingsley and Miss Etta Turner as Dolly Gray act successfully; Mr. A. Hall Menzies is a salient character of the play as Benjamin Hawke; Mr. John S. Chamberlain gives the rôle of Timothy O'Dowd its due unction; and Mr. Sydney Fiennes and Mr. Dan Rose play good parts.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Resident-Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham.—At the head of the bill is Harry Randall, who has several new songs, which are admirably suited to the public taste. Edward Lauri, too, is very quaint in his musical mélange, In Her Boudoir, in which, assisted by May Beatty and company, he has plenty of opportunity afforded him of displaying his ability as a quick-change artist. Alexandre and Hughes are mirthful without vulgarity; while the musical part of their turn is not the least interesting. Eadie and Ramsden are very successful in Charlie's Visit; while Leipzig, the conjurer, has a series of very clever tricks with cards, coins, and other articles, in the manipulation of which he is very successful. Hilda Playfair, ballad vocalist; Kerr and Coe, in Yards and Houses; Charles Robinson, with illustrated songs; and the Sisters Casselli, duettists and dancers, also contribute excellent items.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thos. Barrasford.—Brinn's remarkable performances in his act, Pastimes on a Battleship, are greatly admired; Kellie and Agnas give a taste of Australian comedy, and the sample is very acceptable; the couple are not only singers and dancers, but also clever acrobats; Dora Lyric, vocalist, speedily sings herself into popularity; and Colby and May, the ventriloquist and dancing "doll," are of course heartily welcomed. The Flockton-Foster Comedy Company, Graham's Juveniles, and the Vyponds are also responsible for interesting turns.

BORDESLEY PALACE.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Edward Foster.—Mr. F. W. Purcell's company occupy the premier position in the programme this week in a comedietta entitled That Brute Simmons; Tom Hearn, "the laziest juggler on earth," gives that comic interlude of his which met with so much favour at one of the local pantomimes last season, his physical culture burlesque being uproariously funny; a highly-exciting sketch is Zululand; or, With Royston's Horse, which is vividly portrayed by a competent company, and retains the attention of the audience from start to finish; Lillian Lowe has a splendid mezzo-soprano voice, and her rendering of "The flight of ages" meets with that approval which is always attached to high-class singing at this house; Will Cromwell, comedian; Daniel and Son, acrobats; and O'Malley and Brown, in a duologue of Irish-American flavour, were most successful in pleasing the audience.

BISHOP AUCKLAND.—EDEN THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs. R. Addison, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. Huntley.—Mr. Charles Macdona's company is here in A Country Girl on a return visit. Mr. Martin D. Pitts is an effective Geoffrey Chaloner; Mr. Bernard Vaughan as the Rajah of Bhong and Miss Poppy Dale as the Princess use their talents to the best possible advantage; Miss Blanch Lynd gives a good interpretation of Nan; and Miss Gladys Christol as Marjorie Joy is very charming. Mr. Arthur Staples is an amusing Barry; Sophie is in the capable hands of Miss Gipsy Touzeau; and Mr. W. O. Billington (Sir Joseph Verity) and Mr. Fred Carrington (Granfer Mummery) sustain their respective parts with credit.

BLYTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arthur C. Moody.—Mr. Frank Bertram's company have paid a successful visit with The Breed of the Treshams. The most prominent rôle, that of Lieut. Reresby, otherwise the Rat, was undertaken by Mr. Sidney Bland, who proved himself to be an actor of great ability, and was accorded a hearty reception; Mr. Alfred Hollies was acceptable as Viscount Dorsington; Mr. Benson North, as the Hon. Hungerford, gave a fine reading of the part; Mr. George Traill was good as Colonel Sir Henry Curwen; and Mr. Robert Noble played with great success as the Hon. Frances Tresham; the Batty of Miss Grace Harlington was a most artistic performance; and the other parts were in good hands.

GAIETY.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. George B. Good.—Viry Bert and Bert, knockabout artists; Addie Rose, song and dance artist; Will Bowman, quaint comedian; Owen Deed, comedian; and the Cardonians, illustrated song artists; and the Bioscope make up a good programme, much appreciated by large audiences.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. William Tudor.—Messrs. Doyle and Connell, the new lessees, opened on Monday with a pleasing programme of pictures and variety turns, and were well patronised.

BOLTON.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jos. B. Lloyd.—This week we are having a return visit of Mr. Smith, presented by Mr. Russell Norrie and his company. Mr. Russell Norrie himself sustains the part of Mr. Smith with conspicuous ability; and Miss Gladys Lloyd gives a clever interpretation of Lady Mary Hildergate.

GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kenyon.—Clever turns appearing here are headed by Kelly, Gillette, and Bart in a unique act as bounding billiardists. Doran Brothers appear in a funny gymnastic display; Annie Casey, comedienne; Percy Johnson, comedian; Carlotta Levey, late of the Three sisters Levey; Charlie Chard, comedian; Mollie Woolstenhulme, operatic vocalist; Harry Rogerson, the tired comedian; the Sisters Temple, dainty and refined vocal duettists; Mozzetto, juggler; and Vernon's Imperial Bioscope are also among the attractions.

BOSCOMBE.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. F. Mouillot and W. de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Ball.—Fred Gimnett's company in a miniature melodrama, entitled Beacon Bell, is the chief turn here this week, and is played to advantage by the members of the company. The Jees present their musical and knockabout sketch, the Musical Smithy; Phillips and Marriott, society entertainers, indulge in clever song and dance; Hyde and Cody, acrobatic comedians, provide a very mirthful turn, in addition to executing some clever tumbling; Jimmy James, humorist and banjoist, is well appreciated; Bessie Lind is a pleasing comedienne and dancer; a novel hand-balancing turn is introduced by the Picquays; and the Hippodrome pictures conclude a capital programme.

BOURNEMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietors, David Allen and Sons; Sole Lessee, Mr. Mouillot; Manager, Mr. James Mayall.—Mr. James Welch's company, in When Knights Were Bold, is paying a first visit here. Mr. Vincent Erne as Sir Guy de Vere gives an extremely humorous impersonation; to Miss Ernita Lascelles a special word of praise must be accorded for her excellent rendering of Lady Rowena; Mr. V. Sansbury as Isaacson, Mr. Cecil Clayton as Widdicome, Mr. Campbell Bishop as the Dean, and Mr. Cory Thomas as Sir Brian are capital in their respective characters; while good performances come from Mr. Clarence Napier, Mr. Reginald Hunter, Miss Thyrza Norman, and Miss Ethel Royale.

SHAFTESBURY HALL. — After a season of seven weeks, with two performances daily, Mr. J. T. West's pictures continue to draw large audiences. The great attraction this week is a film showing motor-car racing at Brooklands, taken from a competing car, running at a speed of 60 miles an hour. The interludes are most capably filled by Pino Conti, a versatile actor, and Miss Kathleen Chipman, who is possessed of a voice of excellent quality.

BRADFORD.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. John Hart; General Manager, Mr. T. F. Doyle; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Richardson.—Mr. Robert Courtneidge's magnificent production, Tom Jones, is drawing packed audiences here this week. In the title-rôle Mr. Harry Welchman achieves much distinction. As Benjamin Partridge Mr. Dan Rolyat's humour and eccentric dancing simply convulse the audience; Miss Carrie Moore's bright performance of the maid, Honour, too, is another feature of the opera; Miss Ruth Vincent's very charming voice and grace fit her well for the part of Sophia; the old favourite, Mr. Ambrose Manning, is most diverting as Squire Western; Mr. John Morley as Mr. Allworthy, and Mr. Arthur Soames as Blifil, are well cast; Gregory is capitally played by Mr. Jay Laurier, with a fine sense of humour. Mr. Edward German's quaint music is delightfully rendered, and Mr. Hamish McCunn has the fine chorus and augmented orchestra well, in hand, and the scenic effects are charming.

PRINCE'S THEATRE. Lessee, Mr. Francis Laidler; Acting-Manager, Mr. N. Hepworth.—Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow are this week again delighting Mr. Laidler's patrons with the breezy American drama, At Cripple Creek, and Mr. Stanley Bedwell is earning distinction as the manly hero, Joe Mayfield; very charmingly Miss Nancy Roberts supports him as Belle Gordon; the part of Martin Mason, the villain of the story, Mr. Eric Hudson fills with effect; and Miss Daisy Carlton, Mr. Will Hook, Mr. R. Harley-West, and Miss Rosie Hopkins are seen to advantage in the humorous side of the drama.

THE EMPIRE.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Percival Craig.—In a fine programme Mr. Harry Roxbury and his smart company are very prominent in the capital musical mélange, The Prince of Monte Carlo. The clever Craggs are also to the fore with fine acrobatic work in their comedy sketch, Billy the Steward and the Channel Queen; Harry Weldon's "coon" burlesque is very funny; a very clever horizontal bar performance is gone through by the smart Moulier Sisters; the Haytors are responsible for good comedy in a short sketch, Cabby and His Fare; J. A. Wilson and his clever dog Towser are diverting; in her musical incident, "The Schoolboy's Dream," Miss Rhoda Paul is interesting and well received; In crayon drawings, illustrative of popular songs, Rossi Ashton displays great skill; and there is some good vocalism by Ellis Barrieton, and acceptable Scotch comedy by J. B. Preston.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Richard Ralli.—Herbert Clifton displays originality and cleverness here this week as a mimic, and Burnetti is clever as a character musician and quick-change artist; the Custances contribute a smart comedietta, A Game for Two; in The Red Letter, an incident suggested by the Thaw case, Miss Lily Pearl as Evelyn and Mr. H. Leslie Bell as Whyte act well, and have excellent support; a most diverting acrobatic comedy act is presented by Wild, Willie, and West, "The Bounding Navvies"; Lord, Murray, and Lord are good in a comedy gymnastic mélange, The Intruder; there is some excellent harmony by the mirthful Tally Ho Trio; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux show some fine pictures.

BRIDLINGTON.—NEW SPA THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE. — Manager, Mr. Henry Hague.—Mr. W. Penrhyn Forster's company has been here with a new musical play, The Officers' Mess, in which Mr. Harry Liddle as the officer's servant Rugg is remarkably clever. The singing and dancing of Miss Nellie Sheffield in the part of Rose Smith give great pleasure. The other rôles are all capably filled. Mr. George Grossmith gave two of his capital entertainments on Tuesday and Wednesday, in which he showed his great powers as a laughter-maker. He had the assistance of Miss Dorothy Scott, who submitted humorous songs and stories; Miss Dorothy D'Egville, a talented vocalist; and Miss Bernadette Rawstron, pianiste. The attraction for the remainder of the week was supplied by Mr. Ralland's company in La Poupée.

ROYAL VICTORIA THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Charles Palmer.—Miss Florence Glossop-Harris and her Shakespearean company are giving a round of plays here this week. On Monday, in The Taming of the Shrew, Miss Harris gave a very fine representation of Katharine; Mr. Frank Cellier, jun., played the part of Petruchio with great effect; Mr. Mark Draper was admirable as Baptista, as was Mr. E. Stuart Vincent as Hortensio. Mr. Aubrey Mather as Lucentio, Mr. Percival Madgwick as Gremio, Mr. Percy H. Vernon as Tranio, Mr. Herbert Halford as Biandello, and Mr. Arthur Landor as Grumio were most efficient. Miss Gertrude Gilbert gave a fine rendering of the part of Bianca, as did Miss Muriel Dole as Curtis, and Miss Nora Golden as the Widow. On Tuesday Romeo and Juliet was played, with Miss Harris and Mr. Frank Cellier, jun., as the lovers; Wednesday, The Merchant of Venice; and the other plays of the répertoire include Much Ado About Nothing, Twelfth Night, and the Drury Lane drama, The Royal Oak.

ROYAL PRINCE'S PARADE.—Manager, Mr. Charles Palmer.—Mr. Harry Thornton, a fine baritone, is the vocalist at the promenade concerts, under Mr. Joseph Sainton, who is constantly introducing novelties for the entertainment of the visitors. In the Grand Hall, Mr. Flockton-Foster and his merry band of entertainers are still a great draw, as are also the Loyal Dominion Animated Pictures, which are a never-failing source of pleasure to both young and old.

NEW SPA AND GARDENS. — General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. Henry Hague.—Herr Simon Wurm and his Imperial Viennese Orchestra concluded their season on Sunday evening, and gave one of their best programmes in the theatre to a large audience. This week Mr. Surrie Lindon and his Vaudeville Entertainers are giving some of their choicest items, Miss Frey, Mr. Harry Collard, Mr. Bob White, and the other members of the company being very effective in their several clever turns.

SUMMER GARDENS.—Lessees, Messrs. Beanland, Bath, and Danton; Manager, Mr. Charles Beanland.—Those popular entertainers, the Waterloo Pierrots, are giving their amusing minstrel show this week in the old "Christy Minstrel" style, with black faces, and also producing their burlesque pantomime, Cinderella.

PALACE.—Manager, Mr. J. W. Delmar.—The Brisian Animated Pictures continue to be a great attraction here, and the amusing contest of "Whirling the Whizzer" causes great amusement. Saturday last was a grand gala day.

BRIGHTON. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Licensee and Manager, Mr. H. Cecil Beryl; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harcourt M. Beryl.—Mr. C. P. Levilly's company opened here on Monday with La Poupée. Miss Stella Gastelle made a charming Alesia, and displayed very artistic vocalisation; Mr. W. H. Powell as Hilarius afforded great amusement with his eccentricities and dry humour; Mr. F. Maxwell Stewart was admirably suited as the modest novice, Launcelot; Mr. Ernest Torrence was highly successful as Father Maximo; Miss Dulcie Garland's Mme. Hilarius and Miss Kitty Cavendish's Henri were well played; the gay old beaux, Loremois and Baron Chanterelle, had diverting representatives in Mr. Leon Simkin and Mr. Arthur Gibbons; and able support was given by Mr. Vernon Reed as Balthazar and Mr. Vernon Booth as the Notary. The chorus and orchestra were very effective under the direction of Mr. Harry Rushworth. At Thursday's special matinée Miss Ellen Terry, supported by Mr. James Carew and her London company, gave a performance of Captain Brassbound's Conversion.

GRAND THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ben Court.—Mr. Frederick Melville's company is here this week with The Ugliest Woman on Earth. Miss Beatrice Homer appears with great success in the title-rôle; Mr. Philip Darien is highly effective as Jack Merryman; Mr. Leyton Cancellor submits a good character study as Hubert Gold; Mr. Leonard Thackeray's Antonio Luchesi is a capital impersonation; Miss Nell Oliver displays able acting as Rose Courtenay; Miss Nellie Jackson gives an admirable representation of Aggie Brown; Miss Violet Macaree's Morita merits praise; and Mr. Harold Standing as Tom Redvers and Mr. Harry Wimpenny as Raggles are successful. Especial commendation is due to Mr. Tubby Edlin for his clever and very entertaining impersonation of Tubby Herrick. The drama is splendidly staged.

ALHAMBRA.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. L. Graydon; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. Ernest Lepard.—The Four Flying Eugenes submit a clever aerial gymnastic performance; Edie Veno is an eccentric comedienne and dancer; Johnny Dwyer is a pleasing comedian; Ada Parker is a charming singer and dancer; the Celtic Trio are well received in a medley of music, mirth, and melody; the Sisters Judge give an excellent turn with their performing cockatoos, macaws, and parrots; Cestrian, the acrobatic waiter, wins cordial applause; Charles Austin, comedian, appears in his latest success, Mr. Perkins; Conway and Leland are merry monopedes; and the Alhambrascope pictures are interesting.

HIPPODROME THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford and Smith; Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford.—Arthur Roberts, supported by a capital company, affords great amusement in The Importance of being Another Man's Wife; Pat Rafferty, the Hibernian comedian, achieves great success; the Delomes are warmly applauded in The Phantom Clogs; Horace Lane is a very smart and entertaining comedian; Mountford and Walsh are clever speciality artists; Winifred Ward, "the immaculate boy," gives a capital turn; Martine and Son are effective American song illustrators; Charles Cavalli, ventriloquist, wins well-deserved applause; the Three Royal Temples are pleasing operatic vocalists; Millie Howell is a refined songstress; and the Barrascope pictures are amusing.

WEST PIER.—Secretary and Entertainment Manager, Mr. A. D. Norman.—Mr. Arthur Bourchier's company, under the management of Mr. Silvanus Dauncey and Mr. M. V. Leveaux, is here this week with The Walls of Jericho. Mr. H. Laurence Leyton gives a fine portrayal of Jack Frobisher; Miss Edith Cuthbert's Lady Alethea is admirably enacted; Mr. Ben Lewin makes a capital Marquis of Steventon; Miss Nona Wynne is a charming Lady Lucy; Miss Pauline Strauss as Miss Mornington merits praise; Miss Amaide's Lady Westerby and Mr. Russell Barry's Hankey Bannister are admirably played; and other effective impersonations are submitted by Mr. Eustace Burnaby (Harry Dallas) and Mr. George Percy (Bertram Hannaford).

PALACE PIER THEATRE.—Mrs. Bandmann-Palmer and company opened here on Monday with Catherine, Duchess of Dantzig. Mrs. Bandmann-Palmer as Catherine in the prologue and as Mme. La Marechale Lefebre in the play achieved great success by her very artistic acting. Mr. Walter Raynham made a bluff Marechal Lefebre; Mr. Howard Rose acquitted himself admirably as Adrian; Mr. Ernest Griffin was well suited as Napoleon; Mr. F. Skein gave a good portrayal of Fouche; and Mr. Harry Colbeck's Sergeant Pierre, Miss Irene Knox's Mme. de Staël, Miss Katherine Herbert's Princess Pauline, and Miss Gwladys-Faunce's Rosalie also merit commendation. The programmes for the week also included The Merchant of Venice, School for Scandal, East Lynne, Sapho, and Nell Gwynn.

GRAND SKATING RINK.—The Mondial Cinema again provides afternoon and evening entertainments here. New subjects are represented, and the animated pictures prove very attractive.

BRISTOL.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. James Macready Chute.—Mr. Leonard Boyne, supported by his London company, is here with the successful play, Raffles, by arrangement with Mr. Charles Frohman. The staging of the play is admirable, and it is capitally acted. Mr. Leonard Boyne presents an excellent exposition of Raffles; he is cool and collected as required for the part, and sufficiently powerful when necessary. Mr. E. W. Thomas makes a good part of Curtis Bedford; Mr. Arthur Willoughby is a dignified Earl of Amersteth; Mr. Harold West makes the most of Viscount Crowley; Mr. Lewis Edgard acts well as Harry Manders; Mr. Dalziel Heron displays considerable power as Crawshay; Miss Lilian Hallows is convincing as Mrs. Vidal; Miss Dorothy Shawe is pleasing and sympathetic as Lady Ethel; and Lady Melrose, Gwendoline Conran, and Marie are satisfactorily taken by Miss Alys Rees, Miss Maud Cressall, and Miss Dorothy Gordon. The performance commences with a one-act play by Eric Lewis, A Lesson in Shakespeare, cleverly played by Mr. Dalziel Heron, Mr. Harold West, and Miss Dorothy Shawe.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. C. Alty.—Messrs. Armitage and Leigh's company is very successful here with Leah Kleschna, the play being staged with liberality. Miss Bessie Rignold is admirable in the title-rôle, her performance being very powerful and interesting; Mr. William Clayton acts excellently as Kleschna; Mr. William F. Grant is dignified and impressive as Paul Sylvaine; Mr. Hamilton Deane makes the most of Raoul Berton; Mr. Campbell Goldsmid presents a good study of Schram; Mr. Charles Barrett is curt and soldier-like as General Berton, and in the earlier part of the play he and Miss Violet Thorold are really amusing in the parts of Valentine Favre and Sophie Champonnier. The remaining parts are carefully taken by Miss Ethel Russell, Miss Emmie Wallace, Miss May Hammond, Miss Edith Summers, Messrs. Bert Gunter, Bernard Rain, Arles Conway, Frederick Bannerman, and Henry Buxton.

PALACE. — Resident - Manager, Mr. Horace Livermore; Treasurer, Mr. F. J. V. Welchman.—Rousby's Around Paris is the leading attraction here, the production attaining a high state of perfection in electric and scenic effects; Mark Melford and company amuse with the sketch Only a Wedding; the Brothers Durant score with their speciality, The Æroplane of the Airship Kings; the Glenroy Troupe are expert dancers and speciality performers; Maxwell and Francis do a good comedy act; Frank Seeley, eccentric comedian, obtains applause; Harry Wenburn, comedian, is successful; and Jack Rae amuses as a comedy gymnast. The performance concludes with animated pictures.

EMPIRE.—Proprietor, Mr. B. Pearce Lucas; Resident-Manager, Mr. Sid Macaire.—John Tiller's company is here with A Trip to Paris, the sketch being amusing, and serving to introduce much comic business, good singing, and smart dancing; Siems does some clever illusions, card tricks, &c.; Daisy James, comedienne, presents a pleasing turn; Will English, coloured comedian, is successful; Kenneth and Kane do a good dancing and patter turn; Piquo is successful in a pot-pourri gymnastic act; and the Four Sisters Victoria please with their musical and dancing entertainment. The performance concludes with animated pictures.

COLSTON HALL.—Ralph Pringle's animated pictures continue to attract good houses. This week a new feature has been added in the form of the chrono-megaphone, Harry Lauder being selected to commence the series. Lauder's voice is unmistakable, and his tricks of movement and characteristic style is faithfully produced. Amongst other new films may be mentioned La Milo as Lady Godiva in the Coventry Pageant. The variety company and excellent band are also attractive.

DRILL HALL.—The Royal Italian Circus is here for a short season. The animals are all admirably trained, over two hundred taking part in the entertainment, and comic business is introduced by the Clowns Piccolo, Fiori, Nimble Nip, and Wee Wullie.

BROUGHTON.—VICTORIA THEATRE, LTD.—Manager and Licensee, Mr. J. Fred Watson.—The Lancashire Lad is a new piece by Mr. G. Carlton Wallace, which gave much satisfaction on Monday to a full house. In another column will be found a full notice of it.

BURNLEY. — VICTORIA OPERA HOUSE. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—Crowded houses are here witnessing Miss Mary Austin and Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds's company in Women and Wine. Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds takes in admirable style the rôle of Dick Seymour; Miss Cissie St. Elmo gives a clever representation of Marcel Rigadout; Mary Andrews is capably performed by Miss Violet Sims; and Miss Joan Pereira is good as La Colombe. Mr. Harry Harrop as Charles Sauter and Miss Ethel Vinroy as Janet Marlow keep the ball of humour rolling; Mr. Edwin Kisby is a striking Caliban; and the dancing of the Lottie Stone Troupe is fully appreciated, as also is the charming singing of Miss Madge Northcote.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—At the head of the bill here this week is Captain Frank Taylor's troupe of educated baboons, whose tricks are greatly applauded. The Daunton Shaw Troupe, Australian cyclists, display ability and smartness; a drama in tabloid form, The Fight in the Forge, works the audience to a high state of excitement; the Cymros, Welsh duettists, sing "Keys of Heaven" in a most acceptable manner; Harry Fife, comedian, is good; Fiorette and Miss Elly are smart in a jumping act; and Lily Levey takes exceedingly well. Joe Humphrey, vocal comedian, and the great band contest by the Empire Theatroscope complete the programme.

BURTON-ON-TRENT. — NEW THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. H. Dudley Bennett; Acting-Manager, Mr. John Waller.—Mr. Arthur Bourchier's company is here with The Morals of Marcus. Mr. C. H. Croker-King depicts with spirit and pathos the rôle of Marcus Ordeyne; the unsophisticated Carlotta is played with naïve simplicity by Miss Hilda Antony; the cynical villainy of Sebastian Pasquale is commendably portrayed by Mr. Richard Neville; as an emotional actress Miss Joan Burton (Judith Mainwaring) is entirely satisfactory; creditable interpretations of their respective rôles are given by Mr. A. H. Leveaux, Miss Kathleen O'Conner, Miss Gladys Purnell, Miss Mary O'Neill, and Miss Annie Windsor.

BURY ST. EDMUNDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—General-Manager, Mr. Auguste A. Peuleve. — The Tyranny of Tears, admirably presented by Mr. Austin Leigh's company, is the attraction here. The Clement Parbury of Mr. Austin Leigh is a capital piece of acting; Mr. E. Vernon, as George Gunning, acts with distinction and refinement; another enjoyable performance comes from Mr. H. G. Mason as Colonel Armitage; Mr. M. Trieve is a satisfactory Evans; Miss Mabel Archdall skilfully portrays the tearful but charming Mrs. Parbury; and Hyacinth Woodward is played by Miss May Saker with piquancy and freshness.

BUXTON.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, The Buxton Gardens Co., Ltd.; Secretary and Manager, Mr. Arthur Willoughby. — On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday this week we had Mr. Mouillot's company, in The Girl Behind the Counter. Mr. Arthur Cartwright was effective as Charles Chetwyn; and Mr. Ellis Holland did good work as General Sir Wilkie Willoughby. Miss Winifred Knightley was the Lady Willoughby; and Mr. Howard Cridland had a good dude part as Gushington. M. Jules Charmettes was the Monsieur Duval; Miss Florence Dee was a taking Millie Mostyn; Miss Eileen Clanford proved to be a sprightly Ninette; Susie was ably portrayed by Miss Irene Lavington; the comedy was supplied by Mr. Frederick Park as Dudds, and Messrs. A. M. Moore and William Amery as Waiters. Miss Norah Brocklebank was the Winnie Willoughby. The piece is admirably staged.

CAMBRIDGE. — NEW THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. B. Redfern, J.P., D.L.—To the delight of a great many the theatre was opened on Monday for the season, and a good house welcomed Messrs. A. Hamilton Warden and Chas. V. Sandford's company in A Woman's Past. Miss Maisie Hanbury has a winsome presence as Bessie; Miss Mary Mallalieu as Dorothy Heath was very natural; Mr. J. Cook Hinton was first-class as David Heath; Mr. Charles V. Sandford as Frank Dellannoy was funny in the part; Mr. G. Mouton-Williams as Uriah Craven was excellent as the villain; Mr. Hamilton Warden gave a good representation of Clement Harper; Miss Nesta Sandford's Clara Darrell was entirely successful.

GUILDHALL.—Messrs. Gale and Polden's interesting exhibition of animated pictures illustrating "Life in the King's Service" is here. Besides the pictures a variety entertainment is also given, consisting of songs and a ventriloquial display.

CARDIFF.—NEW THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Robert Redford.—Patrons of the New Theatre are favoured this week with a return visit of Pinero's comedy, His House in Order, and an appreciative audience assembled on Monday night to witness Mr. George Alexander's company's rendition of this highly successful piece. The rôle of Hilary Jesson is still in the hands of Mr. Frank Fenton, and a more effective impersonation could not be desired; Mr. Fenton was well received upon his first appearance, the memory of his previous fine performance being evidently still fresh in the minds of Cardiffians; Miss Marie Polini's delineation of Nina is exceptionally fine, her portrayal of the part is indeed a splendid piece of acting; Mr. Ernest Young gives a faithful rendering of Filmer Jesson; Mr. Richard Dalton and Mr. Langford Browne are quite at home in the parts of Sir Daniel and Pryce Ridgeley; while as Lady and Geraldine Ridgeley, Miss Madge Johnstone and Miss Henrietta Leverett acquitted themselves most creditably; Mr. Charles Tyrel makes the most of Major Maurewarde; and a charming impersonation of little Derek comes from Miss Maisie Richardson; Miss Jean D. Cadell is also worthy of praise as Mlle. Thomé.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Robt. Redford.—In Holy (!) Russia is presented by Mr. J. Rice Cassidy's company. Mrs. J. Rice Cassidy as Renée Rubinoff submits a delineation which is well acted and charmingly portrayed; Miss Ada Roscoe in the rôle of Catska Lavotski also presents a clever rendition; Mr. J. Rice Cassidy appears as Colonel Richard Forrest, and proves a capital and humorous representative of the part; Mr. J. Cuthbertson as Micky Nolan ably supports him with an excellent interpretation; Laurice Steragoff is powerfully acted by Mr. Carl Rovinelli, while Count Petrolski is most faithfully produced by Mr. Rolf Leslie.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. S. Dring.—Popular Hetty King is delighting her audiences this week by her cleverly rendered songs; as a male impersonator this well-dressed little lady would be hard to beat; George Formby is a comedian who sings his excruciatingly amusing songs in a style entirely his own; Cruikshanks is as entertaining as ever in mirth and song; the Musical Johnsons are undoubtedly past-masters in the art of xylophone playing; Wyndham and Kitty (the former a native of Cardiff) provide an excellent wire act; while Rauschle, an impersonator of makers of history; Eda Mardy, a gifted vocalist; Rose Hamilton, a refined comedienne; Anna Kenwick, a true exponent of coon songs; and the welcome Bioscope complete the programme.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Burton.—Miss Alice Raymond's players are here in a novel musical extravaganza. Miss Raymond is undoubtedly one of the finest cornet players heard in Cardiff for some considerable time; Abdullah and La Superbe present a marvellous electrical fantastic display, the pretty effect being quite pleasing; quite an unusual turn is that of Willie Gardner, who is a splendid exponent of ice and roller skate step dancing; Lillith in a great aerial act is capital, her performance being distinctly deceptive; Mlle De Rose, premier lady baritone vocalist, and Lillian Warren, pictorial songstress, both sing well in their particular style; while Zarmo, billed as the mad juggler, is really clever and amusing; to complete the programme J. H. Hawtrey, fine actor-vocalist, is numbered; also Raymond's Bio-Tableaux.

CARLISLE.—H. M. THEATRE.—Lessees, Mr. Thos. Courtice and Mrs. R. Stewart M'Kim; Manager, Mr. Thos. Courtice.—The first visit of Mr. George Testa Sante's company, in The Life of a Showman, drew a crowded house on the opening night. The piece is remarkably well staged, and includes a circus scene, in which several smart variety turns are given. Messrs. Chas. Osborne, Morris Maud, Edward Warden, Frank Sante, and the Misses Constance Medwyn and Eileen Bamford fill the principal parts with skill and credit; and the numerous minor characters are also ably impersonated.

PALACE THEATRE. — Proprietors, Palace Theatre, Carlisle, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Signor Rino Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. E. Nicholls.—The Klien Family present a remarkably clever and sensational cycling act; Abel and Welsh, eccentric knockabouts, are repeating their former successes; a marvellous trampolin act is submitted by Hayes and Merritt; Raie Walters is as popular as ever in her fishing song; Tatten Hall, a smart comedian, sings and patters well; Conan and Doyle are amusing cross-talkers and dancers; Onda and Leon, triple-bar performers, meet with a good reception. The Pepiscope completes.

PUBLIC HALL.—The Prince Edward's animated and talking pictures are drawing good houses here, and a splendid show of films is submitted, varieties being supplied by Mr. Bean, the marvellous young basso; and Miss Gertie Prince, juvenile vocalist.

TIVOLI.—Lessee and Manager, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edgar G. Laban.—Bob Hutt and company, at the top of the bill, are exceedingly entertaining with their musical sketch entitled Welcome Home; Kent and Keith, in their comedy duologue, are remarkably smart; Helen Marlen has a pleasing voice, which she uses with effect; Dan Conroy is as popular as ever; and his patter is fresh and quaint; Frank Sylvo is in the first rank as a comedy juggler; Frazer and Haley, contralto duettists and dancers, supply a good turn; and Vernon's Bioscope has some new pictures, which are much enjoyed.

HIPPODROME.—Under the management of Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge.—The entertainment here by the Fred Newman British Empire Picture and Variety Company is excellent, and continues to draw good houses. Miss Stirling and Miss Hepworth, the vocalists, were very deservedly well applauded.

CARMARTHEN.—ASSEMBLY ROOMS.—Proprietors, Public Rooms Co.; Secretary, Mr. Edward Baldwin.—Mr. Z. Andrews visited the town this week with his fine répertoire company, and presented The Prince of the Temple. Mr. Walter H. Wilson gave an admirable impersonation of Valerius, and Miss Flora Leslie as Præstantia was similarly commendable. Mr. Taliesyn Davies as Appius Aerdonius was exceptionally good; Mr. Arthur L. Read was a realistic chief priest in the character of Decus Fronto; and Mr. R. Armstrong as Schofas, the slave, is also impressive; and Miss Gipsy Alexander a decided success as Polita. Under Two Flags and The Gamester of Metz were presented on succeeding evenings.

CASTLEFORD.—ROYAL.—Sole Proprietor and Licensee, Mr. Chas. Gadsby; Business-Manager, Councillor Henry Masterman.—A well-filled house assembled on Monday to welcome a first visit of Mr. Junius Booth and company with Monte Cristo. The scenery is good and the dresses appropriate. As Edmond Dantes and afterwards Count of Monte Cristo Mr. Booth displays much histrionic ability; Miss B. Doyle fully brings out the dramatic situations that fall to her share as Mercedes; the character of M. Nortier is successfully undertaken by Mr. Beckett Bould; Baron Danglars finds a finished exponent in Mr. Augustine Bowerman; Mr. E. H. Johnson gives a faithful portraiture of Fernand Mondego; Caderousse finds a most amusing representative in Mr. Finn Doyle; the Lieut. Albert Morcef of Mr. Kendrew Milsom is worthy of praise; Mr. C. W. Crowe as Villefort, the King's Attorney, plays an unpleasant part with much skill; commendation may be accorded to Miss Alice West as La Carconte; and as Sophie Danglars Miss Doris Dallimore is successful; Mr tine, Mr. Dillon Shallard; and Siebel, Miss Christine Ritx. Each of the artists was enthusiastically applauded, and the production was most successful throughout. The programme for the remainder of the week was as follows:—Tuesday, Cavalleria Rusticana and Pagliacci; Wednesday, The Bohemian Girl; Thursday, Il Trovatore; Friday, Tannhäuser; Saturday, matinée, Carmen, and evening performance, Maritana.

BARNARD'S PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. L. B. Barnard.—Host Barnard's bill of fare includes Ruby Emmerson, comedienne; a quintette of entertainers who appear under the style of the Five Welsh Cadets; Ernest Powell, whose pianoforte contributions find much favour; Henry Carlton and company, who create much laughter in One Night Only; Elsa Joel, a very big favourite here, her imitations being very popular; George Rapley, burlesque comedian; the Burnells, in a farcical sketch entitled On the Links, which concludes with xylophone selections and a display of bâton manipulation; and Mahatma, who completely mystifies the audience in her second sight act, in which she is assisted by Prof. Chas. N. Steen.

GAIETY THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Capt. H. E. Davis.—This week we have Charles Verner, comedian; Mabelle May, a spirited dancer; Rudge Whitworth, in a well liked scena; Belloni's cockatoos, who perform some surprising feats and give unbounded satisfaction; Keith and Merson, a pair of amusing acrobats, who score in their hunting absurdity, entitled The Meet; Rose Harvey, who catches on and has her choruses taken up very readily; and the Trapnell Family, a troupe of smart gymnasts and equilbrists; while the Edisonograph has a capital film, A Horse of Another Colour.

TOWN HALL.—Proprietors, Chatham Town Council.—A highly appreciative audience assembled here on Wednesday to witness the well-known act of the celebrated Zancigs, who gained a very warm reception. They were supported by an excellent concert party, including Miss Ethel Grimes, soprano; Mr. David Brazell, baritone; Miss Katie Moss, soprano and violinist; and Mr. E. Thornley-Dodge, humorist and lightning sketch artist; Mr. Harold E. Scott, solo pianist and accompanist. The tour is under the direction of Mr. Alfred Moul.

CHELTENHAM.—OPERA HOUSE.—General-Manager, Mr. H. Oswald Redford.—This week John Glayde's Honour is being presented by one of Mr. George Alexander's admirably chosen companies. Mr. Philip Cuningham as the husband and Miss Auriol Lee as the wife make the play; Mr. H. C. Bentley impersonates Lerode forcefully; Miss Beatrice Smith is particularly natural as the Princesse; Mr. E. C. Vaughan does well as Howard Follingham; Mr. Cyril Catley is good as Shurmer; and the part of the cynical but well-intentioned Branley is in the able hands of Mr. Cecil Bevan; Miss Gwynneth Dalton's study of Lady Lerode is praiseworthy, and Miss Mary Sumner is well placed as Dora Longman.

CHESTER. — ROYALTY THEATRE. — Proprietors, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. B. Fountaine.—The Blue Moon, as presented by Mr. Mouillot's company, is making its first appearance here. Mr. Charles Stephenson as Private Taylor is the life and soul of the piece; Moolraj has an amusing representative in Mr. Percy Cahill; Bobbie Scott is made a sprightly youth by Mr. J. Edgar Stevenson; Mr. C. F. Howard plays and sings with considerable skill as Captain Ormsby; Major Callabone is ably filled by Mr. Chas. Ross; Mr. Robert Grey (who is the stage-manager) makes a dignified Prince Kharikar; Chandra Nil has a sweet representative in Miss Catheline Severn; Miss May Audrey as Millicent Leroy is full of vivacity; Mr. Douglas Eley, of Gipsy Maids fame, is the popular manager for Mr. Mouillot; and the orchestra is under the direction of Mr. Herbert Robinson.

CHORLEY.—GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. G. T. Sante; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. Hemingway.—Mr. Chas. H. Lester's company in the detective play, The Bank of England, is here this week. Mr. Lester takes the part of Sherlock Holmes with distinction. Mr. Clifton Earle submits a vigorous portrayal of Stephen Hartley, being ably assisted in his villainous schemes by Mr. Edmund O'Grady as Gordon Isaacs. Mr. J. H. Firman enacts the part of Sir Sydney Barraclough commendably; Godfrey Dane and Eric Dane are well sustained by Mr. F. Ernstone and Mr. Harry T. Wood respectively; and Miss L. Hart is impressive in the part of Margaret Dane. Miss D. Riddell gives a good impersonation of Sylvia Barraclough. Other parts are creditably accounted for by Mr. Chris Phelton, as the Hon. Bertie Burlington; Mr. Victor Leglere, as Tommy Sprouts; Miss Annie Thomas as Lucy Lockett, and Miss Lallah Davis as Aminta J. Beane, an American widow. The Sorrows of Satan was announced to be presented by the same company last night.

CLYDEBANK.—NEW GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ed. Charles Howitt.—For the first three nights of this week we have Mr. Dickie Clare's company in the musical farcical absurdity, Lucky 'Liza. Mr. Clare does good work as Silas Slim; Mr. Peter Pettitoe is well played by Mr. T. W. Benson; and as his son Paul Mr. Martin Alwyne is highly successful. Mr. H. Griffiths is worthy of praise as William Biffins; Miss Madge Brownie is a host in herself, her acting and singing being of a high order; Miss Victoria Carman as Sadie Potts acts and sings well; Miss Vesta Brownie makes a dashing Virginia Blatherwick; Barnsby Blatherwick is safe in the hands of Mr. A. W. Thompson; and the dancing of the La Belle Trio is applauded. The remaining three nights are to be filled up by Mr. E. H. Bostock's vaudeville company.

COLCHESTER. — HIPPODROME. — Joint Proprietors, Messrs. Fred Mouillot and Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. Jack de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ben de Frece.—Bert Dickham, the all-round athlete, specialising in "man versus motor," tops the bill this week. The Marsumas, in a comedy cycling act, are intensely funny; Ella Lorraine, singing her illustrated songs, easily maintains her undoubted popularity; and Godfrey James, the singing collier, possesses a particularly sweet tenor voice. The Three Danbrooks show their ability on numerous musical instruments; Victor Courtney is well received as a humourist; and Winnie Murray is a most expressive comedienne.

CONSETT.—NEW THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Clarance.—Mr. Frank Thorne and his excellent company are here this week with that gentleman's latest production, The Woman Pays. Mr. Phil Harper is a capable Sid Armstrong; Mr. Raymond Thomas is a very good Roger Marchant; and Mr. Frank M. Thorne as Mickey Maloney and Miss Anena Walton as Polly Stokes are very funny; Mr. Beresford Innes as Cyrus and Mr. Dunlop Stewart as Luke play their respective rôles satisfactorily; Miss Maud Russell is highly capable as Madge Armstrong; and as Nell Morland Miss Edith Wallis well deserves the applause accorded her.

CORK. — OPERA HOUSE.—Manager, Mr. John Horgan.—The Beauty of Bath is being produced here this week by Mr. George Dance's company. Miss Gladys Guy gives a dainty performance in the title-rôle, her vocalism and dancing being good; as Lieutenant Dick Allington Mr. Andrew Higginson acts and sings in a robust and merry style; as Viscount Bellingham Mr. Fredk. C. Leister is dignified; Mr. Jack Crichton as Sir Timothy Bun proves himself a diverting figure, his dancing being much admired; Mr. Bay Russell gives an interesting study of Beverley; Master Basil Clifford as Lemon Goodge is very clever; Miss Gertrude Hope and Miss Jessie Lennon are pleasing; and Miss Ida Laurie as Mrs. Goodge is satisfactory.

PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Manager, Mr. Thomas F. O'Brien.—The programme here is of a high standard, the chief attraction being Slippere, the blind musical entertainer, who plays on the piano, and sings in good voice. De Wynne Brothers are a pair of clever gymnasts; Tom W. Royal is a first-class clog expert; the Royal Quintette are clever dancers; Billy Elliott is a comedian with good songs; the Sisters Clare are a pair of good comediennes and dancers; Le Brun and Irene are a capital pair of jugglers, assisted by Little Edie, vocalist; Picitt and Lisette, "the crazy cooks," are smart illusionists; and Carl Rosine is a finished magician.

COVENTRY.—THE OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. Wm. Bennett.—Mr. William Maclaren's company is here playing Claudian. Mr. Maclaren takes the title-part most admirably; Miss Bandmann is powerful as Almida; and Mr. Douglas Earle plays Agazil with vigour. The piece is elaborately staged, and when Claudian's palace is demolished the effect is startling in the extreme.

HIPPODROME THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Lennox Barry.—A very enjoyable programme is presented to the patrons of the above place this week. Larola gives some very good juggling; Raglas is also responsible for clever work; Denton and Rowlands' company appear in a scena, entitled The Punch and Judy Girl; Dicks' comedy acrobats and dance artists are most amusing; and a series of pictures brings the evening's entertainment to a close.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Kay Draco.—Mr. Bert Gilbert is appearing here in the burlesque, The Ticket Collector. Mr. Fred Lindsay is clever with his stock whip; Beauty and the Burglar is very much liked as presented by Nellie Engler and company; and The Banana Queen is a lively scene given by Miss Anderson and company. Some high and long jumps by Lord's Siberian Wolfhounds are marvellous.

CREWE.—LYCEUM THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry Taylor, J.P.—Mr. Charles Macdona's principal company in Are You a Mason? is delighting playgoers here. Mr. E. H. Paterson is highly successful as Amos Bloodgood; Mr. Eric Albury is a capable George Fisher; Mr. Howard L. Tracy a clever Frank Perry; Mr. Buchanan Wake is suitably placed as John Halton; Mr. G. R. Austin is quite at home as Hamilton Travers; and Mr. Erskholme E. Clive is a capital Ernest Morrison. Miss Adelaide Grace acts the rôle of Mrs. Caroline Bloodgood excellently; and as Eva, Annie, and Lulu Misses Corisande Hamilton, Babs Stuart, and Dorothy Mackenzie are charming. Miss Gwen Clifford gives a meritorious performance of Lottie, and Miss Rita Narcell is a talented Mrs. Halton. The play is preceded each evening by a musical sketch, entitled A Christmas Pantomime, in which Miss Gwen Clifford is highly appreciated.

CROYDON. — GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Lawson Lambert.—Mr. Arthur Hardy's company is winning approval here in Beauty and the Barge. Mr. Blake Adams gives an exceptionally smart sketch of Captain James Barley; Mr. Aubrey Mallalieu is a gentlemanly Lieut. Seton Boyne; Mr. Atheling Farrar is suitable as Herbert Manners; Mr. Walter Pemberton is capital in the part of Major Smedley; Mr. Fred Knight does wonders as Tom Codd; Mr. Horace Kenney is good as Augustus; Mr. Charles A. White is commendable as John Dibbs; and Mr. Ewart Drake is amusing as George Porter. Miss Dido Drake is delightfully fresh in the rôle of Ethel Smedley; Miss Mona Robin does well as Mrs. Smedley; Miss Mary Pemberton is a charming Lucy Dallas; Mrs. J. W. Braithwaite is excellent as Mrs. Porter; and Miss Kate Osborne deserves praise as Mrs. Baldwin.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Samuel James.—Messrs. Mathew H. Glenville and Fred Osmond's company, in The Still Alarm, is proving attractive here this week. Mr. Glenville submits a fine impersonation of Jack Manley; Mr. Geo. Arthur depicts the villain, John Bird, in telling style; Mr. Tom Beasley is commendable as Willie Manley; Mr. Fred Osmond as Doc Wilber does good work; Mr. Lewis Gordon ably represents Franklyn Fordham; Mr. J. Sutton Pateman does credit to the rôle of Joe Jones; Mr. Ernest Hamilton is good as Jenkins; and the Messenger Boy is capably represented by Mr. Frank Wilson. Miss Mabel Veriton plays the part of Mrs. Manley with great tact; Miss Mamir Leighton as Carrie Wilber is excellent; and Miss Francis Waring sustains the part of Elinor Fordham with much charm and sympathy.

EMPIRE PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. Walter Gibbons; Manager, Mr. Eustace Jay.—The programme here includes John F. Preston's powerful company in the stirring sketch, Rogues of the Turf; the Bollingers, Parisian rag pickers, give a novel and interesting turn; Martin Henderson, blind musician, is applauded; Lawrence Barclay, comedian, is quaint; Rosie Reval is a neat comedienne; the Two Kays are great in their vocal scena, The Nightingale; Dan Whitley is a droll comedian; Cecilo and Francois are appreciated in their acrobatic dancing and novelty act; and the Bioscope pictures are capital.

PUBLIC HALL.—Gale and Polden's Animated Pictures are in their third week, and business is still very good. The pictures are exceptionally steady and clear, and would be hard to improve upon.

DARLINGTON. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Bell.—Mr. James Bell's company is here this week with the new drama, The Idol of Paris. Miss Annie Bell as Flare-Flare takes the audience by storm; Mr. Otto Minster is clever in the heavy part of Phillip D'Esterre; Mr. Arthur McCullock gives a fine exhibition as H.R.H. Prince Sergius Zoreski; Miss Grace Noble is a typical dresser in the Green Room; and Miss Esther Carthew as Madame Sancterre is all that could be desired; Mr. Bert Ware as Gustave Langlois displays marked ability; Mr. Sidney Arnold as Victor Cashelle makes the part a complete success; Mr. H. Vyvian Thomas makes an excellent Tarave; Miss Annie Megson as Ann does well; and other parts are in the hands of Miss Pharo Anderson, Mr. Chris. Roberts, Mr. Gordon Roby, and Mr. Gerald Travers.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, The Hippodrome Theatres, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Hersee.—Big crowds assemble here twice nightly to see the first visit to Darlington of the Selbini Troupe of cyclists, who are up-to-date in their clever tricks; Lillie Le Breton is very expert on the trapeze; Bishop and Vale score with their eccentric acrobatic dances; Three Sisters Silcott, vocalists and dancers, are old favourites in this town; Walter Emerson, comedian, is a real good laughter-maker; Barton and Franklin Trio take well in their varied musical and vocal items; the Avrignys, Japanese jugglers, are extra good; and the fine entertainment is closed with the Pepiscope, with latest pictures.

DARWEN.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. A. M. Loader; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. J. Robinson.—Messrs. G. M. Polini and L. Maitland's company is here with The Coal King. Mr. Sydney Leyton is an excellent Tom Roberts; Mr. W. P. Mansfield being equally successful as the villainous Walter Hartford; Dick Shirley is naturally played by Mr. Frank Dalton; Mr. Ernest Rivarz is a capable Sir Reginald; and as Jim Williams Mr. Alfred Terris scores heavily. Miss Sinna St. Clair acts with considerable power as Mad Ann; Miss Dorothy Clifton is a winsome Grace Shirley; and Miss Winifred Love does well as the maid Araminta.

DERBY.—GRAND THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Chas. Denley.—Mr. George Dance's company is paying a return visit here with The Spring Chicken. Mr. Fred Payne again appears as Mr. Girdle, and it may fairly be said of him that custom does not stale his infinite variety. Mr. Percival Knight is delightfully versatile and in every way successful as Gustave Babori; Mr. H. R. Averill plays Boniface with acceptability; as Felix, Mr. Frank Attree is exceedingly diverting; Mr. Louis Victor as Stephen Henry and Miss Lilian Errol as Emmy Lou are highly amusing, the latter being especially praiseworthy; Mr. E. Bartlett should be mentioned for his depiction of Baron Papouche; as Rosalie, Miss Violet Loraine sings and dances with great grace and charm, while displaying histrionic ability of a high-class order; Miss Nellie Kavanagh repeats her success as Mrs. Girdle, and leaves nothing to be desired; Dulcie Babori is in the capable hands of Miss Nellie Wigley; and Miss Poppy Poole deserves special mention for her Baroness Papouche.

PALACE.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes, Assistant-Manager, Mr. Herbert Taylor.—A capital star turn is provided here this week by the Stein Esthor Trio, sensational acrobats, whose feats are very smartly accomplished. Shirley and Ransome are eminently successful in the latest duologue, entitled 'Arf a Quid; the Elgars are agreeable vocal entertainers; the Morimuras, clever jugglers, are also meritorious; Geo. Rae proves himself a diverting comedian; Smarte Bros., eccentric tumblers, are praiseworthy; Maude Ford is a pleasing comedienne; and the Bioscope submits some amusing films.

DEVONPORT.—METROPOLE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. G. S. King.—The Gay Parisienne, as played by Mr. Charles Macdona's first-class company, is proving a huge draw. The company is particularly strong in all departments, the humorous business being exceedingly well done. Mr. Will Harman as Mr. Ebenezer Honeycombe, and Mr. Charles Maclagan as Major Fosdyke, an irascible army major, working hard in this direction; Miss Alice Nixon in the title-rôle sings and dances with grace and charm; Miss Adeline Burgon is fascinating as Nora; and Mr. Cycil Biddolph as Tom Everleigh, a barrister, has a typical legal style.

DOUGLAS.—GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Grand Theatre Company, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Hemming; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. R. Wood.—Excellent houses have prevailed at the Grand Theatre for the presentation of Mr. Michael Morton's adaptation of a French play, My Wife. Mr. Eille Norwood plays the principal character, and achieves success; Miss Cicely Stuckey made a pretty Trixie; Mr. J. W. Deverell impersonates Gibby with great skill; the Miriam Hawthorne of Miss Mary Dibley is quaint; and Miss Edith Cochrane is well suited as Madam Duprè; Mr. W. Hartell capably acts the part of the worldly-wise old butler; and Mr. Barber made the most of the character of M. Duprè.

THE GAIETY THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Palace and Derby Castle, Ltd.; Secretary and Manager, Mr. Charles Fox, jun.; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Gray.—Miss Annie Hughes, in a beautiful play, Miss Tommy, beautifully interpreted, has made a great impression in Douglas. Mr. Jerome K. Jerome can write the most delicate sentiment in the daintiest manner; and Miss Annie Hughes can make quick his brain-children. Her Miss Tommy is a really exquisite creation. She is excellently supported by Mr. Evelyn Vernon, whose Peter Hope has admirable qualities; Mr. Charles Esdale, who makes William Clodd quaintly humorous and dramatically effective; Mr. Reginald F. Beach was well placed as Flipp; and Mr. Rupert Lister was subtly emotional as Dick Danvers. The pièce de résistance was preceded by a clever curtain-raiser from the pen of the Star, entitled After Many Days, adequately portrayed by Mr. Rupert Lister, Mr. Charles Esdale, Miss Mary Duggan, and Miss Mabel Trevor.

THE PALACE.—Proprietors, The Palace and Derby Castle, Ltd.; Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Fox, jun.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Brittain.—Mr. Harry Woods' Orchestra still tempts those who love dancing to delightful music, and the variety programme is greatly appreciated. Mr. Alec Kendal is a natural and genuinely funny comedian; Mr. L. C. Smith and Miss Johnson present a picturesque performance; Wee Mona is really a talented child actress; Dome continues to model in clay, and captures the Philistine imagination by his artistry. In addition, Vernon's Bioscope and dance competitions with large money prizes.

Mr. F. J. Connor announces the last six nights of the Hippodrome, and the week will be devoted to benefits. Thelma and Groves appealed successfully to their many admirers on Monday; Mr. W. R. Albino, the popular ring-master, had a crowded house on Tuesday; the advertising staff were equally fortunate in securing patronage; and the popular manager, Mr. F. J. Connor, will expect to see his friends—and their name is legion—to-night, Saturday.

Mr. Charles Dare is still maintaining his popularity on Douglas Head, and at the Empire Theatre, where he presents two shows nightly.

DOVER. — THEATRE ROYAL, LTD. — Managing-Director, Mr. Fred C. Dew. — Messrs. Henry Swinerd and J. W. Cordiner's company is here this week with an entirely new version of The Girl from Japan, to which special reference is made in another column.

THE PAVILION, PROMENADE PIER. — Lessees, The Dover Theatres, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Fred C. Dew.—The Royal English Ladies' Orchestra and the Royal Entertainers, under the direction of Mr. Hickman-Smith, have been engaged for this week. The orchestra render popular items in a manner deserving of all praise, and Mr. Hickman-Smith, who has a good baritone voice, sings pleasingly. The rich contralto of Miss Marie Westcott has won her many admirers; and Mr. Percy Stanhope is the smartest of smart ventriloquists.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME. — Lack and Ford are here this week with a clever comedy acrobatic act; and a smart ventriloquial turn is contributed by Barney Vox. Daisy Hicks's songs go well; and Harry Milton, Dutch boy, is an expert dancer. Chris Baker is a humorous comedian; Dave Laird also scores; and Raleigh, Abrahams, and company cause much merriment with their boxing absurdity, Fun in a Pawn Shop. The Bio-tableaux are quite up to their usual order of merit.

DUBLIN.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Parrington.—Mr. Arthur Bourchier and Miss Violet Vanbrugh commenced a pleasant week's engagement here this week. On Monday night Alfred Sutro's satirical play, The Walls of Jericho, was played. Mr. Bourchier's portraiture of Jack Frobisher was excellent acting; Miss Violet Vanbrugh gave a most convincing study of Lady Alethea Frobisher, displaying much power and impressiveness in her work; Mr. Charles Goodhart was particularly good in his reading of Hankey Bannister; and Mr. Arthur Whitby's abilities were cleverly distinguished in the character of the Marquis of Steventon. Mr. Cyril Keightley portrayed the part of Harry Dallas in an efficient manner; while Mr. Douglas Imbert did splendidly as Lord Drayton; and Mr. Leon Quartermaine was all that could be desired as Bertram Hannaford. The remaining parts, the Hon. Wilfred Renton (Mr. Alfred Bristowe), Lord Marchant (Mr. William Burchill), the Hon. Jasper Twelvetrees (Mr. F. Cecil), Lady Derenham (Miss Pamela Gaythorne), Lady Westerby (Miss Nella Powys), Miss Mornington (Miss Margery Fane), Duchess of Skye (Miss Mary Weigall), Lady Parchester (Miss Eva Killick), Miss Wyatt (Miss Winifred Bateman), and Mary (Miss Annie Stuart) were all sustained in good style.

GAIETY THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mrs. Michael Gunn; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Hyland.—A large and fashionable audience was present here on Monday, the attraction being Mr. H. B. Irving and company, in The Lyons Mail, which was most enthusiastically received. Mr. H. B. Irving was accorded a very hearty welcome on his appearance in the dual rôles, Joseph Lesurques and Dubosc, in which he distinguished himself with every confidence, his acting throughout the play being most powerful and realistic; Mr. Frank Tyars displayed considerable skill and ability in his clever representation of Jerome Lesurques; as the members of a gang of robbers, Courriol, Choppard, and Fouinnard, the Messrs. Eric Maxom, Charles Dodsworth, and Tom Reynolds acted their respective parts most successfully; Miss Dorothy Green made an effective Janette; and Miss Eily Malyon gave an excellent portrayal of Julie; and Miss May Holland was particularly good as Marie. The staging was magnificent. The Lyons Mail was preceded by King Rene's Daughter, in which Mr. F. Tyars appeared with success as King Rene, Miss Dorothy Green as Iolanthe, and Miss E. Frances Davis as Martha; while Mr. Bernard Limpus made a capital Tristan de Veaudemont. On Tuesday Charles the First was presented, and The Bells is also billed.

EMPIRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager and Secretary, Mr. George H. Marsh.—G. H. Elliott, the chocolate-coloured coon, sings his songs in acceptable style, and is warmly applauded; Hermann Melot mystifies the audience with his neat conjuring act, and secures his usual gratifying reception; and Bessie Butt, comedienne, sings and dances with animation. John Grun Marx maintains a foremost position in the rank of athletes; and Gus Garrick, in "Music Hall Tit-Bits," keeps the house highly amused. Walter Purvis and company, in their sketch, Cauliflower Joe, create great hilarity; and Miss Dot Hardy sings her songs with fine effect. Les Frasettis, in a charming musical entertainment, score successfully; and the Empire Pictures never fail to amuse.

TIVOLI.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles M. Jones; Secretary, Mr. H. A. Murphy.—Miss Mary Moore Duprez occupies the place of honour here in no uncertain manner, for she is at once a favourite with an audience which very unwillingly allows her to depart; Daniel Gillen is an undoubted success as a ventriloquist; Charles Santon, soprano vocalist, contributes some good songs; a turn of exceptional ability is provided by the Four Athos, ball manipulators and novelty acrobats; and Alf. Gibson is a comedian with a style peculiarly his own, and he makes many friends. The illustrated songs of Lennard and Vereker are pleasingly greeted; Eugene, in a smart musical act, achieves success; as does also Elsie Kerry, comedienne, and J Hurst, gymnast. The Bioscope concludes a good bill.

ROTUNDA.—The Irish Animated Photo. Company has now successfully entered on its sixth week here. The programme is again greatly varied, one of its features being the number of attractive pictures which have been introduced. The excellent vocal items contributed by Messrs. Patrick O'Shea and R. W. Goggins, and Miss Mary Durkin, are greatly appreciated.

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION, BALL'S BRIDGE. — The attractions here this week are A Ba Bee, in an artistic novelty, The Picture Post-card Album, which is greatly admired; the Yo-San Troupe of Japanese do some clever balancing and juggling feats; the Two Daniels, negro comedians, appear with success; the bands, H.M.S. Royal Horse Guards Blue (Mr. Samuel Bilton, conductor), and orchestra of Royal Marine Light Infantry (Mr. Frank Winterbottam, conductor), are warmly appreciated for their excellent selections.

PAVILION, KINGSTOWN.—At this pleasant resort the Hollanders, variety entertainers, are appearing with success. The company includes Miss Hilda Vining, Mr. Hal Gazes, Miss Marna Chalcraft, Mr. Alec Clunes, Miss Mabel Dent, and Mr. Harry Buss. The animated pictures are also an interesting item of the programme.

WORLD'S FAIR AND MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. C. A. James.—Capital turns are given by the Two Cashlings, duettists and dancers; Ivy Vine, ballad vocalist; Bert Dove, ventriloquist; James Murphy, comedian and dancer; Albert Morrow, comic conjurer; and the Cinématograph.

DUNDEE. — HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE. — Proprietors, The Robert Arthur Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Louis Karpe.—Mr. Wentworth Croke's company is here in The Christian, earnest and capable representation of the part; As Glory Quayle Miss Daisy Scudamore gives an Mr. Frank Beresford makes a manly John Storm, and acts in a powerful and vigorous manner; Mr. Wilfred Noy gives a careful and clever study of the part of Horatio Drake; Mr. W. J. Butler as Lord Robert Ure is well placed; and Mr. Edwin Ling acts in a dignified and able manner as Father Lamplugh. Miss Dorothy Milne's acting of the part of Polly Love is highly commendable; and Miss Molly Hayden is an excellent Mrs. Callender.

PALACE THEATRE. — Lessees, United County Theatres Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sam McIntosh.—Lady Mansell and Juveniles, who head the bill this week, gain a huge success in their comedy speciality, A Concert Rehearsal, their smart singing and dancing being loudly applauded; Mill May and Theresa are a clever couple, their quick changes being accomplished with remarkable rapidity; the Pasquali Brothers, in their acrobatic turn, display a number of remarkable feats; Sisters Love, duettists, are well received, their singing being high class; Natalia and Diana display their marvellous agility as trapeze artists; the Haverleys, American song illustrators, are pleasing singers; Jimmy Shields, one-legged comedian and dancer, an old favourite here, is very successful; and Jock Walker, Scotch comedian, takes well. Vernon's Bioscope completes a capital programme. The management have introduced gramophone recitals prior to the commencement of the performance, which are proving very popular.

NEW GAIETY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. R. A. P. Williams.—Geo. Collins, a quaint comedian, proves exceedingly diverting; Flo Hilton, male impersonator, is a great favourite, and is loudly applauded; Nell Cotter in her songs is much appreciated; Zelda proves herself an expert performer on musical novelties; Rubie and Elsie Redfern are very successful as instrumentalists, vocalists, and dancers; an enjoyable turn is that of the Three Coopers, harmonising vocalists; Lola Patey, vocalist, an old pantomime favourite, is well received; George Melvin is a very funny Scotch comedian and an excellent dancer; Caselli is recalled for his clever banjo playing; Billy Richardson, stump orator and comedian, and Wal Owen, the comedy man, complete a good bill.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Frank Percival.—Jack Blair, a funny little comedian, causes much amusement in an original turn; Mons. De Lil, card expert and illusionist, mystifies the audience with his clever tricks; the Decars, in their burlesque scena, Off to the Races, are popular; Prof. Hulbert submits an amusing ventriloquial turn; Wilton and Ford, comedians and dancers, afford satisfaction; Jack Easy, eccentric comedian, is clever; Jessie Fraser takes well as a ballad vocalist; and Nellie Hawthorne, a sweet singer, completes an enjoyable programme.

EASTBOURNE.—THE PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. George Hayes.—For the first three evenings of the week San Toy, The Geisha, and Greek Slave were played. In the first of these Miss Joan Ritz was a pretty, delicate, and refined San Toy; Miss Florrie Saunders was a most happy Dudley, singing and dancing in bright and delightful style; Miss Constance Fox did excellently as Poppy; Miss Ivy Proudfoot was a pretty-voiced and charming Tub Sli; Miss Aubrey Ashton a handsome Ko Fan; Miss Ethel Twichen a graceful dancer; Trixie and other parts were well filled. Mr. Edward Carlton provided any amount of fun as Li; Mr. Cyril Dare excellently represented Captain Bobby Preston, and sang well; Mr. Lionel Braham sang and acted in a rich and individual manner as Yen How; Mr. James R. La Fane was an animated Sir Bingo; Mr. A. J. Nicolls made much of his part of the Emperor; Mr. Sam Lockridge sang in splendid style as Lieut. Ducker; Mr. J. Mansell Stringer contributed good help as Fo Hop; and Mr. George Taylor did the same as Sing Hi. Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison appear later in the week in The Stronger Sex.

DEVONSHIRE PARK THEATRE. — Proprietors, the Devonshire Park and Baths Company; Managers, Messrs. Murray, King, and Clark.—Mr. Hubert Bruce's company is appearing here in The Lottery, as a clever front piece, followed by The Pocket Hercules. In the former, Mr. H. Athol Forde gives an extremely fine performance as Father Antoine; Miss Daisy Atherton is a girlish and sympathetic Lisette; and Mr. Douglas Hamilton as Jean and Miss Amy Coleman as Mabeleine ably help. In the same farce Miss Ruth Mackay, handsome and delightfully natural, does all that is possible as Daisy Faye; Miss Daisy Atherton is a praiseworthy success as Muriel; and Miss Amy Coleman does good work as Sophia; Mr. Stanley Cooke works hard and successfully as Ferdinand; Mr. H. Athol Forde is a dignified Lord Dyderdown; Mr. C. Herbert Hewetson is a fine, manly Dick Power; Mr. T. J. Bell is a cleverly amusing Meakin; and capital help is given by Mr. Douglas Hamilton as Septimus and Mr. F. Finch Smiles as Thomas. Mr. Charles Cartwright, Mr. Charles Collette, and others will appear later in the week here in David Copperfield.

THE HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Day.—At the top of the bill are the Royal Tokios, who give an arobatic turn of quite exceptional daring and cleverness; Harvey'sAmerican Boys and Girls are highly successful in a varied act; Miss Kate Traill is deservedly popular for her talented turn; Warden Reed and Miss Stevens appear to advantage in Married or Photographed; and others contributing to a very good bill are the Two Pemms, speciality artists; Mr. A. G. Uno, comedian; and Miss Nina St. Elmo, comedienne.

EDINBURGH. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Whitehead.—The Dairymaids, with the magnetic presence of Miss Phyllis Dare in the cast, has proved a first-class attraction here, and the popular young actress had no cause to question the cordiality of her reception on Monday evening. Among the other ladies engaged in the piece, Miss Beryl Vaudrey and Miss Cissie Sephton deserve unstinted praise; while the comedy vein is admirably worked by Mr. Harry Dent, in his old part of Joe Mivens, Mr. E. Statham Staples, and Mr. Frank Steward. Chorus and orchestra lend efficient aid to a performance which goes quite gaily from the rise to the fall of the curtain.

ROYAL LYCEUM THEATRE. — Proprietors, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Geo. T. Minshull.—The company who bring Amasis on a return visit, after a six months interval, miss none of the Gilbert-and-Sullivan-like fun of this delightful comic opera. Of Mr. Rutland Barrington as Pharaoh and Mr. Lauri de Frece as Sebak the audience cannot have too much; and of Miss Winifred O'Connor, as the Princess and Mr. Roland Cunningham as the Prince they would willingly have a great deal more. Nor do they tire of Miss Madge Vincent, in the lively part of Natis, with her old and young lovers, Ptolemy, the Court embalmer, and Psamtik, the stalwart Captain of the Guards, characteristically impersonated by Mr. Arthur Watts and Mr. Frank Perfitt; Mr. George Fox makes a fine high Priest; Mr. John Doran is commendable as Cherio; Miss Muriel Seymour Hodges does well as Queresa; and an exceptionally good chorus, with an augmented orchestra, under the direction of Mr. J. van Heuvel, contribute to the perfection of an ideal performance.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Horace Cole.—Clever dancing is much in evidence in this week's programme, the Legay Quartette of Parisian dancers introducing some original movements in their very energetic performance; and Charles Parker's Six Æolians combining high-class vocal music with a lively dancing act; while Whalen and West, in the eccentric line, and Esta Stella, a spirited comedienne, also provide smart terpsichorean turns; Bella and Bijou create much amusement with their new sketch, The Suffragettes; the instrumental music provided by the Sisters Carina is greatly enjoyed; Conn and Conrad appear successfully as comic burglars and sensational balloonists; Marguerite Broadfoote sings several songs charmingly; Powell's Marionettes are exhibited in conjunction with fountains and fine coloured light effects; and scenes from the Liverpool pageant are shown by the Bioscope.

KING'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr. Amand Mascard.—A good holiday bill is headed by the Tampico Trio of Mexican Troubadours, who give a most enjoyable musical entertainment; the acrobatic feats of the Three Braggs, including "The Living Bridge," and other novelties, are deftly performed; Webb and Edna Branston render a series of operatic selections in very pleasing style; and the Chinese magical act of the Okito Family is something to wonder at; surprising results in bird and animal training are shown by Mlle. Marvelle's collection of cockatoos and parrots, and by Abdy's dog circus; Otto and Olga contribute some diverting burlesque opera; the comedy turns of Lola Halby and Peter Bermingham are acceptable and popular; and interesting Bioscope pictures are displayed.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General-Manager, Mr. Ventom Swift.—Attractive holiday fare has drawn large audiences to this popular house, where the Brothers Brooks exploit some smart comedy business in excellent style; the singing and dancing of the Sisters Brand are much in favour; Little Lizzie Leaver's vocal contributions are greatly appreciated; and Johnny Beveridge, a blind pianist, adds story-telling to his musical accomplishments; songs are also acceptably contributed by Sam Thomson, deputising for J. G. Aitken, and by John Williams; while Lilian Victoria proves herself a good male impersonator; and Beaufort is a kind of boneless wonder as a contortionist.

PORTOBELLO NEW TOWER PAVILION.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. H. Marvello.—A pleasing pierrot entertainment of songs and sketches is provided at this marine variety house. Foremost among the artists contributing to a successful and interesting programme are Messrs. G. E. Corn (Dick Wargrave), Mr. Roy Sydney (Hon. Crewe Boodle), Mr. Frank A. Wood (A. Bunker Bliss), Miss Florence Wix (Elphin Haye), Miss Lina Hicks ('Liza Shoddam), and Miss Beatrice Anderson (Mrs. Shimmering Black).

FLEETWOOD.—QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. J. Snelson.—The popular Eastern play, Secrets, is here this week, drawing good houses. Mr. J. E. Tomlinson as Ibrahim al Murad is very clever; while Mr. Reggie Brown is a capital Lieut. Markham. Mr. Victor T. Raymond keeps the audience in good humour with his rendering of the part of the Hon. Cecil Cholmondeley; Miss Nina France is a charming Ismalia, and is very popular. The Verona Troupe are accomplished dancers.

FOLKESTONE.—PLEASURE GARDENS THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland.—Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company opened here on Monday with Peter's Mother. Miss Lilias Earle played the title-rôle in a particularly charming manner; Mr. Percy Hutchison gave a good portrayal of Peter; Mr. Alfred Bucklaw as John Crewys submitted a well-studied impersonation; Mr. F. G. Thurstan's Canon Birch left nothing to be desired; Miss Mary Griffiths and Miss Annie Stalman were very amusing as the two sisters; Miss Hilda Honiss was a piquiant Sarah Hewell; Mr. Drew Mackintosh made a capital Doctor; and Mr. Charles Harley displayed marked ability as Sir Timothy. Mr. George Edwardes's company in See-See were billed for the latter part of the week.

LEAS PAVILION.—Manager and Musical-Director, Mr. D'Arcy Clayton.—The Browns of Brixton, a clever company of artists, are here this week; Miss Dorothy Payn, a local favourite, is warmly applauded for her bright songs, her dancing being particularly good; Mr. Laurence Hanray is an excellent reciter, and gains the full attention of his audience; Mr. Alfred Bennett is a smart comedian; Miss Violet Orme sings some tasteful melodies; and Mr. Edwyn Wolseley is heard to advantage as a baritone.

VICTORIA PIER.—Manager, Mr. Robert Forsyth.—The Scarlet Mr. E.'s and their Jester are paying a return visit here this week, and submit a very pleasing programme. Mr. Walter Dowling as the Jester is the life and spirit of the show, and works hard.

GATESHEAD. — KING'S THEATRE. — Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Resident-Manager and Licensee, Mr. Harold Arnold.—J. W. Hall, many years ago, made himself a favourite with Gateshead audiences, and he has this week been accorded a welcome of which any artist might be proud. Albert Wyndham and company, in an abridged version of Shylock, are highly appreciated; Swan and Vesta, in the scena, In Nelson's Days, are very successful; Ryan and Hall, tumblers and comedians, find the maximum amount of favour; Copeland and Son prove clog-dancers of the best quality; Theodore Jones and company, in the vocal scena, Jack Sheppard, win merited applause; and dainty Marie Neilson, and pictures by Vernon's Bioscope, are also appreciated.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs. Bolam and Bacon; General-Manager, Councillor Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Thomas France.—Messrs. Paumier and Howard's company, in the excellent drama, The Midnight Wedding, has drawn large audiences. A perfect delineation of Poul Valmar is presented by Mr. Alfred Paumier; Miss Annie Saker's Princess Astrea is most artistic; Rudolph Von Scarsbruck is made sufficiently detestable by Mr. Ernest E. Imeson; and the contemptible weakling, Eugene Von Streisburg, is faithfully portrayed by Mr. A. E. Winnington Barnes. The lighter nature of the drama is in the hands of Messrs. James E. Page, Vernon Vane, and Algie Spalding, as Max, Otto, and Bobo; whilst Miss Ada Champion makes Kathie a very amusing young lady.

GLASGOW. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Proprietors, Howard and Wyndham, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy Humphreys. — The Lady Slavey was reproduced in Glasgow on Monday in a fresh and bright garb by Mr. Robert Crossman's company, which is one of high standard. The songs, dances, and other new features were enjoyed by a very large audience, encores being numerous. In the name-part, Miss Winnie Volt combines a charming appearance with fine singing and clever dancing; Misses Evie and Gladys Anderson, as Maud and Beatrice, the other daughters of the Major, sustain the parts well, and dance gracefully. Miss Rita Presano as Flo Honeydew sings in brilliant and effective style, and is also an actress of excellent quality. Major O'Neill is capital as the impecunious host in the care of Mr. Keino Johnston; the somewhat thankless part of Lord Lavender is made enjoyable by Mr. Frank Henderson, while Roberts, a sheriff's officer, proves a veritable mine of comedy thanks to Mr. W. L. Thompson. As the millionaire, Mr. F. C. Piddock acts and sings as correctly as ever, being repeatedly encored.

KING'S, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Business-Manager, Mr. H. Macfarlane. —Glasgow playgoers have this week an opportunity of again seeing Mr. George Edwardes's company in that gay and tuneful production, The Lady Dandies. The outstanding feature of the present visit is the appearance of Miss Evie Greene in the part of Lodoiska, of which she gives an accomplished rendering. Mr. Eric Thorne is still with the company, giving his highly amusing portrayal of the eccentric Prefect of Police. As Dorlis, Mr. W. Talleur Andrews sings and acts with fine romantic feeling; Mr. John Humphries' keen sense of humour finds scope in the rôle of Tournesol; the dandies, Valcourt and Melval, are handsomely represented by Mr. Norman and Mr. Jack Bates; as Des Gouttiers, the dancing ability of Mr. A. H. Majilton is conspicuous; Lagorille (Mr. Harold Thorley), Malicorne (Mr. Grafton Williams), and Alexis (Mr. Clinton Reynald) are all well-filled parts. The Illyrine of Miss Dolly Castles is a very pleasing performance; Miss Ada Thomas's Liani is good, and the company possesses two exceptionally smart dancers in Miss Mabel Russell (Egle) and Miss Vivien Talleur (St. Cyr). The chorus and orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Cuthbert Hawley, are up to the usual standard of this management.

GRAND, LTD.—Managing-Director Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Anthony. —William Holles and Nannie Goldman's company is here this week with The Stepmother. Mr. Holles as Bob Bristow gives a fine impersonation of an honest, bluff sea captain; and the boy-part of Danny, the captain's son, is charmingly played by Miss Goldman. Miss Winifred Symonds represents the Captain's invalid wife with tenderness and pathos; and her friend, Johanna Jones, is humorously depicted by Miss Florence Harcourt. A county policeman finds a comical exponent in Mr. Fred Dark; a good study of character, strongly rendered, by Mr. William Macready, is that of Luke Trixel; Mr. Arthur Rodney as Abraham Wiggins depicts the villain with a spice of comedy; and Miss Phyllis Manners as Anna Vickers, the stepmother, vividly emphasises the vindictiveness of the part. Miss Ida Taylor enacts the spoiled child, Clara Vickers, in a lively manner, while the stern detective from Scotland Yard is ably expressed by Mr. Murray Yorke. Mr. David Cox as Lapworth and Mr. W. Haynes as a verger complete a satisfactory cast.

ROYAL PRINCESS'S.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Rich. Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Hugh Murdoch.—A large audience greeted Mr. and Mrs. Chalmers Mackey in the new Irish legendary play, Rollicking Rory. Mr. Mackay, as Rory, displays his ability as an Irish comedian. Mrs. Mackey is seen to advantage as Mrs. Ashleigh; and other important parts are capitally filled by Messrs. David Macfarlane, St. John Stuart, Charles Homer, and Miss Adele Liddon. Miss Nana Flensburg is a smart singer and a neat dancer; Mme. Constance Bellamy is very successful with her vocal contributions. The staging of the production is realistic and effective.

METROPOLE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Gordon Jefferson.—Mr. James Willard's company in A Woman's Pluck is the attraction here this week. The callous and unprincipled Dick Darrell is presented in an easy and natural manner by Mr. Jackson Willcox; and Miss Marion Fawcett as Grace Daremont (the lady boxer) imparts just the right touch to the character; Mr. Matthew Boulton submits a capital reading of Winstone Dale, and a satisfactory Matthew Pope is found in Mr. Harry Emmerson. Mr. J. P. Dryden, in the dual rôles of Mark Scanlon and Jim Daremont, does excellently; and Mr. Herbert Claremont is very successful as Sir John Daredevil. A smart performance is that of Miss Hetty Johnstone as Bertie Daredevil; Mr. Dick Bird as Roger Pippin and Miss Fanny James as Ophelia Pippin raise many a hearty laugh; Miss Dolly Gilroy is a dainty Jessie Pope, while Mr. Arthur Temple, Miss Nora Kingsley, and Miss Elsie Maitland play their parts in fine style.

LYCEUM.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. H. Oakden.—Excellent houses have welcomed Mr. Walter Melville's latest play, The Girl Who Took the Wrong Turning, after its successful run at the Princess's here, and Govan playgoers have been hearty in their commendation. Mr. Roy Redgrave, Miss Rona Merrick, Miss Hilda Baynton, Mr. Sidney Sarl, and Miss Marie Kildare all are happily suited in the principal parts.

EMPIRE.—District-Manager, Mr. Sam. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. Manners.—At the post of honour here this week are the Seldoms, in their classical statuary act. Miss Harriet Vernon has lost none of her winning ways, and is well received; the Lukushimas produce their really clever Japanese entertainment with much acceptance. J. P. Ling is responsible for an entertaining turn; Howard and St. Clair are capitally received in their sketch, and Haley's "Garden of Girls" are smart, clever, and talented vocalists. May Fayre (comedienne), Corcoran Bros. (musicians), and Parisch and Edelweiss (vocalists) also contribute to an enjoyable programme, which concludes with the Bioscope in a series of interesting films.

ZOO-HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, Moss' Empires Ltd., and E. H. Bostock; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—The star turn this week is Mrs. John Lawson and Co. in The Devil's Sunday, Mrs. Lawson acting the part of a giddy young married lady with great spirit. Olgar and Elgar are well worth hearing in their refined songs; the Six Lancashire Lasses are graceful dancers and pleasing singers; Mesdames Henny and Blanc, in Continental Experience, perform some enjoyable acrobatic dances. Gwilym Nash is a powerful baritone singer, whose songs are finely illustrated; George Reeves, comedian, keeps his audience in constant good humour; Lena Willard is a very engaging comedienne; Haley's company in The Garden of Girls, do some graceful dances and elegant poses under a variety of electric lights. Derenda and Green blend lots of fun with their juggling feats, and the Bioscope completes a fine evening's entertainment.

PAVILION, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd.—The phenomenal voice of Ada Colley still excites the wonder of large audiences, apart from the artistic merits of her singing. Stewart and Morgan are a very popular pair of duettists; one of the best of our variety comediennes is Maidie Scott, and her singing of "Everybody works but father" is a gem of quaint comedy. Cyrus Dare's imitations of little children in song or play are marvellously lifelike; D'Arc's Marionettes provide a clever show; Henri Bekker is a conjurer with a dash of good comedy; the Musical Schaffers contribute an ingeniously arranged musical turn; Fred Keeton again scores as a comedian; and Sam Redfern is an amusing negro stump speechist. Several fine solos on the violin by Mr. Howard W. Galpin formed one of the most enjoyable items of the evening.

PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; General-Manager, Mr. Harry McKelvie.—The House of Tinn, a lively farcical sketch, presented by Mr. J. Gar Kiddie, is responsible for hearty laughter, as played by Mr. J. W. Graves, Miss Lizzie Payne, and Mr. Gar Kiddie. A smart knockabout turn is contributed by the Five Osranis; Crosby and Walker have some amusing cross-talk; the dancing of Fraser and French evoked great and well-deserved enthusiasm; Anthony, "swank" conjurer, is smart, and his Bioscope introduction is novel; J. K. Macfarlane, Scotch comedian, takes well in his humorous ditties; the Sladenbacks give a clever trapeze and hand-balancing display; the Sisters McCalla are a clever young pair of duettists and dancers; the Raymond Trio give an enjoyable musical and dancing turn; and Harry Cave, baritone vocalist, completes a lengthy programme.

COLISEUM.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Burdette.—Miss Ella Retford has a good reception from her Glasgow admirers, her songs being well chosen, clever, and capitally sung, while she is a dancer of great ability. Carrie Laurie and her juvenile entertainers again delight in their kindergarten performance; the Gotham Comedy Quartette are adding more lustre to former laurels won for their unique and enjoyable turn; the chorus songs, with pictures, are well featured by Reg. Williams, and in duet and dances Lester Bros. make a good impression. An Evening at Home brings the Napoli Sextette to the front in a fine musical mélange, notable for Mr. John Lloyd's fine tenor work. A funny display is given by Rezene and Robini; a fine sketch, by Horace Pollock and company, entitled Hester's Mystery, is depicted. In a pleasing musical duo, Virto and Venita are heard at their best, and have a good reception, and there is always pleasure to be derived from the Bioscope display.

GAIETY, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. A. Cowe.—H. O. Wills, described as "a man with a funny voice," takes the top of the bill, and provides much amusement. Another effective turn is Vela, whose ability as a wire equilibrist cannot be questioned; the Cedrics in their original act also cause much merriment, while the Rowantrees are amusing in their comedy work. As a cornet and post-horn artist, D. W. Watson excels; and good turns are also provided by Karl Bennie (singing ventriloquist) and Sheila McNeil ("the Lass frae Killiecrankie"). The programme is terminated by an exhibition of new films on the Bioscope.

BRITANNIA.—Proprietor, Mr. A. B. Pickard.—An enjoyable programme here is contributed to by Mabel Ormonde, vocalist and dancer; King and Gledhill, the clever cyclists; F. H. Dundas, actor-vocalist; the Sisters Lorraine, a smart couple of duettists and neat dancers; and Yettmah, in Japanese magic. The Bioscope shows the latest films.

GLOUCESTER.—PALACE.—Owners, Messrs. C. W. and J. R. Poole; Manager, Mr. R. T. Rea.—Miss Alexandra Dagmar tops the bill this week here, and Los Granada's Continental Grotesques are billed as of next importance. Mr. Will Godwin, descriptive comedian; Drum and Major, clever duettists; Will Hitchings, lightning cartoonist; The Santerons, agile jumpers; Bob Hartley, comedian; Lavelle Bros., quaint comedy acrobats; J. W. Gallagher, eccentric comedian; The Gentrys, humorous duo; and Will Hughes, sand dancer, etc., are also in the bill.

GRANTHAM. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. A. Campbell; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. Marshall. — Miss Violet Osmund's company is here this week in The New Barmaid. Mr. Alexander Loftus plays the important part of Bertie White with skill; Mr. James Grant as William White causes much amusement; a clever performance is that of Mr. Charles Adeson as Mons. Bonsor; and Mr. Jos. Hawkes is great as Captain Lovebury; Miss Aimee Roberts, in the part of Etel Jay, charms by her singing; Miss Grafton as Brenda Louth and Miss Mabel Harrison as Lady Moulton are both good; Miss Violet Osmund is a vivacious Dora Heather. There is also some good dancing by the Sisters English.

GRAVESEND.—GRAND THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. David Hart.—Starred here for this week is Jimson's novelty sketch, entitled Jimson's Pets at Home, which takes the house by storm; Jessie Harper, comedienne, is an entertaining turn; Andy Fagan, comedian and dancer, is a big success; and Maude Leverne is a particularly smart burlesque actress. A speciality act, A Music Hall Agent's Dream, contributed by Fred and Beattie, causes endless mirth; Wills and Mackenzie, operatic duettists, sing remarkably well; Charles Sloman, comedian, adds to the merriment of the evening; and Hill and Lane are novel speciality artists. The Edisonograph, with a complete change of films, completes a good entertainment.

GREAT YARMOUTH.—ROYAL AQUARIUM.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale.—Mr. Milton Bode's company, in The Belle of Mayfair, is here. In the title-rôle Miss Queenie Finnis is charmingly effective; Miss Veronica Brady sings and acts brightly as Pincott; Lady Chaldicott is cleverly depicted by Miss Nellie Cozens; Mr. Haddon Cave is amusing as the Earl of Mount Highgate; Mr. Fern Pounds is admirable as the Hon. Raymond Finchley; Mr. Harry Parker is easy, natural, and humorous as Sir John Chaldicott; Princess Carl is capitally depicted by Miss Agnes Tandy, who sings delightfully; and Miss Aurelie de Loriere scores as the "Gibson" Girl.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale.—Mr. Robert Crossman's company is here this week with Sergeant Brue.—Mr. Arthur Brewster assumes most successfully the rôle of the love-sick Sergeant; Mr. J. H. Goldsworthy is excellent as Michael; Aurora is charmingly played by Miss Daisy Dale; Miss Marion Hargrave is a bright, quaint Daisy; Mabel Widget is archly and effectively represented by Miss Ethel Ivimey; Miss Mary Hay is a smart Lady Bickenhall, who delivers her songs with point and expression; Mr. E. B. Davies is admirable as Gerald Treherne; and Mr. T. A. Shales is dry and droll as Crookie Scrubbs.

THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert. —Zampa gives an expert performance on the slack wire; Jack Yelding's bare-backed riding is exceptionally clever; Miss Chloe Convere and her cake-walking horse win loud applause; the Floras contribute a fine balancing turn on the slack wire; Luigi Salvino gives an enjoyable musical turn; Lillo, Loto, and Otto do a wonderful act on cycles; Clown Vinta introduced his trained geese; the Beau-ideal Troupe of Juveniles sing and dance charmingly; and the "Globe of Life" proves as attractive and exhilarating as in the previous week.

BRITANNIA PIER.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edward Gray.—Miss Marie Dainton is the chief star, and her life-like imitations and charming manner are packing the Pavilion nightly. Lauri Wylie, with his clever show, the Mimicking Manikin, provides one of the best turns of the kind; Ellis and Watts, comedians, present some excellent singing, dancing, and patter; the Three Doreen Girls are dainty and pleasing, and their dancing is far above the average; Maisie Mildare, Lancashire clog and top-boot dancer, achieves success; and Curtis Leo, the magical marvel, is responsible for some original and mystifying tricks that bring forth applause; the Great Stowe Brothers, sensational equilibrists, and the National Troupe of Character Dancers also give pleasing turns. On the pier the grand fancy-dress carnival and battle of flowers drew thousands of sightseers on Monday night.

WELLINGTON PIER PAVILION.—Proprietors, Great Yarmouth Corporation; Manager, Mr. Harry Tunbridge.—The "Gems," who proved so popular here earlier in the season, are again attracting large audiences; and Mr. Kenna Lawson, Mr. Ernest Attwell, Mr. Walla Kennedy, Miss Mortimer, and Miss Nessie Walker provide a first-class entertainment.

CHAPPELL'S PROMENADE CONCERTS.—This is the last week of the season here, and on Tuesday Mr. Syd Beckett, accompanist, took his benefit, when a large and enthusiastic audience thoroughly enjoyed an exceptionally good programme. Chappell's concerts seem yearly to grow in favour, and much of their success is due to Mr. Harry Barker, the genial general manager.

GREENOCK.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Greenock Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. R. E. Buchanan; Resident-Directors and Managers, Messrs. A. B. and J. J. Wright.—Mr. Brandon Thomas's company are here in Charley's Aunt. The title-rôle is undertaken by Mr. Spencer Trevor, who is particularly happy in his characterisation; and so, too, is Mr. C. B. Walker as Stephen Spettigue. Mr. Sydney Compton is entrusted with the part of Sir Francis Chesney, which suits him capitally; Jack Chesney and Charlie Wykeham are ably accounted for by Mr. Hastings Lynn and Mr. Richard B. Mason; while Mr. David Denard is good as Brasset. Miss Lena Macnaughton makes a dignified Donna Lucia; Miss Amy Brandon Thomas as Kitty Verdun, and Miss Grace Russell as Amy Spettigue, play in charming style; and Miss Sylvia Morris scores as Ela Delahay.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessees, The Greenock Empire Syndicate; General-Manager, Mr. Harry L. Skivington.—Lowenwirth and Cohan, Hebrew comedians, are meeting with well-deserved success. Another excellent turn is that provided by the Society Quartette, their singing and dancing being much appreciated; an amusing sketch is supplied by the Elvio Trio in Those Troublesome Slaveys; and the humorous contributions of Haraggon and Cole are received with vociferous applause. The Cosmans (comedy artists) and Ethel Loftus (the comedy girl) also find appreciation.

PAVILION, LTD. — General-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chas. A. White.—A bright and varied programme includes the Eight Lancashire Lads, who are accorded a hearty reception; Alma Obrey, charming comedienne, who proves herself a favourite with her songs; Bob Baxter, an up-to-date comedian; Kloof and Ramsey, in a novel musical turn; Edie Coolville, comedienne and dancer; and the Paviscope with interesting pictures.

GRIMSBY.—PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. H. Curry.—Mr. E. Hill-Mitchelson's romantic drama, Revenge, is meeting with considerable favour, for it is well staged, and is played by a thoroughly capable company. The author himself takes a prominent part, and depicts the usurping Prince Orloff with complete success; Miss Violet Carlyle represents the Queen in appropriately stately manner; and another popular figure is Mr. George Daiper as Captain Vanessa. Miss Alice Barber depicts the conspirator, Draga Vanessa, with considerable dramatic force; whilst others contributing to the success of the play are Miss Mary Stafford Smith as Cora Brook, Miss Cissie Podmore as Lieut. Maurice, Mr. William Heilbronn as the King, and Mr. Sinclair Holden as Captain Carr. The comedy, which is a strong feature, is made full advantage of by Mr. Russell Bogue as Jim Jennings, a British man-of-warsman, and Mr. Francis Searle as Count Musant.

THE TIVOLI. — Managing-Director, Mr. J. H. Curry; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. North. — A capital exposition of the art of jiu-jitsu is given by Frank Long, who gives lucid demonstrations of scientific methods of self-defence. He is assisted by Miss Omoyo San and Ajax. A dramatic episode of considerable merit, The Woman with the Red Hair, is presented by Mr. Webster Lawson and Miss Minnie Sadler; Ernie Mayne creates much laughter with his droll comedy; and Mr. "C." is also responsible for much merriment, his patter being decidedly smart. Speedwell shows exceptional skill as a portrait painter; Gladys and Alber give a novel turn, comprising singing, dancing, and clever somersaulting; Maud Courtney is a pleasing vocalist; Richard Finberg gives realistic impressions of celebrated actors; and Ivy Aberdare is a charming dancer.

THE PALACE.—Proprietors, The Grimsby Palace and Buffet, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. G. Rhodes Parry. — Harry Brown, coloured comedian, has established himself a favourite here; Miss Madge Grey is a clever mimic and an accomplished Lancashire dialect comedienne; Little Dott Moss contributes engaging songs and dances; and the Florodora Girls are prominent for their vocal and dancing speciality. Wyndham and Waters combine music and comedy with pleasing effect; Simms and Simms are divertingly eccentric musicians; Onda and Ariel are a couple of smart gymnasts; Prima Vesi is an expert billiard-ball manipulator; and Tom Moore is a successful comedian.

HALIFAX.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. William Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling.—Big business is being done here by Mr. W. W. Kelly's powerful company, in the latest play, The Gayest of the Gay, which is most admirably presented. Sterling is the performance of Mr. Ernest Outtrim as Jack Latimer; Mr. Leonard Yorke has much to recommend him as Hubert Steele; and Mr. Henry Belding and Mr. Alfred Grenville act well as Draycott and O'Brien respectively. Miss Laura Walker is effective as Kate.

GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. Sam Winks. — A strong attraction is furnished here by Miss Amy Augarde, in a miniature representation of Carmen, entitled La Carmencita. Miss Augarde is adequately supported, but her own charming embodiment ensures packed audiences. Irresistible Tom Lloyd is here again, singing and telling stories as he only can; one of the tidiest jugglers we have had is Rapoli, who has a host of new tricks; the O'Brien Brothers, bar performers; Silbon's Circus; Ned Graydon, the musical one; together with Ida Brophy, in song and dance, create favourable impression, as do the fine pictures on the Rayograph.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME, LTD.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. R. H. Foster.—Georg Hackenschmidt is defeating all comers here; fascinating Dot Stephens, who had such a miraculous escape from death a while back, is thunderously applauded, her singing of "What is home?" being especially sweet and pleasing; W. B. Raby enhances his reputation; Prince Kokin, Lawson and Namon, and Rosalie Jacobi are other attractions.

HANLEY. — ROYAL, LTD. — Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Douglas Elphinstone.—A welcome visit is being paid this week by the D'Oyly Carte company. The Mikado was presented on Monday. Mr. Stafford Moss as Nanki Poo sang and acted admirably; Mr. Chas. R. Walenn made a delightful Ko-Ko; Mr. Fred Billington's Poo-Bah was, as usual, a most entertaining performance; Mr. Lester Tunks as the Mikado was heard to much advantage; Miss Hope Hastings as Yum-Yum, Miss Beatrice Meredith as Pitti-Sing, and Miss Mabel Graham as Peep-Bo are most accomplished vocalists; and as Katisha, Miss Theresa Rassams is distinctly successful. Mr. T. Silver does excellent work as conductor. The Gondoliers, Patience, Iolanthe, and The Yeoman of the Guard are in the week's programme.

GRAND.—Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. James Wynes.—The Brothers Griffiths head the bill in their patter sketch, The Motor Car and the Duel; Miss Annie Purcell renders her songs delightfully; Clito, in a marble statuary performance, is excellent; the Howards, in their musical sketch, are much appreciated; Carl Lynn as an animal mimic has few rivals; Miss Edie Gray, assisted by two male singers, does well; Cissie Curlette is a mimic of no mean ability; Bertha Winder is a wonderful dancer; and the pictures are quite up to date.

HARROGATE.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. F. Smith.—For the first three nights of this week the Benson Shakespearean Company occupied the theatre. Monday night The Taming of the Shrew was in the bill. As Petruchio Mr. F. R. Benson was greatly admired; Mrs. Benson as Katharine portrayed the vixenish shrew to the life; Mr. E. A. Warburton was good in what little he had to do as Baptista; and Mr. George Buchanan was excellent as Lucentio; a special word of praise must be given to Mr. Stanley Howlett for his clever and finished performance of Hortensio; Miss Olive Noble made a pretty Bianca; and Mr. George Weir was as amusing as ever in the part of Grumio. Mr. J. P. Wilson was well placed as Biondello; and Mr. Murray Carrington made a creditable Tranio. The rest of the cast was in reliable hands. The Merchant of Venice, As You Like It, and Hamlet were also staged. For the rest of the week Mr. Mouillot's company in The Girl Behind the Counter was in the bill.

THE KURSAAL.—Manager and Musical-Director, Mr. Julian Clifford; Assistant-Manager and Secretary, Mr. R. Eldrid.—Mr. Fowler Burton, vocalist, and the Pansy and the Owls, entertainers, were here the early part of the week. The last café chantant of the season is announced for to-day.

HASTINGS.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles B. Scutt.—Mr. George Edwardes's company on Monday gave the first performance in Hastings of See See to a well-satisfied and numerous audience, whose demands for encores were frequent. Mr. Tom Nelldon gave a clever and agile performance as Hang-Kee; and Miss Mora Hersee as Lee shared his success in a song and dance. Miss Mysie Devine made a pretty appearance as See See, and sang acceptably; Mr. Alec Worcester as Yen was in excellent voice, and rendered his songs with fine effect. The gem of the evening was his duet with Mai-Yai, the fortune-teller, who had a capable representative in Miss Nina Carlton, the possessor of a rich contralto voice. Miss Gertrude Parker as So-Hie danced with gracefulness, and was much applauded; Miss Dorothy Firmin was a winsome Humming Bird; Mr. Tom Redmond won much applause as Cheoo; and his wives were amusingly presented by Misses Mary Morison, Francis Olgar, and Flora Jones. The orchestra was directed by Mr. W. Forbes-Martin, and the chorus sang well. For Thursday and the remainder of the week Peter's Mother was billed.

HIPPODROME.—General-Manager, Mr. Vivian Fisher; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Norman.—Miss Enid Lawrence is an accomplished soprano; Ray and Darwin are clever in their musical act, Home from Sea; the exhibition films are new and amusing; the comic effusions of A. C. Spry are much enjoyed; Miss Fanny Robins scores a success, her songs being rendered in sprightly manner; Miss Florry Cooper, whose voice is fresh and of good range, earns a cordial welcome; the Danbys (Charles and Arthur) are droll knockabout entertainers; Mr. Charles Deane sings his songs in a spirited fashion; and Alice and Edwards introduce a laughable sketch, Let to Two, which is admirably acted.

PIER PAVILION. — Pier Master, Mr. R. Turner; Entertainment Manager, Mr. J. D. Hunter.—An attractive and varied entertainment is securing large audiences. A musician of great ability and solo violinist, Rafalewski, gains great applause; Miss Lili Sharp, the Australian soprano, gives pleasing expression to her songs; a magical and ventriloquial sketch is cleverly enacted by Hercat and Miss Dolly Charet; and Miss Edith Trew gives exquisite renderings of her songs. Mr. J. D. Hunter, Mr. Charles Hawker, and Miss Blanche Bayley are associated in amusing comediettas; Mr. Walter Graham is very clever with his living marionettes, introducing music hall artists and their songs of years ago; Maurin's Fairy Fountains are quite a novelty here; Payne's Biophotoscope introduced the following subjects:—"Forty Winks," "Cosmopolitan Dancers," "Geneviève de Brabant."

ST. LEONARDS PAVILION THEATRE.—Pier-Master and Entertainment-Manager, Mr. Elvey Thomas.—Mr. W. P. Jury's animated pictures make a welcome return here. The subjects are up to date and the films clear and distinct. Miss Mona King skilfully performs on the violin; and Prof. Stanley Collins, the popular conjurer and coin manipulator, mystifies the audience.

HORWICH.—PRINCES THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. A. P. Patterson; Manager, Mr. Alec Harcourt.—The theatre, which has been reopened under the new management this week, has for its chief attraction Mr. Valentine Beadon's company in The Best Must Win, under the direction of Mr. Sidney C. Cranston. Mr. Cranston's Paul Dumaresq is a fine performance; Mr. E. M. Heanley's The Panther is black enough to suit the most exacting; Mr. Harold Turner plays Juan Minos with gusto; Mr. Valentine Beadon gives a pathetic rendering of Sabretache; Mr. Herbert Woodin fairly revels in the part of Jacques Courcel; and in song and dance he is ably assisted by Miss Madge Palmer as Suzette. Miss Cicely Desmonde's dual rôle, Therese Dumaresq and Lucille La Ffranche is a most artistic performance; Miss Daisy Humphrey's Denise is capitally played; and Miss Dorothy Laine gives a fine portrayal of the Marquise.

HOYLAND.—METROPOLE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Geo. S. King; Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. R. Baker.—Miss Dora Dench and Mr. Sydney Dench's company opened to a good house on Monday with A Prince of Rogues. Mr. Robert Hall is a manly Frank Farrell; as Geoffrey Flint Mr. Leonard Laurence is excellent; Mr. Sydney Dorey as Gilbert Kenry is all that can be desired; an effective Richard Harwood is found in Mr. Newton Buckland; Mr. Bert Dench causes great amusement as Josh Buggins, ably assisted by Miss Alice May as Polly Dibbs; Miss Lorna Trehearne is an excellent Rita Congreve; and as Winnie Harwood Miss Dora Dench is in every way adequate.

HUDDERSFIELD.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Frank Seddon. — It has been a real pleasure to receive a return visit of The Lion and the Mouse. Mr. Maxwell's company has been most judiciously chosen, and includes Mr. Leslie Carter, who repeats his intense and cultured presentation of John Burkett Ryder; Mr. Gordon McLeod is manly as Jeff Ryder; Mr. Herbert Chown plays with much discretion as the Hon. Fitzroy Bagley; Miss Maud Townsend is clever as the weak-nerved wife of Ryder; Miss Evelyn M. Read is a quite adequate Kate Roberts; and Miss Florence Jackson shows great ability as Shirley Rossmore, her fine work at the end of the third act fairly taking the house by storm. The play is thoroughly well mounted, and the ladies' dresses are perfect pictures.

HIPPODROME, LTD.—Resident-Manager, Mr. N. M. Robinson.—Rudinoff, the star turn, has proved a big attraction with his clever presentation of smoke pictures, lightning sketches, imitations of birds, and shadowgraphy. Others appearing are the Albano Troupe of musicians; the Olympians, singers and dancers; Les Voces, operatic duettists; Marriott Edgar, light comedian; C. H. Charlton, illusionist; Chevalier Cliquot, sword swallower; and amusing films on the Bioscope.

HULL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. Morton; Resident-Director, Mr. W. F. Morton.—Mrs. Russ Whytal has struck the right key in bringing Tom Taylor's famous play, Clancarty, before a new generation, to whom it was unknown. As Lady Clancarty Mrs. Whytal revives memories of the best of her predecessors in that rôle; she receives admirable aid from Mr. Arthur Burne, who as Clancarty is the essence of gallant ease. A very stately figure was that cut by Mr. Stratton Rodney as the King; Mr. Arthur Hardy furnishes us with a fine picture of Woodstock; Miss Mabel Knowles proves that talent is not one-sided in her family, and as Lady Betty Noel ranks near her sister (Mrs. Whytal). The heavy rôle of Goodman is efficiently portrayed by Mr. Henry J. Crane. When Mrs. Whytal joins Mr. Tree the provinces will lose a prime favourite.

GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; Resident-Manager, Mr. Wynn Miller.—Florodora has such a host of friends that its presentation is always looked forward to with pleasure. So long as Mr. Fred Eastman is cast as Tweedlepunch, so long will it have its host of admirers. Dolores on this occasion is played by Miss Maisie Ellinger with conspicuous success; the Lady Holyrood of Miss Edith Houseley is full of verve, and she brings the house down with her song.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Mortons, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. Morton.—The Village Blacksmith is a play that likewise is well known in the city. Mr. Sam Livesey and the blacksmith seem to be synonymous terms. Mr. Joseph Carter is well fixed up in the rôle of Captain Leo. The Kate Strong of Miss Maggie Edwards is full of dignity; Miss Bertha Hancock is a more than usually clever child actress.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. Alfred Graham; Manager, Mr. Tom Lunn.—Milton Ray's company, in Don Quixote, top the bill; Mr. Graham's company, including Harry Pleon, in Muldoon's Picnic, is another prominent feature. Other turns consist of Dusty Rhodes, Ormonde Penstone, Lillie Currie, and Burns and Bentley.

THE EMPIRE.—General Manager, Mr. Harry Slingsby.—Halma tops the bill in a clever juggling act; Percival and Morley are very amusing in a comedy sketch, Turtle Doves; Cliff and Kean make a big hit; and other artists include

BUCHANAN'S
"BLACK & WHITE"
THE WHISKY OF WORLD WIDE REPUTE

Madge Allen, Russell Carr, Charles Cassell, and Irene Ray.

The Circus.—General Manager, Mr. E. Emerson.—Dyson's Diorama and Gipsy Choir are staying here for fourteen days.

HYDE.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Fred Granville; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. R. Feather.—Mr. Geoffrey Fulton's company, in A Girl Redeemed from Sin, is this week drawing crowded audiences. As the heroine Miss Olive Fulton has the entire sympathies of her audiences; Miss Ada Oxley is a piquant and clever little Lancaster lass; Miss Nellie Waddington well fills the rôle of the troubled mother; and Miss Gertie Paule gives a clever character study. The hero of Mr. A. H. Barnes is played with ability and force; Mr. Gifford Reynolds gives a sound portrayal of the stricken father; Mr. Walle Spinner and Mr. Wm. Burgess are capable villains; and Mr. Harry C. Momber and Mr. Wallace Cowan ably supply the necessary fun.

IPSWICH.—Lyceum Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Leonard Grey.—Mr. Henry Bourchier's company in The Morals of Marcus opened on Thursday evening last week to an excellent audience. Mr. C. H. Croker-King gave an admirable impersonation of Sir Marcus, and Miss Hilda Antony was charming as Carlotta; Mr. A. H. Leveaux gave a delightful sketch of the character of Hamdi Effendi, Mr. Richard Neville acted well as Pasquale, and Miss Joan Burton scored a success as Judith Mainwaring. The minor characters were also admirably filled. On Monday the Austin-Leigh Répertoire Company opened for six nights with The Liars, Mr. Austin Leigh capitally sustaining the part of Col. Sir Christopher Deering. The elderly Archibald Coke was impersonated by Mr. Ernest Cossart, who has previously delighted Ipswich audiences; Mr. K. Brampton was quite a success in the part of Edward Faulkner; Gilbert and George Nepean were in the hands of Mr. H. G. Mason and Mr. Edward Vernon respectively; and the henpecked Freddie was well done by Mr. C. F. Wright. The ladies of the company were excellent; a better Lady Jessica than Miss May Salsor it would be difficult to find, or than the Lady Rosamund of Miss Mabel Archdale. Two further performances of The Liars will be given, the rest of the week being occupied by Haddon Chambers' Tyranny of Tears and Du Maurier's Trilby.

Hippodrome.—Proprietor Mr. E. H. Bostock; Manager, Mr. Stead.—Le Diablo, in Satanic costume, gave his sensational performance of looping the wheel with success, and received unstinted applause from a delighted audience. The Three Garganis gave a marvellous exhibition of balancing and feats of strength, and had a flattering reception on their first visit to the town; a novel performance was that of the Tennessee coloured Guards, a lightning drill team of eight members, who execute gun drill and wall scaling with great rapidity and precision; Oakdene, with his ventriloquial scena, The Stowaways, has been in Ipswich before, but his singing portraits are new and are deservedly popular; Mr. Fred Carey is a droll comedian with much original patter; Charles J. Johnson, the Black Diamond, is another Ipswich favourite, and had a hearty welcome on his return. Messrs. Regan and Ryan are excellent comedians, pleasing both in song and dance; as is also the case with Miss Patty Yole. The Bioscope concludes.

JARROW.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Rex Sugden.—Mr. Augustine Knight's company, in The Assassin, is a powerful attraction here. Mr. Knight's contribution to the play as Prince Demetri is a well-marked performance; and Mr. H. Bonhote Wilson shares largely in the success as Ivan Ipanoff; and Miss Ella Vane is held in much admiration as Countess Wanda. Miss Eva Trevanna is sympathetic as Nita, the Prince's victim; and Miss Hettie Senior as Connie is ably supported by Mr. E. Swinton as the Baron, Mr. Tom J. Taylor as Peter, and Miss M. E. Robertson as Katrina, also are very highly appreciated for their humour. Mr. Edward Fryer does full justice to the part of General Nicol, Chief of Police; while Mr. Theo Balfour is seen to advantage as Duke Karl; and Mr. Edwin Jenner is quite at home in the part of Captain O'Neil.

JERSEY.—Opera House.—Lessee, Mr. E. Marris.—Mr. Eugène C. Stafford's company is here this week with The Private Secretary. Miss Dora Gray is a delightfully charming Edith Marsland; Miss Elsie Davison is a handsome Eva Webster; Miss Cecily Wade is good as Mrs. Stead; and Miss Ashford is well represented by Mrs. Alfred Davis. Mr. David James as the Rev. Robert Spalding is as funny as ever; and Mr. W. Hargreaves is splendid as Mr. Cattermole; whilst the remaining characters are in safe hands.

Triangle Park.—"The Merry Madcaps" conclude their engagement here this week. Mr. Alan Stainer is an exceedingly clever ventriloquist; and Miss Lilian Gosling is a bright comedienne.

Oddfellows' Hall.—That renowned entertainer, Mr. Robert Ganthony, is appearing here with marked success, and is assisted at the piano by Miss Rita Felix, L.R.A.M.

Lauren's Field.—Sloan's Hippodrome opened on Monday.

KEIGHLEY.—Queen's Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Carson and Kendall.—Hardie and Von Leer's company are here in Two Lancashire Lassies in London. Mr. Edward Chester scores a success as Jim Price; he is excellently suited to the part. The humorous rôle of Sam Hallett is in the excellent hands of Mr. Chris Mason; Mr. Herbert Pearson is seen to advantage as John Edmunds; Mr. E. Rayson Cousins gives an admirable interpretation of the Rev. Mr. Selby; Mr. Arthur Elwyn is a capable Jonas Deane; Miss Rosslyn Vane is decidedly good as Constance Howard; and Miss Ada Hatchwell depicts Nellie Hallett in an excellent manner. Miss Marguerite Trevosper carefully plays the part of Bessie Edmunds; Miss Evelyn Shaw is a competent Jane Adelaide.

KIDDERMINSTER.—New Opera House.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr. Jas. P. Moore; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. C. Gudgeon.—A visit is being paid this week by Miss Ida Millais's company, under the direction of Mr. Henry Herne, in the play entitled No Man's Land. Mr. Herne ably portrays the character of Harry Oakands; Mr. Herbert Cecil as Silas Moore, a solicitor, is good; and Gilbert Bathurst and Captain Norman Bathurst are in the capable hands of Mr. Henry Carlisle. Miss Ida Millais gives an admirable rendering of the rôle of Mary Bathurst. The play is well mounted.

KING'S LYNN.—New Royal Theatre.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Herr B. Pareezer.—Mrs. F. J. Kirke's company is here this week with the dramatic musical comedy, The Naval Detective. Mr. E. Bertram sustains the triple rôle of naval lieutenant, a missionary, and an Irishman. Mr. G. H. Holloway appears as Dr. Schreiner, Mr. Walter Hybert as Capt. Hustle and Mr. Lorimer Stuart as the Hon. Bertie Fairlox. Of the ladies, Miss Louie Fountaine appears as Phyllis Leslie, and Miss Marie Ellie as Lulu Kauffman.

KIRKCALDY.—King's Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan.—Another variety bill was provided for the early part of the week, headed this time by Munroe's Black and White Comedy Team, whose coon singing and dancing were certainly very good. Kahn and Kahn, in their illusory act, were first favourites; Jack Neil, comedian, had a flattering reception; and the Three Eltons contributed a smart turn. The Gregson Trio, in their speciality act The Dummy, were clever; and Miss Phyllis Hampton, illustrated song singer; Mlle. Sara's Marblesque Trio; R. Dunning, ventriloquist; Andie Burn, comedian and dancer, and the pictures were all good.

LANCASTER.—Athenæum.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alfred Hook.—Mr. Alex. C. Grant's company in fulfilling a three nights' engagement with The Woman from Scotland Yard, opening to a good house on Monday. Mr. George Edwin Clive makes a capital hero of Harry Stanhope, being ably supported by Miss Eveleen Clyde as Edith Mayne. As the villain, Paul Obanoff Mr. Alex. C. Grant appears to special advantage, whilst Miss Violet Crawford gives a capital rendering of Lady Mary Stanhope. The comic element is introduced by Mr. Walter Clarke as Algernon Fitzmaurice. For Thursday, Friday, and Saturday Mr. J. W. Turner's opera company is billed.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. John Porter and W. J. Fergusson.—The Four Roubertys, equilibrists, head the bill this week with a marvellous performance. Miss Helen Charles, mimic and vocalist, is recalled nightly; and Shirley Liggins and company, coloured artists, have a good reception; Sidney Parker and Frank Parr sing well; Mabel Hind is a pleasing vocalist and dancer; Bert Oakley and Polly James win hearty applause; and Les Belles Americaines, quartette of lady vocalists and dancers, not forgetting the Hippograph, complete.

LEAMINGTON.—Theatre Royal.—Lessees, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Manager, Walter P. Wright.—The "star" turn this week is the Atlas and Vulcana Troupe, whose performances are very clever; Lonnen Meadows and company produce a funny farcical comedy, entitled Kiss Your Father; or, the Irish Doctor; Mr. Charles Lestrée gives some clever exhibitions of juggling; and Mr. Cyril Carle, actor-vocalist, is effective in his dramatic song-scena Dreams. Miss Florence St. Roy, comedienne, is popular; and Alpho gives some amusing ventriloquial sketches. Miss Amina Rinder in her illustrated song pictures is successful, and her contributions are well received. Excellent pictures shown by Vernon's Imperial Bioscope conclude a first-class programme.

LEEDS.—Grand Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager, Mr. Edward Cadman.—The production of Mr. G. Bernard Shaw's Cæsar and Cleopatra on Monday brought to us that accomplished actor, Mr. Forbes Robertson, with Miss Gertrude Elliott, and their talented company. Mr. Robertson's conception of the new Cæsar is a piece of consummate acting, and so impressed his audience that repeated calls were made at the end of each act, and amid an enthusiastic scene at the close Mr. Robertson acceded to an insistent demand for a speech. The part of Cleopatra is a most trying one, but in each of its varying moods Miss Elliott acquitted herself superbly, and a large share of the praise bestowed was for her. The valiant Rufio had a strong and forceful exponent in Mr. Percy Rhodes; a clever delineation of the clerkly Brittanus is effected by Mr. Ian Robertson; Miss Elizabeth Watson's Flatateeta is worthy a special word of commendation; the courtly Apollodorus is a fine personation by Mr. Lewis Willoughby; whilst the declamatory powers of Mr. J. M. Troughton have great scope in the rôle of Achilles. Master Philip Tonge plays the youthful Ptolemy in good style; and effective work is also done by Mr. Walter Ringham, Mr. Frank Ridley, and Mr. Charles Langley.

Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; General-Manager, Mr. R. Ernest Liston.—One of Mr. Frederick Melville's most attractive dramas, Her Forbidden Marriage, is this week presented here. The part of Madison, the great inventor, has a masterly exponent in Mr. Henry Lonsdale, whose work throughout is most strenuous and effective. Miss Gertrude Hunt is also a big star as Lady Lancaster, and much show of appreciation greets her fine acting. Mr. Louis Hector is the unscrupulous Charles Devereux, successfully raising the ire of the "gods"; and Mr. Leonard Maxwell plays the important rôle of Geoffrey Broughton in perfect style. Miss Nellie Fletcher is to be complimented on a talented effort as the Mother Superior; and the child's part is very carefully presented by Little Lucy.

Empire Palace, Ltd.—District-Manager, Mr. T. Gerald Morton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Alex Galley.—The Boissetts remain on here for a second week, the vehicle for their fun on this occasion being the laughable episode, A Trip to the Continent, which presentation is much enjoyed by full houses. That evergreen Yorkshire veteran, J. W. Rowley, again occupies a big line in the bill, and suffers no decline in popularity; whilst Ben Albert is also very amusing with quaint comedy items. Lily Burnand is as captivating as ever, and her new songs take well; Frank Elliston and company evoke merriment in a clever farcical sketch; the Miles-Stavordale quintette are doing a fine musical turn; Burley and Burley are expert and amusing in novel acrobatic business; the Stella Girls dance with untiring energy and precision, and the rest of the programme is subscribed by Nettie Starr, comedienne and dancer, and Ella Dean, a popular vocalist.

Queen's Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Bush.—A clever and attractive sketch, Kleptomaniacs, is put on here this week by the versatile Fred Edwards, and, with the assistance of a good company the presentation is very successful. The sensational acrobatic act done by the Bounding Pattersons has aroused unlimited enthusiasm nightly. A pair of very smart comedians are this week engaged in Will Dalton and Bert Weston; performing cats are presented by the Cheers; a speciality act by the Kinnards goes well; whilst Vera Mayne, vocalist and dancer, and Lillit Luraine, solo instrumentalist, also contribute good things.

Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. Thos. Barrasford; General-Managers, Mr. Chas. Weldon and Mr. Claude Shayler.—The outstanding feature of this week's bill is the remarkable ballet Electra, a wonderful electric show, unique in its way, and its presentation is enthusiastically received by crowded houses; Dorothy L. Clark is a vocalist of conspicuous ability, and she delights her many admirers in clever new songs; Ernest Rees, in song and patter, is vastly amusing; another big success is achieved by Billy Williams, the Australian artist; the Three Sisters Thurban are well liked in a capable instrumental turn; a neat comedy-drama by Fredk. Lawrence's combination goes well; another popular comedian appearing this week is Bert Brantford; and the Sisters Hall (refined vocalists) and Agnes Asher (comedienne) are other members of a good company.

City Varieties.—Proprietor, Mr. F. W. Wood; General-Manager, Mr. J. C. Whiteman; Acting-Manager, Mr. S. Jones.—That versatile entertainer Jack Lorimer leads the bill here in irresistible style, and is extremely popular. A talented musical comedy pair, Tom and Marie Motramo, are very pleasing in a drawing-room sketch; Spry and Monti add to their reputation as smart and humorous entertainers; we are pleased to renew acquaintance with Stephens and Rennoir, comedians and dancers. Stella Stahl, comedienne, displays ability above the average; Beatty and Blanche are a conspicuous success with duets and dancing; whilst T. C. Callaghan, the character comedian, and Cara Magda, novelty gymnast, are each doing capital turns.

LEICESTER.—Royal Opera House.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Business-Manager, Mr. Charles Hermann.—Mr. Lewis Waller's company, under the direction of Mr. Arthur Whittaker, are presenting here for the first time locally the romantic and interesting play Robin Hood. In the name-part Mr. Ethelbert Edwards is to be highly complimented on a good all-round portrayal; and Miss Fyfe Alexander as Lady Marian shines with a performance of exceptional merit; Miss Madge Devereux makes an excellent impression as Queen Eleanor; Mr. Henry Lesmere is very good as King Richard; and as Prince John, Mr. E. Bellenden Clarke is capital; Miss Barbara Hannay is a success as Adela; and Mr. Henry Kerr as Allan a' Dale, Mr. C. Bruce Winston as Friar Tuck, Mr. Leslie Rea as John Little, Mr. Roland Hope as the Abbot of Jourvoux, and Mr. Ernest Gray as Fitz Alwynne are to be complimented on capable embodiments.

Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Business-Manager, Mr. E. R. Beaumont.—We are this week being entertained with a return visit of Mr. Frank Lindo's company, in the domestic drama, Home, Sweet Home, in which Miss Marion Wakefield as Joan and Mr. Frank Lindo as Stephen Armitage play with their accustomed ability and success. Miss Daisy Rochefort is excellent as Dora; Captain Gerald Gambier as the Duke of Ancaster is well suited; Mr. F. Miles Hodgson is capital as Lucas Lyle, and Mr. George Overs is good as Dick Redmayne. Miss Hettie Webster as Lady Summerton deserves praise; Mr. D. Lawrence Doyle plays with effect as David Armitage; and both Miss Ray Rochefort as Sybil Fay and Mr. T. Armitage as the Hon. Percy score with popular and humorous embodiments. In the first act, Mr. Tom E. Lewis introduces his bones speciality. The play is carefully staged.

Palace Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hatton Wharton; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Bertram G. Iles.—A most cordial greeting is being extended here this week to Eugene Stratton, whose exquisitely-rendered coon songs and extremely smart and nimble dancing are so delightfully given; Henry Coutts is making a splendid impression on a first visit with his lightning-change production Outflanked, in which Mr. Coutts proves remarkably smart; Signor and Mme. Borelli, as usual, are receiving a hearty reception for their versatile turn; Bowman and Morton raise great merriment in their comedy duo, She Loved a Policeman; Percy Honri plays the concertina in a masterly manner, his various selections being highly appreciated; Tom Parker is a really funny comedian; Grace Merton, the original street singer, goes well; Fred Lincoln is a comedian of ability; and Marie Weston raises applause for her clever dancing.

Pavilion Theatre.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joe Lawrence.—Spangles and Sawdust take the lead here this week with a clever and novel stage aerial act; Frank Hardie and company are scoring a success with the interesting dramatic episode, The Man in Possession; the Sisters Cora are chic and popular duettists and dancers; Percy Curry is a funny comedian, who scores a well-deserved success; Bert Terrell, comedian, is responsible for much merriment; and Eva Daunton, burlesque actress, and Beal and Broadway also entertain. Walter H. Pallister's Bioscope, which is a regular and popular feature of the programme, is showing The Seaman's Widow, Too Stout, &c.

Temperance Hall.—A packed house here on Monday greeted Mr. Walter Jeffs' New Century Pictures. The entertainment is a thoroughly enjoyable one, and evoked unstinted applause. Among the large number of pictures shown are Cairo to Khartoum, the Victoria Falls, Review of the Home Fleet, Life's Struggle, the Lady Godiva Procession at Coventry, the Cowboys' Camp, Motor Racing at Brooklands, the Lost Umbrella, &c. The "show" is interspersed with well-rendered vocal selections by the Misses Florence and Rose Showell.

LEIGH.—Theatre Royal and Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. J. W. Cragg; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Childs.—Mr. J. A. Campbell's company is this week paying a return visit with The Sin of Her Childhood. Mr. Frank Liston gives a sound and natural embodiment of Captain John Thornton; Mr. Guy Hastings does full justice to the part of the Rev. Alan Grey; Mr. Wilson Summers is conspicuously successful as the villainous Stephen Haysel; Miss Nellie Thorne-Hallam, who undertakes the title-rôle, submits a charming interpretation; Maria Haysel is cleverly enacted by Miss Clara Santley; Miss Nellie King acts with ability as Hannah Spry; Mr. H. Brady as Barney O'Reilly and Miss Katie Lever as Eliza Muggins keep the house in good humour; Little Dorothy speaks her lines well as Eric Dugdale.

Assembly Rooms.—The Sovereign Animated Picture Co. continue to draw good houses, and the films shown are both instructive and interesting.

LEITH.—New Gaiety Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. John Darlison.—Gratifying evidences of popularity attend the run of the juvenile pantomime, The Sleeping Beauty. Wee George Wood continues to be the leading favourite with his taking songs and variety turns; but a full measure of appreciation is bestowed upon Miss Molly Dodds (the Sleeping Beauty), Miss Kitty Trewhitt (the Prince), Miss May Gibson (the Fairy Queen), and Master Jack Harrison in the part of the King. Among many attractive elements, the singing and dancing merit high praise, and the performance reflects credit on all concerned.

LIVERPOOL.—Royal Court Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Lawrence.—Mr. George Edwardes sent an excellent company here this week with See-See, and large audiences have been present to enjoy the merry tuneful comic opera. Miss Denise Orme, in the title-rôle, was particularly charming, and for her violin playing earned loud applause; Mr. Leonard Mackay acted and sang well in the part of Yen; Mr. Frank Danby as Hang Kee, and Mr. W. H. Rawlins as Cheoo created endless laughter; and worthy support came from Miss Maud Boyd (Mai Yai), Miss Dora Langham (So Hie), and Miss Daisy Revett (Lee).

Shakespeare Theatre.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. E. Stevens and R. C. Buchanan; Manager and Secretary, Mr. John Gaffney.—Mr. Beerbohm Tree commenced a fortnight's stay here on Monday, giving popular selections from his large répertoire. Opening with Colonel Newcome, the distinguished actor held a large and charmed audience in his grip, the fall of each curtain being the signal for loud and prolonged applause. Liverpool's welcome to a favourite artist is always extremely cordial. Miss Viola Tree's Ethel Newcome was regarded on all hands as a lovely picture, marked by sweet gracefulness, and she shared in the expressions of approval showered upon her father. Mr. Basil Gill looked the part of Clive Newcome, into which he infused a deal of feeling; Mr. William Haviland repeated his admirable impersonation of Sir Barnes; and included among the other excellent artists were Messrs. G. W. Anson (Fred Bayham), Harry C. Hewitt (Arthur Pendennis), Charles Quartermaine (Lord Farintosh), Miss Muriel Alexander (Lady Kew), Miss Hilda Moore (Nurse), and Miss Cicely Richards (Mrs. Mackenzie). Other works produced during the week were Richard II., Red Lamp, Van Dyck, Julius Cæsar, Trilby, and The Man Who Was.

Rotunda Theatre.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—Lucky Durham has paid another visit to Liverpool, the city wherein the late Wilson Barrett gave it birth. As on previous occasions, large audiences have gathered to enjoy this remarkable drama, which has been presented by a first-class company controlled by Messrs. H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh.—Mr. Edmund Kennedy stood out conspicuously in the title-rôle; Mr. Arthur Leigh, as the reckless, wayward Steighton, thoroughly grasped the author's intentions; Mr. T. Renaud Lockwood played Lord Mountfallon in excellent style; the minor part of Ben Verstein was cleverly handled by Mr. W. F. Clitherow; Miss Alice Esther Belmore found favour as Helen Vallerton; Miss Rosabel Dodd presented a most satisfactory Lady Mountfallon; thanks were due to Miss Lilian Mason for her thoughtful portrait of Mrs. Durham; and commendable support came from Messrs. A. E. Walker (Mr. Vallerton), W. Dunlop (Arthur Walcombe), and Miss Florence Dulhunty (Margaret Steighton). The staging of the drama was particularly good.

Star Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineberg.—Here this week large audiences have enjoyed Second to None, Walter Howard's fine military play. Mr. T. Edward Ward's company have certainly done full justice to it. Mr. Jerrold Heather played with distinction as Harry Wilding, receiving excellent support from Mr. Clifford Rean, who was his brother Frank; Mr. C. W. Spencer held the rôle of Sir Reginald Greystone with credit; Mr. J. G. Maine proved an admirable Sergeant Horseman; Miss Ward, through indisposition, was prevented from assuming the part of Nell Greystone, but the work was ably undertaken by Miss Violet Ennis Lawson; Mr. T. G. Vane made an amusing Lieut. Ballater; Mr. Alfred Brandon did well in the rôle of Captain Mannering; and excellent comedy came from Mr. Allan Carruthers (Joe Ruggles), Mr. Charles A. Preece (Private Flutter), and Miss Yandle (Norah). Miss Maudie Grayson proved an efficient May Greystone.

Queen's Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred Granville; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred L. Arthur.—When Woman Hates has been given here this week by Mr. Fred Bulmer's company. Miss Chrissie Dunbar did well as Cora Daintry; Miss Gladys Hawthorn displayed a deal of feeling in the rôle of Mary Rokeby; Mr. Eustace Day made a striking figure of the rascally Godfrey Lawton; as General Rokeby Mr. H. B. Davis acquitted himself creditably; and valuable support came from Messrs. Fred Lloyd (Lieut. Rokeby), Tod Squires (Alphonse), Evan Roland (Patrick), and Miss May Day (Edith Rokeby).

Empire.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Albert C. Duncan.—A delightful sketch, entitled Charles—His Friend, tops the bill here this week, Courtice and Louie Pounds, with their excellent company, supporting it; Clarice Mayne, an accomplished comedienne and mimic, found favour on all hands; Hooker and Davis, with six beautiful girls, introduced a neat song-scena; Black Justice, presented by Brown and Le Clerq, has proved eminently diverting; a pleasing music and song turn came from Hill and Whitaker; the singing and dancing of the Eight Empire Girls afforded every satisfaction; as comedy artists and expert dancers the Three Clarions showed much ability; and likewise in the programme were Beatrice Willey, vocalist; and Elsie Roby, with the musical comedy act, The Slavey's At Home.

Tivoli, Ltd.—Director of Entertainments, Mr. Fred Willmot; Manager, Mr. James Marks.—Fred Karno's Dandy Thieves are foremost here this week, delighting everybody; Frank Maura proves himself a marvellous foot equilibrist; Ada Spencer has some popular songs; My Pal Jemmy is a pleasing scena provided by Frank Harwood; smart work as trapeze and rope artists is shown by the Fitzroys; and Kisbey, the call-boy, also appears.

Lyric.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—At the top of the bill here this week are Carter Livesey and Lilian Rosebery, with their laughable trifle The Would-be Actors, which has been richly enjoyed; Robert Dohn's show as an athlete and equilibrist, including the balancing and firing of a gun, has been watched with deep interest; Fred Curran, the funny parody singer, proved as acceptable as ever; some clever juggling was shown by the Cromwells; most expert trick cycling was performed by the Brothers St. Clair; Frank Cass had a hearty reception for his songs; as a quaint comedian Cliff Ryland proved particularly amusing; and others in the list were Blanche Marion, a neat comedienne and dancer; Baker and Balfe, operatic and xylophone couple; and Fyne and Hurley, "the dude and the coster."

Royal Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Walter Hassan.—Included in a lengthy bill here this week are the Bensons, who have given a capital musical and comedy act entitled The Maid and the Page; an operatic and humorous absurdity presented by the Columbia Comedy Trio has proved exceedingly enjoyable; Jack Collinson's company appeared in a laughable farce entitled Topsy-Turvy School; Bennett and Martell caused much merriment as the "shipwrecked mariners"; smart songs and dances were provided by the Sharp Brothers; Nash and Noel showed themselves to be versatile comedians and dancers; Andrews and Thompson had a high-class humorous singing act; and others who appeared were Mabel and Winnie Brooke, vocalists and dancers; Ted Cowan, comedian; and Mike Cray, comedy juggler.

Royal Palace of Varieties.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole.—The stock company here are this week producing Life, from the pen of Herbert Barrs. Included in the principal characters are Messrs. Harry Tresham (Jack Lockheart), Sydney Grant (Sir Horace Lester), R. Wilton (Joe Pippitt), and Cecil Ravenswood (Peter Thorpe and Jacobs); Miss Florence Palmer (Ruth Thorpe), Miss Beryl Ravenswood (Beatrice Ferrars), and Miss Florence Cameron (Jess).

Paddington Palace.—Proprietors, Liverpool Theatres of Varieties; Acting-Manager, Mr. N. Edwards.—Brave Hearts, by Messrs. George Comer and Fred Benton, has been produced here this week by the stock dramatic company. Mr. Ernest Wingfield was an excellent Guy Barrington; Mr. H. Hesslegrave played well as Joe Ferrett; Mr. H. G. Brandon made a funny Sam Sawyer; and others who afforded valuable support were Miss Gladys H. Walton (Kate Edwards) and Miss Florence Barnes (Nellie Bligh).

Haymarket.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. Edwin W. Smith.—Harry Calden and company continue to enjoy great popularity here with their smartly-presented sketches. This week the selected one is When Snowflakes Fall; or, A Bitter Atonement. Dave Miller is an Irish comedian of ability; Davis and Agar are a funny pair of comedians with plenty of patter; Charles Coll has several amusing songs; and the Bioscope projects some excellent pictures.

Olympia.—District-Manager, Mr. Albert Bulmer; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wighton.—The big attraction here this week is Ivan Padoubny, a wrestler, who has issued a number of challenges which were accepted by local contestants, all of whom he easily vanquished; Happy Fanny Fields comes from the Empire; The Wreck of the Hesperus is a pleasing musical trifle contributed by Hamish MacCunn; Ella Shields sings in attractive style several coon songs; Seener and Fridkin's Imperial Russian troupe of international singers and dancers are particularly good; a talented musical entertainment is given by the Jackson Family; and also in the list are Will Poluski, jun., an eccentric comedian and dancer; Three Cape Girls, comediennes and long boot dancers; and Rich and Rich, comedians.

Roscommon.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Willmot.—The stock dramatic company here are still doing good business. This week Mr. Percy Boucher and company are presenting Shadows of a Great City, from the pen of Joseph Jefferson. Among the principal characters are Tom Cooper (Mr. Herbert H. Young), George Benson (Mr. J. D. Geddes), Abe Nathan (Mr. C. H. Maxwell), Annie and Nellie Standish (Miss Lilian Beaumont), Jim Farren (Mr. Percy Boucher), Mrs. Higgins (Miss Jenny Maxwell), and Biddy Roonan (Miss Enid Wild).

LLANDUDNO.—Prince's Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. A. E. Vaughan; Manager, Mr. J. Ritson.—Mr. J. Maundy-Gregory's company appeared for three nights in the military play, Lights Out. Mr. Arthur Stone is good as Captain Von B. Bannewitz; Mr. Herbert Lugg as Lieut. Von Howen is well placed; Mr. Wernham S. Ryott as Lieut. Von Lauffen gives an excellent impersonation; Sergeant Volkhardt is in the capable hands of Mr. Frank Powel; Mr. Francis J. Bithell (Corporal Queiss) and Mr. Reginald Payne (Corporal Helbig) play in good style; and Klara Volkhardt is creditably portrayed by Miss Dorothea Desmond. The Angel of the Swamp is played as a curtain-raiser. A Bunch of Violets was announced for the remainder of the week.

LONG EATON.—St. James's Theatre.—A Wife's Triumph was presented by Mr. Ernest R. Abbott's company on Monday, while Sapho was staged on Tuesday and Wednesday, and Trilby and the House of Shame on Thursday and Friday. Mr. Abbott is capital as the Yorkshire squire; Miss Ada Abbott is a graceful Bessie Dewhurst, whose influence gets back the Wilton home, imperilled by the nefarious tricks of betting men. Mr. W. H. Davis-Brown figures well as the sturdy trainer; Mr. Frank Stephens is very good as Frank Wilton, in the clutches of Messrs. W H. Garbois and Weedon Ross, the "bookies"; and Mr. R. Ernest makes up capitally as the American bookmaker. Mr. Edwin Keene has scope for his versatile powers as the village constable and then the landlord, ably assisted by Miss Marjorie Tennant, and they are the funny pair. Mr. Keene is heartily encored for his vocal number.

LUTON.—Grand Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. B. Graham Falcon; Manager, Mr. Louis J. Beard.—Mr. Hoggan Armadale is paying the town a visit with his sensational drama, The Face at the Window. Mr. Armadale himself is playing the rôle of Lucio Delgado, an Italian, alias Le Loup, and is perfect in the part. He is ably supported by a strong and efficient company, which includes Mr. Dunscome as the detective, Mr. Warne as De Brisson, a wealthy banker, and Mr. Geo. Hineson as Peter Pottlebury, an English tourist. The scenery is especially good and very effective.

MACCLESFIELD.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. H. Gattey.—Mr. T. Morton Powell's company is here in Honour Thy Father. Mr. J. W. Evelyn gives a splendid portrayal of Gabriel Garth; Mr. E. Turner is quite at home in the part of Jack Halyard; as Duncan Bly Mr. H. Travis gives a sound impersonation; whilst Mike Copplestone's career is in the capable hands of Mr. F. W. Graham. Mr. H. Black is most typical as Ned Pennycomquick; and Mr. C. Merton does justice to both George Bloggs and Job Merry. Miss Kate Newton is a most fascinating Gertrude Garth; and Miss Violet Hammersby is really charming as Lillian Garth; Miss Lizzie Jacobs is merry enough as Poppy Cornleigh; Miss Winnie Donovan is splendid as Mercy Merry; and Miss Maud Grey as Violet Wilfred portrays the part in a most enchanting manner.

MAIDENHEAD.—Town Hall.—Secretary, the Town Clerk.—A good audience assembled on Monday to see The Girl Who Took the Wrong Turning, played by Miss Inez Howard's company, under the direction of Mr. Henry Chattell. The Sophie Coventry of Miss Edith Knight deserves high commendation, the parts of Jack and Lucy Fenton are well sustained by Mr. Ted Dennis and Miss Carrie Ellis, and Mr. Leslie Beaufort is a manly representative of the British tar. Mr. Charles Coleman and Miss Nita Langford both display ability as the unscrupulous adventurers, Mr. Charles Leverton gives a good character study of Bill Slater, and much amusement is afforded by Mr. Will Glaze and Miss Betty Seymour as Johnny Walker and Poppy Slater.

MAIDSTONE.—Hippodrome.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. S. Baskerville.—The programme this week is headed by Arthur Reece, who has a good selection of songs, and sings them well. Picton Roxborough and company are amusing in the sketch, Cockie; Jack Lane, mimic and entertainer, is deservedly popular; Les Valdos, eccentric acrobats; and Phern and Phern, instrumentalists, all do well. Miss Amy Sullivan, comedienne, and Miss Ethel Dunford, vocalist, together with the Bioscope, complete the bill.

Corn Exchange.—Manager, Mr. J. W. Beslee.—The St. Louis Animated Picture Company is paying its annual visit, and to judge from the enthusiasm of the audience this fine exhibition of animated photos has lost none of its popularity. The chief attraction is Mr. Harry Lauder, this popular artist being presented with lifelike realism by means of Gaumont's Chronophone.

MANCHESTER.—Theatre Royal.—Lessees, the United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edmondstone Shirra.—A splendid house welcomed Mr. George Alexander and his company in His House in Order at this theatre on Monday. The reputation of this fine play was endorsed by the audience's rapt attention and enthusiastic applause, the prime honours of the evening going, of course, to Mr. Alexander, in the rôle of Hilary Jesson, and to Miss Irene Vanbrugh, whose depiction of Nina, in depth and power, could hardly have been surpassed. Mr. Cyril Harcourt's Filmer Jesson was well studied and natural; and the Ridgeley group found excellent exponents in Miss Ruth Maitland, Mrs. Kemmis, Mr. E. Lyall Swete, and Mr. George Silver. Mr. Norman Trevor also did well as Major Maurewarde; and the same may be said of Miss Beatrix de Burgh as Mlle. Thomé; while great praise is due to Miss Iris Hawkins for her clever and natural acting as Derek. In addition to frequent curtains, a magnificent ovation was accorded to Mr. Alexander and Miss Vanbrugh at the close.

Prince's Theatre.—Proprietors, the United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Lee.—Robin Hood, presented here on Monday by Mr. Lewis Waller and company, proved a great treat to a large and appreciative audience. Mr. Waller's depiction of the famous outlaw is, as might be expected, a fine and gallant piece of work. He is supported by Miss Nora Lancaster as Lady Marian de Vaux, and the figure she makes in the play is a charming one. Mr. Shiel Barry as Prince John handles his part in capital style; Mr. Frank Woolfe is very well suited to the rôle of Richard Cœur de Lion; Mr. J. H. Irvine makes an excellent Hugo de Longespee; and Mr. Charles Rock submits a highly acceptable sketch of Friar Tuck; while very pleasing and dainty work is added by Miss Dora Barton as Adela, Mrs. Helen Leyton as the Queen-Dowager, and Miss Eleanor May as Alison Much. Others who contribute to the brilliant effect are Mr. Cecil Cameron as Alan A'Dale, Mr. Herbert Jarman as Little John, Mr. Owen Roughwood as Will Scarlet, Mr. Herbert Vyvyan as the Abbot, Mr. S. J. Warmington as Much the miller, and Mr. G. B. Brereton as Fitz Aylwynne. Lyrics and choruses are introduced, and the scenery is magnificent.

Gaiety Theatre.—Proprietors, the United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. M. Thorburn.—The Maid and the Motor-Man is in its third week here, and is proving a decided draw. The piece has benefited by the introduction of new features, including several taking lyrics, and a successful future seems to be assured.

Royal Osborne Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-

Harry Nelson, comedian, is also prominent and popular; and good turns are added by Yeotha and Captain Grade, in a novel scena, Indian Pastimes; Ajax and George, novelty artists; King and Starling, versatile artists; the Victorians, cultured duettists; and Moon and Morris, comedians and smart dancers. Snowball and Miss Dolla did not appear on Monday.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. R. Flanagan; Manager, Mr. P. Ryan Smith.—Mr. M. Romanney presents here this week a sensational drama, entitled By London's Mighty River, by T. G. Bailey. All the elements of excitement are embodied in the story, which is well unfolded by a capable company, among whom Mr. J. R. Darnley as Lionel Carstairs makes a bold and breezy hero; Miss M. Pascoe as Madge Mayfield is a pleasing heroine; Mr. Douglas R. Munro is sufficiently sinister as Graham, the villain and swindler; and Miss Ella Merrydew and Mr. A. Russell act well in dual rôles. The remaining characters are well varied and amusing, and the whole goes with a swing.

GRAND JUNCTION THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Dey.—The fare here this week is For Her Sake (Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company), which was played last week at the Royal Osborne Theatre.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—Huge audiences are drawn here nightly by George Robey, who is in his best form, and, consequently, vastly amusing in his various funny songs and business. Oswald Williams, also prominent in the bill, submits a smart and elaborate series of illusions; a very good turn is added by the Warsaw Brothers, in a merry musical sketch; Farley, Rennie, and Farley provide their novel comedy act, Fun at a Railway Station; and other pleasing items are Olive and Owen, the "roadside tinkers"; the Vernon Troupe of expert xylophonists; Ethel Haydon, ballad vocalist; Charles Pastor, comedian; and Florence Vic, character comedienne. The pictures show recent local events.

HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. P. Morgan. The Typhoon is still the pièce de résistance at this popular house, and is greatly enjoyed. De Gracia's elephants are wonderfully well trained; the Three Prestons, in their absurdity, The Liftman's Rise, are highly amusing; Ted E. Box is a capital comedian of the eccentric order; and a clever comedy whistler, La Berat, submits a most astonishing dancing act as the Mystic Fire Maiden; the Leonards are very entertaining in a comedy act, Point Duty; and the Sisters Pine are seen in Maggie's Day Out. Two vocal items by the choir, and the Lifeboat Saturday Procession, shown on the Bioscope, are also included in the programme.

PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Walter De Frece; Secretary, Mr. Peter Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Tealor Wade.—Big crowds are attracted here this week by R. G. Knowles, whose turn is long, and quite in his very best style. Admirable turns are given also by Gus Harris, the popular Hebrew character delineator; Bosanquet, wonderful violinist and speciality musician; Francis O'Flynn, phenomenal banjoist; May Newall, dainty vocalist; Milner Verren, the popular tenor; Harry Zetta, comedian and eccentric dancer; and Gregson and Goodfellow, a smart comedy duo. The pictures are good, as usual.

TIVOLI.—Managing-Director, Mr. Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—Billie Barlow, with her charming manner, is the bright particular star here this week, and meets with a splendid reception. Stanley Damerell and Cecil Rutland and a capable company are highly successful in an absurdity, entitled House Full. Nat Travers, coster comedian, sings two songs in good style; the Greys are excellent singers, and are well received; some capital singing and dancing is done by the Emerald Gems; Cissie Lupino is an exceedingly clever juvenile dancer Woolmer Young is a good vocal comedian; the Brothers Baker are amusing patterers and Eva Compton is a neat comedienne. Raymond's Vivagraph pictures complete.

QUEEN'S PARK HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meek.—Mr. Arthur Rigby is here with his capital song-scena, The March of the Married Men; the Cumberlands are wonderfully clever trick cyclists and acrobats; and Captain Roberts, the herculean musician, is very entertaining; the Forestiers, in an up-to-date quick-change sketch, are capital; the Columbia coloured coons sing and dance well; and Carney and Armstrong have some amusing patter. The Storey Trio are clever hand-balancers; whilst good work is also done by Arthur Pearl, comedian; and Harry Leaton, vocal comedian. Very interesting pictures are shown on the Bioscope.

KING'S, LONGSIGHT.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. B. Taylor.—Prominent and well-received turns here this week are those of the Emmell Comedy Company, including Adele Levey, in a mythical muddle, entitled My Statue of Grace; Tina Clementa's wonderful sporting act; Mlle. Rennie, an exceedingly smart juggler; the Sages, burlesque artists and dancers; and Mark Henton, comedian. Other entertaining items are offered by Angelo, the lightning painter; the Irving Trio of harmonising vocalists; Edith St. Clair, comedienne; Roy Beavis, the merry magician; and W. G. Wesley, a quaint comedian. An Amateur Athlete is the subject of the animated pictures.

HULME HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Kay.—The Six Yuilians head the bill here this week, and go through an exceptionally smart acrobatic performance. The Wakeman Quartette are excellent in a musical comedy sketch; and Clare and Pastor are entertaining speciality artists; Fields and Lewis, in their latest act, are good; Connie Mascot is a pleasing comedienne and dancer; Freddie Field, comedian, is capital; and Harrigan and Holt are as popular as ever. Very clever are Paul Gascoigne and Correze and Keith in their respective juggling acts; and Yorkshire Tom is warmly received for his excellent mimicry. The pictures are very laughable.

MANSFIELD. — HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Herbert Darnley; Resident-Director, Mr. Tom Jennings; Acting-Manager, Mr. Mark Lorne.—Miss Maud Western and company, in The Prodigal Son, are the attraction here this week. Captain Harry Fanshaw is admirably portrayed by Mr. W. A. Buckstone; and Mr. Claude Seaton is capable as Jack Fanshaw; Mr. J. O. Stevenson gives a powerful rendition of the part of Ralph Marsden; Mr. W. Chapman is at home in the rôle of Corbett; Miss Maud Western finds many admirers by her artistic playing of the rôle of Dick; Miss Helen Reece is all that can be desired as Nellie Birke, and the same remark applies to Miss Ada Hender as Margaret Marsden.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietors, Mansfield, Sutton, and District Theatres, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Captain Cecil Clayton.—Mr. Frank Bertram's company, in The Convict's Daughter, is occupying the boards here this week. Mr. Frank Bertram fills his quadruple rôle with credit; Mr. W. Graham plays the part of Harold Trevelyan capably, as also does Mr. E. de Vere that of Frederick Neville. The rôle of Jasper Thorne is in the able hands of Mr. E. Robson; as Marian Thorne Miss M Beard displays ability; and the rôle of Edith is creditably portrayed by Miss Lilias Deane. The comedy element is well looked after by Mr. S. Roberts as Patrick O'Laragan and Miss L. Nordan as Betty Hyne.

MARGATE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Exclusive Manager, Mr. Edward Michael; Resident-Manager, Mr. Wallis Clark.—Mr. Lionel Glenister and Mr. Wood-Ingram's company has made a successful appearance here this week, with All-of-a-Sudden Peggy. Miss Kate Cutler, in the title-part, has given a delightful impersonation; as the Hon. Jimmy Keppel Mr. Lionel Glenister, with his clever and refined acting, has scored a pronounced success; and a capital piece of character-acting has been contributed by Mr. J. W. Wood-Ingram, as Lord Crackenthorpe; Miss Kate Wingfield is the haughty and stately Lady Crackenthorpe to the life; Mr. Colin Johnstone does excellently as the retired Major Phipps; and Miss Leonora Thomas plays the Hon. Millicent Keppel with grace and charm; Miss Naomi Nelson is deserving of praise for her impersonation of Mrs. O'Mara, with a rich brogue which is refreshingly natural; Miss Estelle Despa makes a good Hon. Mrs. Colquhon; and other most satisfactory presentments are contributed by Mr. W. H. G. Wynne as Jack Menzies, Mr. Harry Phillips as Parker, and Mr. P. Fitzgerald as Lucas. The comedy has been preceded each evening by a dramatic episode, After Seven Years.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietors, Messrs. F. Mouillot and W. de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. F. Bawtree.—The attraction here this week is Chung Ling Soo, whose clever feats have completely puzzled and mystified audiences; Frank Keegan and Co. give a clever knockabout cycle act; the Twin Brothers Dean, step dancers, are good; the Forrest Combination appear in a mirth-provoking sketch; Arthur Croxon, comedian and mimic, is an excellent turn; and the Zerbinis give a high-class musical mélange.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, The South Wales Entertainments, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. W. Player.—When it was Dark, presented by Mrs. T. Morton Powell's company, is here this week. As the Rev. Basil Goitre Mr. Frank Tennant plays in manly fashion; an excellent representation of Sir Robert Llewellyn is given by Mr. Edward Valentine; Constantine Schuabe is ably presented by Mr. Cuthbert Imrie; Mr. Ernest St. John presents an excellent study of the Rev. Mr. Byars; Mr. Lionel West skilfully enacts the part of Charles Gayfly; and Mr. R. B. Drysdale is good as Nunc Wallace. Miss Beatrice May merits praise for an excellent portrayal of Gertrude Hunt; Mrs. Morton Powell makes a sympathetic Helena Byars; and Miss Dorothy Hildebrande a pleasing Grace Goldeye.

TEMPERANCE HALL.—Manager, Mr. Israel Price.—The Macdonald Trio in their "musical garden" provide an enjoyable entertainment; Wallace Whitney scores with his songs; Miss Beattie Foster is a delightful comedienne; Mephisto, a clever contortionist; Leo King sings in excellent style; Vendome and Chase are smart dancers; Mlle. Sollo gives a graceful gymnastic turn; and J. H. McCann's roller-skate dancing is well received.

MEXBOROUGH.—PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. W. H. Melton.—Mr. Geo. Burton's vaudeville company occupies the boards here this week. Herr Blumenfeld's troupe of performing dogs exhibit rare sagacity and excellent training. Other turns are the Deroneys, comedy act; Chas. Rowen, comedian; Wyman, trick skater; Little Doris Jeffs, quick-change artist; Flo Lister, a talented contralto vocalist, with a voice of remarkable timbre and purity; Terry and Snowden, vocal comedy artists; Chris Van Bern, comedian; Monti Santos, society juggler; P. J. Durney, globe walker; Miss Lena Debarr, comedienne; and the Tivoli Girls, vocalists and dancers.

MIDDLESBROUGH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Charles Imeson.—Mr. Edward Terry and his company opened on Monday night with Sweet Lavender. Mr. Terry in the rôle of the shabby, drunken, and yet good-hearted Dick Phenyé was at all times natural and convincing; while Miss Ruth Nightingale gave a flawless portrayal of the title-rôle; Mr. B. A. Pittar acted with great distinction the part of Clement Hale; and Mr. Thos. Holding as the persistent Yankee was very amusing; Miss Marion Ripley was charming as Minnie; and Miss Agnes Knights was pleasing as Ruth Halt. The part of Mr. Wedderburn found an excellent exponent in Mr. Chas. B. Bedells; and Miss Eugenie Vernie as Mrs. Gilfillian, Mr. Wm. Dexter as Dr. Delaney, Mr. H. A. Samson as Mr. Maw, and Mr. Percy Crawford as Mr. Bulger were all that could be desired. The piece is admirably staged. Liberty Hall, The Magistrate, The Rocket, and Paul Pry have also been staged during the week.

OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Jas. Ed. Jowsey.—Mr. Walter Melville's play, The Soldier's Wedding, is played by an excellent company. Mr. Wingold Lawrence is quite at home in the part of Jack Brown, the hero; while Miss Marie McAulay impresses the audience with her capital impersonation of Julie De Beauvrais; Miss Jessie Winter was very effective in the rôle of Nancy Lee; and the part of her grandfather, Nathaniel Lee, found a most capable exponent in Mr. Fred Yorold; Mr. Beresford Whitcomb was good as Colonel Graham; and the difficult part of Charles Courtney was in the capable hands of Mr. Raymond Wood; Mr. Frederick Pyron was good as David Munroe; and Miss George De Sara was excellent in the rôle of Peggy Munroe.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Brill; Manager, Mr. Charles G. Rembges.—Walter King creates roars of laughter here this week with his humorous songs and patter; and the Norman and Leonard Trio make a good impression in their musical act; Sylvia Cavaho and company are exceedingly pleasing in a dramatic episode, entitled Lulu; while Walker and May, coloured vaudeville artists, score a great success. The Three Sisters Tree provide a most delightful vocal and dancing turn; and Little "Tich" Bourne pleases. Other artists who add to a capital programme are Tray and Rich, and Forest and King.

OXFORD PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Alf. Graham; Manager, Mr. R. L. Griffiths.—The Wonderful Emilions give a most daring and clever acrobatic display; Ted Karno and comedians create roars of laughter in their farce, Dinner Hour; as do also Tom Kelso and company in a short comedy, entitled, The Silly Servant; a pleasing turn is given by the Meymotts; and Bob Morgan is an excellent vocalist; Syd Herman, comedian, does well; and other turns are given by the New Macs and the Sisters Dorrell.

MORECAMBE.—ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Lessee, Lieut. Julian Malvern; General-Manager, Mr. Chas. M. Julian.—Mr. Reginald Dance and his company have been appearing during the week with great success in Raffles. Mr. Dance has sustained the titular rôle with distinction, and has been loudly applauded at every performance. It has really been a wonderful bit of acting, and the sangfroid of the amateur cracksman has been well maintained throughout. Mr. Ed. Irwin as the cute Yankee detective, Curtis Bedford, has also scored, and Messrs. Brisco Owen (Bunny), Oswald Griffiths (Lord Amersteth), Rivers Bertram (Crawshay), and Stanley Lathbury (Lord Crowley) have played their allotted parts extremely well. Miss May Brook has been an ideal woman of the world as Mrs. Vidal, and Miss Katie Yates has been excellent as the confiding girl Gwendoline. Miss Rita Ward has been a conspicuously successful Marie, the French maid. Poor Pillicoddy, a farce by Maddison Norton, has been the curtain raiser.

MOTHERWELL.—NEW CENTURY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Hales.—Mr. James Welsh's company is proving a strong attraction here this week, in When Knights Were Bold. As the matter-of-fact little autocrat, Sir Guy de Vere, Mr. Nelson Keys is irresistibly funny. Mr. Charles Ommanney is equally admirable as the bumptious Irishman, Sir Brian Ballymote; Mr. William Lockhart is unctuously humorous as the Dean; very amusing is the Charles Widdicombe of Mr. Thomas Pauncefort; Wittie and Barker are aptly impersonated by Messrs. Talbot Homewood and W. Hubert; Miss Emelie Polini is altogether admirable as the sentimental Lady Rowena; and Miss Marjorie Chordiss is a handsome and fascinating Miss Isaacson. Other ladies who contribute to an excellent ensemble are Mesdames Eva Leonard Boyne, Vera Herbert, Lena Flouerdue and Nannie Hume. Mr. Talbot Homewood and Miss Eva Leonard Boyne are seen to advantage in a clever curtain-raiser, The Miller.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. Teale Lingham.—Mr. Martin Harvey and company opened a week's engagement on Monday evening with the first presentation to a provincial audience of Karl Rossler's religious play, Great Possessions. In the part of the gentle, idealistic Nathaniel, Mr. Harvey achieved another great triumph, giving a poetic and imaginative touch to the character. In very effective contrast is the impersonation of old Shylock of Mr. Charles Glenny; and an excellent piece of acting is the Ruth of Miss Coleridge. Miss N. de Silva as Simon and Mr. Albert Raynor as Rabbi Jehuda also contribute able studies, and undeniable evidence of the appreciation of the audience of the play as a whole was often enough forthcoming. Also included in the bill for the week is The Corsican Brothers, Rouget de L'Isle, and the ever-popular play, The Only Way.

TYNE THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessees, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. C. Sutcliffe.—The musical comedy, Miss Hook of Holland, was given its first presentation in Newcastle on Monday evening, and, judging by the reception it gained from a large audience, this merry, lively, and pleasing "Dutch incident in two acts" was destined to have a very successful week's run. Mr. George Dance sent a capital company, including Mr. Leslie Holland, who as Mr. Hook was very quaint and amusing; and Miss Deborah Volar, who played the part of Sally with charming naïveté. Miss Mabel Sealby fairly revels in the rôle of Mina; and Mr. Arthur Harrold, who has a good voice, was a distinct success as Van Vuyt. Mr. Fred Lyne as Simon Slinks, Mr. Frederick Hobbs as Captain Adrian Paap, and Mr. Charles D. Cleveland as Ludwig Schnapps all deserve favourable mention.

PALACE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. T. W. Rowe.—A company, under the able leadership of Mr. Lester Collingwood, appear in the drama, When London Sleeps, and chief among those to the fore in a successful presentation are Mr. R. Ferris, Mr. E. P. Ashby, Mr. F. E. Thomas, Mr. D'Arcy Kelway, Mr. Tom Roydon, Miss Mabel Scudamore, Miss Lilla Wilde, and Miss Emmeline B. Lewis.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Sidney Bacon.—The Sign of the Cross is being played here this week. Mr. Cyril Austin Lee impersonates Marcus Superbus with both grace and vigour, and Mr. C. Yorke makes a most admirable Emperor; while the parts of Tigellinus and Licineus are capitally assumed by Messrs. Charles Aldred and J. Wetherall. Miss Gladys Leslie makes a charming Mercia, and Miss Lena Gordon gives a careful study of the part of Berenice.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Resident-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wells.—Miss Vesta Tilley, as charming and talented an artist as ever, draws a succession of crowded houses this week, all her songs going well, and none better than the old favourite "Following the dear old dad." Launceston Elliott contributes a novel strong man's act as the "British Hercules." Old favourites in Mr. George Spry and Miss Florrie Austen score as heavily as ever, Frank Cumminger is a smart sand dancer, and others meeting with success are the Sisters Poole, the Clement Trio, Miss May Henderson, and Mark Adams and company.

PAVILION THEATRE.—The Barrasford Company; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. H. Boardman.—The Fourteen Black Hussars, coloured instrumentalists, who play with great power and marvellous precision, are a capital turn, quite to the liking of Newcastle audiences. An old favourite, but always contributing something original and distinctive, Mr. Martin Conway has again a flattering reception; clever and amusing are Mr. and Mrs. Royston-Dene and company in the comedietta, My Lady's Chamber; and a football match on bicycles by Hinton and Wooton produces great enthusiasm. Williams and Warden contribute an Irish vaudeville act full of fresh humour; and a decided hit is made as a male impersonator by Miss Nellie Moore. In musical comedy speciality Stiddar and Dunbar are also favourites; and the Hartfords, in an acrobatic bicycle act; Ford Williams, vocalist; and Wright and Lawson, eccentrics, assist ably in a capital entertainment.

NEWPORT.—LYCEUM.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Sidney Cooper.—Baron H. Harriss's company is delighting good houses here this week with the musical comedy, The Prince of Pilsen. Mr. Harry Kilburn, as the involuntary impostor, keep the house in roars; as the Prince proper Mr. Frank Crewys does well; as Mrs. Maddison Crocker Miss Sophie Harriss has a fine stage presence, and infuses into the part a mixture of vivacity, grace, and humour that is irresistible; Nellie Wagner (Miss Hazel Saqui) sings sweetly; Mr. Lindon Lang is a capable exponent of the rôle of Lieut. Tom Wagner; and he has a fascinating partner in Miss Ernestine Desborough. As the Earl of Shrimpton Mr. Bernard Russell is distinctly smart; and Mr. Ernest Clifford shows ability in the part of François, a French waiter. Sidonie is admirably suited to Miss Connie Lever; and other characters are well sustained.

EMPIRE.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.—Manager, Major Gallagher. — Herbert Darnley's company, in the sketch, The Skirmishers, provides the principal attraction in the bill here. Another cleverly worked-out sketch, Love Germs, is presented by the Smythsons; Belle Davies and her pick-chick actors are accorded a warm reception; Cull-Pitt, who is assisted by Mlle. Adele, proved himself a trickster above the average; and Westland, a Scotch comedian, does well in song and patter. Gertrude Bradshaw is a soprano of ability; the Erik Brothers are a couple of clever equilibrists; and Frank Darwin, an actor-vocalist, is warmly recognised; while the Bioscope, showing a pictorial drama, The Light that Failed, completes the Bill.

NORTHAMPTON.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. E. Barnett.—Mr. George Dance's principal company in The Catch of the Season has drawn crowded houses this week. Miss Moya Mannering scores a brilliant success as Angela; Miss Enestine Walker acts and sings well as Lady Crystal; Miss Doris Greville and Miss Muff Carew are excellent as the Hon. Honoria and the Hon. Sophia Bedford; Miss Louie Bentley is admirable as the Duchess of St. Jermyn's; Mr. Frank Lincoln as the Duke of St. Jermyn's is excellent throughout; Mr. Tom Shelford gives a good delineation of the modern Lord Dundreary; Mr. John Wigley is good as Sir John Crystal; Mr. Frank Miles is a quaint Mr. William Gibson; and Master Peter Grata as Bucket, the page, is an immense favourite.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Fred H. Anderson; Manager, Mr. Thos. A. Evans.—Two strong attractions in the Palace programme this week are Jan Rudenyi and company in a musical, dramatic episode, in which the gifted Hungarian violinist is ably supported by Miss Dora de Winton and Mr. John D. Saunders; and the first appearance in Northampton of Lottie Collins, the dashing and chic comedienne, was also accorded a big reception. Other attractions are Currie and Scott, who please with song and dance; Phil Rees, who gives some good imitations of various coloured artists; C. Vincent, with the Palace pictures; Lewin and Binns, comedy duologue artists; Harry Sims, comedian; and the Lauri Brothers, smart Society gymnasts.

NORTH SHIELDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Horace Lee.—Mr. Montague Beaudyn's company commenced a week's engagement here on Monday with A Beautiful Fiend. Mr. Oliver Birrell appeared as Ivan Paulovitch, and gave a capital portrayal of the character; and Mr. Harry C. Robinson represented Count Karetoff in clever style; Mr. Matt Russell acted admirably as Sergius Strogoff; Mr. Harry Oates was deservedly popular as Crackles; and Mr. W. Robertson Foulis made the most of Malachi. As Wanda Miss Sidney Crowe made a decided hit; Miss Phyllis Brent as Nadine Karetoff was worthy of the highest praise; and Pattie Woodlands found an able representative in Miss Annie Clunn. Last evening (Friday) the popular acting-manager (Mr. Horace Lee) took a complimentary benefit, extra attractions being announced for the occasion.

CENTRAL PALACE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Wm. Mould.—This week we have the Four Herberts, the Californian farmers and maid, who meet with their usual hearty reception; Mr. Jack Sheppard, handcuff king, performs some clever feats; and Miss Cass Leighton, juvenile comedienne, is smart. The Brothers Obo, laughing and patter comedians, make a great hit; the Three Handels present an enjoyable musical act; Mr. Harold Carlyle, Scotch comedian; Mr. Jack Douglas, comedian and bâton manipulator; and the Bio-Photoscope complete the programme.

NORTHWICH.—CENTRAL THEATRE.—Proprietress, Mrs. S. Golden.—An excellent presentation of Proof has been given this week by Mr. and Mrs. William Maclaren's talented company. Mr. Penn Hamilton's Lazare was altogether good; Mr. Carl Beechy was a humorous Chamboran; Count D'Aubeterre was nicely played by Mr. Bernard Elliott; Mr. G. Ridgeway Thorne did very well as Victor De Laugney; and Mr. S. Herbert Humber's Pierre Lorance was a powerful embodiment, his ability being thoroughly proved in the great situations of the piece. Miss Ehelma Kurz as Adrienne effectively exercised her undoubted talents; the Mme. Deprets of Miss Elizabeth Dexter was a most consistent performance; Duchess D'Aubeterre was well represented by Miss Emelie Wilson; and Miss Alicia Raleigh stood out pre-eminently with her clever presentation of Valentine.

NORWICH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Manager, Mr. Fred Morgan.—Hendie and Von Leer's company is here this week, in Two Little Vagabonds. Mr. Wilson Coleman gave an excellent representation of George Thornton; and Mr. Douglas Cecil was equally good as Capt. Darville; Mr. Joseph Brandon was very successful as John Scarth; Mr. John F. Trayner acted well as Bill Mullins, the Gaffer; and the Dido Bunce of Mr. Frank Gordon, and Mr. Fred Archer as the Coughdrop, deserve every praise; Miss Violet Ellicott as Marion Thornton excited much sympathy; Miss Helena Millais was good as Barbara; and Miss Marie Pritchard did well as Biddy Mullins; Miss Marjorie Murray as Dick and Miss Josie Beltram as Wally won golden opinions for their acting.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. Councillor F. W. Fitt.—Minnie Hunt and Rhys Thomas are very diverting in an amusing little sketch, entitled Her Birthday; Professor Duncan puts his collies through various clever tricks; Mlle. Lumiere, assisted by Mr. D. J. Birteno, in her novel act, The Fairy Grotto, is a pleasing turn; Minnie D'Aubyn is successful as a vocalist; Mount and Corelli are much appreciated as Society entertainers; Charley Russell as a comedian is a favourite; and Tom Dunmore is well received; the Three McGregors are entertaining musicians; and the Hippo Biograph has some amusing scenes depicted on the screen.

ST. ANDREW'S HALL.—It is long since this hall was used by professional artists, other than at concerts, &c., but on Monday M. and Mme. Zancig gave two of their marvellous performances, to the wonder and amusement of fairly large audiences.

NOTTINGHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Howard Finney.—The Scarlet Pimpernel has a particular attraction for playgoers here, inasmuch as it was first produced in this house, and Monday night's audience gave a very warm welcome to it; indeed, so warm that Miss Julia Neilson and Mr. Fred Terry were compelled to repeatedly bow their acknowledgments. The Lady Blakeney of Miss Neilson is, as ever, a delightful performance; Mr. Terry's polished assumption of Sir Percy Blakeney revealed his wealth of artistic temperament; Miss Mary Mackenzie looked and acted charmingly as Suzanne; and Miss Claire Pauncefort was sufficiently pathetic as the Comtesse. Mr. Horace Hodges portrayed the subtle and sinister character of Chauvelin with consummate skill; Mr. Alfred Kendrick (Sir Andrew) and Mr. Malcolm Cherry (Lord Anthony) made their parts thoroughly interesting; and the Prince was capitally embodied by Mr. Wigney Percyval. Mr. L. Race Dunrobin conceived Armand St. Just on the right lines; and Mr. R. E. Pickering smartly delineated the volatile Vicomte de Tournai. Mr. T. Carter Edwards (Brogard) and Mr. D. J. Williams (Jellyband) supplied appropriate character studies.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Harry Upton.—The Midnight Mail is staged here this week, and the various members of the company are well up to their work. Mr. George Harvard enters thoroughly into the spirit of his part as Harry Steyne, playing with intelligence and care; Miss Christine Errington acts with power and pathos in the rôle of Mary Steyne; and Miss Mildred Carr makes a vivacious and humorous Nancy. Mr. Erison's drollery as Billy Brewer is highly amusing; Mr. E. Ferguson offers some sound work as Leonard Royle; and Mr. R. A. Beaton plays the knavish Hassan Fadisha with easy nonchalance. Miss Jeannie Weston does exceedingly well as Lady Phyllis; and Mr. J. Mann as Gerald Eustace gives an effective reading.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. H. Bowmaker.—A notice of Peter's Finish appears in another column. The second place on the bill was occupied by Ferguson and Mack, with patter and quaint antics; O'Gust once more demonstrates his power of artistic mimicry; Amy Marsden is a comedienne with a style peculiarly her own; and the whistling, singing, and remarks of E. J. Sheldon cause endless amusement. A turn with distinctly novel features is that of the Sleedes in The Mysterious House; while the part-singing of the American Comedy Four, together with their humorous interludes, bespeak for them a gratifying ovation. Sinclair and Parr are actor-vocalists of superior attainments, and their scena, Keeping an Appointment, is clever and amusing. The programme is brought to a conclusion by some good pictures on the American Bioscope.

NUNEATON.—PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE AND ENTERTAINMENTS CO., LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. A. F. Cross; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter J. R. Bryan.—Mr. J. Bannister Howard's company opened here on Monday with The Belle of Mayfair. Miss Winifred Preece, a dainty Julia, makes quite a hit with her songs and dancing; Miss Nancy Yorke gives a pleasing interpretation of the vivacious Pincott; the Gibson Girl finds a capable exponent in Miss Grace Mackay; Mr. Sydney Burt is an amusing Sir John; a good Raymond Pinchley is found in Mr. S. Ravenscroft; and Mr. Michael Raven gains applause for his capital assumption of Hugh Meredith. Mr. Stephen Hall (Earl of Highgate), Mr. Edwin Oxlee (Comte de Perrier), and Miss Denny Fitz-Herbert as Princess Ehrenbuitstein all do excellent work.

OLDHAM.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hulme.—Mr. R. Courtneidge presented The Blue Moon here on Monday before a large audience. Miss Clarice Lockstone as Chandra Nil gives her numbers in a capital manner; Miss Maude Aston acts and sings in excellent style as Millicent Leroy; Mr. Reginald Switz as Private Chas. Taylor keeps the ball of fun merrily rolling; Mr. Alfred Beers as Moolraj is decidedly quaint; Mr. Alfred Clarke is a capital Major Collabone; Mr. J. Edward Fraser a smart Capt. Jack Ormsby; Mr. Horace Manger a good Bobbie Scott; and Miss Ida Stratham an excellent Evelyn Ormsby. Miss Laura Leycester is a stately Lady Brabasham, and Miss Marjorie Seymour a dainty Ramah. Mr. H. Ashton Tonge makes a fine Prince Badahur.

COLOSSEUM THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. W. Eastwood.—The Little Bread-winner is being staged here, and Mr. J. A. Campbell's company does full justice to this excellent drama. The acting of little Marjorie Lawrence as Meg makes her a big favourite; Miss Lissa Young also acts well as Bobby Trott; Miss Janet Warden as Margaret Daventry plays feelingly; and Miss J. Bostock as Bridget O'Flanaghan makes a breezy Irishwoman. Miss Kitty Melville as Ruth Cherry and Mr. Norman Hall as Chas. Prior are capital in some smart comedy. Mr. Louis Lingard works hard as Richard Lawrence; Mr. A. Maurice is a capable villain as Joseph Prior; Miss Gwen Stewart is very good as Kate Cherry; Mr. H. B. Peppin acts in a capable manner as the Quaker, Lord Dorrington; and Mr. Wallace Carey is a good Dr. Chadwick.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Howgate.—Ernest Shand is the big attraction here, and his songs and patter cause roars of laughter. Jennie Johns, with new songs and old favourites, has a grand reception; the Dandies provide a smart musical mélange of song, mirth, and dance with success; Mlle. Renee is excellent in her refined musical drawing-room entertainment; Chas. Ulrick, the barrel king, also takes well; Carl Howard, a comic card, provides some good fooling; the Trentanovi Sisters are capital in a transformation gymnastic act; Joe Conway is a smart comedian; and the Dottoscope concludes with the latest films.

HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Nuttall.—The Jackley Trio provide a smart comedy act, introducing a capital whistling comedian, George. Lillie Lassah, comedienne, has a flattering reception for her excellent singing; the Steinway Quartette are capital vocalists in "Songs of the sea"; Joe Chevers is a good comedian and patter vocalist; Mme. Collard exhibits a cleverly-trained troupe of dogs; Wat Tyler is also good as a character vocalist; and the Dottoscope exhibits a new film, entitled "Wild Animals."

OXFORD.—NEW THEATRE.—Proprietors, Oxford Theatre Company, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. C. Dorrill.—Mr. Herbert Darnley's company is here this week with his play, A Mother's Sacrifice, which was well received. Miss Louie Adair displays considerable power in her performance of Mary Foster; Miss Evelene Ward looks the handsome adventuress to the life, and her Lady Brenton is a fine impersonation; Miss Daisy Byford is a bright and amusing Ann, and Miss Beatrice Lett satisfactorily fills the part of Mrs. Martin. Little Winnie Crisp makes a charming Doris, and gives a display of dancing that cannot be beaten at her age; Miss Pauline is good as Willie Brenton, and Dora and Jack Crisp are well suited as Tessie and Tim; in fact, Mr. Darnley's "Dots" work hard and successfully right through the play. Mr. R. Payne acts with vigour as Jack Brenton; Mr. C. Douglas Fox is well suited as the saturnine villain Richard Foster; Mr. Herbert Stimson is full of fun and go as Peter; and Sir John Brenton, Signor De Lara, and P.C. Pimperton find capable exponents in Messrs. R. R. Fox, W. Glower, and G. Roberts.

EAST OXFORD THEATRE.—Lessees, Miss Winifred Stuart and Mr. C. Watson Mill; Manager, Mr. Frank Stuart.—Mr. Morton Powell's company is here with The Woman Who Gambles. Mr. George Steele is a pronounced success as Count Otto Steinbach; Mr. Percy Ballard is equally to the fore with his excellent delineation of Baron Crantlaw; Mr. Reginald Fox makes a manly Lieut. Carl Ctzarteriski; and Mr. Fred P. Carlton is successful as Hon. Bertie Bray. Mr. Walter Platt Carr is good as Peter Peterhof; a word of praise is due to Mr. Arthur Brandhurst as George Orloff, and also to Mr. Gilbert Dance, a highly-amusing Manifred Speinlitch; Miss Lilly Malven is effective as Stella Malakoff; and Miss Brenda May makes a vivacious Zanette. Miss Dora Pass gives a very commendable impersonation of Cora, and Miss Lillian Herries easily wins sympathy with her exceptionally clever and powerful representation of Countess Natalie.

PAISLEY.—PAISLEY THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. H. Savile.—Guilty Gold is being played here this week by Horace Stanley's company. Mr. Wallace Campbell makes the part of Harold Elmore stand out convincingly; the Ralph Bartlett of Mr. Fred Wilberforce is a powerful performance; Mr. David Curtis does well as John Middleton; Mr. Gerald Byrne as Martin Haldane acts capably; a first-rate impersonation of Uriah Fudge is given by Mr. Alaric Burton; Mr. Arthur E. Francis proves satisfactory in the rôle of Algernon Carruthers; and clever and humorous are the presentations of Septimus Sweet by Mr. Horace Stanley and William Maggs by Mr. Arnold Harley. Miss Effie Bartlett acts with telling effect as Rhoda Hampton; Miss Rosalie Heath admirably sustains the part of Elsie Middleton; Miss Josephine Lee's Hetty Hoyle is excellent; the Bertha Blossom of Miss Evelyn M. Walton is quite satisfactory; and Miss Kate Kilpack makes a capital Nancy Bright.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Douglas F. Bostock.—Syd May is delighting enthusiastic audiences in his clever impersonations of star artists and a burlesque imitation of Hackenschmidt, the latter being excruciatingly funny; Karr and Kooney, comedians and vocalists, make a decided rôle, to which her style and personality are excellently suited; Mr. James Hawkes as Captain Lovebury acts well, and is the happy possessor of a fine voice, which he uses with discretion; Mr. Frank Collins does well as Colonel Claymore; Mr. Alexander Loftus and Mr. James Grant keep the house in roars as Bertie and William White; and Mr. Charles Adeson is an excellent Mons. Bonsor; Miss Aimee Roberts is a charming Ethel Joy, and Miss Grafton, Miss Mabel Harrison, Miss Maisie Ivie, Miss Marion Vyner, Mr. F. Williams, and Mr. John Cole all do well in their respective parts.

PLYMOUTH.—Theatre Royal.—Manager, Mr. J. Langdon Lee.—The Silver King is visiting the Royal this week, and Messrs. Poloni and Melford's fine company does full justice to this entrancing play. Mr. Herbert Ford furnishes a capital study of the title-rôle; Mr. Henderson Bland as the Spider illustrates the blacker side of human nature with realistic force; Mr. Tom Paulton gives a fine rendering of Daniel Jaikes; and the smaller parts of Wilfrid Denver's children are well played by Master E. Dene and Miss L. Leicester. Particular mention must be made of the highly creditable portrayal by Miss Viola Holland of the difficult part of Nellie Denver.

Palace of Varieties.—Manager, Mr. Jack Field.—Jimmy Laurie does well with his smart wheezes and patter; Jack Pheasants is also particularly strong in the same line; Victoria Dagmar performs some difficult yet graceful evolutions on the horizontal bar; Irene Rose furnishes an attractive number, entitled Her First Engagement; Russell Brandon is an accomplished acrobatic comedian; and Starr and Leslie introduce some clever club swinging into their turn; Fred Storey, in the star turn, Rip Van Winkle, is loudly applauded; and Mr. and Mrs. Lucas score in their sketches from Dickens.

PONTYPRIDD. — Royal Clarence Theatre. — Owners and Proprietors, Mrs. Trenehard and Miss L. Jones; Manager, Mr. Charles Trenehard.—Mr. J. Bannister Howard's company is here this week with The Silver King. Mr. E. Stanton Sharp admirably portrays Wilfrid Denver; Nellie, his wife, is in the able hands of Miss Florence Radcliffe; Mr. Roland Howard scores as Daniel Jaikes; and Mr. Paul Beckett ably impersonates Captain Skinner. Well worthy of praise are Miss Dorothy Love as Cissie, Miss L. Thorne as Ned, Mr. Ralph Leo as Henry Corket, Mr. Wm. Dempsey as Elijah Coombe, and Miss Georgie Longcrain as Olive Skinner.

PORTH.—The Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. C. W. Poole; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Bynorth.—Topping the bill here this week is George French, comedian, who scores a success; Rodin, tramp cyclist, is a much appreciated turn; Magna, in poses, meets with a capital reception; Edie Endon makes a hit as an acrobatic dancer; T. C. Jaques does remarkably well as a comedian; the Three Royal Dreadnoughts give an excellent exhibition of shooting; the Paolias in a refined drawing-room act, are really good; Barney, Burke, and Bray, in their spectacular absurdity, London to Madrid, are responsible for some excellent amusement; Tom Laurel meets with approval as the burlesque comedian; and the Palace Electric Bioscope with an entire change of films is thoroughly up-to-date.

PORTSMOUTH. — Theatre Royal.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Bell.—A cordial welcome was given on Monday to Mr. Charles Macdona's able company in the musical comedy, Mr. Popple of Ippleton, which is here for the week. Mr. Arthur Longley is unaffectedly easy and entertaining in the name-part, the country squire being hit off capitally; Miss Millie Hylton as La Bolero is brilliant, both in singing and acting; Miss Nellie Hodson is vivacious and natural as Louise; Miss Alice Rene and Miss Anton Laing interpreted their respective parts of Mrs. Doring and Mrs. Hennay with much spirit and ability; and Miss Cora Lingard is charming in the rôle of Violet Brinton. Mr. Wentworth Fane makes excellent use of his opportunities as Norman Popple; Mr. C. E. Paton does sound work as Platt; George Hennay and Henry Doring are commendably played by Messrs. Sidney Young and James Stevenson; Mr. Douglas Phillips as Jacques Kenyon also does well; and Mr. W. H. Morgan as the head waiter, Maurice, is very capable. The comedy is lavishly dressed and mounted.

Prince's Theatre. — Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. E. Agate.—Driven from Home is staged here for the week by Mr. Andrew Melville's company. Mr. Felix Pitt plays Anthony Raybrook with great judgment and excellent effect; Geoffrey Waring, his unscrupulous nephew, is admirably personated by Mr. Charles Burdon; Mr. Francis Everard is painstaking as Walter Hatherleigh; Mr. Edward Finley as Dick Saunders, a bad sample of British workman, is characteristic and clever; and Mr. Villiers Stanley wins golden opinions as Willie, an outcast. Mrs. McCarthy, a good-hearted Irishwoman, and Peggy, a flower girl, find capital exponents in Miss Amy Williams and Miss Florence Wilson; Miss Muriel Dean in the dual rôle of Laura Raybrook and Walter Hatherleigh the younger, portrays the characters in excellent style.

Empire Palace.—Managing-Director, Captain Warren Wright; Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt.—Roma and Romani, in classical musical act, are expert instrumentalists; Sisters May prove attractive as duettists and dancers; George Antill is an eccentric vocal comedian with mirth-provoking mannerisms; Sinclair and Whiteford, in comedy duologue, Getting Even, are much liked; Eric, ventriloquist, with some novel effects, scores; Annie Laurie, a pleasing comedienne and dancer, does well; Tom N. Mills, the real John Bull, gives a powerful turn; Carr and Rose, the harmonious singing duo, are a sprightly pair; the Three Rubys, a trio of graceful lady acrobatic contortionists, are brisk and daring; Miss Maud Rochez and her well-trained monkeys in "A Monkey's Music Hall," create roars of laughter; and Cissie Coman in illustrated songs, and Payne's up-to-date pictures complete the programme.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—Heading the bill here for the week, Mr. George Gray and company give the stirring and exciting episode, The Fighting Parson, with gratifying results; the Sisters Aindow are smart instrumentalists; Mr. T. E. Finglas, coon delineator, gives some excellent patter songs; and Miss Belle Braham, the pictorial songstress, is graphic in her descriptive singing. The Sisters Dixon are a clever pair of banjo duettists and dancers; Mr. William Lee and company in new comedy, A Friend in Need, are responsible for much merriment; Miss Sylvia Du Barry, South American vocalist, sings well; and the Hippodrome Pictures submit interesting subjects.

PRESTON. — Theatre Royal. — Proprietors, Exors. of the late W. Johnson; Resident Manager, Mr. Stephen Pritt.—Mr. Charles Macdona's principal company is paying a welcome visit here with The White Chrysanthemum. Mr. Victor Kahn makes a pleasing Lieutenant Reginald Armitage, and Mr. Erskine Lang as Lieutenant Chippendale Belmont introduces much quiet humour into the character. Mr. Frank Weir as Sin Chow, and Mr. Walter Westwood as Private Perks draw hearty laughter and applause; while Mr. William Hartigan as Admiral Sir Horatio Armytage, K.C.B., both looks and acts the part, winning hearty applause for his topical song in the last act. As Sybil Cunningham (Osan, the White Chrysanthemum) Miss Lilian Hubbard displays her rich soprano voice to great advantage; Miss Harriet Fawn as Betty Kenyon plays and sings well; and Miss Blanche Astley as Cornelia Vanderdecken proves herself a dainty dancer, and gives an excellent rendition of the songs allotted to her. As the admiral's escort, Messrs. C. Hoddy, Louis Fitzgerald, J. W. Woodbridge, James Reidy, A. R. Galloway, and Ernest Ridgewell sing well; and Miss Bessie Lewis, Daisy Severn, Helen Temple, Marie Laurence Flora Bradfield, and Lillie Hodgson are winsome and dainty as Sybil's Japanese maids. The choruses are well sung, and the piece is admirably staged, the costumes being fresh and effective; while the augmented orchestra, under Mr. Hubert Boggetti, adds in no small measure to the success of the production.

Prince's Theatre.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Sawyer and Woodruff.—Two Little Sailor Boys, with Mr. W. H. Hallatt's company, occupies the boards here this week. Mr. H. E. Herbert is a manly Commander Noel Tregarthen, R.N.; Mr. Charles Boult as Captain Tom Yorke is very natural in the part; Mr. Forbes Harrison presents a very good character study of Admiral Grey, R.N.; and Mr. Ambrose Horton and Mr. Leonard Clarke as Jim Royston and Lieutenant Richard Redstone, R.N., sustain the characters of the two evil geniuses of the play in a satisfactory manner. The comedy parts are in the capable hands of Mr. Tom E. Sinclair as Ben Baxter and Miss Lucy Chambers as Lucy Wilson; and Mr. Oscar Power as Jack Jolly, A.B., adds in no small measure to the humour of the play. Miss Blanche Steele as Lola Grey gives a powerful portrayal of the adventuress; Miss Alice Defoe as Mildred Grey wins the hearts of the audience; and as the "Two Little Sailor Boys" Miss Effie D. Crawford and Miss Beryl Mercer soon established themselves as the particular pets of the audience. The rest of the caste is ably sustained by Messrs. George Drew, Frank Greyson, Albert Newton, and Ernest Brunton, Miss D. Harrison enacting the part of Mary Primrose.

Royal Hippodrome.—Proprietors, W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. E. J. Linsdell.—Edward Crossland and company supply in The Burglar's Dream a musical turn far above the ordinary, the quartette of pianos and Darren Llewellyn's baritone solos being especially good. Enzer gives pleasing juggling and swordsmanship feats, while his exposition of ju-jitsu, assisted by Clarice, the lady ju-jitsu expert, is instructive and amusing. The Sisters Belmont, duettists and dancers, elicit loud applause; Lucy Coventry is a versatile comedienne and expert dancer; and Will Sullivan, comedian and patterer, is amusing in Our Billy. Denton, Roscoe and Galley, who are three colliers now working in a Manchester colliery, please with their songs and trios; the Fullers (Fred and Louie) present a pretty song-scena, The Shoeblack's Dream; Eva Chadwick, a ballad vocalist, with a refined voice of good quality is successful; and B. Troba performs some marvellous feats with billiard balls and shrapnel shells. The pictures entitled Limburger Cheese keep the house in roars of laughter.

Public Hall.—The U.S.A. Animated Picture Co. is paying a return visit here, and command good houses. The Prince Milner Trio, jugglers and equilibrists, add to the popularity of the entertainment, which is under the management of Mr. Victor Hamilton.

RAMSGATE.—Amphitheatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry Bowman.—On the first three nights of the week Mr. Herbert Ralland's company made a most successful appearance in Mice and Men. Mr. J. Graeme Campbell made a fine Mark Embury; and Mr. Frederick Tyrell was a capital Roger Goodlake; Mr. J. Henry Twyford's Captain George Lovell was an excellent piece of work; and the other gentlemen of the cast were responsible for valuable assistance. Miss Helena Parsons as Peggy, Little Britain, the foundling, adopted by Mark Embury, quickly gained the sympathies and applause of the audience for the artistic manner in which she impersonated the part; Miss Grace Baring admirably portrayed Joanna Goodlake, the lady of fashion; and Miss Julie Temple was extremely successful in a rôle which does not provide her with great scope for the display of talent—she sustained the character of Embury's housekeeper, Mrs. Deborah, in a style which called only for complimentary reference. The scenery and general mounting of the play were all that could be desired. For the last three nights of the week Mr. H. Hamilton Stewart's company were billed to play Sherlock Holmes.

Royal Victoria Theatre.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Jules Richeux.—What the Butler Saw, played in excellent style by Mr. Lionel Rignold and Miss Ada Blanche's company, has given great satisfaction here. Mr. Lionel Rignold, in the rôle of Pike, the butler, is wonderfully droll; and Miss Ada Blanche scores a big success as Mrs. Barrington, the wife of amorous Jack Barrington, the last-mentioned part being interpreted in meritorious style by Mr. Charles Fawcett; Mr. George Ascot plays with excellent effect as peppery General Dunlop; Mr. H. H. Rignold contributes considerably to the success of the production as Abraham Wenstein; Mr. Leo St. Clair is good as Sydney Clifford; Mr. Hornby Warburton does well with the part of the histrionic Verede Bogyne; and Messrs. Cecil Harrison (Sir Charles Foden), Roy Byford (Professor Shale), and Dudley Raymond (Dr. Clayton) are capital. Miss Julie St. George gives a clever display of character acting as Mrs. Hake; and Miss May Hart creates a favourable impression as Sophonsiba; Miss Eleanor Gilbart successfully sustains the rôle of Miss Foden.

READING.—Royal County Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Milton Bode.—Mr. Edmund Tearle is appearing this week in a round of his most notable characters. The répertoire for the week comprises The Three Musketeers on Monday and Wednesday, and at a special matinée on Wednesday, Othello on Tuesday, Macbeth on Thursday, Julius Cæsar on Friday, and Boucicault's Octoroon on Saturday. Mr. Tearle imparts great dramatic power to the leading characters he sustains, and is well supported by a capable company. Miss Clinton distinguishes herself as leading lady; Mr. William J. Miller, Mr. Vernon O. Crabtree, Mr. G. T. Grieg, and Miss Mary Campbell are also worthy of special notice for the able way they sustain their parts.

ROCHDALE.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Hague. —The Country Girl is paying a welcome visit here this week. Mr. Anthony Gordon is heard to great advantage in the part of Geoffrey Challoner; Mr. Helier Le Maistre makes an imposing Rajah of Bhong; and Mr. Coningsby Brierley is the life and soul of the play as Barry. Miss May Rawlinson sings with power as Marjorie Joy; Miss Nellie Deveney, in the part of Princess Meehelanah, both acts and sings with stirring effect; Sophie is in the safe hands of Miss Poppy Wilkinson; and Miss Ellaline Thorne charmingly enacts the part of Nan.

Circus and Hippodrome.—Lessees, Messrs. J. and J. Jackson and J. White; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Jackson, sen.—An interesting programme is submitted here this week. Haigh and Novel contribute an amusing and clever gymnastic turn; Marie Jones in The Way to Win a Bet obtains a favourable reception; Lieutenant Albini and his lady assistants astonish the audience with their illusion, A Sailor and his Lass; Miss Beattie Bloom, vocalist; Charles Coverdale, comedian and mimic; The Musical Keiths; and the Circus Biograph complete the bill.

Empire.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Thomas Hargreaves; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Hargreaves.—Tom Foy and company, in The Yorkshire Lad in London, create roars of laughter; Lily Flexmore submits a remarkable exhibition of dancing; Maggie Rimmer sings in pleasing style old and new songs; David Poole is an up-to-date ventriloquist; and other items on the programme include Charlie Craston, comedian; the Bioscope, and Foy Brothers and company in Pat in China.

ROTHERHAM.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Holbery Hardy.—Messrs. Paumier and Howard's company are here this week with Under the Russian Flag, under the direction of Mr. Walter Howard. Mr. Jack Haddon, who is an old local favourite, makes many friends by his excellent acting; and Miss Masie Raynor as Luka Marishla, gives a clever and finished portrayal of a difficult part. The mounting and scenery are of an exceptionally fine character.

RYDE.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Charles Constant. — This week The Sorrows of Satan is being played. Mr. Edward Neville gave an effective touch to his impersonation of Prince Lucio with his mystical sleight-of-hand performances; Geoffrey Tempest was adequately represented by Mr. F. Douglas Howard; and Mr. J. Le Fleming was an excellent Earl of Elton. Lady Sybil Elton was effectively acted by Miss Rosie Neville; and Miss Loie Esmond was an entertaining Diana Chesney. Miss Cecil Byrne was an amusing Mrs. Grimes.

Pier Pavilion.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Herbert Jay; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. L. Furst.—Gaumont's Chronophone company have been here this week, and their remarkable series of life-like pictures have been received with much interest. The Pelicans, who have been here during the whole of the season, took their farewell on Saturday evening before a large audience.

SALFORD.—Prince of Wales' Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden.—The domestic and military drama, A Woman Worth Winning, proved very acceptable to a large house on Monday, when it was presented by the author, Mr. A. B. Mackay, who ably sustained the part of the villain, General Borinski; as Roma Pauloff Miss Cissie Bellamy does good work; Mr. Cartage Caldcleugh gives a good character-study as Ivan Bardoff; capital work is done by Mr. Percy Horton as Fergus Lovinsky; Mr. E. Hall Eldon as Bertie Scribbles, Mr. E. Kendrick as Peter Popples, and Miss Ida Mackay as Katerina Kloss are irresistibly funny; Mr. Wynne Davies as Fedor Petronovitch does satisfactorily.

Regent Theatre of Varieties, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wilberforce Turner; Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Secretary, Mr. J. C. Patterson. —Lew Lake and company have a very clever amusing sketch, My Pal Jerry, and the programme also includes Ted Saunders, Lalie Brooke, Alf Ripon, Millie Denham, Bert Kemble, Gus Hinnell, and the Silver Tone Quartette. Tuesday was the anniversary of the opening of the theatre (in 1895), and about sixty turns were gone through at the matinée and two performances at night. These included Billie Barlow, Harry Rogerson, Jennie Johns, Bosanquet, Arthur Rigby and company, Carney Brothers, Cissy Lupino, Moon and Morris, Milner Verren, and a host of other stars from other theatres and music-halls in the locality.

Royal Hippodrome.—Proprietors, W. H. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. Percy B. Broadhead; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. Wentworth. —Phil Herman has some good songs and funny tales, and a sketch, The Last of the Desmonds, was well acted by himself and his company. Leo Trainer with his patter; Les Elgonas, very neat gymnasts; Carney Brothers, character duettists; Four Regals, very strong men; Dancing Gilberts; George Young, expert blind musician; Howard and Wallace, in Taming a Wife, and Sadler and Ross, dancers and Irish cross talkers, also appeared with much appreciation from good houses.

Stretford Pavilion.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Sydney Weatherilt.—Among the attractions here this week are Blanco J. White, comedian and dancer; Marie Walton, Creole songstress; Johnny Stell, quaint comedian; Beatty Wood, clever comedienne, and Fred Erick, versatile comedian.

SALISBURY.—Victoria Park.—Director of Entertainments, Mr. F. D'Alton Tebby; Manageress, Miss Jessie D'Alton.—These popular entertainments have now drawn to a close, Mr. D'Alton Tebby and his wife (Miss Jessie D'Alton) had a record house on the occasion of their benefit. Mr. Tebby was the recipient of a clock presented to him by the members of the company in token of esteem.

SEACOMBE.—Irving Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. James Kiernan.—Mr. Charles Macdona's principal company is proving a brilliant attraction here this week with The Duchess of Dantzic. The title-rôle is admirably played by Miss Edith Hickson; Mr. Harold Batt puts in plenty of good work as the volatile Papillon, and Mr. Marshall Vincent makes almost an ideal Lefebvre; Mr. Vincent Galley as M. D'Alagro and Mr. C. B. Williams as Adhémar do well in their respective parts; Miss Alice Hamilton is an impressive Josephine, and Miss Daisy Kersey an effective Renée, Lisette being charmingly depicted by Miss Edith Martin.

SEAHAM HARBOUR.—New Theatre Royal.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. A. C. Harrison.—Mr. T. Arthur Jones is presenting When Other Lips with gratifying success here. Mr. Jones (the author) interprets Ted Daunton in meritorious style; Basil Cunnington is realistically drawn by Mr. Edwin J. Collins; Mr. Hyland O'Shea as Tommy Neccles is humorous; and as Davy Mr. Dick Everton is also pleasing. Mr. David Hamilton as Duddle Topwash does well; and as Jenkins Mr. W. S. Parkes is commendable. Ruth Lingley is invested with much charm by Miss Marie Daventry; Octavia is carefully depicted by Miss Kate Froude; Kitty is cleverly drawn by Miss Lucy Murray; and Miss Ivy May Clarke is a charming Nancy.

SHEERNESS.—The Hippodrome. — General-Manager, Mr. F. Leighton.—Amongst the chief items of this week's bill is a capital sketch entitled The Stowaway, supported by a strong company; other specialities comprise the Three Sisters Jerome, song and dance artists, who are received with hearty applause; Correlli, in a pot pourri act, the Magic Lesson, gains favour; Capt. and Miss Manard, rifle experts, are well received; Alec Alex and Leo Lilly, juvenile cross-talk comedians, win applause; other successful contributors include Dardan and Iris, in an eccentric dancing act; Ida Kathrena, the dolly girl; and Estrella, International dancer.

SHEFFIELD. — Lyceum Theatre. — Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont.—The Earl and the Girl was again played to a delighted audience on Monday by Mr. W. Greet's company, which includes that diverting comedian Mr. William Stephens, who kept the large house in roars by his diverting impersonation of Jim Cheese; Mr. Thomas Kennard acted and sang agreeably as the young heir; Miss Chrissie Ralland made a graceful and tuneful heroine, and Miss Ethel Erskine is a charming representative of Daisy Fallowfield. The catchy "Swinging" song and other favourite numbers were encored, and the entire performance goes with exhilarating vivacity and freshness.

Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont.—G. R. Sims's famous drama, The Lights o' London, is again being acted to sympathetic audiences. That old and deserved local pantomime favourite, Mr. Payne Fletcher, is quite at home in the part of the genial, good-hearted showman, Jarvis; Mr. C. F. Collings acts in an earnest and convincing manner as Harold Armytage; Miss Jeannie Burgoyne, with her well-known dramatic ability, depicts the trials and sufferings of Bess; and all the other characters are ably personated by the talented members of Mr. Herbert Hollister's company.

Alexandra Theatre. — Managing-Director, Mr. W. D. Foredike; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Ramsay.—The exciting drama, A Soldier's Honour, performed under the direction of Mr. F. S. Kimberley, met with a hearty reception here on Monday. The rôle of the beautiful adventuress Cora Lee, was cleverly represented by Mrs. F. G. Kimberley; Miss Edie Macklin submitted a clever sketch of a "slavey" as Jemima Ann; Mr. Clavering Craig, in deportment and earnestness, freely bore out the description, "a soldier and a man" as the dashing Captain Deane, and the part of Captain Temple was excellently acted by Mr. C. Quinton Fulford; Miss Violet Langley was a pretty and interesting Doreen, and other careful impersonations were Miss Mona Grey's Gwendolyn, Miss Isa Lyndon's Queenie, Miss Eva Elwes' Mrs. Deane; Mr. Arthur Pringle's Henry Thornton; Mr. Edward Bikker's General Rochester, Mr. Charles Rogers's Percy Brattle, Mr. A. Anderson's Old Holly, and Mr. Vernon Cowper's Burly Bill. The scenery and effects were first-rate.

Empire Palace.—Proprietors, The Moss' Empires Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar. —Packed audiences have welcomed with enthusiasm the inimitable Mr. Harry Lauder, who was recalled again and again at the end of his heavy turn; old favourites are the Poluskis, and they, as usual, proved very acceptable; Orpheus meets with a warm reception, and other successful performers are the Bros. Redmond, comic acrobats; Mr. Dion Wade, eccentric comedian; Leo Tell, instrumentalist and animal mimic; Miss Lottie Govelle, comedienne; Hanid Alexander, drawing-room entertainer; and Miss Marion Scott, vocalist.

Grand Theatre.—Proprietors, The Vaudeville Syndicate; Manager, Mr. A. W. Turpin.—Miss Georgette Thierry's sketch troupe opened on Monday with the Nancy Sikes episode from "Oliver Twist"; other artists this week are Harry Brayne and Bert Lloyd, sketc hartists; Mr. Chas. Ashdowne, comedian; Miss Nora Stockells, serio comedienne; the vivacious Sisters Della, and Pallister with the Bioscope, always a popular item in the Grand programme.

Central Hall.—Proprietors, the Jasper Redfern Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Fred W. Holmes.—Animated pictures, supplemented by the efforts of Mr. Langhorne, Miss Marie Kay, Messrs. Douglas and Gordon, and others give satisfaction to Mr. Holmes's many patrons.

SHREWSBURY.—Theatre Royal. — Licensee and Business-Manager, Mr. W. C. Dornton.—Mr. Weedon Grossmith's most diverting piece, The Night of the Party, was played here on the first four nights of this week to delighted audiences. Miss Jenny Lynn was graceful and an ideal spoiled irresponsible "old man's darling" as Lady Hampshire; Mrs. Elizabeth Maud was successful as Mrs. Young; Miss Mab Paul, in the part of Gipsy Vandelier, which requires delicate handling, was attractive, high-spirited, and thoroughly capable; Miss Stella Cedron, as Nannie Portland, a part affording her very limited opportunities, was all that could be desired, her lines being clearly delivered; Miss May Grantham was satisfactory as Baby Hastings; and Miss Lillian Williams made a smart, alert, and most natural housemaid as Paulina. Mr. Frederick Castleman played carefully and well as Sir Chris. Hampshire; Mr. M. Carter Slaughter made an aristocratic and clever Mr. Frank Frayne; Mr. Edwin W. Wynne as the irrepressible Mr. Crosbie was the right man in the right place, keeping his audience in perpetual merriment by his cool audacity and smart resourcefulness; Mr. J. Edward Hall merited high praise as the pompous servitor, Mr. Flamber; Mr. Percy Robinson played creditably the part of Roundle; Mr. Stanley Arthur made an admirable Mr. Bogle; Mr. Allison played with care and ability the part of Alderman B. Hargen; Mr. A. E. James made a capital Buttons; and other minor male parts were in capable hands.

SOUTHAMPTON.—Grand Theatre. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Fredk. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Weston.—Mr. Robert Courtneidge's company is on a welcome return visit with The Dairymaids. Mr. John Osborne, an old favourite, is the life and soul of the piece as Joe Mivens; Mr. Clifford Seyler acts and dances in dashing style as Sam Brudenall; Mr. A. W. Ashdowne is a capital Captain Fred. Leverton; Miss Vera Vere scores as Winifred; and Miss Dorothy Ward sings delightfully as Helene; Miss Maud Denny is excellent as Eliza, and Miss Madge Avery is good as Miss Penelope Pyechase.

Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaughten; Resident-Manager, Mr. William Trussell.—The chief item is Mr. Sydney Dooley and Mr. Charles Seymour's company in King for a Day, which is remarkably well played and staged. The Two Bostons, novelty showmen; Cole and Rags, quaint jugglers; Cullen, Carthy and Little Chiley, smart dancers; McDonald and Huntington, American entertainers; the Sisters Morgan, duettists; and Maud Vere, comedienne, also appear with success.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. F. Mouillot and W. de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. P. Howell.—Fred Karno's comedians appear in London Surbibia here for the first time, and score a big success; the Achmed-Ibrahim Troupe of Bedouin Arabs are marvellously clever acrobats; Alfred Nardi, the blind Italian violinist, is very smart; Barney Armstrong, comedian; the Katos, living marionettes; the Brothers Hayes, comedians; Lena Brunton, mimic; and Blarney and Kennard, comedians, also do well.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA.—Empire Theatre, Ltd. —Managing Director, Mr. George Conquest; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. Lingham Power.—Capital patronage is this week being accorded to the Moody-Manners Opera company, who gain exceptional merit by their successful presentations of opera in English. Monday's reception of Gounod's Faust left nothing to be desired. Tuesday's attraction was Wagner's Lohengrin, in which Messrs. Jn. Child, Frederick Erle, Van Lachterop, and Charles Moorhouse, with the Misses Mary Norton and Enriqueta Crichton, were able exponents of the various parts, their singing giving great satisfaction. Il Trovatore followed on Wednesday as a matinée, with Maritana at night, Tannhäuser for Thursday, Carmen for Friday, and The Bohemian Girl for to-night (Saturday).

The Kursaal.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. P. T. J. Bacon.—Performances are given only in the theatre this week, where plenty of good amusement is found. An item of interest was the reappearance of Mr. Fred Marlow, who, after an absence of several years from the stage, still shows wonderful vigour in dancing, while his popularity as an entertainer is marked; Miss Emily Adams, too, is popular in her musical scena, entitled Mary Ann. The sagacity of both cats and dogs is pleasingly shown by Mr. Gilbert, who educates his animals with cleverness; Miss Kitty Gresham gives a musical mélange with success, and Miss Beattie Benson, soubrette vocalist, gains a good hearing. Special pictures of the usual excellent character by the Bioscope are shown at intervals.

Pier Pavilion.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. E. Angless; Acting-Manager, Mr. Stanley E. Angless.—The attraction for this week included three entire changes of programme. On Tuesday two performances were given by the world-renowned Zancigs, who were accompanied by a first-class company of talented artists under the direction of Mr. Alfred Moul. Wednesday's programme was a repetition of Monday, when a variety entertainment of exceptional merit proved most popular. Those who contributed were: Mrs. J. W. Bowie, ballad vocalist; Mr. W. Edward Kaye, with Miss Winifred Kaye, who gave character sketches from Charles Dickens; Miss Ada Brandon with harp solos; Mr. George Robins, society humorist; Miss Elmie Kemp, vocalist and elocutionist; and Mr. Tom E. Cliffe, comedian and eccentric dancer, all of whom won well deserved recalls. On Thursday Mr. F. R. Benson's Shakespearean company made a welcome appearance. The Merchant of Venice was the first night's attraction; The School for Scandal following on Friday; with As You Like It for this afternoon, and Hamlet in the evening.

SOUTHPORT.—Opera House, Winter Gardens. —Proprietors, The Southport Opera House and Winter Gardens Co., Ltd.; Secretary, Mr. R. Singleton.—Local patrons of the drama have this week an opportunity of welcoming the popular and distinguished artist, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, who, supported by Miss Stella Patrick Campbell and an excellent company, is fulfilling an engagement here prior to her departure for America early in November. On the opening night The Second Mrs. Tanqueray was presented to a large audience, and needless to say the well-known character of Paula was brilliantly interpreted by Mrs. Patrick Campbell, who fascinated the house by the power and pathos of her artistic delineation. The rôle of Aubrey Tanqueray was depicted by Mr. Chas. Garry in a natural and polished manner; Mr. Julian Royce presented a capital portraiture of Cayley Drummle; Mr. James Gelderd was eminently well suited in the character of Sir George Orreyed, Bart.; Capt. Ardale was characteristically and cleverly impersonated by Mr. Alfred Goddard; Miss Stella Patrick Campbell presented a graceful and natural study as Ellean; Miss Margaret Watson played Mrs. Cortelyon with excellent effect; Miss Catherine Dupont was a commendable exponent of Lady Orreyed; and Mr. Wallace Aston and Mr. Aidan Lovett did well as Gordon Jayne and Frank Misquith respectively. Hedda Gabler and Magda were also announced.

SPENNYMOOR.—Cambridge Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. Hugh Robertson; General-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Clarance; Resident-Manager, Mr. David Collins.—Mr. Lingford Carson's company, in A Fight for a Throne, is delighting audiences here this week. The company is under the general management of Mr. Charles E. Linney, who appears with great success in the important rôle of Prince Otto; Mr. Sam Arthur gives a manly interpretation of Jack Fortescue; Miss Elma C. Turner wins honours as the Princess Esmee; and Miss Evelyn Robson submits an artistic reading of the part of the Countess Valeska. Mr. Karl H. Edwards scores heavily as Lieut. Paul Rodna; and as General Rodna Mr. W. S. Stevenson is no less a success. Sir Charles Coventry and King Nicholai both receive excellent treatment from Mr. Edwin Clarke and Mr. John B. Murray respectively. Mr. Leonard Maitland and Mr. Fred Hodson supply plenty of fun as Lieut. Percy Fitzmaurice and Tom Ferrett, and their efforts are admirably seconded by Miss Evelyn Marrable as Lady Pat.

STAFFORD. — Lyceum Theatre. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Elphinstone.—A good variety company here includes the Smalleys, clever triple-bar performers and dancers; J. C. Heffron, a comedian with really good patter; the Sisters Valli, who, with music and dance, win applause; and Nell Brough, the champion whistler. The Boy Hackenschmidt, a youthful wrestler, provides an exciting turn; Miss Ivy Dene is a neat and dainty dancer; and the pictures by the Empire Co. more interesting than ever.

STALYBRIDGE.—Grand Hippodrome.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Fioni; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. A. Jackson.—Rappo and Ella, in their marvellous acts of equilibrium, deservedly hold the premier position on the programme; Bob Hamilton is as popular as ever; the Three Sisters Kilner give an agreeable entertainment; Violet Ashcroft is a pretty ballad vocalist; and the other artists include the Mitchells, speciality artists; Alfonso, fool equilibrist; Pete and Juno, coloured comedians, and the Mostyns, burlesque artists.

ST. HELENS.—Theatre and Opera House, Ltd. —General-Manager, Mr. McLeod Loader.—Mr. Douglas Prince's company, with The Girl Who Lost Her Character, is here this week. Mr. Chas. Whitlock is excellent as the Rev. Robert Everton; Mr. Edward Lloyd is manly and effective as Jack England; Mr. Frank Adair submits a powerful representation of Captain Caversham; and Mr. George Mitchell is successful as James Sutton. Miss Ethel Bracewell is sympathetic and convincing as Molly Vernon; Miss Lydia Manniugton does justice to the rôle of Marian Franklyn; and Miss Joan Ellis is charming as Rose Seymour. Mr. George H. Asquin is very amusing as Dick Punch, and is ably seconded by Miss Daisy Moynard as Isabella Jones.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford, Sley, and Willmot; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. Vic Carnell.—Luis Hardt wins enthusiastic applause for his feats of strength and artistic poses; the Sivronis, comedy duo, create roars of laughter; and other excellent turns include Miss Eva Hope, assisted by Mr. Charles Mayho, in duologues; Mr. Ernie Myers, comedian; Miss Lily Lonsdale, vocalist; the King's College Boys, vocalists; Story and Trigg, burlesque eccentrics; the Three Seabornes, equilibrists; and the Barrascope.

STOCKPORT. — Theatre Royal and Opera House. — Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Revill, jun.—The first visit of The Bondman has been a strong attraction here this week, and the representations, as given by Mr. George D. Day's company, have afforded much pleasure. Mr. Frank Cooper's realistic acting as Jason was much appreciated; Mr. Henry Doughty's impersonation of Michael Sunlocks was a fine performance; Father Ferrati had a thoroughly capable representative in Mr. Gilbert Yorke; and Miss Ida Phillips as Greeba was charmingly sympathetic.

Empire. — Proprietors, The Stockport Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Black. —Walton and Lester, comedians and comic conjurers, are the chief attraction here, and are very mirth-provoking. The Cattaneos troupe of comedy acrobats accomplishes exceptionally clever feats; the Soho Trio, vocalists and dancers, are entertaining; George Prince, comic vocalist, causes plenty of laughter; Lottie de Abbey is a pleasing ballad vocalist; Jean Seul, illusionist, is successful; and Edwards and Espinosa, in their musical and dancing speciality, and Hans and Lux, "the argumentative college chums," meet with marked favour.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.—Hippodrome.—General Manager, Mr. Robt. A. Nicholson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. Stainton.—Casey's Court heads the bill here this week, and is greatly enjoyed. Gus Merriman, the singing page-boy, is both interesting and amusing; Alice Loretti, with her marvellously-trained dog, is greatly appreciated; Carlos Menard, trick violinist, is very clever in his farmyard imitations; Dora Barrington presents a delightful song-scena, Sentiment and Jest, ably assisted by Miss Netta Grey; Mulvey and Miriam are amusing as comedy artists; Hector and Paulos are skilful hand-balancers; the truly artistic manner; Las Sados are clever jugglers and equilibrists; Kiaro, the upside-down marvel, is well received; the Kauvens are clever acrobats; the Melroses are seen in a funny sketch, viz., The New Page; Alf. Bishop scores a distinct success in his humorous songs; Maude Beaumont is a smart comedienne; and the pictures are interesting.

STOURBRIDGE.—ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—Manageress, Miss Maude Lynton.—Mr. Edward Marris's company is here this week with the musical comedy, Somebody's Sweetheart. The singing and dancing of the several artists engaged are of a high-class character. Mr. Stephen Leverton is well played by Mr. Charles Edward King; while the character of Stanton Ashleigh could not have been given to a more suitable artist than Mr. Cecil W. Parke. Mr. George Brentwood makes the most of Martin Blabbs; Miss Norah Melton, in the title-rôle, is well suited, and is possessed of a sweet voice; and the same can be said of Miss Maisie Jerrard as Zora. Miss May Morris makes a dashing Freddie Ashleigh, her song winning much favour.

STROUD.—SUBSCRIPTION ROOMS.—Manager, Mr. H. J. Twitchett.—A crowded house assembled on Thursday evening, when the popular drama, The Silver King, was presented by Mr. J. Bannister Howard's company. Mr. E. Stanton Sharpe is very successful in the title-part; Mr. Paul Beckett as Captain Herbert Skinner (the Spider) was particularly good; Mr. Roland Howard was a capital Daniel Jaikes; Miss Florence Radcliffe did admirably as Nellie Denver; and Miss Georgie Longerain made an excellent Olive Skinner.

SUNDERLAND.—KING'S THEATRE.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Stevens and Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. L. Carlo.—Mr. George Dance's The Lady Dandies' company is proving a strong attraction here. Mr. O. E. Lennon as the Prefect of Police is very much in evidence throughout, and Messrs. Tom Seymour and J. E. Walker as Tournesal and Malicorne respectively also add considerably to the comedy element; Mr. Ripley Evans scores with the well-sung musical numbers falling to the lot of Dorlis, and Mr. Geoffrey Berwick is creditably made up as the aged Des Goutheres; Mr. Charles Hanbury is admirable as Lagorille, and Mr. Philip Taylor and Mr. Rudd Allen in the minor rôles of Melval and Valcourt do what is necessary; whilst Mr. Albert Burton ably fills the part of the waiter Alexis; Miss Nancy Rossiter is seen to considerable advantage in the rôle of Illyrine, receiving a well-deserved encore for her rendition of the "Cuckoo" song; Miss Maisie Gay's embodiment of the lively Lodoiska is full of go and bright vivacity, her topical numbers going exceedingly well; Miss Peggy Primrose trips it lightly as Egle, and Miss Nellie Taylor is entrusted with the part of Madame Ragot; the Lady Dandies are well sustained by Misses May Marshall, Ethel Richardson, May Leslie, Elsie Allen, Bertha Card, and Amy Bingham.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Richard Thornton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jos. Hemingway.—Mr. Harry Foswell's A Broken Heart company drew a full house on Monday, and the various incidents of the interesting drama were closely followed by the audience. Miss Louisa Peach portrays the rôle of Mary Burnand with real histrionic ability; Miss Nancy Mitchell contributes some excellent comedy as Sally Tovner; and a word of praise is due to Miss Florrie Leal, who is responsible as Little May. Mr. Charles Vivian submits an excellent account of the character lead Gach Gill; Mr. Harry Foxwell brings acumen and experience to his dual interpretation of Rev. Mr. Staunton and Skrimp; Mr. Will Lindsay enlivens the proceedings as Tony Tibbits; and Mr. George M. Newall imparts interest to the part of Stephen Raylton.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—A diversified bill is headed by Mr. George Lashwood, who secures a warm reception; Mlle. Eldee does some picture-posing on novel lines, artistic effects being procured by means of a cleverly-worked device with coloured lantern slides; the Four Jumels contribute a musical act; Mezetti and Mora are above the average on the triple horizontal bars; Billy Howard and Kathryn Harris appear in a comedy duo, entitled The Adventures of a Happy Tramp; Ross and Grayson submit a musical, singing and dancing mélange; and other items include Winnie Derson, comedienne; Harry Anderson, comedian; Sisters Brenton, comediennes and dancers; Alexandra Edwin, soprano; and the pictures

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Lessees, The United County Theatres, Ltd.; Acting-Managers, Messrs. Browne and Stringer.—Chief honours easily go this week to the Great Roland, the wonderfully clever illusionist; Deamond and Beatrice score in manipulating the saxophone, &c.; the Kimberley Boys are quaint comedians; and Walter Wade, mimetic comedian, is entertaining; George Acre, comedian; Kitty Clover and company in Mr. There's Heir sketch; Janet H. Reynolds, vocalist; Ethel Whiteside and Pics, musical sketch artists; and the Palace pictures complete the bill.

SWANSEA. — THE GRAND.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Brooks and Woodbridge; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. Oswald Brooks; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Dean.—The continued popularity of the evergreen Belle of New York is amply demonstrated here. Mr. Paddy Dupres utilised to the utmost his many opportunities as Ichabod Bronson, and Mr. Ernest Moyar admirably filled the rôle of Harry; Mr. Frank Lawton was in grand form as Blinky Bill, his whistling and dancing being as good as ever; Mr. Jos. R. Tate was a funny Karl Von Pumpernick; and a great success was scored by Mr. W. Uridge as Mugg. Mr. Alfred Shandoe was a good Doc Snifkins; Mr. J. A. Watts (whose dance "La Kraquette" with Miss Browne was one of the features of the evening) and Mr. Roy L. Cody as the Portuguese Twins did well. A more captivating Belle than Miss Hebe Kniller it would be difficult to find; as Fifi Miss Olive Lenton was very pleasing; Miss Winnie Brown was also a decided success as Cora Anglique; and as Kissie Fitzgarter Miss Florence Hersee made good use of her opportunities.

THE STAR.—Manager, Mr. William Coutts; Assistant-Manager, Mr. S. J. Powell.—The King of Crime is being presented here. Mr. Henry Bedford's impersonation of Ronjarre was a masterly one, his ability being very marked; as the treacherous Simon Mr. E. St. Clair Forbes acted throughout in good style; Mr. Sam Wilford made a quaint landlord; and Mr. Arthur Robinson as Louis was very efficient. Miss Doris Brooks made an excellent impression as Henrietta, playing the part with great power; comedy was provided by Mr. Bob Anderson and Miss Gertie Henderson.

EMPIRE, LTD.—Manager, Mr. A. Mitchell; Assistant-Manager, Mr. P. C. Rowe.—Mr. John Lawson and an excellent company head the bill here this week with a sensational society episode, The King's Minister, which is well received. The Brothers Egbert, the happy dustmen, are in the forefront of comedy merchants, their turn being good; Harry Grey is funny; and the Lyons, pantomimists, fully sustain their reputation. Millie Payne should not be missed, and Alf Chester is as good as ever. Florenoca and Lilian are first-class musical specialists, and Boyd and Gilfain excel at their business. The Bioscope presents a tour through Egypt in a striking way.

SWINDON.—QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Business-Manager, Mr. Alfred Manners.—Mr. H. Keates Hale's company, in the new musical piece, The Pet of the Embassy, under the management of Mr. Hamilton Baines, is a great attraction here this week. Miss Ethel Dunford is charming as Hilda Graham, and is delightfully supported by Miss Florence Watson as Dorothy Stanley. Miss Julia Bassett as Mrs. Bung creates roars of laughter; Mr. Laurence Wensley is admirable as Eric Brown, and is much applauded for his vocal efforts; that fine comedian, Mr. Harry Fischer, is seen at his very best as Mr. Brown; Mr. Ralph Lynn's performance as Percy Brassington is particularly smart, and deservedly appreciated; and Mr. Walter Champney is amusingly clever in the part of John Willie. One of the outstanding features of the piece is the excellent chorus under the direction of Mr. Albert E. Wilson.

TAMWORTH.—ASSEMBLY ROOMS.—Manager, Mr. F. Hughes.—Mr. J. H. Tomkinson opened his nineteenth autumn tour here for four nights with his Royal Gipsy company and colossal amusement amalgamation. Capital turns were given by Chas. Bradford, the Sisters Dudley, Teddy Lennon, Fred McLean, and Sam Paul. A thrilling performance on the slack wire was given by Elsie Rubina, an artist of exceptional appearance and ability; the Recars, Chinese acrobats, created no little amusement by their antics; whilst the Rigarelis, lady gymnasts, on the high trapeze, received quite an ovation. Miss Brenda Leslie was heard to advantage in her illustrated songs; Miss Frances Loft was a clever trombone soloist; Lottie Lonsdale, the child artist, sang Scotch and Irish songs, in character, with pleasing effect; La Sylph, in her kaleidoscopic dances, showed taste and agility; and the whole concluded with animated pictures from the American Kayograph. Crowded houses nightly were the rule. On Sunday night the company gave a sacred concert to a packed house.

TONYPANDY.—ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Carlton and Duckworth; General-Manager, Mr. S. Duckworth; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Counsell.—The Grip of Iron, a sound favourite, is being played here by Mr. E. H. Knight's company. Mr. F. Powell plays his old part of Simmonet in his characteristically successful manner; Lorentz de Ribas, the adventurer, is well assumed by Mr. A. G. Polson-Turner; Mr. W. Curnock is suitably cast as Paul Blanchard, a remark also applicable to Mr. W. Annesley as M. de Belford. Messrs. W. T. Riley and John Brittain do well as the new and old style of detective respectively; Miss M. Fontaine's is a good character sketch of Cora Simmonet; while as Sophie Blanchard Miss F. Trevoir displays great pathos.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. W. Thomas; Acting-Manager, Mr. D. Armstrong.—The Schallers, Fred Horsefall, and the Sisters Holly are well received. Interesting turns are provided by M. Marchi, the Lashmars, and Miss Lucy Pound, and Mr. Fred Conway is a clever dancer.

TORQUAY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr. W. H. Mortimer; Secretary, Mr. Arthur Pearse.—Mr. Robert Macdonald's company in The Dairymaids is here this week. Miss Empsie Bowman made a daintily pretty Peggy, and was well supported by Miss Doris Dickens, a charming Winifred; the part of Helene was well sustained by Miss A. Heenan; Miss Maud Lucy made a characteristic maid of all work; as Lady Brudenell Miss Molly Tremaine was imposing and stately; and Miss D. Gordon displayed the requisite austerity as Miss Pyechase. In the rôle of Dr. O'Byrne Mr. A. Gordon Begg was excellent; as Sam Brudenell Mr. Richard Telford introduced much humour; and as Lieut. Brudenell Mr. Robert Bottomley also did well; to Mr. Dan Agar is due much praise for his clever handling of the part of Joe Mivens, and general hilarity prevailed whenever he was present.

PRINCESS PIER CONCERT HALL.—Proprietors, The Torquay Town Council; Manager, Mr. A. T. Tremlett.—An excellent entertainment is provided here this week by "The Gaieties." Miss Ruby Wilson is an attractive comedienne, Miss Beatrice Jeffreys a good soprano, and Miss Lois Barker, an able contralto, also proves an efficient accompanist; Mr. Percy Watson (tenor) does well, and Mr. Wilson James is a clever humorist; Mr. Charles Conyers, also an excellent humorist, gives ventriloquial sketches that are above the average.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. Welton Dale.—Dr. Wake's Patient has been meeting with a most cordial reception this week. Mr. Cecil du Guè is admirable as the doctor, and Miss Marie Leonhard is a charming Lady Geranta. Miss Lait as the Countess and Mr. Shirley Lea as the Bishop also contribute materially to the success.

TYNEMOUTH. — PALACE-BY-THE-SEA.—Proprietor and Director, Mr. J. H. Graham; Manager, Mr. Lindon Travers.—The Jolly Japs occupy a prominent position in this week's bill, and the quartette of male and female artists submit an extensive and varied répertoire. Mme. Frederic's clever terriers and wonderfully trained ponies are an entertaining item; and Joseph Cheetham, tenor vocalist, is also a popular turn. The Bioscope pictures remain a strong and interesting feature of the bill.

WAKEFIELD.—ROYAL OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Sherwood and Co. — Messrs. C. and F. Renad and company are here this week in the pantomimical absurdity, The Swiss Express. As the eccentric servants, James and John, Messrs. Renad are as amusing as ever; Dr. Gull is ably impersonated by Mr. Wilfred E. Brandon; Mr. Basil Reynolds does well as Virginia's lover, Bob; and Virginia herself has a bright and vivacious exponent in Miss Celestine Brandon. Mr. Alec Wyrlie is good as Dudley Green; and Mr. Charles Gray does good work as Mr. Septimus Squeeze; and Miss Blanche Vernon is admirable as Mrs. Septimus Squeeze. The minor rôles are ably filled, and the dancing of Miss Lottie Stone's troupe of dancers is heartily applauded.

HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. Sydney Tolfree.—The following are here this week:—Mr. Harry Leybourne, double-voiced comedian, delights with his clever mimicry and singing; Miss Nellie Atherton and company are very successful in a sketch entitled Wanted, a Partner; Poppy Lytton and Jack Bland, comedy artists, make a hit; Bert and Dora are a smart comedy couple; Little Frankie, juvenile comedian, proves highly popular with Scotch songs; the Two Fordyces win applause with their dancing; and Miss Edie Anderson, comedienne, completes the bill.

WALSALL.—HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, The Walsall Theatres Co., Ltd.; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. W. H. Westwood.—Pride of place here is given to Whit Cunliffe, who proves very entertaining. Johnson and Bert, in their novel act, entitled A Queer Customer; Ina Lorimer, smart Scotch comedienne; the Hovyns, in their comedy act, The Fancy Baker; Nance Elder, Tyrolean vocalist; Vernando, tonsorial ventriloquist; the Carmos, novelty jugglers; and the American Bioscope are also among the attractions.

GRAND THEATRE. — Proprietors, The Walsall Theatres Co., Ltd.; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. W. H. Westwood.—Messrs. Chas. H. Phelps and Jas. W. Mercer's company is appearing here this week in One Woman's Wickedness. Mr. Frank Moy appears with success as Philip Beaufort; Paul Roque is in the capable hands of Mr. Frank Hertie; Mr. Clifford Spencer merits high praise as Lord Algernon Fitznoodle; Mr. Chas. H. Phelps plays Jem Craggs with rare enthusiasm; Miss Irene Carrington is an excellent Janet Raymond; Miss Cissie Clarke an amusing Jenny Jiggles; and Miss Mabel Hall a charming Lillian Craggs.

WARRINGTON.—ROYAL COURT.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred. J. Reece.—Mr. Samuel James's company in Saved from the Sea is here this week. Mr. David G. Noble as Dan Ellington acts with natural force; Miss Marie Auckland's portrayal of the heroine is associated with a charm sufficient to win all hearts; Mr. George Wallace exhibits a clever sketch of Jim Weaver; and Mr. G. Lodge Percy is good as Richard Fenton. Mr. Frank Litchfield scores as Peter Scalcher; clever work is introduced into the character of Jenkins by Mr. George K. Ashley; Mr. William Skelton is an entertaining Billy Snooks; and a coy Polly Blake is Miss Elsie Walton.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Waters; Director of Amusements, Mr. F. Willmot.—Lady Julia, described as the "human monkey," is reappearing here this week, and her natural instincts create the greatest interest. Ike and Wall Scott are as entertaining as ever; Harry Tuft is a delightful silleur; Will Johnson is a lively comedian; the Sisters Walmsley are charming duettists; Daisy Martell is welcome as a comedienne; the Coes supply a delightful musical scena; Windermere and Mansfield are smart duologue artists; and Arthur Woodville an expert swell comedian. The Royal Bioscope pictures are delightfully entertaining.

WEDNESBURY. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Lessee, Mr. Harry Battersby; Manager, Mr. T. Kuner. —Mr. F. B. Woulfe and specially-selected company are here in the historical play, entitled Lady Godiva. Miss Ethel Griffies, in the rôle of Godiva, achieves a decided success, her acting being most artistic; as Lady Aldyth, her sister, Miss Theo Henries is responsible; well-merited applause is accorded Miss Edith Lorraine for her talented representation of Elfrida; the important part of Tom o' Coventry is admirably played by Mr. F. B. Woulfe; Mr. R. S. Innes successfully enacts the rôle of Leofrci, Earl of Mercia; and as Algar Mr. Clifford Kean renders the part highly interesting. Valuable assistance is also rendered by Mr. A. Holland Day in his able embodiment of Unwolf. For Wednesday and Thursday evenings The Light of the World is billed, and on Friday Jane Shore is to be staged.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE.—KNIGHTSTONE PAVILION AND OPERA HOUSE.—Manager, Mr. W. Payne.—Messrs. Cowper-Smith and Douglas Payne's Such a Nice Girl company is here this week. Miss Rosa Bennett makes a handsome and charming Hilda Coleman; Miss Maude Percival is delightful as Cerise; Miss Amy Fauchette gives a clever impersonation of Martha Grimm; Miss Beatrice Sutherland evokes much laughter as Jane; and Miss Nina Neilson is praiseworthy as Flossie. Mr. Mark Lester gives a thoroughly artistic interpretation of Colonel Bullett; Mr. Douglas Payne is ludicrously funny as Brown; Mr. C. Lionel Brocknor is decidedly good as Bertie Holbrook; and so, too, is Mr. Henry Ainsworth as Harry Harrow.

GRAND PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. John H. Stevenson. — The Strolling Players proved a great attraction here on Monday. Mr. Victor Wallace was loudly encored; Mr. G. W. Desmond met with a fine reception for his song and dance; Mr. Sydney is a ventriloquist above the average; Miss James and Miss Clarice May, two charming ladies, were heartily applauded for their respective songs; Mr. Frank Lens shows some excellent pictures on the bioscope; and Herr Kàndl's Austrian Blue Band is much appreciated.

WHITEHAVEN.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Clark; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Clark.—Mr. Lingford Carson's company is appearing here in The Drama of Life. Mr. A. J. Hicks displays power as Harry Beech; Mr. J. D. Clyde is good as the detective, Brenten; Mr. E. M. Hamilton is well cast as Walter Beech; Mr. C. Ibbotson is an amusing Sir Dobson Wilde; Miss Marie Ramus a pleasing Lady Wilde; and Miss Kate Hallam an excellent Sylvia Beech.

WIGAN.—ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Co. — Mr. E. Hill-Mitchelson's company has during the week attracted large audiences in the presentation of The Traitor. Miss Marie Robson as Zula, Miss Gwynne Warren as Countess Zicka, and Miss Jessica Black as Lieut. Nicolas, play their respective parts intelligently and with much effect. Of the chief male characters, Messrs. Graham Woods, Stephen E. Scanlon, Wilton Reed, Edw. Duff, and Alfred Richards are exceedingly well received.

THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Co.—Von Etta, the world's "only lady illusionist," gives a really novel and mystifying performance; and the Orros present a marvellously clever gymnastic act. The Donatos, the famous one-legged acrobats, are great favourites; and Harry Taylor, the Wigan comedian, delights the audience with a couple of excellent songs. Other tip-top turns are furnished by Richardson Taylor, ventriloquist; Le Green Trio, eccentric comedy artists; Chris Masters, vocalist and comedian; Harwood's Juveniles, the Ottawas, and Rosa Tilley, comedienne and dancer.

WORCESTER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. Le Wards.—Variety shows are again in favour, and on Tuesday evening Miss Louie Freear paid a flying visit for a matinée. She was supported by a capital company, which included Mr. Edwin Bennett, a talented portrayer of Dickens' characters; Mr. Vivian Foster, comedian and impersonator; Miss Hilda Elen, and Mr. Brightwell. Miss Freear delighted a crowded house in a successful farcical comedy, Snooks. The programme for the nightly shows throughout the week includes James Willard and his comedy sketch company in the dramatic and amusing episode, Did He Deserve It? the Factory Nightingales (Dolly, Agnes, and Maud); the irresistible comedians, Fame and Fortune; Vasey and Ramsey, clever dancers and contortionists; the Lizette Troupe of lady acrobats; and the Woodwards, in their astonishing balancing business.

WORKINGTON.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee, Mr Stanley Rogers; Manager, Mr. Falconer Jackes.—On Monday night there was a large and influential audience to witness the performance of Maritana by Mr. J. W. Turner's opera company. Mr. Turner as Don Cæsar had an enthusiastic reception, and sang with fine effect; Miss Christine Gomez was successful as Maritana, her freshness of voice and vivacity of acting proving very attractive; Mr. John Ridding gave a fine representation of Don José; and equally praiseworthy was Mr. T. Griffiths as the King. Miss Jessie Dennis as Lazarillo also sang with effect and pathos, and was encored; Mr. R. Cummings was amusing as the Marquis, and was well partnered by Miss Maud Esdale as the Marchioness.

WREXHAM.—EMPIRE MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. J. J. Scott; Manager Mr. C. W. Collings.—This week the Lovelaces, in their charming entertainment as song illustrators, have proved a big attraction. Juan and McQue provide a very clever knockabout show, and as comedians their sayings cause roars of laughter; Max Merlin, "the crocodile," proves a most agreeable turn; while Miss Gracie Logan, a chic soubrette, and Marquis and Mignonette, in their refined and funny act, also do well.

YORK.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Waddington; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. J. Dacre.—The Girl from Kay's is always sure of a welcome here, and the visit this week has proved no exception to the rule. Mr. Johnny Schofield as Hoggenheimer has proved a tower of strength; he is indefatigable, and his efforts have provoked much laughter. He is ably supported by Mr. G. H. Liot as Fitzchistle, Mr. Claude Dampier, a quaint Joseph, and Mr. Archer Brown, an amusing Mr. Chalmers Mr. Herbert Franklyn is entitled to unstinted praise for his racy performance as Harry Gordon; Miss Mavis Hope renders the songs incidental to the part of Nora with much taste; Miss Margaret Cathcart is a fascinating Winnie Harborough; and Miss Irene Vere dances well as Ellen. Mention must be made of Miss Marie Shield's graceful performance as Mrs. Chalmers.

OPERA HOUSE AND EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. William Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sidney Brook.—Sydney Bacon's company has done well this week with The Duchess of Tooting. Bert Harrow is an amusing comedian; the Mayfair Comedy Quartette sing well; and Zeta Grey and company, Coward, Earle and Melville, Arthur Slater, an expert whistler, and the Bioscope complete the list.

THE REAL "HAMLET."

AND HOW IT SHOULD BE STAGED.

BY PERCY FITZGERALD, M.A.

VIII.—THE FENCING MATCH.

In the talk between Hamlet and Horatio immediately after the interment is revealed yet another of the base plots of the King to destroy his stepson. He had sent directions to England, that on landing his head should be struck off. That shrewd Prince, suspecting the treachery, got up in the night, stole the commission, re-wrote it, with a direction that the bearers of the document should be instantly put to death. These were of course Rosencrantz and Guildenstern—the King's instruments. Hence there was a regular, elaborate, and most fiendish plot for the destruction of the Prince. Hamlet relates that the vessel met a pirate, and that he was captured and released later. The two commissaries "held their course for England—of them I have much to tell." They were going to their doom. He contrived to get a letter sent to the King, couched in mysterious language, announcing his arrival for the morrow, when he would recount the reasons for his return. The King, amazed and confounded, calls out at once, "Are all the rest come back, or is it some abuse, or no such thing?" He has a suspicion that Hamlet has discovered his plot, or has perhaps murdered these men; so, grown desperate, he sees that something must be done at once to get rid of his hated enemy. Then he develops his scheme of a fencing-match.

What a gathering of horrors in all this! The two men plotting—one to destroy, the other to baffle; the man he had sent away to be murdered on his arrival now posting back, inflamed with fury and eager for revenge. For now Hamlet held two of his secrets—one, the murder of the late King, which he would disclose, as it was already disclosed in the play; the other, his own plot for Hamlet's murder. So he must be put to death, and at once, as soon as he arrived. This match, by the way, was a clever thought, and, I fancy, was suggested by Hamlet's killing of Polonius, also apparently an accident.

Now, after all these complicated horrors what a different complexion the trivial scene of the fencing bout assumes! But these matters have to be "cut out." We find the King, in rather childish fashion, suggesting the contest as an agreeable diversion—as, it might be, a game of lawn tennis. Every spectator always feels there is something trivial and highly improbable in this, but when we know that it is the last desperate resource of the Royal gambler, led up to by stages, to be followed by a more desperate attempt if that failed, how different it all seems!

Omitted always—as far as I know—is the King's artful method of getting Laertes to fall in with the plot; for as Laertes was a gallant young fellow, and would not relish assassination, he tells him of a great fencer, the gentleman of Normandy, Lamond by name, who had so extolled Laertes' skill in fencing that he could match anyone. Hamlet, he added, when he heard of these praises, became quite envenomed with jealousy, and was longing to meet him. With this he proceeds to work on Laertes, asking, did he love his father? And thus it comes about that the wondering spectator looks on troubled and anxiously as he sees this noble and generous Prince involved in this last deliberately-planned scheme for shis destruction, contrived by the Royal villain, who felt that there was not an instant to be lost if he would save his own wretched life. How different all this from the exhibition of the frivolous Osric and his mission which, when placed alone and unsupported, imparts quite a farcical tone. The whole appears as a sort of impromptu business contrived by a weak man instead of being, as it is, the last touch in a craftily-planned scheme. What is further brought out by this deliberative arrangement of the matter is the generous and trusting nature of the Prince, who is so gained over by Laertes' handsome act of forgiveness that he lends himself gladly to the mal-à-propos exhibition of the fencing.

The King's suggestion of the fencing match comes when they have just returned from burying Ophelia, and the King is lightly made to suggest a little play with the foils, and Hamlet accepts as lightly. But what is the fact? The cutters and abbreviators have been at their work. It was an elaborately-contrived plot between the King and Laertes. The former describes how a Frenchman had admired Laertes' skill, and how envious Hamlet had shown himself. Smarting at the death of his father and sister, Laertes enters at once into the murder scheme, and it is arranged that as soon as Hamlet arrives he shall be drawn into this combat. The King throughout this episode should exhibit all the marks and tokens of villainy. All this is cut away in the acting versions. And it is astonishing how much is lost. This combat and the previous stabbing of old Polonius are frittered away by this curtailing treatment, instead of being great solemnities with a vast influence on the play.

The confusion in the fencing is really incredible. The stage direction runs that the two combatants in their scuffle should change rapiers, when Hamlet stabs the other with his own weapon. Irving introduced a bit of business which was much admired, but which seemed curious. He gracefully threw his rapier over to Laertes, who returned the compliment with his! We have only to reflect a moment that Laertes would be quite unprepared for Hamlet's movement, so the rapier would fall to the ground. But why change rapiers. The bout was evidently fought with "foils," which were presumed to have the buttons on. Laertes would have substituted a buttonless one, the point being prepared with poison. The truth was that Hamlet, feeling that he was wounded, saw at once the plot, and, closing with his opponent, wrested the weapon from him and stabbed him with it. Here was the change of foils and the reason for it. Could anything be more natural or coherent? A good bit of preparatory "business" might be that Laertes or the King should be seen fumbling with the weapons, before the match began, secretly removing the button and laying on the poison.

We have rarely seen Laertes played up to the situation, which is a most pathetic, passionate one. He is repentant at the end, he makes confession, begs forgiveness from the man he has wronged, acquits him of all injury, and denounces the arch-villain. The moment should be full of passion and feeling. But the fact is, we want to see Hamlet die, and hear him say his last words—"the rest is silence." How these words have been twisted from the context. He is made to gasp and grow gradually faint and be scarcely audible, until he feebly utters "the rest is silence." But this is not the way in which poison works. There are pains and agonies and clouds, but the voice remains strong. The heroic Prince is thinking what will become of the deserted kingdom. Fortinbras must succeed, "he has my dying voice": he must be told how matters had fallen out: the dying Prince is going on eagerly, pouring forth his instructions when he feels the last pang at his heart, then sinks, moaning "the rest is silence."

So we have the King dreading Hamlet, dreading Laertes, uncertain as to his hold of the throne; wishing to destroy the Prince, yet not daring on account of his popularity; and so, how natural that he should contrive an artful plot by which Hamlet should come by his death owing to an accident. Again, does not this give a wholly different air to the fencing match?

Not having all these particulars before them, even our best actors have always contrived to make this fencing bout appear a different thing from what it was intended to be. We are to be impressed by the commonplace preparations—the making a ring, as it were. Hamlet takes off his outer coat, he bends the foils, switches them about in a dapper fashion usual to professionals; there is the graceful salute, the measuring distance, &c. —things quite out of place, and too petty for treatment. One is tempted to say what the Prince did to the players who were "going to begin."

It is often forgotten that in this fencing scene the King had two strings to his bow, the bared foil and the poisoned wine. He knew that the first method was uncertain, for Laertes might only give a slight prick. Laertes, however, proposed to add poisoned ointment, which would be effectual. But still doubtful—Hamlet might be too clever, and there might be no hit at all—then the King settled on the wine, which the heat and exertion would tempt Hamlet to drink. This he evidently relied on, and during the combat repeatedly pressed the goblet on his nephew. "I dare not yet drink—by and by," he said. Then seeing that he could not be persuaded, Laertes says to the King, "I'll hit him now." The King, still doubtful, replies, "I do not think't." Then Hamlet, accusing Laertes of not exerting himself sufficiently and of merely playing with him, Laertes determines on action and does hit him. The choice of time shows that Laertes was the superior in skill, and that his adversary was too agitated to be cautious.

It may be asked how could Laertes—in the case of Hamlet's death from his stroke—expect to clear himself from the charge of using a foil with the point bare? Hamlet was exceedingly popular, and the excuse of an accident could not be put forward. This must have been the reason why the King was so anxious for the poisoned cup. In the last resort, it would have to be claimed that it was a mere accident—the button had come off the foil, etc.

One incident in the final struggle is often omitted, and yet it is most effective. After stabbing the King, Hamlet seizes the poisoned cup and forces him to drink it off.

As I have said before, all these successive incidents make the fencing scene a long-drawn-out drama in itself. The three chief characters are slowly acting their parts and striving elaborately to carry out their scheme. There is the secret selection of the pointed foil, the loud advertisement of the poisoned challice made into a ceremonious health-drinking, saluted with cannon, all tempting Hamlet into drinking — a pressure which he puts aside twice. Then there is the combat, allowing Hamlet to make a couple of hits and so throw him off his guard; then Laertes's serious attack, the scuffle, the change of the foils, the wounding of both combatants, and Hamlet's renewed challenge, "Nay, come again." Then the Queen crying out, the stabbing of the King, and the forcing him to drink the poison.

Now instead of all this—making it a regular slaughter-house, as Garrick called it—we could fancy it made a most deliberate affair, each incident growing naturally out of another. The moment when the Queen calls out that she is poisoned would be an awful one, for up to that Hamlet seemed uncertain whether his wound might not have been an accident. But here came conviction. I could fancy an awful pause of horror —everyone in agitation, and Hamlet, who had been eager to renew the battle, suddenly transformed into an agitated, half-mad avenger.

Everyone will recall the superficial way in which the queen's death is treated. Her affectionate interest in her son during the conflict is shown to the last. Her death is caused by it. She must drink to his success. Her husband interposes to stop her; but he merely says "It's the poisoned cup: it is too late." Here he showed more excitement and agitation than is usually exhibited. He should be restlessly looking at her. Meanwhile the poor lady should be showing signs of the effect of the potion, though she affectionately falters out: "Come, let me wipe thy face." Growing worse—though in the common acting version no one seems much to mind her—tossing her arms, &c. Then comes the scuffle. After which she sinks down on the ground; and the trivial Osric is the only one to notice it, calling out, "Look to the queen there. Ho!" But nobody minds him. She should be seen writhing on the floor. Hamlet at last exclaims "How does the queen?" The King, artful to the last, says, "She swoons to see them die." When she frantically starts up, exclaiming "The drink, the drink! Oh, my dear Hamlet. . . . I am poisoned," and so dies. Now all this is generally huddled up and glossed over. No one minds her or wants her, or cares much. She interferes with the real business, which is Hamlet. And yet how pathetic and how tragic it is! It is a most important death scene.

Another really important element often suppressed is the Fortinbras episode, and the menace he offered to the King's power. Here was another of the troubling forces which were gathering round the Royal villain and disturbed his peace. This invasion is foreshadowed from the earliest scenes, when he sent away emissaries to try and arrange matters. Later on they return, having agreed to let Fortinbras "have passage over the kingdom" to subdue the Poles. The young general had, however, designs on Denmark, and it is novel for the audience to find him meeting with Hamlet in the field. This menace, therefore, was bringing a fresh danger to the wicked King.

It is usual at the close to work up Hamlet's dying moments into something that is pathetic and melodramatic. "The rest is silence" gives the keynote, then the green folds of the curtain descend slowly. But how different is the reality, and far more matter-of-fact. Hamlet, after his appeal to his friend to vindicate his memory, is interrupted by the shouts of soldiers without. Here is Fortinbras arriving. Hamlet is told what the sounds mean, and then says he cannot live to hear the details; but he gives his dying voice for the election of Fortinbras. "So tell him, with the occurrents more or less, which have solicited —the rest is silence . . ."

Fortinbras comes in with his soldiers, and is awe-stricken by the horrors that confront him, and then signifies his intention of seizing on the throne. Here is shown the grand moral—the wholesale destruction of all concerned in this ghastly tragedy. The King, the Queen, Ophelia, Laertes, Polonius, Hamlet, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern are all swept away—the throne is empty with no one to succeed, and a soldier of fortune, returning home, stops to seize it. Horatio, almost the sole survivor, invites him. Fortinbras orders four captains to carry Hamlet away, and bids "the soldiers shoot." As he is carried out, "a peal of ordnance is shot off."

The original form of the finale seems to me truly grand and classical, quite different from the clap-trap Hamlet's death—"the rest is silence." Then the slow-falling curtain, the agony of Hamlet at the thought that his good name would suffer, as it would be impossible for anyone to explain the transactions. He meant that he would be credited with the murder of the King and Laertes, while there would be no one who would be able to say that they had plotted to murder him. This is highly tragic. Then the arrival of the soldiers in all the pomp of war, and of Fortinbras, who was now claiming the throne. Hamlet at the instant of his death was thinking of this important point, who was to succeed him, for he was on the throne then as actual King by succession. And he named Fortinbras as his successor. There is satisfaction in hearing him announce that the two false courtiers had been done to death. How fine the raising of Hamlet's body and the carrying him away! This should be done with great state and solemnity, to the firing off of "shots."

LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, Sept. 16, the Play, by Hall Caine, entitled,
"THE BONDMAN."

Another Drury Lane drama in the shape of The Bondman has this week repeated its success at the King's to enthusiastic audiences. The tale of self-sacrifice which Hall Caine so powerfully and sympathetically tells has appealed to the suburban playgoers in no uncertain fashion, with the result that the theatre has been crowded nightly—a sight joyful enough to managers in these times when the drama in general is decried as unfashionable. No complaint can be raised against Mr. Wentworth Croke upon the manner in which he has produced the play. Actors and scenery are alike most satisfactory. The cast is an extremely lengthy one, but there is no square peg placed in a round hole. The character which excites our profound sympathy and admiration is that of Jason, and Mr. Cecil A. Collins scored a conspicuous triumph for an impersonation at once telling and well-nigh perfect. As Michael Sunlocks, Mr. Arthur Bawtree acted vigorously and in manly style, his helplessness when blind being excellently and feelingly expressed; Mr. H. C. Lanceley rendered Adam Fairbrother with great effect; and Mr. Norman Wrighton made the most of the inhuman part of Governor Testa. Mr. W. H. Rotherham, first as Grandfather and subsequently as Father Ferrari, gave able and distinguished renderings of two totally distinct characters; Doctor Boni and the Marshal of Police were capably enacted by Mr. F. J. Waller and Mr. Scrope Quentin; the children, Mona and Danny, were very winningly represented by Miss Gertrude Helene and Master Arthur Clarence; Mr. Alfred Humbert was a dignified naval captain; Miss Grace Chalmers played Greeba with power and earnestness, and wholly deserved the unqualified approval leading to her recall time after time; Christian Ann was successfully undertaken by Miss Beatrice Whitney; and the two Callow girls were delightfully represented by Miss Florence Hunt and Miss Julia Willis. Mrs. Fairbrother was amusingly pictured by Miss Madge Lanerton. The new scenery by Mr. Ernest Howard was much praised, and the incidental music by Mr. J. M. Glover gave every satisfaction.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

On Monday, Sept. 16, the Musical Comedy,
"A CHINESE HONEYMOON."

The management's choice of A Chinese Honeymoon, which is the attraction here this week, is proved by its reception to be a wise one. Played by Mr. Milton Bode's excellent company, this "hardy perennial" is still raising roars of laughter. The play was well received on the opening night, and has proved a great success throughout the week. Mr. Bode must be congratulated upon the excellence of his company, every member being worthy of the highest praise. Mr. Rudolph Kloss as Hang-Chow, the Emperor of Ylang-Ylang, gives a soundly humorous piece of acting, and makes the most of his opportunities; Mr. P. Allerton Turner has a grim make-up as Chippie-Chop, the Lord Chancellor, and is admirably suited to the part; Mr. Leonard May as Hi-Lung, the Lord High Admiral, plays excellently; and Mr. Harry Jennings gives a breezy and vigorous representation of Tom Hatherton, scoring well with his musical numbers. Mr. Pineapple is played by Mr. George Rydon, and that is equivalent to saying the part could not be in better hands. Mr. Rydon is droll to his finger-tips. He works hard and very successfully, and scores with the well-known song, "A happy land." Miss Rosie Begarnie as Mrs. Pineapple plays with plenty of life and animation, and her rendering of "The à la girl" delights the audience. Another good number is her "Ohio" song, the stage effects and chorus of "darkies" accompanying being both clever and picturesque. Her bridesmaids—Florrie, Violet, Elsie, and Maud—are suitably portrayed by Miss Dorothy Radcliffe, Miss Mary Gray, Miss Cecily Leslie, and Miss Phyllis Grosvenor. The official Mother-in-law, in the hands of Miss Maud Adams, is cleverly represented. Miss Gwennie Harcourt as Fi-Fi gives an excellent performance, and proves herself a very clever comedienne. She receives well-deserved encores for her humorous rendering of "When I make my de-but" and "I want to be a lady." Miss Elsie Skillings is a sweet Soo-Soo, and her musical contributions, "Chrysanthemum," "Maid of Pekin," and "Egypt," are notable successes. The parts of Sing-Sing and Yen-Yen, Soo-Soo's maids of honour, and Mi-Mi are ably filled by the Misses Ada Booth, Edie Ross, and Madge Elliott. The effective and well-trained chorus and augmented orchestra are under the able directorship of Mr. Edward Mitchell. The dressing, mounting, and staging are all that could possibly be desired.

THE CORONET.

On Monday, Sept. 16, Bernard Shaw's Comedy,
"CAPTAIN BRASSBOUND'S CONVERSION."

Miss Ellen Terry's admirers have assembled in force this week at the Coronet Theatre, where the great actress makes her first London appearance since her tour in America. Large houses have been the rule, and "curtains" innumerable have marked the delight which existed in all parts of the house. In Captain Brassbound's Conversion Mr. Shaw is in his most reasonable mood, and the piece possesses elements which can appeal to the ordinary playgoer as well as to those who have cultivated a taste for the Court Theatre dramatist. Brilliant examples of satire are frequent in the play, into which, moreover, a moral lesson can be read by those so disposed. The rôle of the irresistible Lady Cecily Waynflete might have been written with Miss Terry in the author's eye, so perfectly does it fit the personality of the artist, who acts with all her customary charm, perfection of speech, and grace of movement. Miss Terry looked radiantly beautiful in her elegant dresses, for which, by the way, her daughter, Miss Edith Craig, is responsible—and the consummate art of the actress allied to the cleverness of the part resulted in a performance that no words could overpraise. Miss Terry was recalled again and again at the end of each act and enthusiastically cheered. A welcome little less cordial was extended to the popular lady's husband, Mr. James Carew, who was Miss Terry's leading man in America. The rugged force and dogged perseverance which Mr. Carew infuses into his part were admirable, and the redoubtable Captain Brassbound is a picturesque figure throughout. Much effect is gained by the transition in the second act from the browbeating bully to the cowed and contrite man, and Mr. Carew rightly shared in the enthusiasm which the scene provoked. A performance of sterling worth is also that of Mr. Rudge Harding as the stubborn Sir Howard Hallam; his rich voice and finished elocution make every line tell, and the strenuous scene in the castle on the hills, when every nerve seems to quiver with emotion, is played with artistic restraint that heightens its effect. Mr. Story-Gofton gives an admirable study of the benevolent missionary, the benignity and lovableness of the Rev. Leslie Rankin being maintained throughout. The "hooligan" propensities of Felix Drinkwater are skilfully brought out by Mr. George Elton, who is gifted with a countenance that should prove a precious possession. His comicalities are a source of much merriment, his appearance after a bath, by means of which the fact that he has red hair is realised for the first time, putting the audience into uncontrollable laughter. Mr. William Walshe gives a character study of rare excellence in the part of the burly Johnson. Mr. Dare Austin presents the foppish Redbrook effectively, and the Italian, Marzo, is rendered with many realistic touches by Mr. David Hallam. The comely Sidi el Asif is impressively portrayed by Mr. David Powell; Mr. W. T. Lovell is smariness personified as the United States captain; a typical specimen of the American bluejacket is given by Mr. James Fergusson; and Mr. John Hood, Mr. Gerald Hoffman, and Master Roberts complete an ideal cast.

THE CAMDEN.

On Monday, Sept. 16, the play, entitled
"THE PRODIGAL SON."

Mr. Hall Caine is very much to the front at the present moment, and no less than three of his plays are being played in London this week. The Prodigal Son, which is being performed here, is undoubtedly a play of much interest, despite its shortcomings, and it is drawing most excellent houses, who are evidently well pleased with the production The company, which is under the direction of Mr. Wentworth Croke, is very complete, and is staged in the most lavish manner, with all the scenery and effects from Drury Lane. Mr. Henry Watson is a splendid Oscar Stephensson, and he portrays the character in a most able and finished manner; while Magnus is likewise cleverly depicted by Mr. Hugh Montgomery, who scores by his earnest and convincing acting, and the contrast between the two brothers is well marked by these two actors. Miss Margaret Murch gives a fine delineation of Helga; and Miss Maude Drewry's rendering of Thora leaves nothing to be desired; her picture of this unhappy girl is indeed fine, while her portrayal of Thora's daughter Elin, in the latter scenes, is most natural and winning. The stern Stephen Magnussun is ably embodied by Mr. Richard A. Green, who imparts much force into his acting. Mr. J. Poole Kirkwood finds in Oscar Neilson, the factor, a character which suits him well, and which he handles with marked ability. Miss Barbara Gott is good as Anna; and Miss Marie Harcourt is most successful as the factor's sister Margaret. There is a very long list of minor characters, which are in each case well played, and we would specially mention Mr. Charles A. Maynard, who gives a finished study of Neils Finsen; also Mr. Chauncey Morris as Dr. Olsen, and Mr. Philip Renouf, who presents a delightful sketch of the old Pastor. We have already alluded to the general mounting of the play, which is most picturesque. The Casino scene is especially brilliant, and the whole reflects the utmost credit on Mr. Charles Maynard, who is responsible for the staging of this very heavy production. Mr. Howard Sturgess is the business-manager for the company, and Mr. Wilfred Stanford is still to the fore as the manager of the theatre for Mr. Robert Arthur, who has made such a fine list of bookings for the autumn at this theatre.

THE ELEPHANT AND CASTLE.

On Monday, Sept. 16, the Drama,
"THE SIN OF HER CHILDHOOD."

Billed as a new moral domestic drama, in a prologue and four acts, The Sin of Her Childhood is being presented here by Mr. J. M. East's stock company. The plot hinges on the poisoning of her ailing step sister by the heroine (in the prologue a young girl) at the instigation of her villainous brother, so that the money necessary for sending the child away to a sanatorium may be devoted to keeping him at a musical school. In the subsequent four acts are shown the punishment and repentance of the heroine, and the happy ending. Miss Valerie Crispin well sustains the part of the repentant and atoning heroine. Mr. A. Clifton Alderson as her clerical friend, and afterwards lover, is a manly clergyman, down on hypocrisy and cant. Mr. William Felton gives a powerful impersonation of the villainous brother. Mr. E. H. Brooke makes a gallant Captain of the Indian Army. Mr. Maitland Marler is a rollicking, good-hearted Irishman, and his songs and witticisms are much applauded. He is well supported by Miss Agnes Paulton as his sweetheart. The staging, &c., leaves nothing to be desired. Mr. W. H. Pease, the genial acting-manager, has now returned from a well-earned holiday.

THE STANDARD.

On Monday, Sept. 16, the Drama, in Four Acts, entitled
"THE UGLIEST WOMAN ON EARTH."

Mr. Frederick Melville's novel drama, The Ugliest Woman on Earth, is the attraction at the Standard this week, and is meeting with an enthusiastic reception. The story is one of great interest, and is decidedly original, whilst the unfolding of the plot is safely entrusted to a most capable body of players, and the production is a conspicuous success. Mr. Ashley Page, a great favourite here, met with quite an ovation on Monday evening, and he certainly well deserved the applause which from time to time rewarded his efforts. As Jack Merriman he played with intelligence and ability, and in his performance the meaning the author wished to convey must have been fully realised. His scene in the third act with the ugliest woman on earth was powerfully enacted, and Miss Marion Denvil must be heartily congratulated for her share in the good work done. In the title-rôle she was perfect, acting as she always does with great intensity and feeling, and giving the character the prominence it deserves. Mr. J. C. Aubrey played with his customary ease and skill as Hubert Gold, and without any apparent effort made the heavy rôle one of strength and interest. The part of Antonio Luchessi was admirably supported by Mr. Frank Harrison, who portrayed the Italian, both in manner and speech, with considerable ability. Mr. Roland Daniels did all that was possible with the small part of Tom Redvers; and Mr. Gerald Morgan showed skill in the manner he discharged his duties as Griffiths. Mr. Johnny Chippendale used every chance he was offered as Tubby Herrick to raise a laugh, and was most capably assisted in the lighter scenes by Miss Mattie Everett as Aggie Brown. A clever characteristic sketch of a London hooligan was supplied by Mr. John Sargent as Raggles. His make-up was good, and his delineation all through was the essence of careful thought and judgment. Mr. Frank Denis was a very satisfactory Doctor Carr. A pathetic interpretation of the part of Morita was contributed by Miss Minnie Waller, whose ability in characters of this description is unquestionable. The late Britannia favourite, Miss East Robertson, proved of great service, and was powerful and convincing as Rose Courteney. The minor characters were all in safe hands, and the staging and mounting of the piece were done on Mr. Melville's usual lavish scale. Mr. H. A. Chappell, the courteous acting-manager, works energetically in front of the house, and ably attends to the comfort of the audience.

THE SHAKESPEARE THEATRE.

On Monday, Sept. 16, the Play, in Four Acts, founded on Ouida's Novel, by Edwin Elsner, entitled
"UNDER TWO FLAGS."

Of the plays that have lately been presented at the Shakespeare Theatre, Clapham, few have been more to the taste of local playgoers than Under Two Flags, which, with a company furnished by Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow, commenced a week's run on Monday evening, and has been delighting crowded houses during the week. The company is a thoroughly capable one all round, and their efforts have been received with unstinted applause. A word of praise is also due for the excellent manner in which the play is staged, especially the representation of a dust-storm in the desert, which is very realistic. Chief honours are carried off by Miss Ida Molesworth, who quickly rouses the enthusiasm of the audience by her acting in the arduous rôle of the vivandière, Cigarette. Throwing herself heart and soul into her part, and presenting the various phases of the character with masterly skill and artistic restraint, Miss Molesworth scores a decided success. Mr. Mark Blow is naturally well gifted for the embodiment of Bertie Cecil Royallieu, and bringing his ripe experience to bear upon the part, makes a deep impression by the quiet and convincing force of his acting. Mr. Harry Benson gives an admirable interpretation of the character of Rake, and proves his versatility by giving an excellent song and dance, which were enthusiastically encored. Mr. Austin Milroy acquits himself with success in the rôle of Lord Rockingham; and Mr. Dermott FitzGibbon is satisfactory as Barklie Cecil Royallieu. Colonel Chanteroy finds a capable exponent in Mr. Roy Jackson; and Mr. Charles Brooks as Lord Royallieu, Mr. A. Cotton Holmes as Captain Claude de Chansellon, and Mr. Fred Prior as Erzy Baroni, also render valuable support. An ideal Princess Venetia Corona is found in Miss Edith Coleman, who contributes a charming and agreeable performance. Miss Madge Stevens is seen to advantage as Lady Beatrice Guinevere; and Miss Kitty Douglas as Lavinia wins golden opinions for her excellent singing and dancing. Mr. G. M. Montanini is acting-manager for Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow.

CRYSTAL PALACE THEATRE.

On Monday, Sept. 16,
Mr. Chas. Macdona's principal company in
"THE WHITE CHRYSANTHEMUM."

This pretty lyrical comedy, fresh from good business on the South Coast, is filling Mr. J. Bannister Howard's house here, and Sydenham audiences are glad to be able again to see some of their old favourites, who have appeared here in other characters. Miss Muriel George, in the title-role, was a great acquisition, and showed herself to be possessed of a clear soprano voice and a manner full of charm, and her artistic rendition of her songs met with instant approval. As Betty Kenyon, a young widow and chaperone, Miss Dorothy Sephton was quiet and effective, her vocalisation being pretty; and Miss Rosa Sullivan's impersonation of Cornelia Vanderdecken, the American heiress, was sprightly and vivacious, for she can dance well and give full point to her songs and business. Mr. John T. MacCallum made a bluff and hearty Admiral Sir Horatio Armitage, with an apparently unlimited supply of excellent topical verses to his song in the third act; and Mr. Merville Florance as his son, Lieut. Reginald Armitage, entered fully into the sympathetic part of the lover, and sang and acted with much discretion. The part of his chum and adviser, Lieut. Chippendale Belmont, was in the hands of Mr. Victor Kerr, who raised hearty laughter by his droll methods and extravagances, although he was never out of the picture in his fooling. Mr. James Craydon as Sin Chon, the Chinese cook, was one of the best made up Orientals we remember having seen, and his agile dancing and quaint manner produced roars of laughter. The stolid Marine, Private Perks, was a study of drollery of another order, and Mr. Jamie Dallas made this soldier-servant a telling part. The pretty dresses, dancing, and singing of the six little Japanese maids who waited on the heroine added greatly to the "go" of the piece, and the six jolly bluejackets who escorted the Admiral were as bluff and virile as one could desire. Mesdames Nance and Marie Wickenden, Dolly Varden, Rosa Abrahams, Gwen Yates, and Kate Rolls introduced a pleasant variation to the representation as Japanese strolling singers. The company carries the entire scenery for the three acts, and each tableau was perfectly and efficiently set, and added much to the completeness and success of the production.

THE CROWN, PECKHAM.

On Monday, Sept. 16, the Musical Extravaganza, entitled
"SATURDAY TO MONDAY."

"Laughter holding both its sides" is in evidence at this popular South London house this week. Saturday to Monday is a merry, irresponsible, plotless, and rollicking piece of nonsense, which finds many admirers among the playgoing public. The principal member of Mr. Fred Karno's company is Mr. Rolando Martin, who plays the rôle of the eccentric John Willie Jaggs with much success, imparting a flavour of mock earnestness and dignity to the part which is really comic. Mr. Martin is nearly always on the stage, and his impersonation is all important to the success of the piece. Miss Amy Rogerson makes a prepossessing Clarinda, and plays especially well in her domestic scenes with Jaggers and the children. Mr. V. H. Crawford is amusing as John Willie Jaggs, jun., and a particularly clever piece of character-acting comes from Master T. McDonagh as Jane Ellen Jaggs. Mr. C. Curtis displays a pleasant voice to much advantage as the young lover, Tom Freeman, and his sweetheart, Violet Blake, is daintily and engagingly enacted by Miss Ethel Beech. Miss Ada Maskell is very humorous as Aunt Skinner, Mr. Dick Harcourt is a lively Major Potts, and Miss Pensive is well played by Miss Louie Lilian. Mr. J. W. Bradbury as Mr. Blake and Mr. Fred Palmer as Spinks also contribute their share to the general success. The small but efficient chorus work very effectively, notably in the finale to the second act. The scene of the third act, the sands at Saltsea, is a pretty piece of brushwork.

THE DALSTON.

On Monday, Sept. 16, the Comic Opera, entitled
"THE LITTLE MICHUS."

Mr. George Dance's company is scoring a decided success at the Dalston Theatre this week with The Little Michus, the production of which is rendered complete by full opera chorus and orchestra under the direction of M. Jean Desormes. The great hit in the representation is of course Mr. Foster Courtenay's impersonation of the eccentric character, General des Ifs. All the time Mr. Courtenay is on the stage there is almost continuous laughter, either at what the General says, at what he does, or at what, by an attitude or even a look, he infers. Mr. Courtenay clearly demonstrates the fact that it is not humorous lines alone which afford the real comedian his opportunity. Mr. E. Wynn as Gaston Rigaud and Mr. Alfred Drinkwater as Aristide Verdt are well to the front, Mr. Drinkwater's representation being particularly noteworthy; while Mr. William Benson's Pierre Michu forms an amusing study. Mr. Gilbert Childs, who plays Bagnolet, also undertakes the duties of stage-manager. The little Michus are represented by Miss Alice Coverick and Miss Gracie Sinclair, who act with grace, sing musically, and generally deport themselves in charming manner. Mlle. St. Cyr, described as a famous dancer of the period, is realistically portrayed by Mlle. Marjorie, who is rewarded by hearty applause. Special reference must be made to Miss Mary Young, who sings well, and renders the character of Mme. Michu thoroughly interesting and essential to the performance. Others in the cast include the Misses May Stephenson, V. Ashcroft, M. Leigh, M. Elswick, L. Searle, E. Perose, Dot Lee, Stella Raleigh, and Kitty Farrell; and Messrs. E. Stanley, W. Herbert, and A. Gervaise.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, Sept. 16, the Musical Comedy, in Two Acts, by Paul A. Rubens and Austen Hurgon, entitled
"MISS HOOK OF HOLLAND."

Thanks to Mr. Peter Davey, the enterprising managing-director of the Royal County Theatre, Kingston, is the first of the London suburbs in which this bright, tuneful, and amusing London success has been produced, and there was a bumper house to witness the first presentation on Monday night, the audiences being equally as numerous during the week. Mr. George Dance is touring the play, and he has managed to gather around him a company of most capable artists. Chief honours are deservedly won by Mr. Fred Winn, whose drolleries are irresistible and keep the house in constant good humour. Mr. Percy Carr, well-known to many Kingstonians, makes a praiseworthy appearance in the part of Bandmaster Van Vuyt; and Mr. J. T. Bolesworth wins much favour also as Captain Adrian Paap. The part of Ludwig Schnapps is ably portrayed by Mr. Harry Talbot. Amongst the ladies, Miss Maggie White wins universal favour for her captivating picture of Miss Hook; whilst others deserving of special mention are Miss Rita Everard as Mina, the maid; Miss Dolly James as Freda Voos; and Mr. Albert Kavanagh as Simon Slinks.

BRIXTON THEATRE.

"HER LOVE AGAINST THE WORLD."

Fresh from its triumphant success at the famous house in the Strand, Mr. Walter Howard's drama was produced on Monday evening at this theatre; and, it is needless to say, again scored heavily. It is produced by Messrs. W. H. Hallatt's and Walter Howard's company. A large house throughout the evening received the thrilling situations with ringing cheers, and a popular success was obtained. The play is mounted exactly as at the Lyceum, the beautiful stage pictures being all that could be desired. Especially noteworthy was the scene of Prince Ulric's palace at Ravensburg. In the rôle of Eric, Earl of Strathmere, Mr. Walter Howard proved himself a capable and manly hero, and he soon won the affections of his audience. Miss Ethel Warwick, as the beautiful princess, looked the part to perfection, and her representation of Iris will linger long in the memory; Miss Ivy Millais, too, gained enthusiastic applause for her capital acting as Nello, the brother of the hero; Mr. Lewis Gilbert as the vindictive Ulric, Prince of Ravensburg, well brought out the relentless spirit of the character; Mr. Ronald Bayne was excellent as Prince Othmar; and Mr. Douglas Vigors admirable as Prince Maurice of Saxonia. Mr. T. W. Henson was a soldierly Kaspar, and Mr. Percy Compton as Heinrich and Mr. E. H. Dobell as Fritz provided much fun as the lackeys. Miss Maisie Ash as Katinka and Miss Kathie Lennon as Gretchen, the maids of honour, were both deserving of praise. Mr. A. H. Hallatt gave a good character-study of the kind-hearted surgeon, Captain Helgar; Miss Evelyn Hope made a capital Countess of Rassellyn; and Miss Annie Pearson also did well as Corona. Mr. Richard Webb is a capable stage-manager. At the conclusion of Act II. Miss Ethel Warwick was handed a beautiful basket of flowers. There is little doubt but that Her Love Against the World will repeat its success at the house on Brixton Oval. Mr. R. W. Allum still looks after the comfort of his numerous patrons as Mr. F. Melville's acting-manager.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Sept. 16, the Play, entitled
"THE STRONGER SEX."

By arrangement with Mr. Otho Stuart, Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison present at Mr. Robert Arthur's Kennington Theatre this week The Stronger Sex, the entire London production from the Apollo and Royalty Theatres being used. Crowded houses nightly testify to the popularity of this play, the artists being recalled again and again after each act. Mr. D. Lewin Mannering as the Hon. Warren Barington gives a clever delineation of a difficult part; Mary (his wife) is played by Miss May Blayney, whose wonderful charm of manner won for her the admiration of the entire audience. Her impersonation of the young American heiress deserves the highest praise. Mr. Stanley Harrison as Oliver Thorpe, a rich young American, is a strong favourite; as also is Miss Nancy Beresford as Joan Forsythe. Miss Gladys Ffolliott is excellent in the character of Mrs. Van Garkerken. All the lesser parts are admirable, and the scenery and staging leave nothing to be desired. The play is preceded by the clever one-act comedy, entitled The Peacemaker, which is well received.

GRAND THEATRE, ISLINGTON.

On Monday, Sept. 16, the Drama, entitled
"HER ROAD TO RUIN."

Islington is this week favoured with a visit from Mr. Frederick Melville's company in his latest play. Still following the plan which has dominated his other productions, he paints in striking colours the evils and consequences attending certain modes of life, and has constructed a play of great interest and attraction. He is well served by a hard-working company, who labour wholeheartedly for the general success. Mr. Robert Faulkner as Frank Temple acts with power and sincerity, and submits an excellent performance. Mr. J. Knox Orde as Tom Wells is also to be commended for a capital study of the journalist. Mr. Alex Bradley as Hardy enacts the heavy rôle with force, and does very well. Mr. Arthur Byron as Boots works hard and with success in provoking laughter, and finds admirable support in Miss Marie Wright as Jennie Cackling. Mr. Dane Clark portrays the Bishop with the requisite dignity. Mr. Victor C. R. Monro as Cholmondeley is to be commended; Mr. Ernest Hiswell as Sir John Lewis deserves commendation; Miss Alice Bowes as May Willoughby plays naturally and with considerable success; Miss Nellie Bonser in a triple rôle is quite admirable, giving a finished performance; Miss Eva Moss as Jess Willoughby acts with dramatic intensity, and deserves much praise. Smaller parts are satisfactorily filled by Miss Violet Cane and Messrs. William Lynton, F. C. Brooke, W. Brooke, Thomas Henry, &c. The mounting is in Mr. Melville's most lavish style, and Mr. Thomas P. Fish has composed some appropriate incidental music. The performance goes with great smoothness. A capital house witnessed the production on Monday, and a lengthy and prosperous career would seem to be certain.

TERRISS THEATRE.

On Monday, Sept. 16, the Drama, entitled
"THE WORST WOMAN IN LONDON."

Exciting episodes, continual change of scene, and opportunities for vigorous acting, make The Worst Woman in London always sure of a favourable reception, and this week has proved no exception to the rule at the popular Rotherhithe playhouse. As Frances Vere Miss Olga Andre looks and acts the part to perfection. She is ably supported by Mr. Vernon Travers, who makes considerable dramatic capital out of the part of James Milford; Mr. George Gaisford is admirable in the arduous rôle of Jack Felton; and the wealthy speculator's daughter, Ruth, is well portrayed by Miss Elizabeth Watkins. Mr. Will Corrie as Bob Goldfinch and Miss Polly Marsh as Matilda Parker keep the house in a continual titter, and brighten considerably an otherwise sordid play. The part of Jane Nogood could scarcely have been in better hands than those of Miss Mysie Monte's, and the scene in Hyde Park between her and Kingston, the policeman—well acted by Mr. A. Rushen—called forth deserved applause. As Frances Vere's father Mr. H. W. Monte is excellent; and Mr. Paul Barry-Lewers as the polished villain, Vincent Lyle, is well cast. As the ruined gambler, Philip Armstrong, Mr. Leonard Booker held his audience closely; and in the Circus scene Messrs. Winstanley B. Featherstone, H. Manners, and John Lee, did excellent and useful work, as also did Messrs. Harlee, Wantage, and Atkinson. Mr. Pitsey and Mr. Fortesque made picturesque firemen. The mounting was excellent, and the combined efforts of the well-selected company made the play go with a snap from start to finish.

THE GRAND, FULHAM.

On Monday, Sept. 16, for the first time in London, the Musical Comedy in Three Acts. Written by Owen Trevine and St. John Hamund. Music by Owen Trevine, entitled

All the elements of musical comedy are present in the latest specimen of the class, which was introduced to London on Monday. There are tuneful numbers, merry dialogue, lively dances, and a plot which is easy to follow, and the favourable judgment of Fulham playgoers was shown in continued laughter and many encores. Details of the story were given in our notice of the production at the County, Kingston, on the 26th ult., and all that is needed now is to remind the reader that the piece opens at a ladies' Club in Boston, and passes thence to the Island of Zillaree, where the members of the club take the places of the police force, and are known as the Scarlet Patrol. The island belongs to the fair president of the club, named Amazon North, but by the terms of an eccentric will should she fail to marry a certain Lord Robert Cumberland the property passes from her hands into those of Phineas Fogey, a crafty lawyer. Amazon vows never to submit to such arbitrary dictates, and Phineas does his best to encourage her determination, but the young aristocrat comes to the island in the character of a newspaper correspondent, and meets Amazon with the inevitable result. The greater number of the original exponents of the parts are retained, and must be heartily commended for the spirit and energy which they infuse into their renderings. Mr. Arthur Stigant is a pillar of the cast as Nicholas Quiller, the lawyer's clerk. He exploits quite a fresh vein of eccentricity, and his resources for fun-making are unlimited. A topical song sung in Act II. gains many encores, and the luscious humour of the impersonation is throughout irresistible. A heavy responsibility is also borne by Miss Elise Cooke, who in the rôle of Myra Myrtle, a leading member of the Amazon club, acts and sings in agreeable and animated style. Her admirable voice is utilised in many numbers, chief of which is "Carrie, the Country Girl," a well-written song with a lilting refrain. "The Scarlet Petticoats," a piquant and tuneful lyric, descriptive of the lady police, is also sung by Miss Cooke, whose impersonation is marked by smartness and refinement throughout. Vocal excellence is also supplied by Mr. Leonard Russell, who plays an Irish Inspector of Police, a rôle into which he infuses dignity and no little sly humour. The richness of his voice is revealed in several songs, including one, in praise of Ireland, which is vociferously encored, and "The Night Patrol," a most effective composition, which wins well-deserved approbation. A duet of "Under the Moon," sung in conjunction with Miss Cooke, also gains recognition, the aspects of love before and after marriage being amusingly presented. Mr. St. John Hamund is entitled to every credit for a droll depiction of the lawyer, Phineas Fogey; his rendering of a song in conjunction with the chorus, representative of counsel, being well received. Daintiness and grace distinguish the acting of Miss Reydon Dallas as the heiress, and Mr. J. S. Durant enters thoroughly into the spirit of the rôle of Lord Robert Cumberland, who poses as a journalist. The fun of the piece is added to by Mr. J. H. Bishop, who seizes upon every occasion to create a laugh, and is heard appreciably in his coon song of "Linda Lou," in which the services of a coloured lady are requisitioned. Mr. E. Percy Rogers gives a comic complexion to the part of Mr. Cooper, a London tailor and would-be poet, who lapses unconsciously into rhyme; and Miss Florence Linton is well to the fore as Ernestine, a prominent member of the Amazon Club. Great reliance is placed upon the other members of the cast, who as the Gibson Boys have to become Chinese laundrymen, and the Sabine girls, who emerge into dainty representatives of the Scarlet Patrol, assist loyally to win success. The piece, which is produced under the direction of Mr. Herbert Cottesmore, is elaborately mounted and dressed.

BROADWAY THEATRE, S.E.

On Monday, Sept. 16, the Comedy, entitled
"THE ELDER MISS BLOSSOM."

Mr. and Mrs. Kendal are paying their first visit to this theatre this week with a répertoire consisting of The Elder Miss Blossom, Still Waters Run Deep, and The Ironmaster. The first-named was the attraction on the night of our visit, and the large audience testified their delight by prolonged applause. Mrs. Kendal is at her best as Dorothy Blossom, and her performance is that of a great artist—always natural, unexaggerated, and altogether charming. Mr. Kendal's Andrew Quick is admirable in every respect; Mr. Ernest Hendrie presents a clever portrait of Christopher Blossom; Mr. Bassett Roe sustains his well-won reputation as Major Twentyman; Mr. C. W. Standing is well suited to the character of the Rev. Arthur Leacroft; Mr. R. Burnett is judiciously placed as Tyrol Jones; and the same may be said of Mr. Metcalfe Wood as Withers, the valet; and Mr. W. M. Rutherford as Wells. Miss Jessica Thorne, a clever and attractive young actress, is seen to great advantage as Sophia Blossom; Mrs. A. B. Tapping is a smart and capable Cooper; and Miss Kate Bishop brings her experience to bear on the part of Mrs. Wells with most satisfactory results. The liberal catering of the Broadway management is warmly appreciated by the frequenters of this theatre, which is excellently managed by Mr. William Giffard and his courteous and popular lieutenant, Mr. T. N. Walter.

A copyright performance of a three-act comedy by Cosmo Gordon Lennox and Clyde Fitch, entitled The Smoke and the Fire, was given on Tuesday morning last at the New Theatre.

At the Pavilion Theatre, Mile End, on Monday, a repetition of Mr. S. Feinman's adaptation from Le Maître de Forges, entitled The Woman, was played. Mme. Diana Feinman presented a powerful study of Ada, and Mr. Sigmund Feinman impersonated with striking effect the complex character of Louis Stern. Miss Cecilia Feinman was an engaging Lize, and Mr. B. Sheingold a robust Herman. During the week successful performances have been given of Haman the Second, The Somnambulist, The Witch, Deborah, and The Jewess.

THE A.A. AND TRADE UNIONISM.

The first fortnightly business meeting of the Actors' Association, which took place on Friday, the 13th inst., was devoted to the consideration of trade union principles for the Association. The chair was occupied by Mr. Frederick Morland, and there were also present Miss Blanche de Lorme, Miss Elsie Carew, Miss Cynthia Carewe, Miss Alice Maude, Miss Edith Anton Laing, Miss Barbara Fenn, Mr. Lawson Butt, Mr. Willox Cadogan, Mr. Lewis Casson, Miss Hilda Fletcher, Miss Dorothy Hammond, Miss Cicely Hamilton, Miss Kathleen Russell, Miss Winifred Mayo, Mr. C. F. Collings, Mr. A. M. Seaton, Mr. Reginald Rivington, and Mr. Chas. Cruikshanks (secretary).

The debate was to have been opened by Mr. Roy Horniman, but a telephonic message was received stating that he had been detained by business of serious importance. The Chairman accordingly stepped into the breach, and said the Council in bringing the question before the Association were anxious not to take any step without the knowledge and approval of the members. It was very important not to make any confusion between turning the Association into a trade union and merely working it on trade union lines. In the former case the Association would have to be registered as a trade union, and come under the trade union law. The Association was under the Companies Act, and had a fixed constitution, which could not be altered except by an extraordinary general meeting, and he doubted if it would be possible even at an extraordinary meeting to so alter the constitution of the Association that it could become legally and technically a trade union. In any case, there was no immediate question of the Association becoming technically in law a trade union. It was, however, a perfectly different thing to carry the Association on on trade union lines, and he wanted them to keep that distinction clearly before them. The question, then, was whether the Association of wage-earners should be carried out as such in their interests, or whether the actual wage-earning aspect of the organisation should be comparatively subordinated. The fact of their being in the ordinary sense of the word wage-earners should distinctly be kept in view, and therefore the main object of the Association should be economic, and should be directed towards the improvement of salaries. There were, of course, a very large number of them who found it difficult to earn what was usually called a "living wage," and the Association, being a wage-earning society, should take every possible step to so improve matters that every competent actor should be able to depend on his profession to live in a fair amount of comfort and prosperity. It was often flung in their teeth that the sole and only purpose of a trade union was the organising of strikes and generally making things uncomfortable for the employer, but nobody who read the utterances of men like John Burns and Ben Tillet would doubt that the main object of trade unions in England was to avoid strikes. Therefore, to work the Association on trade union lines did not in the least mean any distinct encouragement of strikes. But while they wanted to emphasise that as clearly as possible, they were not blind to the fact that if a certain number of wage-earners combine together with a view to improve the position and salary of those who are worse paid, there was only one extreme weapon which they could resort to if their just demands were not conceded, and that was the strike. They had to consider the fact that the financial position of the Association made anything like an organised strike absolutely impossible. Therefore, the main purpose of the Actors' Association, carried on on trade union lines as efficient associated wage-earners, must be to lay by as a large reserve fund as possible in order that they might avail themselves of every means of securing a decent living wage. They all devoutly hoped, however, that they would be successful in avoiding strikes. The word "strike" did not actually describe the position so well as "boycott," which was a much more simple and easy thing, for the reason that whereas workers in the provinces could not well leave their wives and families to seek employment in other towns, actors, especially those likely to be involved in a boycott, were not so circumscribed. Were the Association in a better financial position it might be driven to warfare should circumstances make it imperative, but at present extreme measures were not likely to be resorted to. Managers, he was sure, were not necessarily opposed to any attempts the profession might make to improve their economic position; many, indeed, sympathised with the efforts of actors in that work. With regard to the minimum, the Council had established a Minimum Wage Committee, and the question was constantly being brought before the readers of the theatrical newspapers. The Council did not pledge itself to any particular minimum, but it seemed generally agreed that £2 should be the sum. A great many people said it was perfectly absurd that in the minor companies actors playing smaller parts should demand £2. What seemed to him absurd was that for an actor competent to take a part in a piece £2 should be considered too high a wage. An actor appearing in the provinces as a rule thought himself fortunate if he got forty weeks' work in a year, in which case his salary would be £80, and when they were told that £2 was absurdly high for an actor to live, to "dress well on and off," &c., as the advertisements said, it was time for actors to put aside all ideas of the dignity of the art which they followed, and be classed with tailors and plumbers. Every penny must be devoted to strengthening the Association as an association of wage-earners, and all their efforts must be directed to that one object. He hoped his remarks would lead to a discussion by which the Council might be enlightened as to the views of the members on that very important question. He would do his best to urge a trade union policy on the Council, but they did not want to embark on such a course unless sure of support.

Mr. Lewis Casson said his views were entirely in accord with those of Mr. Morland. Their efforts towards improving their position would force individual members into forming a union of their own. Of course, that union did at present exist, but it did very little at present to work together in any matter affecting the economic interests of the actor. The tendency would certainly be to strengthen the Managers' Associations and make them deal with the actor, but there was nothing whatever to fear in that. The manager who worked with the artist through his own Association was much more likely to treat his people well than if he worked as an individual. Most of the trouble with regard to low salaries came, not from the well-known manager, but from the more insignificant one, who did things in a hole-and-corner way, and about whose terms little or nothing was known. Those were the people they had to fear, and they would be more likely to act in a reasonable spirit towards a union. It had been stated that no artistic profession had so far attempted to work as a trade union, but he would point out that the Musicians' Union in America occupied what was in many ways equivalent to a legal status. No one could get into it without a strict examination, and it was impossible for anyone who failed to pass to get an engagement in any respectable theatre in the whole of America. The National Union of Teachers, members of another profession, were organised entirely on trade union lines, and all would agree the art of teaching was just as much separated from the plumber's and carpenter's as was that of the actor. A strike among them was unknown, yet they were able to dictate terms to people who employed them, and in the dispute between the teachers of the elementary schools and the West Ham education authority the teachers won through being backed by their union. It was practically impossible now for actors to strike, whatever they might do in the immediate future. The Association numbered, however, a very considerable proportion of the profession, and were quite strong enough to approach the managers as a representative body of wage-earners as to the formation of a permanent conciliation board, consisting of representatives of the Actors' Association and the Actors' Union, with an independent chairman, together with representatives of the Theatrical Managers' Association and the Touring Managers' Association. Such a board, he was aware, already existed—without, however, the Actors' Union—but he wanted it to go further, and actually settle the terms on which the actors should be employed.

Miss Cicely Hamilton feared the actor in the eyes of the Trade Unions Congress was a great deal below the plumber and carpenter, and belonged to what she believed was described as the parasitic trades—i.e., trades whose members do not earn sufficient to entitle them to be recognised among unionists. She, however, agreed with Mr. Casson as to the necessity of forming a trade union. The great art work of the Middle Ages was done by the old guilds, the trade unions of the period, who produced all the best work.

Miss Winifred Mayo said one great argument in favour of a trade union policy was the increase in the efficiency of work produced. The cotton and other industries of England were the best in the world and their trade unions were the strongest.

The Chairman said he thought he might report to the Council that there was no very strong opposition among those present to a trade union policy so far as the Council could take it up.

Mr. A. M. Seaton entirely disapproved of strikes. He characterised the Variety Artists' Federation strike as a howling failure, in which everybody concerned suffered. Where, too, was the strength of the Association for trade union purposes? The actor's profession was a precarious one from beginning to end, and all the trade unionism in the world would not alter it.

Mr. C. F. Collings also spoke, and a vote of thanks to Mr. Morland concluded the meeting.

Tea was served an hour preceding the meeting, Miss Winifred Mayo presiding.

PLAY WRITING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Whatever lecture may be ultimately addressed to students of stage-craft, they can be little more than amplifications of two statements in your recent leader, unless the lecturer strays into by-paths of prejudice. You say, "It (playwriting) is a question of the raw material, which we call life, passing through temperament, and being converted in passing to certain uses. . . . The only education which can be satisfactory is a constant study of the best materials."

With your permission I will use the quotation as a sort of charge for an imaginary motor, and drive at once, in company with incipient dramatists, through certain parts of life where there is always plenty of unused raw material.

I must assume that my companions are lookers-on at dramatic evolution in life, as well as actors in human drama. That they are keen, instinctively keen, observers of natural logic—cause, process, consequence. That they are not under the domination of "precedent," but respect it. That humdrum events are to them significant of great happenings. That by the use of mental X-rays they can see into the "heart of things." That they find men and women to be lovable beneath various circumstantial aspects, and conventional attractions or repulsions. That they look into their own hearts frequently, and therefore know what are the main qualities of man with their shadows ("defects of his qualities"), and know that if Nature is a "dear old nurse," she is also a severe one, and never blabs divine secrets, though she hints at them often. That her pains and penalties are for selfish blunderers, and her prizes are for obedience to her behests. That artifice is not art, and trickiness is not technique.

Without the preliminary knowledge here indicated there is no capacity for working up raw material. Playwrights of the stage-carpenter type may, and often do, do excellent work, of the "hot cakes" order, by manufacturing shoddy from rags discarded by greater men. Our hope is not in manufacturers, but in artists.

As motoring tourists pass through many varieties of country, up hill and down dale, along stretches of level road and over zigzag and uneven ways, so mental travellers must expect to fare. Too much anxiety about the "machine" will prevent our enjoyment of the scenery, and therefore hinder us from seeing its dramatic possibilities. That anxiety must be removed. Then we discover that surface life is ugly or beautiful, according, largely, to its place in the "scheme of things." Deep down there is much similarity in Nature—animate and inanimate. On life's surface the sources of comedy, tragedy, and of all that partakes of drama, are "in the air," so to speak—sun and shower, heat and cold, calm and storm.

These furnish raw material for easily-understood plays. Plays that will be great or little, as is the mind in which they were conceived. It is not magnitude of subject that suffices for great drama, but largeness of vision in the writer.—Yours faithfully, RAD YORKE.

After a long and tedious Sunday journey, the bane of the pro.'s life when on tour, how welcome the bottle of "Whitbread's" (that the thoughtful landlady has got in overnight) when we arrive, fagged out, hungry, and thirsty, at our humble digs! And what a debt of gratitude is due to the enterprising firm of brewers whose name is a household word throughout the United Kingdom for the facilities they have afforded the traveller of being able to obtain, almost anywhere, a draught of good, honest, English beer, in perfect condition by natural process, free from that nauseating taste so common amongst the bottled beers matured artificially. Messrs. Whitbread have a wonderful system of business; they have built it up in the provinces by the establishment of depôts in so many of the principal towns as follows, viz., at Brighton, D'Avigdor-road, Hove; Birmingham, Crown Brewery, King Edward's-place, and Curzon Hall Vaults; Bradford, G.N.Ry., Preston-street; Cardiff, East Wharf; Glasgow, 434, New City-road; Hull, The Boulevard, Anlaby-road; Kingston, on-Thames, Ceres-road; Lewisham, 170, Lewisham-road; Liverpool, 13 and 15, Pall Mall; Leicester, Wimbledon-street; Leeds, The Calls; Manchester, 10, 11, 12, and 13, Store-street; Manor Park, Romford-road; Nottingham, L. and N.W.Ry., Manvers-street; Newport, Mon., Lloyd-street, Liswerry; Newport, Isle of Wight, Wighthall Brewery, Quay-street; Norwich, Abbey-lane, King-street; Northampton, Newland; Newcastle, The Arches, Orchard-street; Poole, Hill-street; Ramsgate, Hereson-road; Preston, Marsh-lane; Sheffield, 3, 4, and 5, Navigation-hill; Southend, Guildford-road; Tottenham, Bell Brewery; Willesden, Scrubbs-lane; from all of which the grocers in the other towns and villages around are kept well supplied with their famous bottled stout and ales. They have, during this last twelvemonth, opened depôts at Brussels (2, Quai Du Chantier) and Antwerp (25, Rue Marnix), so the performer, even on a Continental engagement in Belgium, will be able to obtain his favourite beverage at all the principal cafés in Brussels, Antwerp, and all other principal towns in Belgium, at very reasonable prices.

Matinées of Fiander's Widow at the Garrick Theatre are now being given every Saturday in addition to those on Wednesday.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The story told by Mr. G. Carlton Wallace in The Lancashire Lad, produced on Monday at the Victoria Theatre, Broughton, is developed along popular lines of melodrama, but with the distinction that the villain of the play becomes a reformed character under the elevating influence of the heroine. Max Carton, the rogue in question, has wrongful possession of mills, which belong really to David Elmore, the Lancashire lad. Both men are in love with Jessie Wincote, whose choice lies with David, a selection which in ordinary drama would give rise to the most bitter and jealous enmity on the part of the rejected suitor, Carton, however, is not made of very sinister stuff, though his conduct has been questionable. He is beset by Lorna Wincote, wife of Jessie's brother Jem. She it is who embodies the really villainous element. A discarded mistress of Carton, her jealousy and hatred of Jessie lead her to inveigle the latter into a situation which compromises her with Carton in Elmore's eyes. Not satisfied with separating the lovers—Elmore sending Jessie away from him in unmerited shame, a shame she suffers for her brother's sake—Lorna foists upon her husband, Jem, a crime which she has herself committed, and for which he is compelled to fly for his life to the shelter of a ruined abbey in the neighbourhood. Carton, to celebrate his righteous renunciation of the mills to Elmore, treats everybody to a holiday at Blackpool, and this leads to a long interlude on one of the piers, in the course of which a number of acceptable songs are introduced. The thread of the story is taken up when Lorna makes a passionate appeal to Carton to take her back again to his heart. Finding herself spurned, she enlists the help of a willing coster, who, for ten pounds, will seize Jessie in a cloak and throw her into the sea. Foiled again, however, by the appearance of Carton and Elmore, she stabs Carton in the back and throws vitriol in the eyes of the Lancashire lad, and upon the reappearance of the crowd ascribes the double crime to Jessie. From the consequences of this, however, Jessie is saved by the intervention of John Willie Wardle, a cheerful village carpenter, who has seen the whole business from a convenient hiding-place. In the subsequent evolution of the plot Lorna is hunted by the angry villagers, and finally arrives, exhausted and terrified, at the cottage where Jessie is nursing Elmore's eyesight back again. Jessie, after severe reproaches, is induced to give her shelter, on condition that Lorna reveals the whereabouts of the fugitive, Jem; learning which Jessie goes forth to take food and drink to her starving brother. In the meantime the coster aforementioned has persuaded the people that Jessie is the real murderess and vitriol-thrower, and the upshot is an expedition of the people, headed by Lorna and the coster, to the abbey ruins, so that Jessie may be executed by means of the rope there and then. The scene in which the attempt takes place is effective; but Nemesis is at hand in the shape of police, Jem Wincote, and David Elmore. The latter denounces the true culprit, and Jem seizes an opportunity to strangle her, which he does before he can be torn away.

As Jessie Wincote, Miss Gertrude Sterroll acted with intelligence and quiet charm; and Miss Florence Dalton furnished a highly-effective contrast as the passionate and unscrupulous Lorna. Mr. Henry Wolston's David Elmore was distinguished by a manly and vigorous impersonation, well subordinated to the situation of the later scenes; and as Max Carton, Mr. Graham Winsford played with a careful understanding of the rôle. One of the best characters is that of Jem Wincote, which was capitally rendered by Mr. Jo Monkhouse (also responsible for the comedy character of Prof. Napoleon Boulanger, a showman on the pier); and much acceptable humour was supplied by Mr. Harry Rousby as John Willie Wardle and Miss Nellie Rene as Jane Alice Clitheroe. As Mother Wardle, Miss Harriet Russell gave a good sketch of a typical Lancashire housewife; and some smart vocalism and dancing were contributed by Miss Alice Williams as Kitty de Vere. All the minor parts were passably well handled, and the staging left nothing to be desired.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, Sept. 16, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Frank Bateman, entitled "SENTENCED FOR LIFE."

This play has been most favourably received in Marylebone this week, and its success was quite deserved. Mr. W. Bradford brought the rascalities of Captain Paul Derrick well to the fore; Mr. Conrad Heywood was earnestly impressive as Lieut. Roy Stillwell; Mr. Terence Hyde conscientiously enacted the Rev. Parson Orris, and Mr. Harry Cooke made the hit of the evening with his really clever impersonation of Percy M'Gentle. Whilst he was on the stage the interest never flagged for a single moment, and his emphatic success was unmistakable. Mr. Harry Pyne Warburton as Bill Sharkey and Mr. Reg Oldroyd as Toby were also responsible for a good deal of healthy fun. Miss Maud Warburton imparted much distinction to the rôle of Adele Gray; Miss Mabel Tremere was well placed as Kate Rennel; Miss Mary Dalley was a most painstaking Lady Stillwell; whilst Miss Kitty Huntley did exceedingly well as Lady Gray. Several of the minor characters were skilfully handled, and mention might be made of the Sir Wallace Stillwell of Mr. Brancepeth-Nevill and the Henry Beckworth of Mr. Howard Keane.

ACTORS' UNION.

LONDON.

Mr. Arthur Bawtree presided at the usual weekly meeting of the Actors' Union, held on Tuesday afternoon at the Bedford Head. There was not a large gathering, owing, no doubt, to the fact that so many members of the Union are fulfilling engagements in the provinces, but amongst those present were Messrs. Roy Barraclough, A. E. Johnstone, Arthur Bawtree, Arthur St. John, J. W. Braithwaite, Ewart Drake, Watty Brunton, Carl Lyle, Herbert M. Laidman, R. C. Forster, Walter Bishop, Charles Durie, E. J. Carlin, Oswald Marshall, Albert Wainwright, Frank Fairley, Edwin Ramsdale, Mr. Kenneth Blackmore (secretary), and Mesdames Louie L'Estrange, Gertrude Harrison, Helen Vicary, Kitty Marion, Adelaide Gracey, May Conrade, J. W. Braithwaite, Gertrude Tate, Gertie Fawcett, Gladys Ffolliott, Helene Forest, Bessie Armitage, Nellie Howitt, and Adeline Mercandalli.

The Chairman stated that it had been decided that ladies should not serve on the general committee, but that a sub-committee should be formed, to consist exclusively of members of the fair sex. He had to ask the lady members to send in their names to the secretary and to notify him of their willingness to act on that body. Any grievances they had could be discussed between themselves, and then could be brought before the general executive. Speaking to all the members, he begged them to organise and to attend meetings when on tour. He regretted to find when he paid a visit to Portsmouth the other day that, although a room had been placed at their disposal, no meeting had been called or attended, and no stamps had been sold. The worst thing they had to fight was apathy. It was their deadliest enemy. They should tell their brother and sister artists that the Union was not formed for the purpose of slaughtering the managers. When they became a powerful body, whatever improvements they brought about, or in whatever way they ameliorated the lot of the actor, the results would be just as beneficial to the managers as to the actors. Managers would know, when they engaged an artist who was a member of the Union, that they had a strong hold over that artist. One thing the Actors' Union could do, and that was to eradicate the shady and dishonourable behaviour of certain artists.

Miss Gladys Ffolliott, speaking as to the necessity of a union for actors and actresses, referred to the abuses which were taking place in the profession. The only weapon with which they could fight and vanquish these abuses was a big and powerful body, such as a Trade Union. Until some remedial measures were taken, matters would become worse and worse. Why should they be treated in a manner that the ordinary mistress of a house dare not employ in her relations with her cook? But actors and actresses had only their own supineness to blame for such treatment. They had hitherto been afraid of showing fight. There had recently been passed a law by which they were as much entitled to benefit as the window-cleaner or the domestic servant. If any one of them in the course of his or her employment was injured, the employer would have to look after the ailing person. This meant, of course, that managers had to insure against such risks, according to the salary of the artist. What had happened? Certain managers compelled the members of their companies to pay 10s. each for purposes of insurance. In fact, some managers were actually fattening on fees obtained in this way, and then, when artists were taken ill, or injured, no salary or compensation was paid to them! On another point, she thought it would be an excellent thing if there could be an Actors' Union Day Fund. From time to time they gave money to brother and sister artists who were temporarily down on their luck, and it would be well if in future similar amounts of money were sent direct to the Union. She, herself, would be pleased to start a kind of provident fund by handing a piece of gold to the secretary.

The Chairman, after directing attention to the fact that numerous subscriptions remained unpaid, asked his hearers to regard the Union as their dearest friend. He would mention, before bringing the meeting to a close, that a dinner would be held on Sunday week, the 29th inst., at seven o'clock, at the Boulogne Restaurant in Gerrard-street, which would be made the occasion of a little celebration of the successful six months' existence of the Actors' Union. Tickets for the dinner could be purchased for 2s. 6d., and he (the chairman) trusted that all who could assist in the musical programme which was to follow would send in their names to the secretary.

Mr. Arthur St. John deplored the jealousy which had created so much bad feeling in the profession. He was of opinion that members of the Actors' Union should be able to get employment at the Trades' Union clubs all over London.

"GIRL FROM JAPAN" AT DOVER.

The fact that The Girl from Japan first started her illustrious career at the Theatre Royal, Dover, some three years ago is only one of the reasons accounting for the large audiences attending this, the first week of the new tour by Messrs. Henry Swinerd and J. W. Cordiner's company. For the others, a cast of exceptional strength, new dresses of much magnificence, pretty scenery, a bevy of prepossessing chorus girls, and a previous acquaintance with the tuneful music, explains the source of attraction. Monday night's performance was smoothly stage-managed, and the audience either kept in continual laughter or were rapturously applauding from the rise to the fall of the curtain. Mr. Cordiner has done wisely in retaining Mr. George Hudson for the part of Lord Allenbury. His fine voice and the sincerity of his acting, enlivened with a touch of genuine comedy, make a performance of more than ordinary interest. The daintiness and charm of Miss Florence Wilton's voice and manner are eminently suited to the rôle of Violet Meadows (the girl from Japan), a part which relies chiefly on the personality of the actress for its effectiveness. Miss Janet Lawton is, vocally and artistically, a conspicuous success as Polly Perkins, and her musical items are rendered with a verve and swing that invariably win a recall. Miss M. Sadie' sprightly comedy and good stage presence suit well the rôle of Maud, and her flying machine song, "Up we'll go," bids fair to become one of the most popular numbers. Miss Nellie Parker Dent, in her old part of Lady Flippington, causes no end of laughter for her amusing impersonation, which is really a clever piece of character acting. Another funny portrayal is that of the Rev. John Smith by Mr. Ernest Spaling, an energetic and droll comedian, who extracts every ounce of humour from the character. Mr. H. Buckstone Clair admirably enacts that "gay old dog," Sir Mulberry Flippington, and his performance throughout reaches a high standard of excellence. The elderly beau and military hero, General Baugh, is again played with commendable skill by Mr. Percy Baverstock; Mr. James Salter keeps the ball of fun rolling continuously as Bingle, his quick change of dress, voice, and deportment being smartly effected. Mr. Ted D. Dennis also contributes to the merriment by his humorous embodiment of Horatio Binks. Some expert and graceful dances are given by the Misses Daisy Cane and Edna Corri, and the chorus, numbering forty, are both excellent dancers and powerful vocalists. Mr. H. Buckstone Clair produced the comedy. The augmented orchestra is under the able direction of Mr. Alan D'Albert; Mr. F. Berger is responsible for the excellently-worked electrical arrangements; and the tasteful costumes were made by Mme. Eleanor.

A WORD FOR THE STAGE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—The article entitled "Why I Failed on the Stage," which recently appeared in the Grand Magazine, is one of the most scathing indictments of the dramatic profession that has ever appeared in print. Every sentence is a sneer, and every paragraph an accusation; indeed, so sweeping is it in its wholesale denunciation that one can but feel surprise that so far it has been allowed to pass practically unchallenged.

I do not for a moment intend to question the good faith of the writer of the article—I am content to take her word that she has spoken the truth and nothing but the truth; but I have no hesitation in saying that her experience and the series of circumstances that have led her to write so bitterly were altogether out of the common, and can no more be taken as typical than the abnormal creatures of Ibsen's plays can be accepted as true types of the world we live in.

My mother was an actress, so were her sisters. I have relatives on the stage at the present time, and many friends; I am myself a humble member of the profession; so I think I may fairly claim to know something of my subject, and my knowledge is not of a few years, but of a lifetime.

I quote now from the article in question:—

"For six long years I foolishly imagined that a woman might earn an honest living in a calling known as the dramatic profession."

And again:—

"The vast majority of the others who succeed have to pay a heavy price for their laurels, promotion, more often than not, being at the cost of all a true woman holds most dear."

This is a terrible accusation, and a cruel slur on the hundreds of women who can and do earn an honourable living on the stage. I am speaking of the rank and file of the profession—the hard-working provincial actresses and the conscientious players of small parts in London—to those "who stand in honoured places on the summit," "An Actress" does generously accord a full measure of morality and self-respect; they do not need defence; they are the exceptions who prove the shameless depravity of the rest!

To write in such a strain is folly. No profession could be allowed to exist under such conditions at this era of the world's history. "An Actress" is a little out in her mental view of things. She has pictured to herself the morals and manners of the Regency, and fancied she saw their reflex in her own surroundings. There are many things in connection with the stage that call for reformation, but it does not deserve the withering condemnation she has meted out to it.

Our "Actress" came upon the stage without training of any kind; she had everything to learn; and acting is not learned in a day, or a year, or many years; and there is no doubt that £1 a week was full value for her untrained services. It probably seemed a small sum to her, fresh from the comforts of a country home; but a great many girls just beginning their career do contrive to live upon it, honestly and morally, with perhaps a little assistance from relatives or parents, and so gain their professional training. The writer of the article had cut herself off from these home supplies on which most girls fresh to the stage are able to rely until they have gained a little experience, and with it a rise of salary; but at the end of six years she leaves the profession into which she had flung herself so recklessly, and proclaims that she has failed to earn a living as an actress because she would not buy success by immoral means.

Did it never occur to her that other causes besides her rigid morality may have militated against her advancement on the stage? Causes such as lack of opportunity to prove her talent in suitable parts—parts not only suited to her personally, but good enough to make her remembered; a small part, however well played, is apt to be overlooked or quickly forgotten. And there is another and most potent reason that may have led to her failure and to the success of others—the possession of that subtle, indefinable something that is called "dramatic instinct." Without it you may be a respectable mediocrity and earn a bare living, but nothing more; with it, you may achieve anything, for if your opportunity comes, you have in you the wherewithal to meet and make the most of it. Was this her case, I wonder? A woman is not always the best judge of her own capabilities.

She also seems to have wilfully placed herself in positions she was bound to find unpleasant. Why, for instance, if she so thoroughly objected to appear on the stage in tights, did she apply for an engagement in musical comedy? I note that she afterwards swallowed her scruples, and appeared in both musical comedy and pantomime! I have had very little experience of either, but I know that the weekly "audition," or interviewing candidates for engagements is the most business-like affair imaginable. The following is not a fancy picture, but an account of the actual experience of a girl of eighteen, who hopes to earn her living as a dancer.

Scene.—A London Theatre, entirely devoted to musical comedy.

Dramatis Persona.—The young lady in question, who had received an intimation that she might present herself at the audition.

On giving her name at the stage door she was at once shown into the green room, where about sixty girls were already assembled. The call-boy handed to each a printed form, which had to be filled up with the candidate's name and address, quality of voice, if a singer, and, in all cases, height. These forms were presently collected, and a few moments later the audition began. Four names at a time were called from a list, and the owners conducted on to the stage, where the pianist was ready at the piano, and a gentleman seated at a table with a pile of filled-in papers before him. One after another, as quickly as possible, the candidates sang or danced—sometimes stopped after a few bars, by the listener at the table, sometimes heard to the end or asked to sing again.

"Thank you, that will do," said Mr. ——'s representative, making a note as each girl finished on the form bearing her name, "you will hear from us by letter." Four others were ready to take their turn as the first four left the stage, and so the audition proceeded.

No one was allowed to stand about the stage or in the wings, or to remain in the theatre after they had been seen and heard. It is at these auditions that the chorus is filled up, and dancers chosen for new editions or productions.

I am sure anyone connected with the management of a musical comedy theatre will vouch for the truth of this, and I ask my readers if there is anything to offend the most delicate susceptibilities. If there is, I must confess I cannot see it. In branding the dramatic profession as one in which it is impossible to earn enough to live and retain one's self-respect, the writer of "Why I Failed on the Stage" does a monstrous injustice both to the stage as a profession and to those who follow it. I maintain that her unhappy experience was not typical, but exceptional in every way; that the great majority of women who make their living on the stage have feelings no less fine than her own, and regard life and its obligations from as high a standpoint.

She speaks of returning to the stage should it ever be "reformed." Perhaps in preparation for that time she will ponder the words of Paul the Apostle, and learn a little of that charity which "thinketh no evil."—Yours faithfully,

AN UNDERSTUDY.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM has had the trouble to write and explain that the extract from a Parisian paper which the Tribune recently copied and commented on contained an important misrepresentation. What really happened was that Sir Charles was standing outside the Théâtre Français, when a gentleman accosted him, and in the course of conversation asked him whether he did not think that the English stage was financially in a very bad condition. To this query Sir Charles's answer was to the effect that he thought it very satisfactory. The gentleman next referred to the regrettable fact that classical or serious plays were not so acceptable to the English public as they were to the French, and challenged Sir Charles to deny or explain it. Sir Charles agreed with him, and ascribed the possible frivolity of English public taste to the possible popularity in the past of musical comedy. With this the conversation ended. "Neither during the conversation nor afterwards," says Sir Charles, "did I realise that I was being interviewed. Perhaps I was foolish, but one always gets so innocent when one goes to Paris."

SIR CHARLES has returned greatly invigorated from his holiday, and has resumed rehearsals, together with Miss Mary Moore, of The Mollusc, the new comedy, by Hubert Henry Davies, which is to have its production shortly at the Criterion. In addition to Mr. Davies's play, Sir Charles has also in his possession, and will eventually produce, a new piece entitled Bellamy the Magnificent, by Roy Horniman, whose Education of Elizabeth is shortly to figure on the stage of the Apollo.

MR. OTHO STUART has consented to act as judge at the British Empire Shakespeare Society's annual elocution competition, which will take place at the Court Theatre at 3 p.m. on Monday, Oct. 28. The preliminary qualifying examination will be held at the same theatre at 2.30 p.m., on Monday, Oct. 21. The list of entries closes on Oct. 1.

MR. BEERBOHM TREE, who began his tour last week at the Theatre Royal, Birmingham, in a lengthy repertory including two Shakespearean productions and several modern plays, successfully resisted the sudden advent of summer, the theatre being crowded throughout the week. Mr. Tree's days are devoted to rehearsals of Mr. Locke's new play, The Beloved Vagabond, which is to see the light at Dublin in October. Among the new members of Mr. Tree's company is Mr. Claude Flemming, an actor well known in Australia and the United States, who is now appearing for the first time in this country.

MR. WEEDON GROSSMITH will celebrate the 2,000th performance of The Night of the Party on Monday, Sept. 30, when he starts his tour at the Coronet. An entirely new set of scenery is being prepared, and the piece will be staged as thoroughly as if it were a West-end production. In addition to Mr. Grossmith, the cast will comprise Misses Roxy Barton, Annie Hill, Esme Beringer, Muriel Mason, Marion Ashworth, and Margaret Marshall, and Messrs. Henry Stephenson, W. T. Lovell, Hubert Druce, Frank H. Denton, Robson Paige, W. R. Staveley, Sebastian Smith, John Mason, Gerald Bruce, H. Tims, and E. Curb.

MR. PHILIP COOPER, a member of the Earl and the Girl company, now playing in Sheffield, invited a select party of friends to supper on Monday night, and provided an appetising spread. When Mr. Cooper arrived with his guests, however, he found he had been anticipated, and all the viands had disappeared. Burglars had been there before him, and, taking advantage of the absence of the landlord and landlady, who had gone to the "second house" at the Empire, had entered the place through an unlatched window of the back kitchen, and appropriated whatever they could conveniently carry away, even the sheets and quilts of the beds.

The thieves opened two large portmanteaus in Mr. Cooper's room, and extracted all that they contained, with the exception of a few shillings thrust away in a side pocket. "They took my all," said Mr. Cooper. "I've absolutely nothing but what I stand up in. They even carried off my South African medal. I went through that war with the Duke of Edinburgh's Mounted Rifles and Warren's Mounted Infantry." Another member of the same company lodging in the house was more fortunate. His waistcoat and boots were missing, and the blankets on the bed had been taken off and folded ready for carrying away; but at this point the burglars had evidently been disturbed, and decamped. The robbery and impromptu supper party proceeded so quietly that two children who were asleep in an adjoining bedroom were not awakened.

MR. MULHOLLAND'S new theatre at Wimbledon will be enhanced by several features of a novel kind, the most notable of which will probably be found in the construction of the auditorium, which, instead of being the usual square-shaped space having parallel walls, will be built in the form of a fan, so that while the width immediately by the stage boxes will be just over sixty feet, it gradually increases to just on ninety at the back of the pit. The obvious effect of this bold departure from the orthodox will be an improvement in the sight lines and an enormous increase in the holding capacity, while the cosy appearance of a medium-sized theatre will be preserved. In fact, without looking any larger than Mr. Mulholland's fine King's Theatre, the projected house will hold nearly a thousand persons more, which means something approaching an aggregate of 4000.

THE first provincial performance of Mr. Martin Harvey's new production, Great Possessions, occurred last Monday night at the Theatre Royal, Newcastle-on-Tyne, in the presence of one of the most brilliant audiences ever gathered in a Newcastle theatre. The play was received with enthusiastic applause, and there is no doubt that its unusual character, coupled with its exquisite setting and the nobility of its theme, will combine to give it a very high place in the regard of country playgoers. Mr. Harvey is so much encouraged by the reception accorded to Herr Rössler's work that he has decided to present it on four occasions both at Glasgow and Edinburgh, and Great Possessions will be the attraction when the popular actor opens at the Lyceum Theatre in the latter town on Monday.

MR. J. E. VEDRENNE has decided that the opening of the New Queen's Theatre in Shaftesbury-avenue shall be postponed a week, in order that every detail of the new house may be fully completed. The date of the production of The Sugar Bowl with which the new theatre will be inaugurated will therefore be Tuesday, Oct. 8. The length to which Mr. Vedrenne has gone to ensure the comfort and convenience of his audience is indicated in the fact that at the back of each chair is fitted a capacious bag, in which opera-glasses, fans, and hats may be deposited. Mr. Herbert Sleath has secured Mr. Frederick Kerr for the principal man's part. Miss Ellis Jeffreys, as we have stated, will play the leading rôle, and the cast will also include Miss Beatrice Ferrar and Mr. Charles Sugden. Mr. J. E. Vedrenne has appointed Mr. B. A. Meyer to be acting-manager of his new theatre.

MR. OSCAR ASCHE and Miss Lily Brayton, in conformity with their original intention, are rehearsing As You Like It for presentation before their season at His Majesty's closes. The production promises to be one of remarkable beauty, the setting including five different views of the Forest of Arden. Miss Brayton's representation of Rosalind will be awaited with interest, and further engaging studies will be those of Mr. Henry Ainley as Orlando and Mr. Oscar Asche as Jacques. Mr. Alfred Brydone will play old Adam, and Miss Muriel Ashwynne, Celia, and Mr. Courtice Pounds as Touchstone will sing "The Cuckoo" and "Too-whit" songs from Love's Labour Lost, and join in the duet, "It was a lover and his lass.' A copy of the acting version of the comedy, containing portraits of Miss Brayton and Mr. Asche, will be presented as a souvenir of the opening performance.

THE Irving Club, Liverpool, has recently welcomed a number of distinguished members of the theatrical profession into its ranks. Among its latest adherents are Mr. Beerbohm Tree, Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Hicks (Miss Ellaline Terriss), Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bourchier (Miss Violet Vanbrugh), Mr. and Mrs. James Carew (Miss Ellen Terry), Mr. Arthur W. Pinero, and Mr. Charles Santley. Sir Edward Moss and Mr. J. M. Barrie are life members of the club, the secretary of which is Mr. W. L. Wright, of 14, Moor-place, Liverpool.

MR. LAWRENCE IRVING is evidently determined to adhere to the original title for the new play which he has written for Mr. E. H. Sothern, for it was copyrighted at the Court Theatre on Thursday, under the title of The Inheritance of the Meek. The alternative title was the more clumsy one of The Fool Hath Said in His Heart, There is No God. The piece is to be produced at Chicago on Sept. 23. The authbr took part in the performance on Thursday, and the other principals were Miss Mabel Hackney (Mrs. Lawrence Irving), Miss Ethelwyn Arthur-Jones, Miss M. Murray, Miss Florence Adale, Mr. Chas. V. France, Mr. Leonard Calvert, Mr. Herbert Grimwood, and Mr. Reginald Eyre.

WE regret to announce that Mr. Greene Taylor died in the General Hospital, Birmingham, on Thursday, Sept. 12. Mr. Taylor had been suffering from enlargement of the heart for some time, and the malady becoming serious he was received into the General Hospital, Birmingham, where he died suddenly from heart failure. He was buried at the Church of England Cemetery, Birmingham, on Sunday last. Wreaths were sent by Messrs. Greet and Engelbach and the Messrs. Gatti, and also by William Greet's principal Earl and the Girl, of which Mr. Taylor had long been a member.

MISS CARLOTTA ZERBINI has resumed at the Palace Theatre her original part of Mrs. Simmons, in That Brute Simmons, and is meeting with great success. Miss Zerbini, it will be remembered, played the part for the entire run at the New and Haymarket Theatres.

MR. FARREN SOUTAR and a powerful company, including Messrs. Charles Allan, Walter Pearce, Alban Atwood, and Miss Lilias Waldegrave, are shortly starting a brief tour of a new farcical comedy by Russell Vaun and Alban Atwood. The piece is designed for eventual London production.

THE gentlemen of Mr. Charles Macdona's Toreador company played the Pontypridd Cricket Club on the 11th inst., and were beaten by a few runs only. Mr. Goodwin Woodward, the manager of The Toreador company, then arranged a match between the winning team and the ladies of the company. The gentlemen bowled and fielded left-handed, and were easily beaten, great amusement being derived from the contest by an interested crowd.

THE inmates of the Mansfield Workhouse were given on Saturday afternoon last a free opportunity of witnessing at the Hippodrome a performance of Mr. Darnley's new play, A Mother's Sacrifice, by invitation of Messrs. Darnley and Jennings. Various tradesmen of the town provided the inmates with tobacco, sweets, bananas, ærated waters, and packets of tea. The guests had a very enjoyable time, and passed a hearty vote of thanks to Messrs. Darnley and Jennings.

MR. ALFRED LESTER returns to the theatres again next Easter to create a principal comedy part in a West End production. He concludes this week at Blackpool a most successful variety tour of his monologues and duologues, and opens at the Palace Theatre, Shaftesbury Avenue, on Monday next, with a new version of his very funny skit, A Restaurant Episode, the duologue which the critics have so unanimously praised. He will be supported by Miss Florence Wakeman, a clever and pretty young actress of French extraction.

MR. ALAN MACKINNON and the Countess of Lathom are arranging an amateur performance of Under the Red Robe, in celebration of the anniversary in October of the opening of the Tunbridge Wells Opera House. The occasion is also to serve for a complimentary benefit to Mr. Welton Dale.

THE Crystal Palace Theatre, which started its dramatic season so auspiciously last week, will have as its attraction on Monday the famous play Sherlock Holmes, with Mr. H. Hamilton Stewart in his clever impersonation of the detective. There will be a matinée on Wednesday and Saturday, but, owing to the Brass Band Festival, no performance will be given in the evenings of those days.

MESSRS. VEDRENNE AND BARKER have selected a number of popular artists for Mr. John Galsworthy's new comedy, Joy, which will be produced at the Savoy on the afternoon of Tuesday, Sept. 24, and repeated at a series of Tuesday and Friday matinées. The cast will consist of Mr. A. E. George, Miss Henrietta Watson, Miss Florence Haydon, Miss Mary Barton, Mr. Frederick Lloyd, Miss Wynne Matthison, Miss Dorothy Minto, Mr. Allan Wade, Mr. Thalberg Corbett, and Miss Amy Lamborn.

MR. HUGH WRIGHT, an exceptionally clever comedian of the Harry Fragson type, with a distinctly reminiscent touch of the late Dan Leno, has been specially engaged for the Dame in the Maundy-Gregory pantomime. The principal boy comes direct from the most prominent theatres and variety houses of New York.

MISS GERTRUDE HARRISON, who is playing Cora in The Fatal Wedding at Dalston next week, was one of the principal sufferers from the burglary which took place at the Carlton Theatre, Birmingham, last week. Her boxes were ransacked and jewellery and money stolen.

MR. GERRARD GRANT ALLEN'S production of The Knave of Hearts at the Royalty, Glasgow, on Monday resulted in success instantaneous and complete. The striking plot of Miss Gladys Unger's clever piece, which recalls the most theatrically effective scenes of Leah Kleschna and Raffles, is referred to elsewhere in our columns, and will be found to contain dramatic scenes of great distinction. The local Press, as well as many London papers, are unanimous in praise of the piece, and all agree that Miss Nina Sevening, who plays the heroine, has made a distinguished hit; while Mr. H. A. Sainsbury and others of the strong company have also scored powerfully. At the close of the performance Mr. Allen led the authoress on the stage, and was obliged to acknowledge the clamorous calls for a speech.

THE Italian Opera season at Covent Garden will begin on Thursday, Oct. 3, and will last eight weeks, during which eighteen works will be produced. The novelty of the season will be Franchetti's Germania, which was originally produced at La Scala, Milan. Puccini will be represented four times, namely, in Manon Lescaut, La Bohème, Madama Butterfly, and Tosca, and Verdi appears thrice on the list, his works consisting of Rigoletto, Aida, and Traviata. The rest of the programme will comprise Adriana Lecouvreur (Cilea), Don Giovanni (Mozart), Mefistofele (Boito), Carmen (Bizet), Faust (Gounod), Gioconda (Ponchielli), Pagliacci (Leoncavallo), Andrea Chenier (Giordano), Cavalleria (Mascagni), and Fedora (Giordano). The conductors will be Signor Panizza and Signor Serafin.

MANY of our readers will be sorry to hear of the death of Mr. Henry Nicholson, the eminent flautist, which took place at his residence on the Hinckley-road, Leicester, on Saturday morning last, at the advanced age of 83. Mr. Nicholson was well known and highly respected in the musical world, and also numbered among his personal friends the late Mr. J. L. Toole and Sir Henry Irving. Mr. Nicholson was present at Mr. Sims Reeves' first appearance in 1847, and for a considerable time acted as his manager.

FOR a great number of years the deceased musician carried on grand concerts at Leicester, and under his management all the famous instrumentalists and vocalists appeared. After sixty-two years of professional life the veteran retired on November 24, 1898, a grand farewell concert being given at the Temperance Hall, Leicester. During his career the deceased gentleman has received many testimonials from actors, vocalists, and public societies. Inscribed in his flute case are the names of many theatrical and musical celebrities. The funeral service took place at St. Mary's Church, Leicester, on Tuesday afternoon, and was attended by a large number of representative public men.

PECKHAM playgoers will be specially favoured during the week beginning Sept. 30, when Mr. Wentworth Croke will present Hall Caine's stirring drama, The Prodigal Son, at the Crown. The production is direct from Drury Lane, and is enhanced by all new scenery, dresses, and effects. A first-class company has been secured regardless of expense.

A SIMILARLY powerful attraction, for which Mr. Wentworth Croke's enterprise is responsible will be presented the same week, at the Fulham Theatre, where the superb drama, The Bondman, by Hall Caine, will be played. The production is also direct from Drury Lane, and new scenery, dresses, and effects are commensurate with the associations of the National Theatre. Miss Grace Chalmers plays the part of Greeba.

MR. AND MRS. WHITTY reopened their Batley Theatre on Monday. During the closure the theatre has undergone a complete transformation, being redecorated and relighted throughout. The lamps used in the electric installation are of the very newest pattern, the order being the first delivery by the makers. Electric experts have expressed the opinion that the lamp will create a revolution in electric lighting.

MESSRS. ARMITAGE AND LEIGH have decided to produce their new play, With Edged Tools, dramatised by Mr. H. Armitage from Henry Seton Merriman's novel of that name, in February next at the Theatre Royal, Hull. Miss Haidee Wright will appear in the cast, along with Messrs. Hamilton Deane and Campbell Goldsmid, and Miss Marie Leonhard.

MR. CHARLES FRY has resumed his lessons at his private studio, 58, Berners Street. Mr. Fry numbers among his pupils artists now well known to fame. Among the most conspicuous in public favour may be numbered Miss Lilian Braithwaite, Miss Nora Kerin, Miss Margaret Halstan, Miss Agnes Miller, Miss Nita Faydon, Miss Muriel Ashwynne, Mr. Lewis Casson, Mr. James Annand, Mr. Henry Morrell, and Mr. Arthur Fayne, all of whom have taken important parts in West-End theatres.

MR. CHARLES MACDONA'S Veronique Company has an exceptionally long journey to-morrow, having to travel from Bath to Cork. The G.W.R. are providing a corridor train, timed to leave Bath about 6.30 a.m. Sunday morning, which will go via the Severn Tunnel route to Chester, where it is due by 11 a.m. From here the L. and N.W. take over the arrangements for the company to continue their journey to Holyhead and Dublin, where the Great Southern and Western Railway take up the connection to the southern Irish port, which will be reached the same evening.

MISS GLADYS ROSE-JONES has been re-engaged by Mr. Robert Arthur for pantomime at Christmas. She made a great success as Leslie Tremaine at Kennington last year.

"THE MADEIRA GIRL" is to be the attractive title of Mr. Charles Carey's new production. The action takes place chiefly on the island, and really beautiful scenery is being painted. The music of the opera is entirely by Harry M. Wellmon and Mark Strong. The libretto is by Mr. Carey himself. In the meanwhile Little Lord Fauntleroy is once more revived, with the Earl of Dorincourt as usual in Mr. Carey's hands.

MR. MAUNDY-GREGORY is a great believer in going about to find real talent in the theatres. One of his latest acquisitions is Miss Dulcie Greatwich, who starts on a long contract with him at Christmas.

THE Play Actors' Society, an association still in its infancy, which gave its first performance in the late spring at the bijou theatre in Bedford-street, will recommence operations on Sunday, Sept. 29, when a programme including scenes from Much Ado About Nothing and The Marriage of Figaro, together with an act from a play by Sybil Ruskin, entitled The Monk of St. Marco, will be put upon the stage. The last-mentioned piece (which was seriously considered for production by the late Sir Henry Irving) deals with an episode in the life of Savonarola. On Oct. 13, a three-act problem play, entitled The Charmer, by Arthur Rickett, will be produced by the Play Actors at King's Hall, Covent Garden. An encouraging feature of the Society's first effort was the fact that one of the pieces then produced was sold outright immediately after the performance.

MISS HAIDEE GUNN, we understand, has been engaged for lead by Mr. Ian Maclaren for his forthcoming tour, and will once again play the Shakespearean rôles in which she made her first successes. Miss Gunn possesses both youth and talent, and such a rare combination should assure her a great artistic success. We are glad to learn that Mrs. Michael Gunn, the managing directress of the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, who recently had an operation performed on her shoulder, is progressing favourably.

THE growing interest in Shakespearean plays is evidenced by the fact that Mr. F. R. Benson is sending a fourth company into the Provinces with selections from the Bard of Avon's storehouse. The company will be known as the "Midland" Company, and the first performance, which took place on Thursday last at the Pier Pavilion Theatre, Southend-on-Sea, received gratifying testimony of its excellence. The company will visit many of the East Coast towns.

MR. CHARLES FROHMAN celebrated on Friday evening the 150th night of The Truth at the Comedy. Miss Marie Tempest's assumption of the leading rôle is one which fully reflects the comedy talents of the accomplished actress, who wins the enthusiastic admiration of crowded houses. About the middle of October The Truth will be succeeded by Mr. Alfred Sutro's new four-act play, The Barrier, in which Miss Marie Tempest, Miss Lillah McCarthy, Miss Geraldine Olliffe, Mr. A. E. Matthews, Mr. A. E. Anson, Mr. Dawson Millward, Mr. Michael Sherbrooke, and Mr. Eric Lewis will appear.

MR. BERNARD SHAW, who is still chuckling over the scare which was caused by his reported disappearance among the Welsh mountains, furnishes some meagre but characteristic information with regard to the new work which may be expected from his pen. He is still in Wales, and the message he sends runs as follows:—"They say I am writing a play here: I'm not. Granville Barker's new piece, Waste, is a very good one, so I shall leave the field to him and others this season. But I know what my next will be about: it is all in my head. It will be about Marriage!"

THE sacred bond is also dealt with in Mrs. K. Clifford's new play, Hamilton's Second Marriage, which is to be produced by Mr. Otho Stuart for a series of matinées at the Court Theatre on Tuesday, Oct. 29. Messrs. Cyril Maude and Charles Frohman have given permission for Miss Alexandra Carlisle and Mr. Dawson Milward to appear in the play, in which other important parts have been allotted to Mr. W. Graham Browne, Mrs. Percyval, and Miss Frances Dillon.

"BARRY DOYLE'S REST CURE," the comedy in three acts by W. Gayer Mackay and Robert Ord, which is to be produced at the Court on Wednesday, Sept. 25, will be powerfully cast. Mr. W. Grahame Browne will embody the title-rôle—that of a young millionaire—and the other parts are distributed among Messrs. E. W. Garden, Arthur Holmes-Gore, C. M. Lowne, Edward Y. Rae, Claude Vernon, and Heath J. Haviland, and Misses Carlotta Addison, Beatrice Terry, and Rosa Musgrove.

MR. NORMAN V. NORMAN is playing to crowded houses on tour. On Saturday last all records for the Theatre Royal, King's Lynn, for that night were exceeded, the house being filled with a fashionable audience, of which residents from the surrounding country formed no insignificant portion.

SEVERAL members of Mr. Norman's company played a tennis match on Saturday with the King's Lynn Tennis Club, the result being as follows:—Messrs. G. F. Thomas-Peter and Alfred Gray beat Messrs. Catcleugh and Dow, 6—3, 6—2; Messrs. Thomas-Peter and Alfred Gray beat Messrs. Palmer and Smith, 7—5, 6—1. Mr. Norman had fully intended to play, but was prevented by illness, and, therefore, Messrs. Thomas-Peter and Alfred Gray played both matches, winning them fairly easily.

A MATCH was also played on Tuesday, at Lowestoft, Mr. Norman's company winning every set played, with one exception. Scores:—Messrs. Thomas-Peter and Alfred Gray beat Messrs. Hebbes and Smith, 6—1, 6—0; Messrs. F. Lock and Cyril Percy beat Messrs. Elias and Reynolds, 7—5, 4—6, 6—1; Messrs. Thomas-Peter and Alfred Gray beat Messrs. Elias and Reynolds, 7—5, 6—1; Messrs. Lock and Percy beat Messrs. Hebbes and Smith, 6—4, 6—4. Singles:—G. F. Thomas-Peter beat A. Hebbes, 6—0.

THE queues that nightly trail their length outside the Lyceum are abnormally large, and indeed must approach the records even of a theatre which has had a career of such popularity. Mr. Fred W. Carpenter states that during the first fortnight of The Christian the audiences totalled well over 70,000, and a glance at the crowds that nightly throng round the historic house seems to indicate that the number will be maintained indefinitely.

MADAME HELEN TOWNSHEND, the well-known expert in the art of voice production and singing, has now resumed her lessons and her "coaching" in songs. The accomplished teacher also gives breathing lessons, the utility of which is strongly recommended by physicians.

MR. J. W. BOUGHTON, the courteous and energetic managing director of the Portsmouth Theatres Companies, invited the Press and shareholders of the undertaking to a private view on the 13th inst. of the new King's Theatre, Southsea, which will be opened on the 30th of this month by Mr. H. B. Irving and his company. The house presents an elegant appearance, the general decorative scheme being cream and gold, with a curious shade of pale blue-green plush, which blends harmoniously. Every precaution has been taken for the safety of the audience, easy access to the streets being obtainable in the event of necessity. The ante-room, waiting, and tea-rooms are all attractively decorated and comfortably appointed.

MR. CHARLES BOULT has had a busy year. After successfully managing Messrs. Little and D'Arcy's Sinbad the Sailor pantomime, he played Mr. Gardiner in Captain Swift, with Mr. Russell Rosse, and was then engaged by Mr. Herbert Ralland to play Sir Christopher Dering in The Liars, Jim the Penman, Caleb Deecie, in The Two Roses, &c., and has now been retained by Mr. W. H. Hallatt to play Captain Tom Yorke, in Two Little Sailor Boys, for autumn tour.

MR. HERBERT DARNLEY has every reason to be pleased with the result of his first venture in drama management. His work as a musical-comedy manager has always received its just reward, and as a music-hall sketch proprietor Mr. Darnley is widely known. He has now added another feather to his cap by the success achieved with his new drama, A Mother's Sacrifice. In the new play Mr. Darnley has not overlooked the very important element of comedy, and full evidence is given that the hand which penned the gags for the late Dan Leno has lost none of its cunning. At Christmas Mr. Darnley is producing his own pantomime, in which he will himself take part.

IBSEN was installed in a temporary home at the Bijou Theatre, Bayswater, on Tuesday, when Mr. Leigh Lovel began a series of performances of the Norwegian dramatist's works, the series starting with The Master Builder. Miss Octavia Kenmore succeeded in making the part of Hilda varied and interesting, and gave further proof of her acknowledged dramatic ability. Mr. Lovel gallantly tackled the puzzling part of the Master Builder, whose distinctive qualities he portrayed with no little skill. The Mrs. Solness of Miss Ethel Carylon was an impersonation praiseworthy in every respect; and Mr. Arthur Chesney commanded equal commendation for good work contributed in the part of Knut Brovik. The experienced art of Mr. Julian Cross dealt effectively with the rôle of Dr. Herdal; and Ragnar, Brovik's son, was suitably sustained by Mr. H. Hylton Allen. A sound rendering of the piece was given, and warm encouragement was bestowed by the small but appreciative audience present.

MME. PATTI, who has been in the habit of giving an annual concert at the Albert Hall, Swansea, in aid of the funds of the local hospital, repeated the pleasing function on Thurdsay, when the gifted diva sang several songs, and was encored again and again. Thousands of people lined the streets of the Welsh town to cheer the great vocalist, and numberless bouquets testified to the love and reverence of the audience.

THE COUNTESS OF ROSSLYN in returning to the stage will resume her maiden name of Miss Anna Robinson, under which it will be remembered she was seen in London in The Undercurrent, at the Criterion in the autumn of 1901. Miss Robinson will play the part of the heroine in The Education of Elizabeth, the new play by Roy Horniman, which is to follow The Three Kisses at the Apollo. The new piece is described as a modern London drawing-room comedy, and the chief part is that of a simple and unaffected girl. The production will be especially welcome inasmuch as it will be the means of the reappearance of Miss Maude Millett, of whom London playgoers have such agreeable memories. Other prominent names in the cast will be those of Mr. Marsh Allen and Miss Lettice Fairfax.

THE appearance of Eleonore Duse at the Teatro Odeon, Buenos Aires, on the 13th ult., writes a correspondent, was the first event of the season, and the inhabitants turned out in hundreds to give the great Italian tragedienne a welcome. We are expecting the French opera, the Italian opera, and last, but not least, the English Musical Comedy company, which, headed by Stanley Brett, Martin Adeson, Nancy Langtyre, and Beatrice Edwards, has been organised by Seymour Hicks. They are due to open here by the time you will receive this, and the local impresario, Mr. Edouard José, has arrived here full of confidence in his enterprise.

THE success of the summer season in Berlin was Raffles, in German, at the New Schauspielhaus. While the company proper had vacated that imposing theatre for about six weeks, Herr Harry Walden got together a first-rate company, and gave the ever-popular comedy nightly to large and highly appreciative audiences. This clever character-actor himself played the name-part superbly, with the delightful nonchalance which is so great a feature of the part, and he was very well supported.

MISS WINIFRED PEARSON, who was for five seasons with Miss Olga Nethersole, has just concluded an eight months' engagement as Mrs. Morrison, the adventuress, with Miss Annie Hughes in Tommy.

COLONEL MAPLESON, the famous impresario, was with a party of friends on the Thames on Mr. Paterson's launch on Monday, and on landing at Cookham his hand was jammed between the boat and the landing-stage, the middle finger being broken. Colonel Fox, of the Salvage Corps, was on board, and rendered first aid until the arrival of a surgeon, who set the finger.

MISS LALLIE FORSYTH completed a tour of seventeen weeks on Saturday as lead in The World's Great Snare, and has been engaged by Mr. Collingwood Hope for the part of Fanny Flounce in A Trip to the Highlands.

A NEW romantic comedy, entitled In Washington's Days, will be the feature of an entertainment to be given at St. Francis Xavier's College Hall, Liverpool, on Wednesday, Sept. 25. The new piece is by Mr. Gerald Ransley, author of The Risin' of the Moon, and is in three acts.

"SOME years ago, when I was quite young," says Mr. Arthur Williams, "and when the constant change of play made necessary a constant change of wardrobe, I was in the habit of carrying this change to Miss Atkinson from her house to Sadler's Wells, for which I received the magnificent weekly remuneration of one shilling. One evening, with my hand clasping tightly my salary, I left reluctantly the theatre with all its glamour—so attractive to youth—and, lingering for a moment on the pavement outside the gallery entrance, I was accosted in a dramatic whisper by a sharp-featured, black-haired, Oriental youth, perhaps a year or so older than I, with 'Want to go in?' 'Very much,' said I. ''Ere you are, then,' he whispered again—looking carefully round to see that we devil-may-care conspirators were unobserved—'Give me tuppence, quick,' and, sidling up to me, he indicated by mysterious becks and nods the position of a dirty piece of pasteboard half concealed in his crooked hand. This I knew to be a pass-out check; but I did not share my casual acquaintance's knowledge that the colour of the checks was changed at every performance.

"I was not possessed of 'tuppence' in bronze, so I rapidly purchased a large orange from a stall, completed my negotiations with my supposed benefactor, buried my face in the fruit the better to conceal my identity, ran upstairs, and presented my ticket to the check-taker. He, with a seemingly benevolent smile, said quietly, 'Been in before, my little man?' 'Yes, sir,' said I, boldly. 'And what was they a-doing when you went out, my little man?' The play was The Gamester, but in my excitement I could only think of Othello, and boldly replied, 'Mr. Phelps was smothering Mrs. Vezin with the pillow.' What happened then I don't really quite know, but I realised the general law of physics—that it was easier to come down than to go up, especially when propelled by force, and also that they wore unnecessarily heavy boots in that neighbourhood. My young friend greeted me—he had evidently been waiting my meteoric return—with ''Ow did yer get on, matey?' An adequate reply was beyond me."

"THERE is," says Mr. Granville Barker in an interview in the Daily Chronicle, "for instance, a difficulty in finding actors. There are, of course, any number of young people new to the stage, full of enthusiasm and high dreams, and prepared to do anything for next to nothing, all of them ready and anxious to pass their first five years of work under the best conditions available instead of the worst; and the manager needs young people as men and maids of all work at his theatre, artistically malleable and drawing moderate salaries. But the well-trained, capable, comparatively mature actor is far more difficult to employ.

"CANDIDLY, our stage offers him just now no means of a self-respecting livelihood—unless he happen to become famous. For the actress who does not do wonders, there is nearly always marriage as a possible refuge. But while it is easy for the actor of moderate, though not world-shaking ability, to get a certain way, he now only reaches a position of uncomfortable self-respect from which it is difficult to advance further. Even brilliant acting is apt to be lost in the provinces—for, after all, every cat is grey in the dark. Perhaps, of course, he may tour with a so-called London success. But even then he has merely to imitate a London favourite, and stands a small chance of discovery and a great one of deterioration. So you see there are more things to be done than to pat oneself on the back, and this is one of them. I want to help the provincial actor."

"DRAMATIC capabilities," writes Mr. Horace Annesley Vachell to the Daily Mail, "manifest themselves at an early age, and are quite unmistakable to the observing eye. Out of a large family perhaps one child, without training, often without encouragement, reveals amazing powers of mimicry and an instinctive grace and naturalness of pose derived from Heaven knows where. These, I take it, are the God-given capabilities without which the tyro has but a slender chance of achieving success. Add to them a strong constitution, pluck, luck, and unlimited practice, and we may confidently expect the finished artist. If I were the managing director of a dramatic school I should rigorously reject the physically unfit and the slackers. And I would sack Venus herself if she had nothing but beauty to commend her."

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

MR. JOHN HARE, in an article entitled "Forty Years of My Life" in the Daily Mail, tells some amusing anecdotes. "I remember one night," says Mr. Hare, "when appearing with Sothern as an ex-policeman in A Woman in Mauve, an unrehearsed incident occurred. In the second act Sothern had a song, and we all joined exuberantly in the chorus, while I used to beat time with a telescope—the sole surviving relative of my late truncheon. Suddenly we felt inspired by the increasing laughter of the audience, though I soon found, to my dismay, that their enjoyment was not caused by the excellence of our acting, but by the fact that various articles of clothing used by me as padding were gradually making their appearance in an untidy pile on the stage. I bolted, and left the others to finish the scene without me.

"I REMEMBER once, when appearing as that aristocratic but irascible old earl Lord Kilclare, in A Quiet Rubber, in the somewhat pathetic scene where on account of a slight to his sensitive feelings he brings on a portmanteau to prepare for his departure, I was greeted with yells of laughter. I soon found, to my dismay, that my travelling bag inadvertently bore the placard of 'John Hare's Company, Manchester.'

"ON a later occasion, when playing in A Pair of Spectacles in Edinburgh, I had to come to the scene where Benjamin Goldfinch refuses to entertain his brother Gregory's suggestions and suspect his wife, when an encouraging but embarrassing cry came from the gallery—'Well done, old 'un; stick up for the missus!'

"ONCE, however, I was told that in Leeds or Bradford a playgoer had gone away bitterly disappointed with the same play, saying, 'A thowt it rot. A dunno what's coom to tha theayter lately. Thar's been na good moorder thar for last sax moonths.'"

IT was during the first run of A Pair of Spectacles that Mr. Gladstone came to see it, and went round to have a chat with Mr. Hare afterwards. As on other occasions, the actor happened to be made up for the stage, and Gladstone had not seen him in propria persona. Shortly afterwards they were dining at the house of a mutual friend, and Mr. Gladstone was asking his hostess the names of those he had not met before, and looked inquiringly in Mr. HARE'S direction. "Who's that?" he asked. "John Hare, the actor," was the reply. "Oh, yes!" said Gladstone. "I know his father, the manager of the Garrick Theatre." Later in the evening he laughed heartily over his mistake.

The Wrong Bell.

ON a Monday night recently a stage manager stood at the prompt corner and placed his finger on an electric bell-push to ring in the orchestra, at the same time peeping through the curtain to see if the band appeared. The first summons had no success. He rang again; still no success. On ringing a third time a man came towards him on the stage with the remark, "What can I get you, sir?" "Get me! Nothing that I know of at present," replied the stage manager, as he again pushed the bell. "But I've come for an order, sir," urged the man. "Hang you, and your orders too!" said the now irate manager, looking down into the orchestra viciously, and noting its deserted appearance he savagely placed his finger on the bell and kept it there. "I'm waiting, sir," again essayed the man. "Get out of it," blurted the stage manager, "cannot you see I am busy. I don't want you, I tell you." "But what are you ringing for?" asked the man. "Ringing for!" answered the manager. "I'm ringing for the orchestra, if you want to know." "Oh!" ejaculated the man; "don't you know you are ringing the bar bell?"

Dramatic Novels.

"IT would be well," said Mr. Tree recently to a representative of the Birmingham Daily Mail, "if authors would write their novels in dramatic form. There would be no difficulty then in adapting them for the stage. I have just been reading a novel by Louis Stevenson and a dramatic version which I have had offered me for production. I don't think Stevenson lived sufficiently in the atmosphere of the theatre to make a really great dramatist. His merit appears to be largely descriptive. He seems to have been endowed more with the passion of art than with the passion of life. He once told me that he did not care to write about love, and it is curiously difficult to escape from it. Louis XI. does not deal much with love, and although it was probably Irving's greatest character creation, I don't think it was a great money-maker, probably for that reason. I don't think the best art is self-consciously ethical. Any great work is ethical because the artist cannot help it being so, but once let the audience suspect it is being preached at, and resentment quickly follows.

"MY contention is that Shakespeare should be mounted with the same reverence as a modern play. Now I am quite with those who declare that Shakespeare is very good for the study, and the only excuse for putting him on the stage is to present him through the individuality of the artist. He makes Shakespeare to live on the stage and in the minds of the audience. In these strenuous days it is not easy for everyone to imagine the impression that Shakespeare intended to give, and that the artist-producer does for the public. Largely acted, Shakespeare becomes humanated, instead of giving that grey impression of black and white which the printed page often does. Wagner, who was the greatest producer, would have laughed to scorn the critics who declared that his works should not be pictorially improved. In fact, there is nothing that Wagner did not utilise."

Mrs. Calvert at Waterbury.

"SHALL I ever forget," says Mrs. Charles Calvert in an interesting interview in the Pall Mall Magazine, "an experience when on tour with Edwin Booth in America? We had got to Waterbury—the place where the watches come from; in a few hours we were to give Hamlet at the local hall, and the train had gone on with the truck which contained our scenery and costumes. There was a little scenery in stock, but it was not of much use in Hamlet, as the chief interior depicted a glass conservatory with gas-globes here and there. 'Whatever shal we do?' said Mr. Booth to the local manager in the evening. 'Will you recite?' said the manager. 'No, I really cannot!' said Mr. Booth. 'Never could! We must dismiss.' 'But they've come to see you act, and many of them have come hundreds of miles. They must either sit here or wait in the railway depôt.'

"IT was then decided that Hamlet should be played in our travelling costumes. We sent out for some muslin and lace, and borrowed a sword from the Masonic Lodge—Mr. Booth absolutely declined to go on without a sword at least—and a lady of the company happened to have some rouge which came in useful. Booth was Hamlet, Bella Pateman was Ophelia, I was the Queen, and Robert Pateman was the First Gravedigger. We scarcely dared to look at each other while the performance was going on. The King the Queen and the Player King were all killed sitting in Windsor chairs! Next day the manager of the watch firm, who had been present, said he wouldn't have missed it for five hundred dollars! And I don't believe he would!"

VEDRENNE-BARKER AT THE SAVOY.

On Monday, Sept. 16, the Pleasant Play, in Four Acts, by Bernard Shaw, entitled

"YOU NEVER CAN TELL."

Mrs. Clandon ..... MISS AGNES THOMAS
Gloria Clandon ..... MISS ELLEN O'MALLEY
Dolly Clandon ..... MISS DOROTHY MINTO
Philip Clandon ..... MR. NORMAN PAGE
Fergus Crampton ..... MR. A. E. GEORGE
Finch McComas ..... MR. NIGEL PLAYFAIR
Valentine ..... MR. HARCOURT WILLIAMS
Bohun ..... MR. JAMES HEARN
The Waiter ..... MR. J. D. BEVERIDGE
A Parlour Maid ..... MISS KATHERINE STUART

Messrs. Vedrenne and Barker acted judiciously in selecting You Never Can Tell to open their season at the Savoy Theatre on Monday. The piece was first presented to the public at a matinée at the Strand Theatre on the afternoon of Wednesday, May 2, 1900. The cast on that occasion was interesting, including as it did Mr. Hermann Vezin as Fergus Crampton, Mr. Charles Charrington as Mr. Bohun, Q.C., Mr. George Raiemond as Finch McComas, Mr. Yorke Stephens as Mr. Valentine, Mr. W. Graham Browne as Philip Clandon, Miss Audrey Ford as Dolly Clandon, Miss Mabel Terry Lewis as Gloria Clandon, and Mr. James Welch as the waiter. You Never Can Tell was avowedly an attempt by Mr. Shaw to temper the villainy of Arms and the Man with some consideration for the requirements of managers in search of fashionable comedies for West-end theatres. "I had no difficulty," wrote Mr. Shaw, "in complying, as I have always cast my plays in the ordinary practical comedy form in use at all the theatres, and, far from taking an unsympathetic view of the popular preference for fun, fashionable dresses, a little music, and even an exhibition of eating and drinking by people with an expensive air, attended by an, if possible, comic waiter, I was more than willing to show that the drama can humanise these things as easily as they, in undramatic hands, can dehumanise the drama." It is to be regretted that this obliging attitude of Mr. Shaw's was not accompanied by the carrying-out of his kind intentions, for You Never Can Tell is a series of trivial episodes illustrated by many excellent jokes, its want of form and purpose being more than compensated for by the delicious subtlety of its comedy scenes. Mr. Shaw's spontaneous fun and keen sense of humour, the fertility of his invention of amusing characters and side-issues, the drollery of his odd and eccentric imaginations, and the exquisite humanity of his sketch of the old waiter, make You Never Can Tell one of the most popular of his plays. The more obvious excellencies of the play have been often and deservedly praised, and the essentially "Shaw-ite" audience at the Savoy on Monday was quick to appreciate such subtle scenes as that, for instance, in which Valentine makes love to the priggish Gloria, while vigorously disclaiming any intention of doing so.

Renewed interest was given to the revival by the cast, which was excellent all round. Mr. J. D. Beveridge's part of William suited him exactly, and it is difficult to imagine a more gentle, a more persuasive, and a more philosophical old waiter than the personage so delightfully impersonated by Mr. Beveridge, whose mellow tones and comely and dignified appearance added greatly to the effect of his agreeable and effective impersonation. A palpable hit was made by Miss Ellen O'Malley as Gloria Clandon. Her share in the love-scene alluded to was most deftly and daintily done. The way in which she listened, her indication of each fleeting impression by means of minute gesture, and eloquent, but unexaggerated, facial play, made her performance highly ingenious and genuinely artistic. Miss O'Malley must be warmly praised for the intelligence and ability she displayed, and she is certainly a valuable member of any Shavian cast. Mr. A. E. George's view of the character of Fergus Crampton is not exactly ours; it seemed to us that he was a little too earnest and violent, but he was, of course, merely carrying out the author's instructions at rehearsal. As to the power and vigour of Mr. George's performance there could be no two opinions; indeed, at times, he was positively tragic in his depiction of desperate indignation and distress. Miss Agnes Thomas was unimpeachable as Mrs. Clandon, and played the part with a quiet polish which was very acceptable. Miss Dorothy Minto and Mr. Norman Page did all that was necessary with the rôles of Dolly and Philip Clandon, and cleverly made the most of the Twins; and Mr. Nigel Playfair contributed a crisp and comic character-sketch as Finch McComas. Mr. Harcourt Williams's Valentine was admirable in every way. He caught the spirit of the rôle exactly, and handled it with excellent tact and judgment. Where emphatic expression was required, Mr. Williams was ready with it; when a lighter touch was demanded, he was not found wanting. His voice, manner, and appearance were also excellent, and, altogether, his impersonation was entirely satisfactory, and won general approval. Mr. James Hearn scored a complete success as the ponderous and predominating Bohun, and filled the rôle in the most capable and convincing way; and Miss Katherine Stuart was efficient as the Parlour Maid. You Never Can Tell had a cordial and appreciative hearing from a cultured and very friendly audience.

THE RECONSTRUCTION OF "HAMLET."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—While thanking you for the insertion of my letter on the above subject in last Saturday's issue, I should like to mention that on July 2, 1881, a long article of mine was printed in your journal on the acting version of Hamlet, in which I called attention to those discrepancies between the text of the play and that used on the stage, to which Mr. Percy Fitzgerald, in his articles on "The Real Hamlet," refers.—Yours faithfully,

WILLIAM POEL.

Sept. 18.

MR. EDWARD CHARLES HOWITT, recently acting-manager for Mrs. Ann Hughes's Young Lieutenant company, has been appointed resident-manager of the New Gaiety Theatre, at Clydebank.

A NEW operatic version of Oscar Wilde's Salomé, composed by M. Mariotte, a French musician, is to be produced during the winter at the Grand Theatre at Lyons. M. Mariotte first read "Salomé" in 1895, when he was a naval officer and on his way to China. Later he left the service, and studied music under the most modern masters in Paris.

FUNERAL OF WYBERT ROUSBY.

The funeral of the late Wybert Rousby took place on Saturday at Mont-à-l'Abbé Cemetery, Jersey, the body being followed to the cemetery by many folk with whom the late veteran actor was intimately associated during his long residence in Jersey. The mourners assembled at St. Helier's Parish Church, where the first portion of the service was conducted by the Very Rev. S. Falle, M.A., Dean of Jersey.

The first coach was occupied by the Very Rev. the Dean and the Parish Clerk. Following came two coaches in which were the following gentlemen, who acted as pall-bearers, all of whom were closely associated with the deceased during his theatrical career in the Island:—Messrs. J. Le Cras, H. Pinwell, A. McKee, L. B. Romeril (of the old theatre staff), W. Baker, and C. Mallet.

The glass-panelled hearse followed, in which was the body enclosed in a leaden shell and outer casket of oak, with brass mountings, the breast-plate bearing the following inscription:—

WILLIAM WYBERT ROUSBY,
Died Sept. 10th, 1907,
Aged 72 years.

The mourners were as follows:—

First Coach: Mrs. Wybert Rousby and Mrs. Miller.

Second Coach: Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Godfray and Mrs. Blissett.

Third Coach: Messrs. F. J. Hooper and C. V. Hawksford.

Fourth Coach: Messrs. P. M. De La Mare and E. C. Boielle.

Fifth Coach: Messrs. P. E. Amy and T. D. Bennett.

Sixth Coach: Messrs. C. P. Du Parcq, Stanley Hope, and J. Blampied.

Other coaches followed for the accommodation of several friends of the deceased who met the cortège at the Parish Church. These included Dr. M. Moffat, Mr. T. Dorey, Mr. S. Henderson, and the Opera House staff.

The church bell was solemnly tolled, and as the coffin was borne into the building, Mr. J. Hubert, organist of the Town Church, played "O, rest in the Lord."

There was a large number of spectators both in the churchyard and in the church, while large numbers gathered about the gate as the mourners entered and left the sacred edifice.

The service was read by the Very Rev. the Dean in a most impressive manner. After the concluding prayers, the "Dead March" in "Saul" was played by Mr. Hubert, during which the mourners remained standing, while, as the last portion of this most impressive composition was being played, the body was borne slowly out of the church.

The interment took place at Mont-à-l'Abbé Cemetery, the committal prayers being read by the Very Rev. the Dean.

A large number of wreaths and other floral tributes were sent from, among others, the following:—The widow, the Guille Allez Library (Guernsey), Mr. and Mrs. H. Becker and Miss Clayden, Mr. and Mrs. Basil T. Rounsewell, "Lily," Miss Peyton and Mrs. R. R. Raymer, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Boielle, Mrs. Bernard Copping, "George and Bessie," P. H. Malzard, P. M. Malzard, and the Opera House staff.

MUNDEN, the comedian, was one night playing with Jack Johnstone in The Committee; in the scene where Teague plies Obadiah with liquor from a black bottle, Johnstone, who played Teague, was surprised to remark the extraordinary grimaces Munden made over the draughts he gulped down. So irresistibly comical, indeed, were Munden's grimaces, that not only did the audience shriek with laughter, but Johnstone was almost too convulsed to proceed. When the scene was over, Obadiah, as usual, was borne off the stage; but no sooner was he out of sight of the audience than he commenced bellowing for a stomach-pump. "I'm a dead man!" he shouted. "I'm poisoned! Where's the villain that filled that bottle?" And then in an agony of disgust, pointing to the empty bottle, still in Johnstone's hand, he cried, "Lamp-oil! lamp-oil! every drop of it." It was true: the property-man had mistaken a bottle containing lamp-oil for one half filled with sherry and water. When Munden had in some measure recovered, Johnstone naturally asked him why he should, after the first taste, have allowed him to pour the whole of the filthy stuff down his throat, when the slightest hint would have prevented it. Munden's reply, in gasps, was as follows:—"My dear boy, I was about to do so; but there was such a glorious roar at the first face I made upon swallowing it, that I hadn't the heart to spoil the scene by interrupting the effect, though I thought I should die every time you poured the accursed stuff down my throat."

MRS. MOUNTFORD, the famous seventeenth century actress, during her last years became deranged, but as her disorder was not outrageous, she was not placed under any rigorous confinement, but was suffered to walk about her house. One day, in a lucid interval, she asked what play was to be performed that evening, and was told it was to be "Hamlet." Whilst she was on the stage she had acted Ophelia with great applause; the recollection struck her, and with all that cunning which is so frequently allied to insanity, she found means to elude the care of her attendants, and got to the theatre, where, concealing herself till the scene where Ophelia was to make her appearance in her mad state, she pushed upon the stage before the person appointed to play the character, and exhibited a representation of it that astonished the performers as well as the audience. She exhausted her vital powers in this effort, was taken home, and died soon after.

Mr. Edward Compton's revival of The School for Scandal at the St. James's Theatre on Saturday was certainly a courageous step. It is difficult to imagine any satisfactory presentation of the piece with the resources at the disposal of any manager. The School for Scandal, as Lamb remarked, is incongruous, "a mixture of Congreve with sentimental incompatibilities." The enjoyment which used to be derived from the play was created by the opportunities which it gave for the employment of an artificial style of acting, which is now almost obsolete, and only lingers as a tradition in the care of a few veterans. Year by year the spirit of the stage has been moving further and further away from that of Sheridan's piece. In the attempt to reconcile its discordant elements we are likely to fall more or less between two stools. We are pouring new wine into an old bottle. Endeavour to modernise the play in performance merely destroys the effect of its polish, and discloses rather painfully its tawdry shallowness. Altogether, a satisfactory revival of The School for Scandal is a problem which it is almost impossible to work out; and Mr. Compton may be congratulated upon having approached as nearly as possible to its solution.

Mr. Compton certainly did his best in difficult circumstances. He cast Mr. Eric Lewis for the part of Sir Peter Teazle; and that excellent comedian proved himself well worthy of the selection. Mr. Lewis is a modern of the moderns, and his methods are absolutely opposed to the stilted traditions of old comedy. But there is a good deal in the character of Sir Peter Teazle which is independent of method, and that Mr. Lewis brought out with admirable skill. The irritability and peevishness created in Sir Peter by his sense of his position were most amusingly indicated; and in the quarrelling scenes with Lady Teazle Mr. Lewis was excellent, making every point with a humorous delicacy which can hardly be over-praised. All things taken into account, his Sir Peter was extremely, we might almost say surprisingly, good, and did immense credit to Mr. Lewis's adaptability. Miss Lilian Braithwaite freely emphasised the gaiety and playfulness of Lady Teazle, and her reading of the rôle was delightfully bright and buoyant. She developed most agreeably the girlish side of Lady Teazle's character, and her keen enjoyment of pleasure, fun, and mischief. It was a very pretty and piquant piece of acting, and its effect was both artistic and exhilarating. Mr. Henry Ainley gave a very encouraging performance as Joseph Surface, keeping well on the safe side of exaggeration and over-drawing. Mr. Compton's Charles Surface is so celebrated that criticism, at this time of day, is scarcely needed. We need only record that it has lost nothing of its polished ease, its good spirits, and its thorough amiability, and elegance and accomplishment. One of the best impersonations of the evening was Mr. Charles Groves's Sir Oliver Surface. Sound, firm, and richly humorous, with all the necessary dignity and weight, Mr. Groves's Sir Oliver was an admirable example of the thorough training of our older actors. Mr. Henry Crocker was capable and careful as Crabtree; and Mr. G. Wallace Johnston played Sir Benjamin with marked credit. Mr. Reginald E. Besant was a spirited Careless; and Mr. Philip Gordon was duly suave, sober, and respectful as Rowley. Mr. E. M. Robson as Moses was crisply quaint and quietly droll; and Mr. B. Butler was a satisfactory Snake. A really neat and clever representation of Trip was supplied by Mr. E. S. Comberbach; and Mr. Charles R. Rose sang Sir Harry Bumper's song gaily and in good voice. Miss Marie Hassell spoke Lady Candour's lines with point and pleasantry; Miss Viola Compton was an able and effective exponent of the character of Lady Sneerwell; and Miss Phyllis Relph was earnest and expressive as Maria. The minuet in the first act was prettily danced. The revival was received with enthusiastic approbation; and the good points of the production were keenly appreciated.

THE Crystal Palace Orchestral Society's Concerts will begin on Nov. 23, when the concert version of Edward German and Basil Hood's opera, Merrie England, will be given. Selections of Grieg's works, scenes from Olav Trygvason and Suite "Peer Gynt" (No. 1) are set down for Feb. 15; and Elgar's cantata, "The Black Knight," and orchestral works will be performed on April 11. The conductor will be Mr. Walter W. Hedgcock.

MR. WALTER W. HEDGCOCK, the musical director, has arranged a succession of famous artists for the fifty-second annual series of concerts at the Crystal Palace, which begin on Oct. 12, with a Pianoforte and Violoncello Recital by Harold Bauer and Jean Gerardy. On Oct. 19 a concert recital will be given by Kubelik; a recital by Marie Brema, Jan Hambourg and Boris Hambourg is fixed for Oct. 26; and on Nov. 2 Miss Marie Hall will be welcomed in a concert recital. Other arrangements comprise: Nov. 16, violin recital by Lionel Ovenden (aged fourteen years); Nov. 23, recital by the Brothers Cherniavsky; Nov. 30, grand orchestral concert by the British Symphony Orchestra; Dec. 7, violin and pianoforte recital by Lady Halle and Mr. Leonard Borwick.

MME. CLARA BUTT and Mr. Kennerley Rumford gave their first Australian concert in Melbourne on Tuesday. The success of the concert was so phenomenal that the box-office receipts amounted to a figure which is one of, if not the, highest ever realised at a concert in Melbourne.

MR. E. HEWITSON, general-manager to the Theatres Royal, Aston and Smethwick, is announced to take his benefit at the latter house on Wednesday, Oct. 9, when a special programme will be given in addition to the ordinary dramatic fare.

De Prégui ..... M. VIBERT

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, Sept. 20.—The new melodrama produced at the Ambigu is from the inexperienced pen of M. de Gramont, a youth of about twenty-one. Imbued with anti-clericalism, he shows us a scheming "curé," who carries everything before him, until at the end retribution overtakes him. Yet, in order to prove that all priests are not necessarily bad, we are also introduced to the Abbé Gabriel, a good curé, but whose influence is by no means as great as that of his wicked colleague. The latter has among his parishioners a certain Comtesse Blanchard, a retired demi-mondaine, who, old and repentant, gives to the Church the greater part of her ill-gotten gains. Despite her generosity, the elderly Countess is not only prompted by religious motives. She is ambitious. She has a daughter, called Irma, and she is anxious to pass as respectable, and to be received among the local gentry. She also wants a husband for her daughter, a young man of good family; and having consulted her bosom friend, the scheming curé of Foreville, their choice falls on Pierre, whose father is managing clerk of M. Chantalou, the notary. Difficulties, however, arise. Pierre Moutier, who is studying medicine at Nancy, is in love with a pretty workgirl, Marguy, M. Chantalou's ward, and he has engaged himself to her. Moutier's father consents to the marriage, and the banns are about to be published, when the bad curé calls on Pierre's father, and induces him to withdraw his consent to his son's marriage. But the loving couple soon overcome that difficulty. They go off together to Nancy, and live like husband and wife. The Comtesse is upset by this, but her spiritual adviser only smiles. He knows the world, and tells his client to await further developments. She has not long to wait. The runaway couple's funds run dry, and at that psychological moment the curé comes to Pierre with a proposal that he should marry the rich Irma. A few months elapse. Marguy is married to the gamekeeper, Bardot, and Pierre has become the luckless husband of the wealthy Irma. Pierre's marriage has proved in every way a mistake. He and his wife quarrel incessantly, until one day, after a violent scene, he walks out of the house, never to return. The wicked curé now is afraid that Pierre may return to his former love, Marguy; and in order to prevent this, and to put Bardot on his guard, he writes an anonymous letter, informing the latter that his wife has a lover. The jealous gamekeeper's anger is roused. He lies in wait for his supposed opponent, and when the curé opens the door of Bardot's house to call on Marguy, Bardot, hearing someone opening the garden gate, and thinking it is the lover, fires, and the wicked curé drops down dead. M. Daltour gave an effective rendering of the rather difficult rôle of the curé. M. Bailly showed himself a rather nervous lover; and M. Maxime-Léry took himself very seriously as the "good curé." Special praise is due to Mme. Bussy, whose impersonation of the repentant cocotte was exceedingly clever.

AT the Gymnase Le Joujou Tragique will soon see the footlights. As stated already, on a previous occasion, the work is the maiden effort of a young lady, Mlle. d'Orlhiac. The next novelties at that house will be L'Eventail, Le Faux Pas, by M. André Picard.

THE cast of Cabotine, MM. Tristan Bernard and Alfred Allin's new farce, to be brought out at the Nouveatés, will comprise MM. Germain, Colombey, Girier, Leubas, Landrin; and Mmes. Tempiey, Rosine Maurel, Clairville, Gente, and Jenny Rose.

M. FELIX CALIPAUX, the well-known comic actor, has been engaged by the management of the Châtelet for the spectacular piece to be given there in the course of November.

"RAFFLES" is still running merrily at the Théâtre Réjane. The next work will be La Timbale, by MM. Vandérem and Lenôtre. The piece plays in the year 1793; but, contrary to what was said, it is not an historical play.

M. LARMANDIE, just engaged by M. Guitry, will make his début at the Renaissance in a new comedy by M. Bernstein.

AFTER L'Amour Veille, by MM. de Fleurs and de Caillavet, the Comédie-Française will give us L'Autre, by MM. Paul and Victor Marguerite, wherein the principal rôles will be interpreted by Mlle. Cerny, and MM. Grand, Siblot and Numa.

M. MEVISTO intends opening his theatre towards the end of next month with Le Déluge, a sensational three-act play, by M. Henning Berger, the well-known playwright. The work has been adapted for the French stage by M. J. W. Bienstock and Mme. Garling-Palmer.

Now that Anastasie—the nickname given to the Paris censor—has been placed on the retired list, it may be interesting to know that in France the office of censor was an ancient one. Already as early as 1560 the authorities had to call to order the "clercs de la Basoche," who often produced plays of a questionable order. Then, in 1609, a police regulation came into force, forbidding anyone to perform plays without having previously applied to the authorities for a special permission. There was, however, no examiner of plays. This did not come till 1702, when Le Bal d'Auteuil, by Boindin, came upon the good Parisians like a surprise. The author, however, had gone a little too far. The King, we are told, sent for the actors, reprimanded them severely, and at once appointed a gentleman to watch over the morals of his subjects.

THE LATE WYBERT ROUSBY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—In a recent obituary notice of the late Mr. Wybert Rousby I notice you alluded to his last appearance as taking place nine years ago. As a matter of fact, I went over to support him and star in a round of his first wife's favourite parts a little over seven years back, my mother, Miss Lawrence, who had played with Mr. and Mrs. Rousby as a child, being also of the company. Well do we remember the pleasant little Christmas party at Clyde Villa, Jersey, and the long hours through which Mr. Rousby held us spellbound with his fund of enthralling reminiscences. He was an actor of peculiarly sensitive temperament. It was not everyone he could act with, and he told us of many a famous and beautiful star he had refused to meet because she lacked the requisite magnetism or "support." I understood this feeling of Mr. Rousby's so well, and it was with pride, not unmixed with pain, that I beheld him completely break down and sob bitterly during a pathetic scene with me in The Man in the Iron Mask. He afterwards explained that the part I was playing had been a favourite one of his first wife's, and something in my voice and presence recalled her so strongly that he was quite overcome. The plucky veteran actually contemplated a tour of 'Twixt Axe and Crown. He wanted to go straight on then and there, but his strength was gone.—Yours faithfully, GRACE MURIELLE.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE PALACE.

The policy of introducing amusing playlets into the Palace bill is one that finds favour with the large audiences that are so vastly entertained by Mr. Alfred Butt's well-considered schemes of amusement. The latest attraction at the Shaftesbury-avenue house is That Brute Simmons, an adaptation by the author and Herbert C. Sargent of Mr. Arthur Morrison's "Tales of Mean Streets." The comedietta, as it may be termed, is the means of introducing that ripe and unctuous comedian, Mr. Arthur Williams, to the variety stage, and that clever actress of old women's parts, Miss Carlotta Zerbini. It is the lot of the uncomplaining and meek Simmons to have met and married the relict of Bob Ford—a woman who sets considerable value upon herself, and stands no nonsense from her mate. He, poor, downtrodden man, brings home his hard-earned wages, and gives them timidly to his Katharina, with the delicate compliment of a nosegay. Quite loverlike, he has remembered that it is their wedding day. She has no time for such romantic nonsense, and after docking the cost of the flowers from his next week's money, she leaves Simmons to clean the fireirons and windows while she goes marketing. He is not altogether impressed with the cut or the pattern of the trousers that the sharer of his wages has been making for him, and he is ruminating on his lot when through the open window he sees the face of a man peering in. This is none other than Bob Ford, the first husband of the shrew, who was saved by a passing vessel when the "Mooltan" went down. Bob will bargain with Simmons. For a trifle of £5 he will go away and never trouble him more. Eventually Bob reduces his price for silence to a drink. The colloquy between the men is interrupted by the return of the wife, and Bob Ford goes into hiding. Mrs. Simmons, afflicted with economy, not only "combs" her husband's hair figuratively, but cuts it actually with a pudding-basin as guide to the shearing operations. The victim in the chair tries to lead the conversation round to the first husband, when Ford emerges from his place of concealment intent on making his escape. Before my lady decides who shall occupy the position of husband she inquires of her first the amount of his earnings, which are considerably below the sum so punctually given her by the despised second. An amusing argument ensues, and eventually both men leave the doubly-married shrew—much to her astonishment. Miss Carlotta Zerbini emphasises very cleverly and amusingly the shrewishness and nagging propensities of Mrs. Simmons, and Mr. Lytton Grey is very welcome in the part of the first husband.

Miss Jean Alwyn, the Scotch lassie, with surer touch, has become a great Palace favourite, and easily gets home with a new song, "Bang went Saxpence," and with the old favourite, "Coortin." Mr. Leslie Stiles sings "Cupid's Mistake," and "In June Light," both of which have been written and composed by himself; Miss Eileen Douglas, comedienne, possesses a pleasing personality, and is a graceful and attractive comedienne; and Bromley and Fontein exploit what is called a novel operetta in The Man Behind the Music Stand; Goleman's cats and dogs are responsible for the acting of an amusing little farce with a canine comedian and a harmless necessary feline in the chief parts; Mlle. Mistinguette is fulfilling the last week of her engagement; and the programme has other contributors in Hall and Earle, grotesque comedians, the Palace Girls, and the Bioscope.

WOOLWICH HIPPODROME.

Under the able management of Mr. A. W. Deer, assisted by Mr. Harold E. Montague as acting-manager (the latter may be remembered for the prominent parts he has played in musical comedy), this house not only maintains, but continues to enhance, its reputation as a centre of interest and amusement amongst a variety-loving public, and while its patrons are so abundantly catered for there is no reason why it should do otherwise. Prominent in the current week's programme is Jake Friedman, who presents a Dutch operetta, entitled Happy Holland. The Anglo-Dutch comedian is supported by a powerful cast and a well-trained chorus. As Jakey Oodlevasal Mr. Jake Friedman causes much amusement; Miss Florence Hunton makes a dainty Gretchen, her songs being well rendered; and Mr. John Tudor, Mr. Wal Philips, Mr. Leigh Ellis, and Miss Daisy Nelson all do well in their respective parts. The sketch is well mounted and picturesquely dressed. Mr. Sam Mayo makes a welcome reappearance, and his songs, sung in his own particular style, meet with a flattering reception, and although several demands for encores are acceded to, the audience remains unsatisfied. Manson and West, in a farcical interlude, Telling the Tale, keep everyone amused. The sketch deals with a husband who has stayed out all night, and on arriving home in the early morning, somewhat the worse for wear, is confronted by his wife, who demands explanations. Of the mirth-provoking opportunities of "telling the tale" advantage is taken; and although not a novelty the sketch is well received. Miss Mabel Bright, with "Honey, I'm waiting," and other songs, gains well-merited success. Terry and Bentley are paying a return visit, and keep the ball of humour rolling with their ludicrous chatter, songs, and dances. Miss Florence Deighton has a powerful voice, but her enunciation might be improved upon. Her second song, "Come back to Erin," is much appreciated. Topsy and Usher, coloured comedians, distinguish themselves in song and dance, Topsy being particularly clever on her feet; and Ted Waite, a noteworthy comedian, obtains much laughter. The Bioscope, with two amusing films depicting the ups and downs of A Would-be Athlete and A Seaside Girl, evokes much merriment.

THE BEDFORD.

Packed audiences are still the rule at this comfortable hall, where this week there is a programme full of good things. First and foremost is undoubtedly the capital sketch, Wanted, which is played by Mr. Herbert Terry and company, who are now quite old friends here, and are most popular. This sketch deals with an episode in everyday life with the Frontier Police in Canada, and tells of one Morgan, who is wanted for holding up a bank. Morgan gets lost on the prairie, and turns up at the Police Post, where he is recognised by one of the police, Ned Bicknell, who is just engaged to Kitty, a pretty damsel, who, it seems, is Morgan's sister. Ned is confronted with that great problem—love or duty? He chooses the latter, but luck turns up, too, and love goes with it, so all ends happily. Mr. Herbert Terry is excellent as Ned, and gives a capitally-drawn sketch of this fine specimen of a son of the Empire. The play received a rousing reception, and at the end all the players were heartily applauded. Lorne and Hope are a very entertaining couple, who give a duologue, Capital and Labour, in which one is the factory owner's daughter and the other a mill girl. They introduce some very pretty numbers, and together sing some well-known songs, which pleased everyone. Cline and Clark are the most indefatigable duo imaginable. The sing a couple of songs at a break-neck speed, and finish up their turn with some marvellous dancing, which fairly brings down the house, and they are critics at the Bedford of this art.

Miss Barbara Fenn and Co. appear in an original farce, The Lady and the Bath, by Kenyon Musgrave. It is a slight story, and tells of the troubles of Lord Fitzpompom, who has apparently been caught in a breach of promise by a dashing Spanish lady, who follows him to his flat, and finding him indulging in a vapour bath extracts many promises from the unhappy man. It is a very slight idea, and at the present needs much working up; however, it is full of fun, and has even more possibilities. It was very well received, and Miss Barbara Fenn is most successful as the Spanish lady, and she has good support from the actors who play the two male characters. That capital comedian, Harry Russon, is delighting all with his song, "Oh! Charley," which is a very quaint and amusing ditty. Mr. Russon is not only a comedian, for he displays his versatility by reciting Kipling's "Gunga Din" in a magnificent fashion and a most dramatic style, which was greatly appreciated, and received with thunderous applause. Trevor and True are an amusing couple, and provide an entertaining turn, one as a waiter and the other as a swell. They have endless very amusing patter, and finish off with a good song, and score a big success. That clever artist, Miss Ethel Walker, is here with her piano entertainment. She renders her songs in the most dainty and fetching manner, and quite captivated the audience. Kirk and Saraski are a clever couple of young ladies, who give a most graceful and novel diving and swimming entertainment, and accomplish some clever acrobatic feats under water, and they should make a mark for themselves in future. Eva Lumley and Freda Eitrick appear in a comedy sketch, entitled Jimmy all of a Twist, and provide a very amusing interlude. The Eight 'Varsity Girls are also on the bill, and they look most fetching in their caps and scarlet robes. They sing several songs which catch on, and one of the ladies has a very fine, deep contralto voice, which she makes full use of. It is a very charming turn, and highly sucessful. Sadie Seymour, comedienne and dancer, is also on the bill, and the Bioscope completes the programme. Mr. G. R. Hatley's orchestra, as usual, acquit themselves well, and add greatly to the enjoyment of the evening. Mr. A. F. Lovesey, the genial manager, is well to the fore, and is busy all the evening finding room for his would-be patrons and generally looking to their comforts.

EAST HAM PALACE.

With each succeeding week the popularity of this place of amusement becomes more manifest, and such popularity is largely due to the enterprising efforts of Mr. Arthur J. Barclay, the Palace's popular manager, who knows exactly how to please his patrons. Mr. Fred Karno's company of renowned comedians give a highly amusing sketch, entitled A Tragedy of Errors, which is productive of roars of laughter from beginning to end. The cast includes Mr. H. C. Barry, Jimmy Fletch, Victor Smith, and Miss Blanche Fawcett, and these capable artists keep the audience in a merry mood throughout the sketch. The dramatic sketch Varna's Revenge, by Miss Violet Fulton and Company is a very commendable turn. The plot is a very realistic and tragic one, and the highest praise must be accorded to Miss Violet Fulton for her fine delineation of Varna Villdaine. Mr. Fred S. Jennings is excellent in the rôle of Captain Richard Stewart, and Miss Rose Pradine is very good as Marie, Varna's maid.

The high quality of the entertainment is further enhanced by several clever variety turns. Paul Vandy gives a smart exhibition of juggling, and his many tricks are really good. Miss Florrie Bray sings two excellent songs, and at once instals herself a favourite. The new up-to-date satire, The Demon and the Fairy, by Harry Claff and Molly Maguire, is excellent in both conception and portrayal. Their singing is much above the average, and very warmly appreciated. Another clever comedienne is Miss Evelyn Taylor, her two songs, "I wish the little girl I loved loved me" and "What makes me love yer as I do?" being quite catchy.

The performance of Mr. Henry A. Moore is a very interesting one, his mimicry and elocution being worthy of unstinted praise. Miss Maud Esmond is a great favourite, and her songs are quickly taken up by the audience. A sparkling entertainment concludes with some excellent and funny pictures by Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope.

PUTNEY HIPPODROME.

If appearances go for anything excellent business is being done at this bright and cheery hall, situate near Putney Bridge. Monday evening last found assembled a large and appreciative audience, whose thorough enjoyment was unmistakably shown by the unstinted applause given to the various artists contributing to the lengthy and varied programme presented by the management, ably represented by Mr. Foster C. Marner. Following the overture—a brisk march—Miss Kittie Upton, a comedienne, with a charming presence, sang of the time "When the fields are white with daisies." This was her only effort, and her exit left the audience wishing for more. Park's Eton Boys next filled the stage, opening with the part-song, "Excelsior," individual solos by various members of the party followed, a pleasing feature being the well-harmonised choruses faultlessly sung. At the conclusion of the turn well-earned plaudits were repeated again and again.

Miss Isabelle Dillon also found her way into favour in her "Golliwog" and "Pansy" ditties, much of her success being attributable to the assistance received from a youthful female vocalist, who took up the refrains, and joined her elder in the graceful dances which terminated each song. Another artist whose appearance seemed to be eagerly anticipated was Mr. Ambrose Thorne, faultlessly dressed. He first sang of what he would do if he was a Member of Parliament, and it is needless to add that the many reforms suggested are not at present planks in any particular political platform. His next and best contribution was a very tuneful song, entitled "The merry widow," which has a rhythmic refrain, easily taken up by the audience, who threw themselves into it enthusiastically. "The merry widow" is destined to become a favourite.

The Four French Canadians provided the next turn. Their best effort was concerted musical selections on curiously-fashioned instruments; George Gilbey, termed the football comedian, had a good reception and scored heavily in a song with patter of the George Robey order. Arthur Aldridge's fine tenor voice was heard to advantage in a couple of ballads, "Dreamland" and "I bring thee red roses." Messrs. Fred Kitchen and Frank Lister's company, in the American dramatic episode, No. 99, presented an exceedingly well-played sketch, the characters of the cool-headed Yankee Attorney, and that of the ex-convict No. 99, were equally well portrayed, and a pleasing domestic interest was conveyed by the little miss who so well took the part of the attorney's daughter. It is not too much to say that this is one of the very best sketches we have seen presented on the music-hall stage.

Other items in the programme included some capital pictures by the Imperial Bioscope, illustrating views in Belgium and an exciting rescue from a burning building; and Jack and Evelyn, in their very laughable duologue, entitled Come into the Office, which excited the risible faculties of the audience to a very large degree.

"PHARAOH'S DAUGHTER."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—In your issue of the 7th inst. there appeared a paragraph under the heading of "Variety Gossip" stating that Miss Ethel Ra Leslie produced, for copyright purposes, an original opera, in one act, by "herself," entitled "Pharaoh's Daughter," with lyrics and music by Joseph Tabrar.

I beg to inform you that I, the undersigned, am not only the composer of the music, but the plot. Book and lyrics are also my sole invention, as is the title "Pharaoh's Daughter."

By inserting this letter you will greatly oblige, yours truly,

JOSEPH TABRAR.

Sept. 19.

THE WILLESDEN HIPPODROME.

The energetic and enterprising Mr. Walter Gibbons, who already controls close on a dozen houses devoted to variety, on Monday evening opened to the public the Willesden Hippodrome, certainly one of the finest and best equipped entertainment palaces in the suburbs, or, indeed, in London. The building, one of the largest in the kingdom, seating an audience of some 3,500, has been designed by the well-known architect, Mr. Frank Matcham, and is an imposing structure, fitted with all modern appointments. The building boasts an extensive stall area, to which access is obtained by a passage under the pit. The pit itself is a large one, with an excellent rake, and there are also a spacious circle and a commodious gallery, an uninterrupted view of the stage being secured from all parts of the house. A much-appreciated feature will be the waiting-rooms provided for the "second-house" patrons. There is a sliding roof; and, in fact, everything possible has been accomplished for the comfort of the audience. The interior decorations are mainly in white and gold, and the handsome plush tableaux curtain, the box and other hangings are all of a rich red, set off by gold braiding and tassels. A pleasing feature of the decorations is a sky picture on the dome, executed in artistic style.

Mr. Percy H. Gallagher, Mr. Gibbons's courteous first lieutenant, was gladdened by the crowded and certainly most enthusiastic houses on Monday, and the entertainment provided gave evident delight to all. Royalty graced the bill, the Prince and Princess de Broglie being notable performers in the initial entertainment. Sullivan's "Let me dream again," and "'Tis the day" were the two excellently rendered songs of the Princess Estelle de Broglie, the possessor of a sweet and cultured voice; and in response to a demand for an encore the Princess obliged with "Annie Laurie," the Prince conducting the orchestra and sharing the enthusiastic reception accorded his charming wife. The poetic fantasy, The Sea Nymph, was an entertaining trifle as presented by Lennie and Hast, the lady of the duo presenting a most alluring appearance, and her partner also contributing considerably to the success of this enjoyable interlude. The wonderfully intelligent thought-reading dog, Pilu, accomplished his arithmetical tasks in the same old knowing and correct fashion, much amusement being created when he tells the ages of different members in the audience, and answers other questions put to him by his proud possessor, Ancilotti. Certainly one of the cleverest and 'cutest canines that ever trod the boards, and evidently greatly attached to his trainer, who is to be congratulated on the success of a most entertaining turn. The accomplished child comedienne, little Maudie Francis, was accorded a hearty reception for her pleasing rendering of the song "Sunshine," and also for a neatly-executed dance; and the pretty "Carnival Scena" given by Haley's Juveniles also greatly appealed to the audience, especially the solo singing of Dot and Spot, programmed as the "smallest duettists before the public." "Rainbow," "My Creole Sue," and other popular numbers were included in the vocal interlude so attractively presented, and the youngsters were loudly applauded at the conclusion of their turn.

The sensational tumbling, somersaulting, pirouetting, and pyramid-forming of the Abdullah Arabs excited great enthusiasm, the agile and muscular members of the troupe apparently deriving as much enjoyment from their exercises as the audience; and the comic effusion of Mr. Hal Chapter amused immensely. Mr. Herbert Rule aroused merriment by his droll rendering of "I don't know," and persuaded the majority of the audience to exercise their vocal abilities in the chorus of his second effusion, "Wait for me." Much mirth was the outcome of the comic film shown by the Bioscope; the pictures representing King Edward on board the "Dreadnought," and various incidents in connection with the huge vessel proving especially interesting. No more popular item could have been provided than The Coster's Beano, so amusingly exploited by the favourite comedian, Mr. Alec Hurley, and his excellent company. Particularly to be commended is Mr. Hurley's singing of a love ditty to his "donah," and his other songs were all admirably rendered, the comic business, of which there is such an abundance, creating much hilarity. Miss Olga Doré, a ballad singer of considerable culture, is also in the programme. The excellent orchestra is under the careful control of Mr. Horace Sheldon.

WARRINGTON'S NEW HIPPODROME.

The order of despatch has been carried out to the full by Mr. C. W. Davenport, of Warrington, the bulider of the New Palace and Hippodrome, Warrington, who in conjunction with Mr. G. F. Ward, of Birmingham, the architect, has provided the West Lancashire town with a house worthy of the name. The building will accommodate no fewer than 2,100 persons, namely, pit 800, circle 500, gallery 800, and the stage can be seen with ease from every part of the house. There is a 29-feet opening for the proscenium. The depth of the stage is 30 feet, while the width from wall to wall is 60 feet. The fire-proof curtain will work automatically. The place is lighted both by gas and electricity.

Special attention is being paid to the furnishing and decoration of the building, and in these respects no expense has been spared. The fibrous plaster and decorative work have been wisely entrusted to Messrs. Dean and Sons, of Birmingham. This excellent firm has also supplied the tip-up seats. Those in the circle are of plush green; those in the pit are upholstered in Pegamoid, whilst every comfort has been provided for those who will patronise the gallery.

On the fine ceiling is seen a group of cupids in the Venetian style, while Music and Art are represented by historical paintings, the whole being relieved with gold lines. The disc in the centre is festooned in the style of Louis XV. The front of the boxes in the circle is enriched with crimson and gold. The panels on the sides of the boxes are in the Wedgwood style, enriched with gold, and the decorations round the orchestra are of tapestry form in panels. The bases of the proscenium are picked out in representations of Chippelinia marble. The paper in the pit will be of a rich red, and in the circle gold and green, intermixed and festooned. Great ingenuity has been exercised in the arrangement of the means of ingress and egress from all parts of the house, which can be emptied in the remarkably short time of three minutes. The eight dressing-rooms have been fitted up with great care.

The orchestra will number ten, all skilled musicians, and they will be under the direction of Mr. Widdop, who was formerly at Southampton, under Mr. Macnaghten's management. All the scenery has been painted in London by Mr. Bull. The refreshment bars will be of an attractive and comfortable character. The house will be controlled and run under the personal supervision of Mr. Frank Macnaghten, owning and operating the well-known variety theatres constituting "The Macnaghten Vaudeville Circuit." The whole of the work is being supervised on behalf of that gentleman by Mr. Sydney Arthur, of London, who has had considerable experience in the profession, and Mr. G. D. Bradbury will be the resident manager.

The opening performance will take place on Monday next.

The first Covent Garden ball will take place on the 27th inst., and prizes will be awarded for the most handsome dominoes. The balls will continue fortnightly, as usual, and will run concurrently with the autumn opera season, which is to begin on Oct. 3, and last for eight weeks.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

The staff and band of the Blackpool Hippodrome, to the number of upwards of forty, held their annual picnic on Sunday last. The weather was all that could be desired, and this fact, combined with the kindness of the many friends who had so liberally contributed to the funds, made the outing most enjoyable. The party, which included Mr. T. P. Duignan, the manager, and Mr. T. Campbell, musical conductor, assembled at the Hippodrome shortly before nine o'clock in the morning, and were photographed in front of the building before starting by tram to Fleetwood. After the long sea journey to Knott End, they were met with motor char-à-bancs and proceeded to Lancaster, passing Pilling Sands, and through the quaint old villages Over Wyre, arriving at Lancaster shortly after twelve o'clock noon.

Having regaled themselves with some light refreshments, the party proceeded to Morecambe, where, at the King's Arms, a substantial dinner awaited them. The health of the manager, Mr. Duignan, was received with enthusiasm. A drive round Morecambe and along the banks of the river Lune once more brought the party to Lancaster, where tea was served. About 6.30 p.m. the party once more boarded the motors and proceeded on the return journey, Blackpool being safely reached shortly before ten o'clock. The health of the lessees, Messrs. Whitehead and Ramsden, having been duly honoured, expressions of thanks to the secretary, treasurer, and committee for their excellent arrangements closed a most enjoyable outing.

The first outing of the Abertillery Pavilion orchestra took place last Sunday, the party, numbering twenty, journeying by brake to Gilwern. The arrangements were made by Mr. Wm. Dexter, the popular and capable conductor. An enjoyable dinner was provided at the Corn Exchange, after which many felicitous speeches were made, including a hearty tribute to the owners of the Pavilion, and Mr. R. Pryce, the general-manager. Mr. Dexter was in the chair, and a capable vice was found in Mr. Geo. Austin, leader of the orchestra. Boating was indulged in, and proved very enjoyable, some, we understand, partaking of an involuntary bathe. However, the party arrived home in the best of spirits, and are already looking forward to their next outing.

The staff of Terriss Theatre held their last outing under the present management on Sunday, when an excursion to Hastings was made. The party, numbering nearly sixty, left New Cross in a special saloon carriage shortly after nine, arriving at their destination by noon. The day was gloriously fine, and a ramble round the old town occupied the time before dinner, which took place at the Provincial Hotel, where a sumptuous repast was provided. The health of the firm (Messrs. W. and F. Melville) was proposed in happy terms by Mr. Tom Taylor, and Mr. Will T. Taylor suitably replied. During the afternoon trips by yachts and coach rides were indulged in, and the merry party returned after tea by the 7.15 train, which steamed into New Cross shortly before ten. The genial acting-manager, Mr. Will T. Taylor, upon whom the burden of the arrangements fell, was the recipient of enthusiastic appreciation for the excellent manner in which he had conducted the affair.

BARNARD'S, GREENWICH.

Mr. Bert Dent has placed an excellent programme before his patrons this week, and the hall has been well filled despite the warmth of the weather. After the overture "Under the Double Eagle," rendered with spirit by the band, presided over by Mr. William Skerry, the first item on the programme is the capital singing of "The Shoemaker," and original and funny patter by Mr. Tom Keane. Miss Rosa May appears with success in her songs, entitled "I've Enough" and "Mabel, the Tennis Girl, and Marney and Maurice caused much laughter with their quaint duologue and patter. Miss Nan Farren creates a favourable impression with her song, "A Land of Snow," and a well-executed dance.

Johnny Holland and Co. appear to advantage in a bright little sketch, entitled New Milk for Breakfast. The trifle is well acted by Mr. Holland, Mr. E. W. Edmonds, and Miss Rita Warne. Mr. Harold Lewis contributes an excellent extra turn, consisting of grotesque dancing. The Panas, as society entertainers, supply a most attractive item of the bill; the Sisters Allen are very good indeed in their songs "What is the good of knocking at an empty house?" and "The Big Bassoon," while the dancing is very dainty. Mr. Maurice Lee, a capital light comedian, sings successfully of "Willie on the War-path" and "The Taximo." Jock McKay, the Scottish comedian, is loudly applauded in "John McAll," "Both go home together," and "Lizzie." Miss Josie Delaine gains admirers for "Sally," and a neat dance.

Miss Florrie Gallimore is enthusiastically welcomed and warmly applauded; no less than four songs are extracted from the talented artist, who sings in her best style "Always look after Number One," "I wish you luck," "Give us a chance," and "Has anyone seen a German Band?" A graceful and comical act on the elevated wire is done by the Weimars, who also introduce twenty different musical instruments, including the bugle on which Mr. Weimar with his regiment, the 9th Lancers, sounded the famous charge, when with Lord Roberts in his memorable march from Cabul to Kandahar. The pictures by Ruffel's Imperial Bioscope are new and interesting.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL.

Bristol X.L.C.R. First and Second Eleven v. Music Halls and Theatricals.

Played on Clifton Downs, Sept. 14. Joe Lacey scored the three goals for Music Halls and Theatricals, and Fred B. Nicholls played admirably in goal. The following were the teams:—

Bristol X.L.C.R.:—W. J. Horton, goal; B. Davies and F. Thorne (captain), backs; H. Slade, E. Poole, and F. White, half-backs; A. English, J. Aubrey, E. Belding, H. Clements, and E. Bowman, forwards.

Music Halls and Theatricals:—F. B. Nicholls, goal; C. Ormond and J. Tyley (captain), backs; J. Lacey, W. Hinder, and Franklyn, half-backs; H. C. Douglas, F. Boyce, H. Collings, W. Addison, and Milton, forwards.

Referee: T. Bishop. Linesmen: L. Clayton and A. Mattock.

Result: Bristol X.L.C.R., nil; Music Halls and Theatricals, 3 goals.

"A Fight for a Throne" Co. v. The Spennymoor Shop Assistants. Played on the Spennymoor Northern League ground, on Sept. 18, before 500 spectators. Spennymoor won the toss, and started with the wind and sun in their favour. After a very fast game the result at half-time was nil. Spennymoor scored about ten minutes after the second half commenced, and five minutes later A Fight for a Throne equalised, and the match ended in a tie.

"A Fight for a Throne" Team.—Fred Hodson, goal; Chas. E. Linney and J. B. Murray, backs; B. Rose, G. Organ, and Edwin Clarke, half-backs; Leonard Maitland, Karl H. Edwards, H. Haslemere, G. Forsyth, and H. Winter, forwards.

A Copy of "The Era" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps. The Era is posted on Saturday in time to reach London subscribers by the first Town Delivery, and Country Subscribers should receive their Papers by the first London Post. Address, the Publisher, 6, Tavistock-street, W.C.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

[We do not answer inquiries by post. In all letters the names and addresses of inquirers must be given as a guarantee of good faith. Initials only or pseudonyms will be used in the answers if so desired.]

E. W. SMITH.—We have been fortunate enough to be able to refer your question to a celebrated gymnast who has retired from the profession. He remembers the performance of Abachi and Mazuz, Moorish acrobats. Mazuz did a double forward somersault from the ground at the Hippodrome, Paris, in 1881. The pair performed in this country in the early eighties, and might have been at Birmingham, as you state. Olchansky, another acrobat, did a double backward somersault.

JOHN DARLISON.—We are unable to tell you when Siberia was produced in America. It first saw the footlights at the Princess's on Dec. 14, 1887. Information about copyright may be obtained possibly from Samuel French, Ltd., Southampton-street, Strand; or, Mrs. Douglas Cox's Dramatic Authors' Agency, Southampton-street, Strand, W.C. Mrs. Ennis Lawson toured the play for years.

INQUIRER.—The Waterloo Theatre, Whitby, is the original Star Theatre, built in 1878. The licence was relinquished and the place let as a sale-room until about two years ago, when it was reopened as a theatre. It holds barely 500 persons, and has a small stage.

A. E.—"Queen of my heart" in Dorothy was sung by Mr. Hayden Coffin towards the end of the year 1886, and was sung both at the Gaiety and Lyric Theatres.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, & DEATHS.

The charge for inserting in "The Era" an announcement of a Birth or Death or an "In Memoriam" notice, not exceeding twenty-four words, is One Shilling and Sixpence, every additional word One Penny.

The charge for a notice of Marriage, not exceeding forty words, is Two Shillings and Sixpence, every additional word One Penny.

As a guarantee of good faith, the name and address of the sender must accompany each notice.

BIRTHS.

DUNNING.—Sept. 10, at the Brunswick Hotel, Paragon-street, Hull, the wife of Herbert S. Dunning, of a son.

NOBLE.—Sept. 14, at 16, West Lea-avenue, Otley-road, Harrogate, the wife of Milner Noble, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

FAUE—WALLIS.—James Faue, of the Three Faues, to Elizabeth Wallis, by special licence, at Brixton, Sept. 18, 1907. Whimsical Walker gave the bride away.

MCDONALD—JACOBI.—Wm. McDonald, Musical-Director, to Rosalie Jacobi, on Sept. 12, at the Camberwell Registry Office.

DEATHS.

HEATH.—Sept. 12, at Barnsley, Mrs. Florrie Heath, widow of Fred Heath (formerly of Heath and Garton), music hall artist.

NICHOLSON.—Sept. 14, at his residence, Hinckley-road, Leicester, Henry Nicholson, flautist, formerly manager for the late Mr. Sims Reeves, aged 83.

ROSA. — Madeline Rosa (lady ventriloquist, Mrs. Frank Travis), passed away on Thursday, Sept. 19, at her residence, 62, Morley-road, Leyton. Peace at last.

TAYLOR.—Sept. 12, at the General Hospital, Birmingham, of heart failure, Greene Taylor, actor and vocalist.

ULPH.—Sept. 17, at Grafton Mansions, Duke-road, Stella (formerly Stella Lauri, première danseuse), widow of the late Harry Ulph, jun., aged 44.

IN MEMORIAM.

AINSLEY.—In loving memory of our adored mother, Mary Ainsley, wife of the late Captain Ainsley, of Liverpool, who passed away, Sept. 22, 1906. While God gives us memory, never forgotten by your loving daughters, Marie and Kitty (Sisters Ely).

DAY.—In loving memory of James Day, who departed this life at Glasgow, Sept. 26, 1905. Rest in peace. Inserted by his daughter, Mrs. S. Mackintosh, The Carnival, Glasgow.

EVANS.—In loving memory of our dear sister, Mrs. Fred Evans (Florador), who passed away Sept. 19, 1904. Never forgotten by her sister and brother, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Jee Burnell. R.I.P.

LAKE.—In ever-loving memory of Charles Herbert Frederick Lake, only brother of Lily Lake (Mrs. C. A. Thimm), who passed away Sept. 18, 1905, at Tunbridge Wells. "He giveth His beloved sleep."

LEYBOURNE.—In ever-loving memory of my dear husband, George Leybourne, who died Sept. 15, 1884. Never forgotten by his devoted wife, ANNIE LEYBOURNE.

MOORE.—In loving and affectionate memory of George Washington Moore, jun., who passed away Sept. 20, 1901. Still sadly missed by his loving father and family. Peace, perfect peace, dear George.

The treatment of superfluous hair is something which requires the greatest nicety and care.

X. BAZIN'S DEPILATORY POWDER is the result of much study of the cause and problem of destroying these growths without injury to the skin, or leaving a scar or the slightest disfigurement.

There is no necessity for any woman whose refinement and good breeding have made her sensitive about these unfortunate marks to be subjected to the pain of electrical treatment and the consequent eruptions.

X. Bazin's Depilatory Powder is absolutely safe, and destroys the hair without pain—a simple dainty way of effecting a cure.

The great skill and science employed in the compounding of

X. Bazin's Depilatory Powder make it absolutely safe and reliable.

If some former remedy has been tried without success, it is because the right powder was not applied.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES.

For Sustaining the Voice.
Invaluable for ACTORS and SINGERS.
Indispensable for PUBLIC SPEAKERS

GENTLEMEN,—For sudden affections of the Bronchial Organs I use and most cheerfully recommend "Brown's Troches." They are regarded as most eligible, convenient, and indispensable by numerous artists of my acquaintance, BOTH IN EUROPE AND AMERICA. They seem to act specially on the organs of the voice, and produce a clear enunciation.—Yours truly (Signed), MARIE ROZE MAPLESON.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER,

BY
ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).

"The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," by Albert A. Strong, LL.B., solicitor, author of "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" office), seems to be the one compendious and indispensable authority on the subject, as vexed as the "Bermoothes" and as tortuous as a Chancery suit, that has long been wanted. It is in every essential a text book for the perplexed layman, and no solicitor or barrister worth his salt ought to think of taking or appearing in "proceedings" without consulting its pages. It must suffice, after what has been said, to state little more than that the contents include five chapters, respectively named "Copyright as Opposed to Performing Right," "Performing Right," "Infringement and Remedies," Musical Copyright," and "International and Colonial Copyright." The work, for all its precise authority, is not dry reading. The statutes, with the elucidatory notes, necessarily impose a task on the reader which takes some tackling, but they had to be there. The cases adduced, however, are full of interest. Certain of them might fitly find a place in the romance of copyright. There was the fight of Charles Reade with George Conquest over "It's Never Too Late to Mend," for instance, and the equally interesting conflict of Mr. J. A. Cave with Chatterton over "The Wandering Jew." The latter was a famous battle. Chatterton took it to the House of Lords, and was finally beaten, to the unspeakable relief of Mr. Cave, who is never weary of relating the story. Had the result been otherwise, it would have meant his ruin. I well remember meeting him on the day of his victory and "crashing a cup with him" in honour of the same. "The Law of Copyright" is dedicated to Mr. A. W. Pinero.—Sportsman.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
A compendium of great value to all interested professionally or otherwise, in music and the drama is "The Era" Dramatic and Musical Annual, the issue for 1907 of which has just been issued (London: 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, 1s.). Especially attractive are the stories told by some twenty artists, whose photographs and autographs are included.—Glasgow Herald, Jan. 31.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
That invaluable annual, "The Era" Almanac, has just made its appearance for 1907. In addition to its usual record of the important productions and revivals of the past twelve months in London and Paris, there is a series of bright contributions by Miss Ellen Terry, Mr. Edward German, Mr. Frank Cooper, Mr. Frank Curzon, Mr. Charles Collette, Miss Alma Murray, and other well-known members of the profession.—Sunday Times, Jan. 27.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
"The Era" Dramatic and Musical Annual for 1907 will be cordially welcomed by the profession, as well as by all who are interested in the modern theatre and concert-hall. It contains some racy little sketches by Miss Ellen Terry, Miss Pollie Emery, Mr. Charles Collette, and other well-known artists; much useful information and many illustrations.—Leicester Daily Post, Jan. 23, 1907.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
"The Era" Annual for 1907, published at a shilling from 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, is, as usual, a happy combination of record, almanac, and literary symposium. The last-mentioned aspect is one that most commends the work to the lay reader. The literary contributions are signed by well-known artists who have contributed personal experiences of remembered incidents, and whose portraits adorn the pages. A touch of pathos is lent to an otherwise cheery publication by the inclusion of stage and music-hall favourites who died last year, one of whom was Mr. J. L. Toole.—Financier and Bullionist, Feb. 6.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
"The Era" Annual for 1907 is out, published from the offices of "The Era," 5, Tavistock-street, W.C. It is the usual complete record of doings in theatreland during the past year, and possesses a live interest in the number of excellent personal contributions by well-known managers, authors, actors, and actresses of the day.—Sportsman, Jan. 22, 1907.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
"The Era" Annual for the current year, besides having all the usual valuable features which make the work so necessary for reference, has, for a special feature, a series of short articles, stories, or sketches by prominent members of the dramatic and musical profession, a well-executed portrait of each writer accompanying the text. The obituary for last year—unfortunately a heavy one—is given in a series of photograph likenesses of those departed. The full-page portrait of Mr. J. L. Toole is, indeed, worth more than the humble shilling at which the Annual is sold. The monthly calendar is, as usual, a storehouse of interesting facts connected with the stage. — Weekly Times and Echo.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
The "Era Annual" for 1907 is now out. It is full of good things, and will be eagerly perused by all who are interested in dramatic and musical affairs and personnel. Portraits of, and original contributions by, several public favourites and managers appear, including Miss Ellen Terry, who tells "How I Spend My Day"; Mr. Frank Cooper, Mr. Arthur Collins, Mr. Charles Collette, Mr. Frank Curzon, Mr. Matthew Brodie, Miss Constance Moxon, Miss Edith Cole, and Mr. Tom Craven. There is, in addition, the usual store of miscellaneous theatrical information which is indispensable to all who are interested in stage matters.—Liverpool Post, Jan. 26.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
A capital shilling's worth is the "Era Annual," with its valuable lists of new plays produced during the year in London, the provinces, Berlin, and Paris. It contains, also, many readable articles by stage favourites, notably a characteristic contribution, "How I Spend My Day," by Miss Ellen Terry.—Daily Express, Feb. 2.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER.
BY ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B.

Chapter I.
COPYRIGHT AS OPPOSED TO PERFORMING RIGHT.

Chapter II.
PERFORMING RIGHT.

Chapter III.
INFRINGEMENT AND REMEDIES.

Chapter IV.
MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.

Chapter V.
INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT.

Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.
Copyright confusion is, like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr. Albert A. Strong's new work, entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr. Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his textbook on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" Office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full of interest.—Referee.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1907.

LOVE AND THE DRAMA.

The opening of the VEDRENNE-BARKER season at the Savoy Theatre on Monday has been accompanied by the publication by A. H. BULLEN of a very acute and analytical "commentary and criticism" by DESMOND MACCARTHY, entitled "The Court Theatre—1904-1907." It was inevitable that the discussion of the enterprise of Messrs. VEDRENNE and BARKER should chiefly consist of a consideration of the art of Mr. BERNARD SHAW, and the extraordinary gentleness and moderation which Mr. MACCARTHY displays are as commendable as they are rare. Few persons can approach Mr. SHAW in a really judicial frame of mind. Either the critic is so bewildered by Mr. SHAW's flow of rhetoric and so crushed by the fertility of his arguments as to "throw up the sponge," and seek refuge in the weak remark that "No one takes SHAW seriously," or he becomes irritated, and gives back blow for blow. Mr. MACCARTHY has calmly steered between these two extremes. The delightful manner in which he has proved Mr. SHAW inconsistent is only equalled by the almost fatherly way in which, after passing the hardest of judgments, he has framed the sweetest apologies for the convict.

The prime defect of most of Mr. SHAW's work is that it is scientific, not intuitive and instructive. Mr. SHAW cannot be described as "very human." The resistance which he evokes from many worthy people is due to the sense that though they are talked down by the writer, and unable to grapple with him in argument, their own knowledge and consciousness assures them that he, not they, is in the wrong. And, feeling this, and also resenting the bounceable, bumptious tone which is habitual to Mr. SHAW, the individual becomes indignant. This, of course, is just what Mr. SHAW likes. An article like the recent attack on him in Blackwood is worth many pounds to an author in the way of advertisement. Thus both parties are pleased. The critic is relieved of his bile; and Mr. SHAW's name is kept well before the public.

It is one of his greatest complaints that the attraction of the sexes for one another has been made far too much of as the mainspring of drama. "His quarrel with modern dramatists," says Mr. MACCARTHY, "is that they represent a passion which is only all-powerful in day-dreams as pervasively effective in practical affairs."

We are surprised in this connection that Mr. SHAW has not derived more benefit from the study of his favourite SCHOPENHAUER. He was a cross-grained little hermit, and, personally, one of the pack of "philosophers" for whom Mr. SHAW avowedly writes; but he had an eye for truth, and he realised the importance of Love as a mainspring of action in real life. This is where Mr. SHAW fails.

It is the view he takes of Love as a temporary insanity or a kind of nervous disease that makes Mr. SHAW's love-scenes so dry and unreal. Funny as they are, they are, taken as art, simply fantastic. Take, for instance, the following extract from the wooing of Gloria Clandon by Valentine in You Never Can Tell, performed at the Savoy last Monday:

GLORIA (uneasily, rising): Let us go back to the beach.

VALENTINE (darkly—looking up at her): What! you feel it, too?

GLORIA: Feel what?

VALENTINE: Dread.

GLORIA: Dread!

VALENTINE: As if something were going to happen. It came over me suddenly just before you proposed that we should run away to the others.

GLORIA (amazed): That's strange—very strange! I had the same presentiment.

VALENTINE: How extraordinary! (Rising). Well: shall we run away?

GLORIA: Run away! Oh, no: that would be childish. (She sits down again. He resumes his seat beside her, and watches her with a gravely sympathetic air. She is thoughtful and a little troubled as she adds) I wonder what is the scientific explanation of those fancies that cross us occasionally!

VALENTINE: Ah, I wonder! It's a curiously helpless sensation, isn't it?

GLORIA (rebelling against the word): Helpless?

VALENTINE: Yes. As if Nature, after allowing us to belong to ourselves and do what we judged right and reasonable for all these years, were suddenly lifting her great hand to take us—her two little children—by the scruffs of our little necks, and use us, in spite of ourselves, for her own purposes, in her own way.

It does not require to be gifted with genius to perceive that the above, as a representation of the courtship of a middle-class young woman by a young dentist, is absurd. It is neither observed nor truly imagined. It is machine-made art, turned out by a workman of special faculty, but with glaring limitations. One of the reasons why so many people persist in treating Mr. SHAW as a mere intellectual buffoon is the absence from his equipment of instinctive insight into things which are common perceptive property. "Mr. SHAW's principal failing," says Mr. MACCARTHY with benevolent understatement, "is to exaggerate the stupidity of mankind." An artist who approaches his material in this spirit may be very clever and ingenious, but there will always be a certain shallowness and aridity about his work. It is very natural that Mr. SHAW should vote for the exclusion of Love from the stock-in-trade of our dramatists. The man who is colour-blind wants everyone to paint in monochrome. Vivie in Mrs. Warren's Profession is an educated icicle; Candida is what Lickcheese would call a "calker-latin' machine"; Ann, so far from being Everywoman, is simply a brazen hussy, and only a crazy fool like Tanner would be conquered by her. Curious characters these, interesting and amusing in a way. The only trouble is that they are not alive, and that no amount of preface-writing or artistic acting can make them so.

"THE FOLLIES" AT TERRY'S.

Again are the Follies adding to the gaiety of London by an entertainment of the lightest texture, the scene of their frivolling being now transferred to Terry's. The crowd was a most acceptable attraction at the halls; but in the short half-hour allotted them there they were unable to exploit their talents to the full, and that there is a place for them in the economy of London amusements apart from legitimate entertainments of the stage or variety was conclusively proved on Monday by a large audience, which treated Pelissier's Pierrots to a rousing welcome.

Their present entertainment is made up largely of travestie. The possibilities of musical parody have never, we think, been so happily utilised as in "1912: an Overture Shemozzelle by Take-offski." It need hardly be said that this is a skit on Tschaikowski's overture "1812," which, as most of our readers know, is a work that describes with considerable "pomp and circumstance" the disastrous retreat from Moscow of Napoleon's Army. At intervals in the serious work we hear snatches of "The Marseillaise" and the Russian National Hymn, with the clash of the great bell in the Kremlin and the noise of cannon. In the skit the melody of "Rule Britannia" is feebly given out, to be immediately drowned by all sorts of alien melodies. The "majestic cacophony" is announced as the greatest, last, and only work of Pelitzierovitch Takoffski, the sublime young maëstro of Poland (Street). "Born of humble parents (possibly the first alien refugees to invade our shores), he started life as a trouser-hand under the immediate supervision of his father. Surrounded, as he was, by exiles from almost every European country, who had by that time annexed Soho, and influenced by a natural distaste for the nation that had fostered him, there is little wonder that the imagination of the romantic youth was obsessed by the glorious vision of an England entirely under a foreign yoke—an admittedly egg-otistical view of the situation. In a prophetic moment he fixed the date on which his desires would be consummated at 1912, and proceeded to evolve what is accepted by all who have heard it as one of the most heartrending tone-poems ever conceived by the brain of man."

"Vast orchestra" is represented by a cleverly-painted cloth by J. T. Bull and Sons, and the orchestra is conducted by a counterfeit presentment of Mr. Henry Wood, and Mr. Pelissier is at the piano; Mr. Lewis Sydney contenting himself with the repetition of a melancholy phrase on the tin whistle. A really clever piece of fooling!

Burlesques of Hamlet have been known on the London stage ever since 1810, when Poole's Hamlet Travestie saw the footlights. It was performed at Covent Garden in 1813 with Mathews, the elder, as Hamlet, Blanchard as the King, Liston as Ophelia, and Mrs. Liston as the Queen. It was part of Poole's method to put the soliloquies in the form of songs. Messrs. Pelissier, Arthur Davenport, and Walter Davidson only hint at the soliloquies, having a very natural predilection for song and dance. Hamlet is threatened with the lock-up in the first scene for uttering bad language, and later, imbibing his father's spirit, which is "Black and White," sings a topical song. In the play-scene he, seated in a box, enjoys with Ophelia (Miss Gwennie Mars) a burlesque of the Follies; and "get thee to a nunnery" forms the cue for a funny concerted piece. Hamlet gives way to homicidal mania at the finish, and after polishing off everybody is shot by Shakespeare.

In a most amusing "foreword" to the new burlesque Mr. Pelissier says, "In taking sundry liberties with the text, and particularly in introducing 'song and dance,' we feel justified by the result of our careful researches through many tomes, and by the admitted adaptability of the great dramatist. He was no narrow-minded conventionalist, but a man who lived and thought up to date. Beyond all doubt, therefore, the writer of Hamlet would, at the present time, knowing the present tendency of modern taste, have written his play in the form of musical comedy." Again, "With all respect to the great actors and managers who have ventured to play and produce Hamlet from time to time, it appears to those who are responsible for this new acting version of the work that hitherto the whole foundation of the Prince of Denmark's character has been overlooked. Does he not talk of his 'too too solid flesh,' and is he not described in the immortal bard's own words as 'fat and scant of breath'? Why, then, should he be portrayed as a romantic, often cadaverous figure"? Why, indeed, when Mr. Pelissier, who boasts of fourteen stone at least, is so ready to amuse us by a great Dane, less "dogged" in his obstinacy, and obviously less peevish. He has some beautiful curls in a wig of solemn black made by Clarkson, and is genuinely funny. Mr. Lewis Sydney plays the King in a most entertaining fashion; and Miss Effie Cook, who sings particularly well, has quite the proper mock tragic mood as Gertrude. The first part of the entertainment is largely made up of items previously noticed.

HAYDN, the musician, was an enthusiastic admirer of the seventeenth century actress Mrs. Billington; and one day calling on Sir Joshua Reynolds, he found her sitting for her portrait to that celebrated painter. This was Sir Joshua's famous singer, in which Mrs. Billington is represented in the character of St. Cecilia, listening to the celestial music. Haydn, having looked for some moments attentively at the portrait, said, "It is very like—a fine likeness; but there is a strange mistake." "What is that?" said Sir Joshua, hastily. Haydn answered, "You have painted her listening to the angels; you ought to have represented the angels listening to her." Mrs. Billington was so much charmed by this compliment, that she sprang from her seat, and threw her fair arms around Haydn's neck.

THE ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

THE usual weekly meeting of the Council of the Actors' Association was held at 10, King-street, Covent Garden, on Tuesday, when there were present Mr. Fred Grove (chairman), Mr. Henry W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Mesdames Rose Mathews, Wynne Matthison, and Lucy Sibley, and Messrs. Arthur Applin, Granville Barker, Cecil Brooking, Lewis Casson, Edmund Gurney, Fredk. Morland, and Chas. Cruikshanks (secretary). The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

The hon. solicitors reported further correspondence in three cases for the recovery of salary. The cases were considered, and further instructions given. It was agreed that the seal of the A.A. be affixed to the power of attorney authorising the sale of £83 2s. 2d., being all the £2 10s. per cent. consolidated stock standing in the name of the Actors' Association. The seal was accordingly affixed.

A PROPOSITION was before the Council that they should adopt the report of the committee appointed to consider matters in connection with the proposed meeting at Manchester or elsewhere. This report recommended that resolutions be submitted to the meeting:—1. Insisting on the need that actors should organise as wage-earners to protect their own interests. 2. Advocating a Trade Union policy for the A.A. with the object of ultimately raising the salaries of the worst paid in the profession. An amendment that the report of the committee be referred back to them as being of too revolutionary a character was lost. An amendment that the Council approve of the principle of the committee's report, but ask them to redraft it without using the words "trade union," found no seconder, and the original resolution was put to the meeting and carried.

IT was agreed that the secretary should write to Mr. S. Major Jones, asking him whether he would, if elected, serve on the Council in the place of Mr. Spencer Trevor, retired. The further consideration of the question of filling the vacancy caused by the retirement of Mr. Athol Forde was adjourned until next week.

MR. FREDK. MORLAND gave a report of the proceedings of the recent fortnightly meeting, and it was agreed that Mr. Arthur Applin be elected as chairman of the next meeting, to be held on the 27th inst. Mr. Applin agreed to accept the position. The chairman read the replies from those written to on the subject of election on the Social Committee, and Mesdames Winifred Mayo, Edyth Olive, and Phyllis Relph, and Mr. P. L. Julian were elected members of this committee, and the secretary was directed to write to Miss Margaret Cavania and Miss Beatrix de Burgh asking them if they would also accept seats.

THE chairman read a letter with regard to an alleged bogus manager from a non-member, and the secretary was directed to file same for future reference, and to write suggesting that the complainant should communicate with the theatrical press on the subject. The secretary suggested that he should, on the 1st proximo, send out to the landladies advertising from Jan. 1 to Sept. 30, 1907, in The Era and Stage and in the "A.A. Year Book" for 1907, circulars he submitted, soliciting advertisements in the "A.A. Year Book" for 1908. He also submitted that in cases where landladies' advertisements had already appeared, no further recommendations were required. This was agreed to.

THE secretary suggested he should send a circular letter to the hon. medical officers asking for particulars as to alteration of addresses and addition of degrees (if any), times of attendance, telephone Nos., &c., as probably since the publication of the present issue of the "Year Book" some had ceased practice, changed their addresses, were dead, or were not desirous of continuing their appointments, and he deemed it advisable that the list published in the "A.A. Year Book" for 1908 should be as correct as possible. He was directed to carry out his suggestion.

THE secretary was directed to call a meeting of the Finance and General Purposes Committee for to-day (Saturday) at eleven o'clock. The secretary referred to the requisition from the Metropolitan Water Board, and he was directed to carry out instructions. Ruby Wyndham, Mary Deverell, and Julietta Milo were nominated for election; Helen MacGregor, Florence Morris (late Nairne), Beatrice Ferrar, Ada Melrose, and Leslie Lees were reinstated; John W. H. Sutherland was elected.

"THE PLAY-ACTOR."

Farcical Comedy, in Three Acts, by Charles Riminton, Produced at the Theatre Royal, Preston, on Thursday, Sept. 12.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Tobias Marsh is a soap maker who has "made his pile," and is desirous of his daughter Charlotte forming an alliance with the Rev. Thomas Topham, an extremely mild and simple dissenting parson, quite under the influence of James Marsh, Tobias's hypocritical brother, who, knowing that Tobias intends providing his daughter with a marriage portion of £10,000, has induced Topham to promise him a very considerable portion of this amount should he marry his niece. Charlotte refuses to fall in with her father's wishes, being in love with Charles Barnes (a play actor), whose suit is ably seconded by her mother. The first act concludes with a stormy scene between the father and daughter, who threatens to send her abroad for her obstinacy, and the entrance of the Rev. Thos. Topham, who is carried in liberally ornamented with sticking plaster and bandages, after having, accidentally or otherwise, nearly fallen into one of his prospective father-in-law's soap vats while viewing his works.

The scene of Act II. is laid in Boulogne, where Charlotte has been sent, under the care of Mme. Legrand, a susceptible French widow, who has strict injunctions to allow her to see no one with the exception of her father, uncle, and the reverend gentleman, who presumes to try and win her affections. Her lover, Charles Barnes, assumes the character of waiter at the Hotel des Baines (which is fortunately owned by an old friend of his father), succeeds in making the Rev. Topham hopelessly drunk, and, after gaining possession of an agreement between Topham and James Barnes in which the former agrees to pay the latter a large sum of money out of Charlotte's marriage portion, decorates him with a table-cloth and some paper frills from the ham, places him in a Bath chair with a cigar in his mouth, and wheels him on to the verandah. Mme. Legrand and Charlotte arrive. Barnes discloses his identity to Charlotte, and then agrees to impersonate her uncle, and makes violent love to the susceptible widow, finally asking her to marry him, a proposal she is not slow to accept, Charlotte arriving on the scene just as she falls into his arms. Two ladies then saunter in, Fanny and Sophie Sparkes, with whom Barnes is evidently acquainted. He asks them to follow Tobias and James, who have gone to the Casino, and endeavour to induce them to return with them to dinner. In this they are successful, and in a high state of hilarity the quartette indulge in a song and dance, which is interrupted by the appearance of Mrs. Marsh and Charlotte. The act closes on the reverend gentleman, just recovering consciousness, being wheeled in in the Bath chair, while Mrs. Marsh showers her indignation on her delinquent spouse and his hypocritical brother.

In the third act all are back at Camberwell. Mme. Legrand comes to claim the fulfilment of his promise of marriage from James Marsh, who is naturally bewildered at her demands. Charles produces the document signed by Topham, who, being cornered, confesses to the plot. Tobias sees through the plans of his scheming brother James, whom he denounces, asks his wife's forgiveness for his momentary folly while in France, gives his blessing to his daughter Charlotte and Charles, and all ends satisfactorily as far as the book is concerned. Whether the audience thought so too is a matter for conjecture. The piece dragged considerably, and while some of the situations had a tendency to be funny, there was an absence of novelty in them. The humour of the piece was intended to be assisted by the antics of Simpson, a somewhat boisterous page, who was very much in evidence in each act. We reserve comment on the acting, as the piece had evidently been insufficiently rehearsed.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The hearty reception accorded Mr. Jerrard Grant Allen's production of The Stormy Petrel at the King's, Glasgow, in July last, amply justified Mr. Allen in submitting his latest venture to a Glasgow audience, and Miss Gladys Unger's drama received a most encouraging welcome. producer and author being both called at the conclusion. The new play, which recalls Raffles and Leah Kleschna at times, tells how Australian Jack, who had led a rough life in gambling dens at the diggings, is induced by a gang of thieves to take the place of the lost heir of a wealthy ironfounder. The real heir had been stolen by the gang five years before, with a view to ransom, but had unfortunately died in their hands. In this new capacity Jack proves a decided success, managing the works, controlling the men, and securing the love and affection of the old ironfounder and his daughter, Helen. Later he finds his love for his supposed sister awakening his better instincts, and he declares the truth of the fraud he has been a party to After a stormy scene, he is spurned by both the father and daughter, but having saved the life of the former from an attack by an alien workman, the real feelings of Helen become apparent, and the curtain falls on a happy solution of Australian Jack's future career. The story is cleverly worked out, and there are several dramatically strong and theatrically effective scenes. Mr. H. A. Saintsbury made a striking and notable success as Australian Jack. As Helen Brentwood Miss Nina Sevening marked a distinct advance on her previous dramatic efforts, and made a most charming heroine. Miss Haidee Wright had a strongly pathetic part in Hattie Flynn, this clever actress making every point tell from first to last. Her companions in crime were ably represented by Mr. Wm. J. Rea as Crofts and Mr. W. Walford as the amusing Jupe. Mr. George de Lara made a melodramatic part of Bruder, the scheming manager of the ironworks, who is in league with the thieves. Mr. Leon M. Lion cleverly doubled the parts of Flynn, an American criminal, in the first act, and James Revilo, a detective with a most "villainous" make-up, in the later scenes. Mr. John Willes was duly impressive as the old ironfounder, Brentwood; and Mr. Stanley Logan made a distinct success as the stolid butler, Durham. The aggrieved Italian and Russian workmen, who proclaim themselves free-born Britons "under the Union Jack-a," were cleverly acted by Messrs. M. A. Scott, H. B. Hampton, G. Lee, &c. A crowded house welcomed the first performance, and gave the play a hearty send-off. Mr. Jerrard Grant Allen at the conclusion expressed his thanks in a few words, and the authoress, Miss Gladys Unger, bowed her acknowledgments. The action of the play is comprised in two scenes, the first act taking place in an Empty House in Soho, and the other three acts in Jack's Sitting-room at Brentwood's Country House. Mr. George de Lara was responsible for the stage-management, and the performance went with absolute smoothness all through.

MISS CLAIRE ROMAINE, "London's pet boy," began what promises to be a very pleasant and prosperous engagement at the New York Theatre last Monday. It is just ten years since she was here before, and there were many in the audience who remembered her clever impersonation of the Cockney call-boy in the musical comedy In Town. Miss Romaine received an enthusiastic welcome at both the afternoon and evening performances, the house being crowded. Her first vocal offering, "I'd like to know when you can," had a very catchy refrain, and the amorous curiosity of a precocious Eton boy was most amusingly conveyed in speech and gesture. The next number, "That's what little Willie wants to know," ticked the audience immensely, and confirmed the impression that Miss Romaine's character creations were true to life, and had an originality and finish which lifted them far above the ordinary level of such impersonations. But most of all the audience enjoyed "I haven't told my mother up to now," with its lively air and pointed allusions to things about which the youthful "terror" found it advisable to "keep mum." Several times the audience sent up such a yell of delight as is seldom heard in a New York music hall. After an unsuccessful attempt to retire, Miss Romaine had to confess that she really didn't known any more, and asked the audience to sing the chorus with her. The first attempt was very weak, and it was not until Mr. Fred Solomon (appropriately addressed by his clever niece as "Uncle Fred"), who led the orchestra, and who knows a thing or two about London music-hall methods, started the chorus in hearty fashion that the audience followed his lead and sang with a will. The orchestra, under Mr. Solomon's able direction, co-operated admirably with Miss Romaine and Mr. Gus Elen in their several songs.

AT Hastings on Wednesday a cricket match was played between Mr. George Edwardes's See-See company and the Hippodrome company, resulting in a win for the Hippodrome by an innings and 20 runs. Scores:—See-See Company: Simpson, b Edwards, 7; Burdett, b Edwards, 0; Worcester, b Lamb, 0; Swainson, c and b Lamb, 29; Ford, b Nason, 5; Leguir, b Nason, 5; Glynn, b Nason, 9; Pye, not out, 6; Black, b Lamb, 9; Clark, b Lamb, 1; Nellden, st and b Lamb, 5; total, 90. Hippodrome Company: Lamb, c Leguir, 62; Nason, c Nellden, 41; Edwards, c Glynn, 1; Bint, b Glynn, 1; Norman, b Swainson, 0; Duke, b Swainson, 0; Jenner, b Simpson, 0; Makerlo, c Worcester, 22; Champion, b Glynn, 13; Vaughan, c Glynn, 7; E. White, not out, 5; extras, 7; total, 159.

THE DRAMA IN BERLIN.

"WERTHER,"
Musical Drama, in Three Acts and Four Scenes, by J. Massenet, Produced at the Komische Oper, Sept. 12.

Werther .....HERR NAVAL
Albert .....HERR EGENIEFF
Der Amtmann .....HERR MANTLER
Lotte .....FRAULEIN DE PADILLA
Sophie .....FRAULEIN LORENZ
Schmidt .....HERR KREUDER
Johann .....HERR BEGEMANN
Brühlmann .....HERR BROSE
Käthchen .....FRAULEIN GREFFIN

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, THURSDAY, Sept. 19.—The success of this production was not due to the intrinsic merits of the work itself, but to its excellent interpretation and brilliant setting. The story of the sorrows of Goethe's unfortunate hero is too well known to need description; the music is not among Massenet's best efforts, and fell—on the whole—very flat. Fräulein de Padilla was a most sympathetic Lotte, and Herr Naval did more than justice to Werther; while Herr Gregor—as usual—mounted each scene with faultless taste.

A NUMBER of interesting novelties have been acquired by Herr Gregor for production at the Komische Oper during the coming season. D'Albert's new opera, Tiefland, will be given at the end of the present month, Fräulein Labia and Herr Naval singing the principal rôles. Then come Leoncavallo's Zaza, and a little later Charpentier's Luise, with Fräulein Alten in the name-part. Pizzi's one-act opera, Rosalda, and Auferstehung—a four-act opera by Altano—are also announced.

AT the Royal Opera the American tenor, Francis Maclennan, has been engaged for a term of five years. The artist's voice is rich and powerful—a treat to listen to after the mediocre tenors that are, alas! but too plentiful here—and particularly adapted for Wagner rôles. Thus Mr. Maclennan—who sang Parsival over one hundred times in America—is a decided acquisition to our Opera House. He made his début as Turiddu last week (Fräulein Destinn giving the rôle of Santuzza), and was received with enthusiastic applause. As a special privilege, and quite unprecedented in the Royal Opera annals, Mr. Maclennan was permitted to sing in English, not having yet mastered German sufficiently.

"MADAMA BUTTERFLY" is in rehearsal at the Opera House, and will be produced shortly, with Miss Farrar in the title-rôle. Fräulein Frieda Hempel made a great hit at the Royal Opera last week as Lucia, the flute-like colorature of the talented young artist bringing down the house.

THE METROPOL has produced a new burlesque pot-pourri by Julius Freund, music by Victor Holländer, the popular collaborators, who have so often furnished entertainment at this house. It is entitled Das muss man sehen, and is a series of bright, capitally-acted tableaux, well mounted, full of fun, and all to the accompaniment of pretty, if not very original, music.

THERE have been no novelties worth recording up to the present, but a number of important revivals have been given. Foremost among the latter is Ibsen's epilogue, Wenn Wir Toten Erwachen, with Fräulein Irene Triesch in the rôle of Irene—perhaps the best in this famous actress's comprehensive repertory. It was Mrs. Frederic Lamond's (her name in private life) first appearance for some months, and she met with an enthusiastic welcome.

GEORG ENGEL'S tragic drama, Ueber den Wässern, has been revived with a good cast at the Neues, and Kleist's historical play, Prinz Friedrich von Homburg, at the Deutsches, each making its mark; and the Royal Schauspielhaus includes the latter piece in this week's bill also. Herr Bonn has produced yet another of his "Sherlock Holmes" travesties at the Berliner—Die tänzenden Männchen—and is giving this alternately with a very inadequate representation of Richard the Third.

"EIN SELTSAMER FALL," drawn from the melodrama Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, also enjoyed a long run during the summer at the Neues; while the Thalia produced a musical farce with the awkward title Ihr Sechs Uhr Onkel, which is still drawing well. Herr Thielscher—the popular comedian—who was so many years the chief star at this theatre, has left it for the Metropol, but his place is satisfactorily filled by Herr Sondermann, and the author-managers, Herren Schoenfeld and Kreu, may be congratulated on the success of their latest piece.

NEW HIPPODROME, PETERBOROUGH.

The opening of the New Hippodrome, Peterborough, on Monday was an event of much local interest, and was graced by a large and appreciative audience, which included the Mayor and many members of the Town Council. The house will easily seat between eight and nine hundred people, and its appointments are as comfortable as can be desired. The first impression one receives on entering is the cosiness of the place. The walls are of a warm red colour, and the upholstering has been so carried out as to harmonise with this background. The orchestra stalls are, of course, the best seats in the place. Here for 1s. 6d. one is provided with a plush chair seat placed on luxurious carpet. Accommodation is here provided for 140. The seats throughout the building are all, however, exceedingly comfortable, and, most important of all, command a good view of the stage. Indeed, throughout, the comfort and safety of the audience have been the first consideration. There are no fewer than nine exits leading directly into the street. Smoking is, of course, permitted, and special ventilation is provided by a patent arrangement. Yet draughts have been effectually banished. The lighting is excellent. A special band of eight musicians has been organised for the hall, and their abode is well below the stage and concealed by heavy plush curtains. The conductor is Mr. Thomas Richardson, who comes from Collins's. There are three short staircases leading to the auditorium. Palms and flowers enhance the beauty of the stage, and the scenes are excellent.

It was 'directors' night" on Monday as well as the people's night, and the Sylvester Hippodrome Syndicate, Ltd., must have been gratified with the patronage their latest venture received. The entertainment has been continued through the week, and has been keenly appreciated. At the top of the bill is Miss Elsie Earle, a charming vocalist, who receives a warm welcome for her well-rendered songs; Edgar Button is a capital dancer and bone soloist; the Five Bombays are prominent with clever song and dance; Esme Gordon is a successful vocalist; Harry Lawson becomes a favourite comedian; the Brown and Kelly combination in What the Butler Knows succeed in keeping everyone in a continual roar of merriment; the Four Cicillians are speciality artists, and give a clever show; the Sisters Geretti prove themselves exceedingly clever lady acrobats and trapeze artists; and the Bioscope, showing the departure of the Lusitania, finishes a capital entertainment.

SALIDA AND VONE have lost their only boy, aged nine months. He died at Bury, on Tuesday.

THE MARCONIS, mental telepathists, are crossing the pond on board the Adriatic, and are enjoying excellent weather.

MR. ARTHUR G. H. HUNT has regretfully to announce the closing of the Royal Albert, Canning Town, on Saturday next, pending the renewal of the licence by the local authorities.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

MISS MARIE LLOYD, the "one and only," in conjunction with Mr. Alec Hurley, will sail next Thursday from Liverpool, per s.s. Cedric, for America, where both are engaged for a tour through the States. Mr. and Mrs. Hurley are to be the guests of the Eccentric Club on Monday evening, when a select company from the world of Bohemia will drink bumpers to their success, and wish them bon voyage. Miss Lloyd is this week at the Metropolitan and Paragon, where she has been putting on a coster song that she regards as one of the very best she has ever had.

WHILE having a little luncheon on Tuesday, at Simpson's, Mr. Alec Hurley presented Mr. Fred Higham with a magnificent single stone diamond ring, in recognition of his good fellowship and the services rendered by him as sole agent for over ten years. Needless to say, Mr. Higham thanked the popular comedian sincerely, and wished both himself and wife (Miss Marie Lloyd) bon voyage and a safe return.

THE emphatic hit made by Mr. Gus Elen at the New York Theatre may be guessed from the following congratulatory letter sent to the famous coster comedian by Mr. R. C. Mudge, president of the White Rats of America, the greatest variety organisation on the other side. The letter is dated "1553, Broadway, Sept. 10," and runs as follows:—"Dear Friend,—It gave me much pleasure to see your act last night, and know the gigantic artistic hit made by you. I know that you were somewhat nervous, but still you must be satisfied with the greatest success ever made in New York on the opening night of an English performer."

MR. OSWALD STOLL has given the following reasons for his withdrawal from the Entertainments Protection Association:—"Except on fundamental questions, our business conflicts with that of many members of the Association; and it appears that many members are trying to evade certain points in the Arbitrator's Award. The Arbitrator's Award was fair to both sides, consistently with the welfare of the industry generally. We have, therefore, no sympathy with a desire to upset it."

MR. BRANSBY WILLIAMS was, unfortunately, taken ill last week, and sent home from Norwich with severely ulcerated throat. He is also suffering from neuritis. His temperature was 102 during the journey, and he has been in bed ever since. He is rapidly mending, and hopes to keep faith with his Blackpool admirers on Monday.

AN informal meeting took place on Wednesday at the offices of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, to consider plans for establishing residential chambers and restaurants for young ladies of the theatrical and music hall profession. Those present were, Mrs. Fred Ginnett, Miss Lil Hawthorne, Mrs. Bradgate, Miss Hawkes, Mrs. Collins, Miss E. Clarke, and Miss De Grey. A meeting will be held in October with a view to forming a committee to further the scheme. Ladies and gentlemen—more especially the latter—who are willing to sit on the committee, are invited to send Miss de Grey their names and addresses. Address, 2, York-street, W.C.

OLD favourites with new songs are promised by Mr. Joseph Wilson for Monday next at the Tivoli. Little Tich and George Robey return there. The former will sing "The captain of the pier," in which he delineates the gentleman we all know so well—he of the officer's uniform, semi-naval style, gold bands, stripes, etc., but is yet a long-shoreman, the only deck he paces being the firmly-fixed one of a pier. He is more aristocratic than "Billy, of Portsmouth town," of whose exploits popular baritones have sung for so many years. Mr. Tich will also give a finished character study of a peppery old general. Both songs are entirely new.

IT may now be regarded as certain that the new Empire ballet by M. Wilhelm will be produced within the next ten days. Mlle. Genée will appear as the Belle of the Ball, and will be seen in a variety of opera rôles, in which her extraordinary talents for impersonation will have the amplest opportunities. She will be supported by M. Wilhelm's collaborator, Mr. Fred Farren, who will also appear in many different characters. Mlle. Francesca Zanfretta, Mr. Paul Sundberg, Miss Elise Clerc, and other distinguished soloists and pantomimists, will have excellent parts in the new production.

IN view of the early production of the new ballet at the Alhambra, rehearsals are in daily progress, and the choreographic adaptation of Planquette's Cloches de Corneville may be looked for in about three weeks' time. To Mlle. Bordin, the premiere danseuse of the establishment, has been allotted several impersonations. As the Spirit of the Bells she will treat her admirers to a display of classical dancing, and will also, in other characters, make a new departure, at least in England, as a danseuse du genre. With Signor Rossi, the incomparable mime, as the old miser, the Alhambra management has secured an artist who will give due expression to a fine tragic situation. Ballerine in mail will be a feature of a glittering spectacle.

"THE AVALANCHE" will be produced at the Hippodrome on Monday. Previous to the production there will be a special rehearsal, whereat sundry journalists and more desirable persons will be invited to try the tobogganing facilities to be installed in the arena by that inventive genius Frank Parker. Messrs. Fred Trussell (who now talks Norwegian) and Will Bennet will be the gay pilots to guide the facilis descensus.

WE learnt with considerable regret of the death, in the early part of the week, of Mrs. Stella Ulph, widow of the late Harry Ulph, jun., who was in the early eighties part proprietor, with the late Mrs. J. J. Poole, of the South London. In those days there were many excellent ballet productions at that house, and these were invariably led by Stella and Luna, who belonged to the well-known Lauri family of dancers and pantomimists. The young pianist of those days was Walter Slaughter, who composed a good deal of the music for the divertissements so happily devised by Paul Valentine. Luna became Mrs. Walter Slaughter, and is the mother of Miss Marjorie Slaughter, the girl composer; and Stella, as we have stated, became Mrs. Ulph. As is well known, the marriage was a most unhappy one.

MR. MAURICE FARKOA, who has lately returned from a tour in musical comedy in America, has been engaged for a special season of two weeks by Mr. Alfred Butt, at the Palace, prior to his return to the theatres. The gifted Anglo-French singer will probably repeat some of his past successes in musical comedy, such as "I love you in velvet," and "Philosophy."

MISS BERTHA STUART, who is scoring a big success at the Tivoli nightly, where she remains several weeks, goes out to Australia in 1909 under the direction of Mr. Harry Rickards, who saw her turn a few weeks ago and at once booked her.

MISS FLORENCE LLOYD, who besides being one of the best theatrical "boys" on the stage has distinguished herself in low comedy parts, will, in conjunction with Mr. Horace Lane, appear shortly at a West End hall in Angelina's Lover. Miss Violet Lloyd, her sister, who has just finished a successful engagement at the Palace, goes to the Tivoli at Christmas.

MR. CHARLES MUSSETT, until recently manager of the Empire Theatre, Glasgow, is now assistant-business-manager at the Colonial, Percy G. Williams's chief vaudeville theatre, Broadway and Sixty-second-street, New York City.

THE New Palace Theatre, which has just been erected in Cheapside, Reading, from the designs of Mr. W. G. R. Sprague, will be opened on Monday, Sept. 30, with a grand vaudeville programme. Performances will be given twice nightly, at 7 and 9.

MR. C. FINCH-HATTON, the acting-manager of the Palace, Leicester, and Mr. George Robey appeared in a football match, playing as forwards for the Nomads against Derby Thornhill. Mr. C. Finch-Hatton, who is quite a good "socker," scored a beautiful goal for his team in the second half. Unfortunately the popular comedian had few opportunities, but nevertheless did excellent work for his side. Probably we shall hear more of the prowess of Mr. Hatton, as at one time he played for the Gainsborough Reserves and the Newlands Club, now Hull City.

MR. WILLIAM FINDLATER presided on the 12th inst. at the meeting of the shareholders of the Star Theatre of Varieties, Ltd., Dublin, and in moving the adoption of the report and accounts, explained the difficulty the directors had experienced in securing first-class talent. Mr. Lo'tus Walsh seconded, and the report was adopted. A dividend on the 10,000 Accumulated Preference Shares at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum was declared for one year and a half to Nov. 30, 1906. Mr. Edward Armour was re-elected a director, and Messrs. Stokes, Brothers, and Pim were also re-elected auditors.

MR. FRANK MACNAGHTEN towards the end of April decided to erect a Palace and Hippodrome at Burnley, and about the middle of May a company was floated and draft plans approved. The roofing-in has just been completed, and the house will be opened to the public on Monday, Dec. 16, practically six months from the letting of contracts. The site, at Munn's-corner, St. James's-street, is in the very heart of Burnley, where the whole of the tramways from the populous outside districts are centralised. St. James's-street is 106ft. wide at this point.

THE site has a gradient of nearly 20ft. from front to back, and is 130ft. deep. The frontage of 80ft. includes a private passage 7ft. wide down the west side vailable for exits. Where this passage adjoins the stage it is covered over and two floors of dressing-rooms arranged. The vestibule, entered from St. James's-street, is at the same level as the circle, which contains 400 tip-up seats in addition to two boxes. The pit, with continuous upholstered seating for 900, is sunk down below the street level, and in front of it are stalls covered with wilton carpet and with nearly 300 luxurious tip-up seats. The upper circle has seating accommodation for about 600.

THE front, of Yorkshire stone, is designed in the Georgian style of architecture. The pit seating is to be in pegamoid and the floor covered with cork carpet. The architects are Messrs. Richard Horsfall and Son, of Halifax.

THE death is announced of Mrs. Florrie Heath, professionally known as Miss Flora Garton, who passed away on the 12th inst. at her residence, 22, Silver-street Barnsley. The deceased lady was the widow of Fred Heath, who died on April 6, 1900, at the age of forty-three. As duologue artists they were popular in the eighties, and were known as Heath and Garton. The remains of the deceased were interred in Barnsley Cemetery on Sunday.

A NEW and original turn, entitled "The Satinettos in their Sketches in Satins and Silks," will be seen at the Paragon on the occasion of Mr. Beecham's benefit, on Thursday next. Only satin and silk are used in producing pictures which are so realistic that they could easily be taken for oil paintings. Each picture is worked on a different coloured backing, with lightning rapidity, and with the aid of a revolving frame and expensive fit-up. The Satinettos should prove a turn that the public will certainly appreciate.

ANOTHER group of English artists leave for the Continent next week, including the Stavordale Quintette, who are bound for Brussels and Antwerp. They return, however, in time to open at Willesden on October 28. They have been doing remarkably well on the Gibbons' circuit, and are rebooked for 1908.

"CAPTAIN DREYFUS," a new and sensational French military episode, by M. D. Waxman, is to be presented by that genetleman, Miss Fanny Waxman, and a selected company, at the Paragon on Monday. For much of the information, on which are founded the incidents in this sketch, the author (Mr. John Jackson) is indebted to Major Alfred Dreyfus.

OUR Cardiff correspondent informs us of the great success Mr. Frank Macnaghten is meeting with in his new venture—the Palace and Hippodrome in Westgate-street, Cardiff. Scarcely a day passes without a congratulatory letter being received by the manager from some influential person, remarking on the high standard of excellence attained in the programme and the excellent management both before and behind the curtain. Opposition is very strong in the town, but Mr. Macnaghten is holding his own in every way. Mr. Arthur Burton is the manager at this house.

MR. DORASAWMI, who opens at the Palace on Monday, comes here with a tip-top reputation as a violinist, and it is anticipated that he will create something approaching a sensation on his first music hall appearance in London. His act will consist of a piano solo, a violin solo, piano and violin dual performance, violin imitations of animals, and of the phonograph, the bagpipes, ending with a reproduction in sound of the breaking of a violin. Mr. Dorasawmi has performed with much success at the Bechstein and the Æolian Halls, where his dual instrumentation of "Home, sweet home," has been greatly admired

MR. HARRY INSTONE has had a good offer from a London manager to produce his new scena, "In Old Virginia," at a London hall. He will, however, open with it on Monday next at the Royal Theatre of Varieties, Oldham. The production will be one of the best on tour, including about fourteen juveniles, and some excellent scenery and lighting effects. Mr. E. Dottridge is booking the show.

HENRY FLETCHER GORDON, 32, financial agent, of 37, Great James-street, Holborn, was charged on remand on Tuesday at Clerkenwell with, on July 10, obtaining by false pretences from Ronald Charles Power, a cheque of the value of £20. Mr. Wallis prosecuted for the Treasury, and Mr. David White defended. Gordon had a large connection as a moneylender amongst music-hall artists, but was without capital. Gordon was to take the monies and Power was to receive three-quarters of the profits. The remanded case was that of Mr. John O'Connor, professionally known as "Jack Wayho," and the prosecution proceeded with other cases. The proceedings were again adjourned.

MR. ALFRED BUTT, who but recently returned from a holiday spent in France, is departing again for the Continent in search of novelty, and will probably visit Berlin, Vienna, Hamburg, Dresden, and Paris.

SPECULATION is rife as to the attitude of the present Theatres Committee of the London County Council towards the question of the drink permit. It has been always a legitimate cause of complaint on the part of Sir Edward Moss and Mr. Oswald Stoll that, while their rivals on all sides have the licence to sell alcohol, and rejoice in palatial bars, they are refused such reasonable facilities. The trite fallacies concerning the dangers of allowing people to drink alcohol will, we may be sure, be trotted out at the licensing sessions in November, but we expect the Hippodrome to get its licence.

MR. HARRY LAUDER, who goes to America shortly, bade farewell to a big audience at the Tivoli on Saturday. On finishing his turn he was cheered again and again, and at length was constrained to make a few remarks. He would like to thank them adequately for the favour they had shown him, and he would leave no stone unturned to endeavour to secure a like reception in America.

WHIMSICAL WALKER is a man of many parts. Twenty-five years ago, at Hengler's Circus, he was vaulting a double somersault over eight horses. He subsequently purchased, for £1000, the giant elephant, Jumbo, chartered a steamer (which cost another £1000), took him and other "wild fowl," including two of the smallest people in the world, viz., the Aztecs, to the other side of the pond, spent another £1000 in advertisements, opened with Tony Pastor in New York, and played to an average of 15,000 dollars nightly.

HE has also appeared before many of the crowned heads of Europe, including King Alphonso, father of the present King of Spain, Queen Isabella (by command), President Garfield, and our beloved King Edward (when he was the Prince of Wales), fifteen times. This is a record of which any artist might be proud; but here is another that we venture to say none can beat: The Whimsical one was engaged in 1904 by Harry Rickards, for Australia; the contract read twelve months, but he had scarcely landed before a cablegram arrived from Arthur Collins saying, "Return immediately," consequently he only appeared for five nights and two matinées. He will shortly sail for America again to his old friend, Tony Pastor, with a number of sketches, dramatic and otherwise, and we wish him the same success this journey as awaited him on his former visits.

WAS it the late Ambrose Maynard or Mr. Charles Merion, at one time manager of the now defunct Trocadero Music Hall, who wrote a farce for the music-halls, entitled Pepper and Salt, in which first the Twin Brothers Wems and then the Twin Brothers Clayton played the title-rôles? The servants' parts were originally played by the now deceased Sisters Mario (Dot and Minnie), who had to give up their engagement in order to appear in Drury Lane pantomime.

NOW we have the female Dromios in Twin Sisters Clifton, with a hilarious novelty, How Papa Found His Twins, which met with much success at the Empress, Brixton, last week. The sisters are supported by Mr. Arthur St. George, the author. The sketch is being much sought after.

OUR readers will not be surprised to hear of the death of Miss Madeleine Rosa (Mrs. Frank Travis), who passed away on Thursday at her residence, 62, Morley-road, Leyton. In her early career Mrs. Travis was a very fascinating danseuse, and later became the first lady ventriloquist to make a name in the halls. She leaves a daughter, Miss Bessie Travis, who has become popular as a polyphonist.

THE Crystal Empire, Battersea, opened on Monday, on the two houses a night principle, and its brightness and beauty are conspicuous. Nothing dull is to be allowed in the bills, and Mr. Humphrey E. Brammall, the managing-director, is evidently determined to spare no exertion to make the place a pleasant rendezvous for the toiling workers of the neighbourhood.

THE hall, it will be remembered, was originally built by the veteran entertainer and minstrel proprietor, Mr. George Washington Moore, who christened it after the first President of the United States. We shall, no doubt, see many prominent American entertainers there under the present managerial enterprise. There is no barring clause in the Crystal Empire contracts.

THE annual general meeting of the Music Hall Railway Association has been provisionally fixed for Sunday, Oct. 27, at the Camberwell Empire, kindly lent by Messrs. Sparrow and Bawn.

THERE is scarcely any necessity for us to contradict the ridiculous report current in variety circles of the death of Mr. Harry W. Wieland, the well-known variety agent, but as we are anxious to allay the anxiety that must be felt by that gentleman's many friends, we hasten to say that he is at the moment particularly fit and well.

MESSRS. W. A. HAINES AND ALAN BORTHWICK, the latest recruits from the "legitimate" to the variety stage, who have for the last two and a half years been associated with Miss Julia Neilson and Mr. Fred Terry, are fulfilling their first London date with their enormously successful sketch, Half-a-Dollar, at the Bedford next week.

MISS DAISY JEROME, the charming American artist, has adopted another rôle, i.e., that of author and composer. While appearing at the Holborn Empire and the Crouch End Hippodrome this week she put on no less than six new songs, and these not coming up to her expectations, an idea struck her, and she immediately wrote one herself, giving it the up-to-date title "In London Town." The number depicts the various ways the ladies of the great City have of deporting themselves in order to become the rage. It has a very catchy refrain, and should be quickly snapped up by any enterprising publishers. Miss Daisy Jerome will shortly open for a season at the Oxford.

MISS BETTY OHLS, a little lady from Texas, who has been well received by the American colony in Paris in her entertainment, will come to the Empire on Monday to sing in French and English. She will give "Verdur Ouette" (Weckerlin) and "If no one ever marries me."

MR. TOM CARNEY, who has become very popular at Gorleston, near Yarmouth, was presented with a handsome diamond ring by a few friends on his benefit night at the Pavilion, which was packed.

MR. ALFRED MOUL'S latest engagement at the Alhambra is La Milo, the beautiful Australian girl, who is reproducing her ride in the Coventry Pageant, in which she was clothed in a manner that disarmed the ultra-sensitiveness of the local edile. A series of cinematograph pictures is ingeniously employed by way of an introduction and to give coherence to the story. The charming poseuse is seen at home, on her way to the theatre, and arriving at the stage-door, and just as she is beginning to disrobe. The turn is particularly interesting, and is nightly heartily applauded.

A NUMBER of friends attended at Waterloo Station on Saturday to bid Vesta Victoria bon voyage on her trip to America. Amongst the company present were the directors of the Camberwell Empire, who presented her with a beautiful basket of flowers, and a contingent of members of the Terriers' Association, including Messrs. Jesse Sparrow, Percy Ford, E. C. Webb, F. H. Kohler, G. Burgess, A. E. Chapman, Ben Woodger, and several others.

A LARGE and influential gathering assembled at the Empire, Camberwell, on Friday evening, the 13th, to bid good-bye and God speed to Miss Vesta Victoria, previous to her departure for America, where she is making a stay of about nine months under the management of Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger. In the absence of Mr. Tom Barrasford, who was detained in the provinces, the chair was taken by Mr. Jesse Sparrow.

AFTER proposing the health of Miss Victoria, which was heartily drunk by all present, Mr. Sparrow wished her a prosperous journey and a safe return. He only regretted that she was going away for such a long stay, and looked forward to the time when she would be back home again. He referred in glowing terms to the successful stride the Music Hall Home (of which fund Miss Victoria was one of the presidents) had made during the last twelve months, and hoped it would continue to improve, and that when she returned they would be able to report an even more satisfactory state of affairs.

MISS VICTORIA, in reply, said she could hardly thank Mr. Sparrow and all present for the kindness and good wishes she had received. She hoped she would soon be back amongst them again, as, although she was treated very kindly and had a lot of friends in America, there was no place like home. She made a special appeal for the Music Hall Home, and said that although she would not be here herself at Christmas, she would like to know that the inmates would be well provided for, and had pleasure in handing Mr. Jack Fruin, the secretary, a guinea for each member of the Home, to be expended as the committee thought best. She appealed to the members of the profession to give something. If not a subscription, clothes would be equally welcome; in fact, anything useful would be appreciated. Mr. Jack Fruin, in reply, thanked Miss Victoria for her kindness, and also thanked her on behalf of the inmates of the Home.

A LARGE silver loving-cup, which was presented to Miss Vesta Victoria by Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger upon her last trip to America, was filled with champagne, and all present had the pleasure of drinking Miss Victoria's health and wishing her bon voyage. The proceedings were kept up until the wee sma' hours, and terminated by everyone joining hands and singing "Auld Lang Syne."

AMONGST those present were Messrs. Jesse Sparrow, Joe Lawrence, Leon Bassett, Bob Vorley, Harry Tate, Jack Fruin, Percy Ford, Dick Trengrove, Billy Nutt, R. Sarjent, F. Kohler, F. Upton, Gerald Burgess, E. C. Webb, Jack Norton, Ben Woodger, C. R. Chapman, Geo. Vivian, H. Ospovat, and Bob Watson.

OUR New York correspondent makes some comments on the boom in New York for English music hall talent. He says:—"Knowing New York as it is to-day and as it was ten years ago, I am inclined to say that Mr. Elen's tardiness in crossing the 'pond,' instead of being anything to his detriment, showed him to be a man of foresight and good judgment. As the proverb says, there is a time for all things, and between English music hall artists and American audiences there appears to have been a 'psychological moment,' just as there is between individuals. Some there have been—no need to mention names—whom Londoners have idolised, and for whom one would have predicted success in any part of the English-speaking globe. Their experiences in America were humiliating. They came here too soon.

"Since those days, however, the acute New Yorkers have broadened out very considerably. Their globe-trotting has familiarised them with lots of things that once upon a time were merely hearsay, and has taught them that they have no monopoly of humour. Being able to understand, they can laugh at the funny people of other countries than their own. Why, even the 'canny' Scot has been over here with his unfamiliar dialect and his own special brand of humour, and the Americans took him to their hearts and voted him 'too funny for anything.' Autre temps, autre mœurs. Ten years ago they would have had none of him

"And now that those astute managers, Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger, have decided that the second city of the world is big enough and cosmopolitan enough to stand at least one big music hall on the English plan, there should be a wider field for the clever people of the English music hall stage. A Cockney may be allowed to smile when a variety programme such as Londoners have enjoyed at their music halls for twenty years or more is heralded as 'advanced vaudeville,' and may be excused for saying that it is the people, not the vaudeville, who have 'advanced,' when he remembers how Koster and Bial, at their magnificent place in Thirty-fourth-street, and Oscar Hammerstein, at Olympia, showed the New Yorkers what a London music hall was like, and were impoverished for their pains. But, after all, what's in a name? If it gives us Gus Elen and others like him they may call their vaudeville by any name they please."

MENDEL, the blind pianist, now plays a different tune with each hand and at the same time sings another. Some gentlemen recently wrote to ask if he could sing the words of a different song to the tune selected for singing, and if so, would he decide a wager by giving the same at the Monday night's performance at the Tivoli. He did so, and the experiment was so successful that Mendel has adopted it in his performance permanently. It is a feat of concentrated memory that has never been heard of before in the annals of music.

ONE of the chief items in the exceptionally interesting programme presented this week by Mr. Arthur J. Barclay at the Walthamstow Palace is a new sketch, entitled Bill's Birthday Party, presented by Mr. Leonard Barry and company. By an unfortunate mistake, the new sketch was both billed and placed in the programme as The Costers' Ball, instead of its correct title as given above, "the costers' ball" being merely the name of one of the songs sung. Bill's Birthday Party is an amusing sketch, in which a combination of farce and knockabout business makes a merry entertainment. The advent of a coster, Bill Jones, to a fortune, and the impossibility of the gentleman and his wife to conform to the usages of their new position form the groundwork of a clever little piece of pantomimic absurdity, and when the company have become accustomed to their parts and had time to elaborate their ideas it should prove highly diverting. As it stood on Monday night, Mr. Leonard Barry and the clever company supporting him succeeded in keeping the audience in a continual state of laughter, punctuated with hearty applause, and there seems no reason why Bill's Birthday Party should not soon settle down into an assured success.

EUSTON'S platforms in the sunshine on Friday last, the 13th inst., presented an animated spectacle, for quite a number of the men who write the nation's songs and the principals of the firms who publish them had assembled to bid farewell to Mr. Stanley E. Mullen (of the firm of Stanley E. Mullen and Co.), who was returning to Melbourne after an enjoyable stay in the Old Country, in which pleasure had been combined with business; business which it is safe to prophesy will be eminently to the advantage of authors, composers, and the Australian public generally.

AMONG the early arrivals were Messrs. A. J. Mills and Bennett Scott (Star Music Publishing Company), and Messrs. J. P. Harrington and J. Kandt (Monte Carlo Company), Mr. and Mrs. David Day and daughter, Messrs. John Smith, Lester Barrett, L. Bellamy, F. Collier (of the John Church Publishing Company), with whom the voyager was once associated; Felix McGlennon, H. Moccatta, and B. Feldman (of B. Feldman and Co.); H. E. Darewski, jun., William Francis, jun., Chas. Hall (Willis and Hall), Ph. Le Sueur (B. Williams and Co.), Walter Reynolds (Price and Reynolds), Warwick Williams (accompanied by his wife), Chas. Wilmott, Fred Mullen, and numerous private friends.

MRS. DAVID DAY, looking particularly well, graciously pinned on the traveller's coat the finely-executed "Sixpenny Pops" emblem in gold and enamel, an illustration of which appeared in our last issue, and added a sprig of white heather for luck, and a great cheer was raised as the last was seen for a long time of Mr. Stanley E. Mullen, with whom was his charming partner. Many valuable presents had been showered on the twain, notably a handsome writing-case, a case of pipes, and other useful articles.

MR. R. H. PATTERSON WILSON, manager of Miss Evelyn St. Maur's Variety Touring Company, is lying seriously ill in Guy's Hospital. He occupies No. 47 bed, in the Addison Ward. His wife, Mrs. Wilson, is getting up a benefit for him in London on Oct. 22, and will be pleased to hear from any professional sympathisers and friends who would give their services.

MR. ERNEST LEATHLEY, comedian, is the latest to join the Terriers Association. He was initiated into the mysteries of the order on Sunday. Terrier Harry Herald, who was in the chair, performed the ceremony.

FOR the first time in twenty years Billie Bint was induced to play in a cricket match at Hastings last Wednesday—the Hippodrome against the See See company. Billie felt quite a boy again, and his joy was shared by another forward youth, Walter Norman, who was also playing. Billie got one run, and missed an easy catch.

MR. BARNEY STUART has deputised for Sam Mayo this week at the Hippodrome, Woolwich, and scored an instantaneous success, being personally complimented by the manager, who has secured this talented artist for a month in the near future.

AT the 528th meeting of the Executive Committee of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association, held on Wednesday, the attention of members was drawn to the rule whereby artists placing their names on vouchers by which they do not eventually travel, and omitting to inform the secretary of the alteration in their arrangements, are liable to pay the other parties on the voucher whatever they may be charged in excess through the lapse of those who have not adhered to the voucher. It should also be noted that at certain London termini the entire party must get tickets at the same time in order to procure the concession. The secretary read the weekly statement, which showed a total of £43 17s. Forty-three new members were enrolled during the week.

MISS MAIDIE SCOTT has had her contract at the King's, Gateshead, next week cancelled through appearing at the Pavilion, Newcastle. Since the cancelling Miss Scott has received offers from ten managers to take over the date, and she has accepted the Pavilion, Greenock.

THE Royal Banzai Family of real Japanese last Saturday, in Manchester, took part in the lifeboat procession, and helped the collection, which amounted to a good sum. They were heartily thanked by the members of the Lifeboat Association.

OWING to last year's success of Aladdin at the Crystal Palace, Mr. Bannister Howard has commissioned Mr. Fred Bowyer to write the book of the next pantomime, the subject of which is to be The Forty Thieves; also the book for the Royal, Plymouth.

LA BELLE OTERO was fined £6 2s. 6d. at Paris on Thursday afternoon for motoring at an excessive speed. Her car knocked down a house-painter and smashed up his bicycle.

MR. CHARLES DENIER WARREN, who will be remembered as the principal comedian of the professional children's pantomime at the Grand, Clapham Junction, and the Royal, and who is now managing the Paris branch of M. Witmark and Sons, the music publishers, is paying a short business visit to London. Mr. Warren has, by his individual efforts, built up a large business in Paris, and has succeeded in interesting many of the leading French music hall artists and revue-writers in the many successful American songs controlled by the Witmarks. Mr. Warren's last theatrical engagement was at the Garrick, where he was very successful in the boy's part in Whitewashing Julia.

MR. EDMOND BOSANQUET writes to say that his lost medal has been found and restored to him by a Liverpool postman, and that he feels very gratified at again having it in his possession.

THE latest quotations of music hall shares are as follow:—Alhambra, 1 7-16; Canterbury, ½; Drury Lane, ½; Empire (15s. paid) 1⅜, ditto (10s. paid) 1; Gaiety, 1½; London Pavilion Ordinary 4⅜, ditto Pref. 4⅞; London Coliseum, 1-16; Metropolitan, ½; Moss' Empire 4⅞, ditto 5 per cent. Pref. 3⅞; Oxford, 6½; Palace, 14s. 3d.; Tivoli, 5⅞; Variety Consolidated Theatres, 14s. 6d.

A NEW turn which promises to make great strides to popularity is the Limericks (three gentlemen and a lady), who are appearing this week with most encouraging success at the Barnard's Palace, Woolwich. In their skit, The Final Hit, they introduce some good comedy boxing, buck-dancing, and singing, making altogether an excellent show.

HORSES with a good stage presence are somewhat rare; but the noble steed bestrode by La Milo as Lady Godiva in the Coventry Pageant and on which she will appear at the Alhambra, is quite an artist. He has appeared in several notable productions, and it is related of him that he, for a quadruped, takes a sagacious interest in his work. Once when appearing, carrying a well-known actor-manager in a gorgeous spectacle, he was seen by the agent of a rival actor, who also wanted a white horse in a forthcoming costume play, and was anxious to know if the animal would suit him. "Well," said he to his manager, "is he all right—good manners?" "Y-e-s," replied the agent, "he behaved very well, only one fault—he yawned twice during X's big speech." "Um," said his employer, "seems a bit of a critic."

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

THAT delightful coon number, "Bayou," written and composed by Harry Marlow, will be sung in America by Miss Gertrella all round the Keith tour when this talented artist commences a lengthy engagement in the States early next month, and will be embellished by specially-painted scenery and novel effects. The same lady will also sing Mr. J. F. Lambe's charming and popular song, "Queen of Old Samara," on the same tour. Both numbers are published by the Monte Carlo Publishing Company, and will be issued by Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter in America, by special arrangement with the younger firm.

MISS VESTA VICTORIA has taken with her to New York a song by Messrs. Leigh and Pether, of 'Waiting at the church" and "Poor John!" fame, a song fully in keeping with the reputation of these well-known writers. It is entitled "Don't get married any more, ma!" and is the piteous plaint of a maiden whose appeal to her mother who has divorced several husbands is to "Let me have a permanent papa!" It has been secured by Messrs. Francis and Day, who have also in hand a humorous number of the same artist's, entitled 'Wing tee wee," by Fred Murray and Chas. Hilbury.

MISS MARIE LLOYD has disposed of, to Mr. David Day's firm, a ditty, by Leigh and Powell, called "She doesn't know that I know," and one entitled "Oh! Mister What's-a-Name!" by Fred Murray and Kenneth Lyle.

NEW dance music which will be much in evidence during the coming festive season, and which Messrs. Francis and Day have in the press, include "Lady Tatter's Waltz," by Karl Kaps, and "The Pageant Lancers," arranged by Warwick Williams.

AMONG other songs secured during the last few days by Messrs. Francis and Day are:—"Mr. No-One from Nowhere" (featured by Miss Gladys Mavius), by Geo. A. Stevens; "I can't go no farver; or, My little stick" (Tom Woottwell), by Barnes and Weston; "Scarlet and Gold," by F. Ford and Cuthbert Kelly; "A dainty little pair of shoes" (Maie Ash), by A. Du Soir and J. A. Dix; "My wigwam just holds two," by Dave Hall and Chas. Collins; and "I'm waiting here for you" (Miss Agnes Hanson), by Lambe and Thurban.

ADVICES from Australia state that Mr. Hamilton Hill has made an enormous "hit" with Edward St. Quentin's beautiful ballad, "Queen of Love." The words are by Clifton Binghan. Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter publish the morceau.

AT the Aldwych Theatre there is one song that stands out above all numbers in the Gay Gordons, and that is Miss Ellaline Terris's charming and fascinating song, "Humpty and Dumpty." This dainty ditty, sung as only Miss Terris can sing it, is from the clever team of song-writers, Charles Wilmott (whose words are as words should be) and Herman E. Darewski, jun., whose melodies will haunt one with the charming and dainty "catchiness." Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter may be congratulated on having the only interpolated number and the undoubted success of the piece.

MISS MARIE LLOYD has this week being "trying on the dog" Messrs. Harrington and Tate's song, "Don't grumble at woman," with a view to breaking it in for America, where she will also exploit (from the same fecund pens) "Aha, that's tellings!" "It's your own look-out," and the popular number, published by the Monte Carlo Publishing Company, "Customs of the country," specially Americanised by Mr. Harrington, and with an apropos verse addressed to the sons and daughters of Uncle Sam which ought to be, as the Yanks say, "'way out of sight."

IN view of the forthcoming pantomime season, the Monte Carlo Publishing Company are issuing something like twenty new numbers this month, including their Monte Carlo Selection, No. 2, for which full orchestral parts are being printed. This selection contains some of the finest "plums" in the Monte Carlo basket, notably, "Bayou," "Fatherland," "Carolina," "Goo Goo," "Somebody cares for you," and "I'm going to try my luck in London."

MISS BERTHA STUART, the beautiful Scotch vocalist, has introduced at the Tivoli a new semi-martial song by Mills and Scott, entitled "You are still my Highland Laddie," which has caught on in no uncertain manner. A hearty burst of applause after the first verse and chorus is a sure sign that the subject has "gripped" the audience, and needless to say the song is enhanced by Miss Stuart's artistic rendering. The Star Company will issue this number immediately.

MISS MAUD ESMOND should be counted a rising star. At the East Ham Palace she is accorded a great welcome and numerous recalls. Miss Esmond is specially featuring Collins and Wallis's great song, "We all came in the world with nothing," which the Star Company are printing in large quantities.

MISS ELSIE STEADMAN will produce at the London Pavilion on Monday Alf. E. Rick and Maurice Scott's catchy chorus carol, "Swing me higher, Obadiah," which has been such a huge success at seaside resorts this summer. It is published by the Star Music Company.

Two of A. J. Mills and Bennett Scott's "real good things" for the forthcoming pantomimes are going great guns just now. Mr. George Lashwood is making everybody sing the chorus of "Oh! the merry widow," at the Empire, Sunderland; while at Walsall Mr. Whit Cunliffe is doing the "hat-trick" with his rollicking "Oh! the steamer," for which Mr. Stoll is having a scene specially painted. Both these winners are published by the Star Music Company.

MISS ROSE HAMILTON has accepted from the Shapiro Von Tilzer Music Company a new Norwegian song, entitled "Christina," which she intends to produce at an early date.

THE same company is also publishing Miss Florrie Gallimore's song, "I wish you luck," with which she has been making such a success on her provincial tour.

ANOTHER new song about to be issued by the Von Tilzer Company is "Dinky-Doo," Mr. T. E. Dunville's big winner, written and composed by Alf. Ellerton.

THE Von Tilzer Music Company's tuneful ballad, "Let me return to Dreamland" (Lidden and Edgar), will be sung by Mr. Dave Carter. Mr. Arthur Aldridge is also featuring this song specially at the Pavilion.

TESTIFYING eloquently to the world-wide popularity of Mr. J. F. Lambe's delightful song, "Queen of Old Samara," is the fact that talented instrumentalist, Orpheus, has elected to make a special feature of the melody in his entertainment nightly. Apropos, Mr. Hugh Nolan's company will shortly introduce the same popular song into the new musical comedy sketch, Miss Gretchen, while the Sisters Jonghmanns still continue to charm all hearers on the Macnaghten (London) circuit with their rendering of the song in question.

So highly did Miss Vesta Victoria think of Harrington and Tate's novel song, "The Queen of the Jujah Islands," that she sent to Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger some weeks before her departure to America, last week, a model of the special scenery she required them to paint to give "local colour" to this quaint description of an English girl's adventures on an island which only exists in the fertile imagination of the author. Miss Victoria's costume and general make-up for this song will be unlike anything that has ever yet been attempted on the music hall stage, and it is hoped, and expected, by all concerned that this song will prove, as the Americans themselves term it, a "riot" in America.

MR. HARRY FRAGSON, whose return to Paris was acclaimed with delight by his many admirers, has added to the joy of the Gay City by producing at La Scala a very clever song, entitled "Delicieuse Promenade," the words of which were written by P. Gavault, the author of the play My Wife, who has used the ear-haunting melody so popular in America and England under the title of "Bill Simmons," or "I've got to dance till the band gets through."

MISS RACHEL LOWE has scored a great success in her new song, "Take me down to Blackpool." In Manchester last week the audience caught the chorus immediately, and voiced their appreciation in no uncertain manner. Miss Lowe will shortly give London audiences the opportunity of passing their opinion on her latest effort.

MR. DAVE CARTER is again at the Canterbury, where he delights the audience with his charming rendition of "Love me, and the world is mine."

MISS MARY ANN BROWN, who does not depend upon a fanciful name for popularity, is making a good record at every engagement. Her list of Witmark songs is one that, combined with the voice and personality of the singer, never fails to make each performance a noteworthy one. "It was persuasion," "I'd rather be like pa," and "You'll have to get off and walk," are the songs she will sing at Proctor's next week.

ALICE BANTA, since her first appearance in vaudeville, has gone steadily forward, so that she is booked from one season to the next. "Love dreams," "Door of hope," "My dear," "As long as the world rolls on," and "I'd live or I'd die for you," are bringing her more encores than she knows what to do with. Miss Banta is always on deck with the latest popular songs.

GERTRUDE FISKE has recently pleased her audiences with the new songs, "I'd live or I'd die for you," "As long as the world rolls on," and "Door of hope." She has a most convincing way of carrying her audience with her.

M. WITMARK AND SONS have reason to be pleased with the enormous success of their songs, "Will you love me in December as you do in May" and "Love me, and the world is mine." The Witmarks stand alone among the popular music publishers as being opposed to the cheap editions of music, and naturally are jubilant at the great success of their numbers at the ordinary price.

MISS GLADYS HUXLEY, who is considered one of the prettiest ladies on the stage, appeared on Monday at the Oxford, where she received many recalls for her dainty and charming rendering of "Won't you go with me to Gogo?" by J. F. Lambe, music by T. W. Thurban, of "Brooklyn Cake Walk" fame. This number certainly caught on, and showed every promise of becoming most popular. Miss Huxley is a fine sportswoman. Her favourite hobby is motoring, at which she is an expert. She is the niece of the famous scientist Huxley.

MASTER E. FRISBY is storming them at the Shepherd's Bush Empire with his songs, "Starlight" and "At the Old Cross Roads."

MISS BERTHA STUART has just produced a new song at the Tivoli with great success. It is entitled "Bonny Mary o' Glengary," and Messrs. B. Feldman and Co., the publishers, have every reason in anticipating that this will be another winner. It is from the pens of Weston, Barnes, and Maurice Scott.

MESSRS. B. FELDMAN AND CO. have just issued a very catchy chorus song, entitled "I love to see the ocean." The simplicity of the refrain makes it very attractive to popular audiences, and it is in very great demand. It is written and composed by Alf. E. Pick and Maurice Scott.

THE Sisters Edwards are scoring big with "Lavender," another fine number by Charles Wilmott and H. E. Darewski, jun.

MISS WINIFRED HARE was greatly surprised the other evening whilst singing "Cheer up, Mary!" to hear a boy in the gallery (a perfect stranger) singing the refrain of this song which she has so popularised. This occurred at the second and third hall where she was working, the singer evidently being the same. She made inquiries as to who the boy was, and it was eventually found out that it was one of "the Manchester gallery boys," who had heard Miss Hare there, and, coming up to London, wanted to show that he had not forgotten her.

AMERICAN PUBLISHER'S TRIP.

Mr. Isidore Witmark, who recently returned from Europe, where he transacted a large volume of business, is greatly pleased with the results, both as to productions and songs he placed on the other side, as well as with the novelties he brought back with him.

His itinerary covered Hamburg, Berlin, Leipsic, Dresden, Prague, Vienna, Salsburg, Munich, Nürnburg, Frankfort, a trip up the Rhine, Cologne, Dusseldorf, Aix-la-Chapelle, Paris, and London. In all his journeyings business necessarily occupied his first attention, but after that, where time permitted, a historic spot or subject of interest was indulged in.

Mr. Witmark states that business matters in all the cities he visited proved very satisfactory. "In Vienna I found the light school of operatic music is becoming better known; all over the Continent, even London, is adopting much of it. Notwithstanding this fact, I closed some very important contracts in Vienna for our house, and arranged, among other things, for the production of De Koven's Highwayman and other American operas in the near future. Also I brought back with me Regel's famous ballet pantomime, The Red Shoes, having the production and all other rights. This ballet ran a year in London, and also was produced in Vienna, Berlin, Milan, and Budapest. I have an option also on several others of a similar character."

A matter which held a large place in Mr. Witmark's heart is the question of copyright, and his work in the behalf of publishing houses, authors, and composers will undoubtedly be of lasting benefit. In the principal cities that he visited he studied the question, in Berlin with Prof. Ostereich, and in London with Mr. T. P. O'Connor, M.P., who made so many friends in New York on the occasion of his last visit there. One of the pleasantest recollections which Mr. Isidore Witmark has of his recent visit to London is of a cosy little tea party on the terrace of the House of Commons, when he was the guest of Mr. O'Connor. Other members of the party were Mr. Nathan Burkan, solicitor to the firm of Witmarks, and Mr. F. H. Pedgrift.

GUS ELEN IN AMERICA.

INSTANTANEOUS SUCCESS.
IN ADVANCE VAUDEVILLE.
GUS ELEN'S DEBUT IN AMERICA.
THE SINGER AND THE SONGS SCORE HITS WITH THE HEARERS AND BECOME POPULAR AT ONCE.

In the New York Theatre last night Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger gave advanced vaudeville another upward boost by presenting on the bill headliners of the English vaudeville stage.

Mr. Gus Elen, an interpreter in song of English types, familiar on the streets and byways of London, made his American début, and if the welcome given to him is any criterion it will be a long time before the "'alls" of old London hear his voice. Mr. Elen does not imitate Albert Chevalier. He has a style all his own.—New York Herald, Sept. 10, '07.

LONDON TYPES IN NEW YORK.
GUS ELEN, ADMIRABLE SINGER OF COCKNEY SONGS, MAKES AMERICAN DEBUT.

A few minutes with Gus Elen at the New York Theatre is almost as good as a trip to Whitechapel or the Limehouse district. For some people it will seem better, for they will get the east-side London types without the accompanying discomfort. They will also save steamer and 'bus fares.

Mr. Elen picks up that most interesting of London street types, the cockney workingman, and delivers him on the stage very much as he is in his own environment. The calcium man does his best to hide Mr. Elen's light under the theatrical bushel, but he does not succeed. As a matter of fact this music hall artist does not need such aid. His make-ups are true pictures, and they seem built up from within, not merely pictorial representations. You get the Bow Bells voice—that strange, raucous, quavering voice with its queer breaks into the treble, the shambling gait and the sudden jerky gestures of the coster, with all the little mannerisms that serve to make him what he is. The mannerisms are inexplicable, but they are quaint and belong to no other human type. He is notably comic in "'Alf a pint of ale," in which the wheezy old cockney tells his opinion of poor misguided folk who like coffee, cocoa, and such stuff. His song about the pavement scriveners would be funnier to the average American if he were familiar with the kind of art it satirises. But it is a capital little song, and goes very well.—New York Times, Sept. 10, '07.

Mr. Elen must have felt proud of the reception given him. He certainly has every right to, for it is not often that a Broadway audience takes a foreigner—in vaudeville, at any rate—to its heart right at the jump, so to speak. He is a singer somewhat on the order of Mr. Chevalier, but with a repertory—at least judging from his songs last night—lacking the quiet songs requiring repression that are the gems of Mr. Chevalier's collection.

Mr. Elen is a master of facial expressions—of all expressions of attitude—and he can give an audience a vivid impression of the attributes of a character by the crook of an elbow, the kick-up of a leg. He shows the lower London types, the crossing-sweeper, the carpenter, and all sorts of costers. He is said to be the greatest exponent of the coster on the stage, and one may well believe this after hearing him sing the four songs he sang last night.—The Morning Telegraph, Sept. 10, '07.

VIDE NEW YORK THEATRE ADVT.
Glorious triumph for Gus Elen.

Mr. Elen is a singer of cockney and coster songs, Miss Romaine is an impersonator of boys. In his act Mr. Elen sang several of his London hits, and showed himself a finished artist. Still, it is doubtful if his act will "go" as well here as in England. He presents the cockney as he is, not as American theatre-goers are used to seeing him represented, and for this very reason he did not score as heavily as if he had exaggerated the characters. The longer he remains the better he will be liked.—The World, Sept. 10, '07.

MORE ENGLISH VAUDEVILLE.

Gus Elen's cockney impersonations are masterly in make-up, voice, and action. In both pathos and humour they are trenchant, even a little grim. Particularly artistic is their realism and restraint. At one point there were loud cries from the audience for his famous song, "'E dunno where 'e are," but when the orchestra struck up the opening bars it was quite evident that the players were in a similar predicament. That song, it seemed, had not been rehearsed, so Mr. Elen sang instead an amusing ditty about "'Alf a pint of ale."—The Globe and Commercial Advertiser, Sept. 10, '07.

COSTER SINGER WELCOMED.
ELEN CAPTURES PATRONS OF THE NEW YORK THEATRE.

Gus Elen, a favourite coster comedian of the London music halls, received a respectable imitation of an ovation last night at the New York Theatre. The audience indicated that it intended to like him as soon as his name was posted. Each of his four songs was cheered heartily.

Elen's admirers liked him just as much in the guise of a crossing-sweeper as in the more opulent attire of a cabman, and waxed equally enthusiastic over his impersonation of a despiser of soft drinks.—The Sun (New York), Sept. 10, '07.

NEW SINGER FROM LONDON.
GUS ELEN, COSTER COMEDIAN.

Mr. Elen presents that interesting type, the cockney workman. His make-ups are admirable, and he suits his voice to the characters he assumes with accuracy and fidelity. Especially was he happy in a ditty called "'Alf a pint o' ale," in which he tells of his disgust for people who drink and think they enjoy "soft" beverages.—Evening Mail, Sept. 10, '07.

FRANK GERALD'S PRESENTATION.

We absorbed several interesting facts at the complimentary dinner given to Mr. Frank Gerald on Sunday evening at the Victoria Hall, Criterion Restaurant. First and foremost, the genial chairman—the apostle of drama written on business principles, with both eyes glued on the box-office receipts—Mr. Cecil Raleigh, confessed himself not only a Trade Unionist, but a Socialist. Had he not as far back as 1885 sold copies of Justice in Regent's Park, and was he not a disciple of H. M. Hyndman? He also told us that the music-hall strike in January last was compromised by the stars. Then Jimmy Glover, Mayor of Bexhill and maestro of Drury Lane, a colleague and chum of Cecil Raleigh's, informed us what rousing work he had done in the fast-advancing south coast resort referred to, and how, after being treated with contumely and ingratitude, his ever-increasing phalanx of friends had made him mayor and threatened to do it again. Then Mr. Frank Gerald, we learnt, had been an actor in Australia before he became a variety artist in England, and had secured the good word as a man and actor of no less an authority than the Hon. G. S. Coppin, who died last year at the advanced age of eighty-seven.

The speeches mostly ran in one groove. There was general agreement that both actors and music-hall artists can only secure a living wage by adopting Trade Union principles; and the work of Mr. Frank Gerald in forming, last January, the triple alliance between the Amalgamated Society of Musicians, the National Association of Theatrical Employees, and the Variety Artists' Federation, and putting himself in the forefront of the music-hall strike was the theme of more than one fervid speech. It will be remembered that the Federation did not re-elect Mr. Gerald as its secretary, and that his work as an organiser and his abilities as a speaker found an outlet recently when he attended as delegate of the Actors' Union at Bath. To this appointment was due no doubt the sprinkling of actors who came to the banquet on Sunday to do honour to Mr. Gerald, who was rewarded during the evening with a substantial testimonial—no less than fifty guineas having been subscribed by the Artists' Protection League, a new organisation for watching the interests of entertainers of all kinds, pioneered by Mr. Harry Mountford, whose name was very prominent as an organiser and speaker during the music-hall strike.

Among those present were Messrs. Cecil Raleigh (in the chair), James W. Glover, George Gray (in the vice-chair), Harry Mountford, J. B. Williams, Wm. Johnson, Harry Gosling, L.C.C., Harry Orbell, Pat Carey, Pat Doherty, Richard Judd Green, Leonard Mortimer, H. G. Hibbert, Fred Harrison, James O'Grady, M.P., Frederick Ross, S. Major Jones, Frederick Morrison, Henry Armstrong, Cecil Gray, Edgar Lee, Miss Lucy Sibley, Frank Hardie, Mrs. Pete Curran, and other ladies and gentlemen.

After the loyal toasts, Mr. CECIL RALEIGH, the chairman, rose to propose the toast of "Mr. Frank Gerald." He thought the dinner that night had a future. It might be the genesis of a great annual festival in celebration of the first introduction of the principles of Trade Unionism to the world of entertainment. Mr. Gerald had spoken of the grievances of artists years before but to no purpose, and the solid fact remained that unless organised and strong enough to strike workers did not obtain redress for their grievances. Mr. Raleigh went on to refer to the evils of the truck system, and the necessity of the Truck Acts. Trade Unions were formed to define the law of supply and demand, and to obtain an honest minimum living wage. He remembered when rural postmen, who worked seven days a week, and walked ten miles a day, applied to Mr. Fawcett, then Postmaster-General, and asked for an increase on their pittance of 13s. per week, receiving for answer, "There are plenty more where you come from." Their earnings scarcely paid for shoe-leather, but they had to grin and bear it, for there was no organisation. It had been left to Frank Gerald to bring into the music-hall calling Trade Union principles. The artists had stood by those principles, but had thrown over their advocate and apostle as the German Emperor threw over Bismarck, who out of a dozen twopenny States constructed a great Empire. It was the fate of pioneers and reformers to get more kicks than halfpence; and therefore they in that hall desired to show their appreciation of Frank Gerald. The work was there; all honour, then, to the man who did it. Mr. Gerald now represented a weak-backed Union; he should make it strong. Mr. Raleigh read a telegram from the Gallery First Nighters' Club, and Lionel Brough, congratulating Frank Gerald on a plucky fight, and concluded by expressing the pleasure he felt in presiding, and in proposing their guest's very good health and future prosperity.

MR. HARRY MOUNTFORD "rallied" the chairman on his descent from the greater Sir Walter of Elizabethan days, quoting at the same time a letter written by that worthy to his royal mistress while he was confined in the Tower. The name of "Cecil," too, suggested to the speaker that Mr. Raleigh had a Burleigh-like nod. He could understand Mr. Raleigh's advocacy of drama twice nightly, as it meant a double percentage. Addressing himself to the work of Mr. Frank Gerald, he said that gentleman, after spade work for five or six years, assisted to found the V.A.F., and afterwards, with Messrs. Jesson and Johnson, the Alliance, the agreement being entered into on paper and signed by the three secretaries. The Alliance, too, received unanimous recognition at every meeting in London or the country, and the Alliance helped the artists to win. He had in the early days of the movement gone so far as to pay £30 out of his own pocket as initial expenses, which had never been returned to him. He had been attacked and maligned in every way while secretary of the Federation, but he had been loyal and true to the cause, and he had been hustled out of the position by the very men whom he had educated to the business. Well might he exclaim with the poet, "I perish by the people I have made." Mr. Gerald had nothing whatever to do with the Arbitration, as a resolution was passed by the V.A.F. committee that neither he nor their guest that night should appear before the Arbitrator, and now artists were crying over the Award. In obtaining that Award the Alliance were legal partners, moral partners, and financial partners. Frank Gerald was loyal to that Alliance. He had taken up an honourable position. It was his pleasant duty on behalf of the Artists' Protection Union, which he represented, to present Mr. Gerald with a cheque for fifty guineas.

MR. J. B. WILLIAMS said that when a man set out on the path of reform as Frank Gerald had done, and became, as it were, a figure-head, he must expect metaphorical brickbats, carping criticism, and what he might term victimisation. It was the common lot of Trade Union leaders. As a result of the music-hall dispute the musicians had obtained an increase of £2000 in salary. He had understudied Oliver Twist, and hoped to obtain more in the future. From the newspapers he learnt that the Award was not all the artists thought it was. Men who were now criticising Gerald never did a stroke of work until the fight was over. It took a clever man to build up; any fool could pull down. In conclusion, he desired to show his appreciation of Frank Gerald, and he was proud to be there to support him.

After speeches by MR. W. JOHNSON, MR. HARRY ORBELL, MR. HARRY GOSLING, and MR. PAT CAREY, MR. GEORGE GRAY, who filled the vice-chair, said it generally fell to his lot to follow the top, bottom, and middle of the bill, and keep the audience in in conjunction with the bioscope. He had come specially from Southampton to speak of his bosom friend Frank Gerald, and he was glad to meet Mr. Cecil Raleigh, Trade Unionist, Socialist, and friend of the Lord Chamberlain. As far as he could make out, every Socialist held different views. There could be only one view of Frank Gerald. With him it was not a question of L. S. D. He worked with single aim and purpose. The Federation had been sold by those seeking office and self-aggrandisement. He hoped one day to see a grand amalgamation of every branch of their profession, and if that came about they would ask Frank Gerald to be at the head.

MR. CECIL RALEIGH, in handing Mr. Gerald several cheques and a gold watch "to mark time," said that everybody had to suffer in pioneering a cause, and, like General Baden-Powell, he thought the best things to go through life with were a sense of humour and a thick stick.

MR. FRANK GERALD, on rising to return thanks, was most enthusiastically cheered. He said it had really been most embarrassing to him to sit there and hear one speaker after another eulogise his services; but it meant a great deal to a man to see around him a gathering like that, and to know that there were so many who had trust in him. During the last six months he had had many days of bitterness, many moments of despair. Friends had said to him, "What did I tell you? You neglect your own business; make an enemy of every manager, and then at the end you are turned out without a 'thank you.'" He, however, had always believed in the rank-and-file of the profession, who had a sincere honesty. He most distinctly charged the Variety Artists' Federation with an act of treachery towards the musicians and stage employees—an act that he would not associate himself with—and until the Federation wiped that blot away there would be a stain on its escutcheon. His music-hall career was now at an end. It was no fault of his. The managers would not have him: he was barred and boycotted. He had just returned from Bath, where actors for the first time had been represented at a Trade Union Congress. He himself should like to see the Actors' Association and the Actors' Union one. He could see no obstacle in the path of unity. He was glad to see the older society taking example from its younger brother. He welcomed, too, the formation of the Artists' Protection League, which would welcome to its ranks artists of every kind. He was still in the van of the movement, and was still going to fight for it. He had devoted the last five years of his life to it, and he meant to see it through to the end. To him that would be a memorable evening. He did thank them all and those who were not present most sincerely. He thanked them for their kindness and their generosity. They would dispel the gloomy thoughts that came over him; and he trusted that he should never do anything that would forfeit their confidence and trust.

MR. J. M. GLOVER, in a speech full of amusing personal references, proposed the health of their chairman, whom he had known for twenty-seven years.

MR. CECIL RALEIGH briefly replied.

The proceedings were enlivened by comic songs by Mr. Sam Mayo, and Miss Vera Terranova sang with considerable expression "Absent." Both artists were accompanied by Mr. Angelo Asher.

THE TIVOLI.

The pianoforte is so often seen now on the stage, and solos on that instrument are always so acceptable to music-hall audiences, that one is not surprised at the exceedingly warm reception accorded to Mendel, the blind pianist, who is paying a return visit to the cosy little house in the Strand. As a performer Mendel is quite a virtuoso, and, besides, possesses a marvellous gift of memory, which he utilises by repeating a melody immediately after it has been played by another. The only difference that one notices is that Mendel's treatment of the bass is fuller and more scholarly, and that he often improves on the original harmonies. Early in the Tivoli programme we have a "hands across the sea" song in march time, which triumphantly proclaims the fortuitous circumstances arising from the marriage of "Tommy Atkins and Dolly Gray." Miss Margaret Ashton sings it with rare spirit and go. A hearty reception is given shortly afterwards to Miss Clara Alexander, an American raconteuse, who has had plenty of opportunities in her own country of observing very closely the habits and peculiarities of the "coon," and gives London audiences a taste of her quality in imitations of an old nigger and negress.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grattan, both facile exponents of light comedy, are responsible for a neat little duologue entitled Packing Up. Mr. and Mrs. Chugwater are going out, and when the curtain rises both are dressing—Mrs. C. off. Mr. C., while shaving, cuts himself—an annoying incident which evokes emphatic language. Then he loses his collar-stud; and the amiable consolations of Mrs. C. only seem to add to his irascibility. Eventually, however, the lady declares she has had enough of his temper, and from being submissive and angelic becomes shrewish and aggressive. This new phase of his wife's character effectually quells the irritability of Chugwater, but through the chapter of accidents the train is missed and they remain at home. Brightly and cleverly played, Packing Up is an agreeable little episode that is heartily received.

We have had many sand dancers; but there are few who retain their supremacy so completely as does My Fancy, who brings down the house by the music of her twinkling feet. Mr. Tom Edwards, in his ventriloquial act, has avoided the shibboleths of the old-fashioned school. He puts many amusing witticisms into the mechanical mouth of his figure, Curly, and utters jokes against himself like the true sportsman that he is. The quieting of the baby is a particularly amusing addition to the act, and one that appeals with particular force to the ladies of the audience.

Miss Bertha Stuart gives Scotch songs something more than the cut-and-dried rendering to which we are so unhappily accustomed from singers who miss their dramatic significance. To her fine interpretation of "Caller Herrin'" she gives a generous measure of intensity. The house responds warmly to her efforts, and she is called and recalled. Mr. Phil Ray has an amusing song, and also indulges in a burlesque recitation; fun is in the ascendant with the jolly juggling and jesting of Radford and Valentine; Mr. Wilkie Bard makes plenty of fun with "You, you, you"; Foreman and Fannan are whimsical cross-talkers; and the programme has other contributors in Dandy George and his dog, Sam Mayo, Victoria Monks, the Three Laurels, and the Twin Andersons. It is always a pleasant experience to meet Messrs. Joe Wilson (the manager) and James Howell (the treasurer) "in front" at this very popular and well-conducted house.

MR. MAURICE LEE, a light comedian of great promise, has been appearing with considerable success at Greenwich during the week, and has been well equipped by Messrs. Murphy and Lipton with songs. His "Taximo" number is greatly to the liking of the public.

MR. GEORGE BROOKS produced with great success, at the Holborn Empire on Monday, a new comic song by Fred W. Leigh and E. Bateman, the music by the former, entitled "Jack of all trades—master of none."

MISS ANNIE MARS will shortly appear at the Alhambra in a new song-scena specially written for her by Messrs. Wilmott and H. E. Darewski.

THE V.A.F. AND THE AWARD.

Peace was predominant at the mass meeting of the Variety Artists' Federation, which took place at the Camberwell Empire on Sunday last. Mr. Joe O'Gorman, chairman of the Federation, presided, and was supported by Mr. W. H. Clemart, vice-chairman, Mr. Monte Bayly, secretary, and most of the executive of the Federation; while a number of labour leaders present included Mr. J. Havelock Wilson, M.P., and Mr. James O'Grady, M.P. The meeting was called (1) To discuss an alleged evasion of the Arbitrator's Award; (2) receive the report of the negotiations with the Arbitrator since the Award has been issued; (3) to decide the methods to be adopted to enforce the Award.

The chairman prefaced his remarks by reading numerous telegrams from various members of the Federation regretting their inability to be present and wishing success to the cause. One from Mr. Wal Pink, who was described as "an esteemed and trusted leader" read: "Regret absence, which please explain. Whatever happens, the Award must be upheld. We won the matinées, and we are not going to be robbed of the fruits of our victory. Fight to the last to enforce the Award. Better die fighting like men than live trembling like cowards. Long live the Federation." Another from Mr. Harry Lauder was as follows: "Feeling very much indisposed with sore throat; better rest to-day. Nevertheless, whatever decision arrived at you may be assured I am with you. I will be pleased to hear the result of the meeting." Letters from prominent Labour M.P.'s were also read, and enthusiastically received.

The Chairman, addressing the meeting as "Sister and Brother Artists," said they would readily agree that it was with the utmost reluctance that they thought it necessary to call that meeting there that day. Mr. Clemart, Mr. Pink, and himself had been arbitrating for over six months. Mr. Askwith, after twenty-three days, gave the Award; but he gave the managers a month's grace, and during that month their friends, the managers, had made very good use of their time in booking people up before July 14. With very few exceptions, notably Mr. Stoll, managers had disregarded some of the terms of the Award. He held no brief for Mr. Stoll, but he did know he was an honourable man, and anything he contracted to do he did. If he cut down your salary you had a kicking, and if he put his (the chairman's) up he would kick; but he did not think there would be much kicking. The Arbitrator gave his Award, and they were prepared as honourable men and women to accept that Award whatever it was. The proprietors also said they would accept it; why, then, did they not accept it at once, and issue contracts on July 14? Artists objected to the deduction of commissions, and intended to object right to the very finish. The chairman referred to an article in a contemporary, in which the V.A.F. was described as a society remarkable for the fact that they expelled each other according to the balance of power. It was true there were a few malcontents looking after personal notoriety, who had gone outside and made a noise, but he did not think that their organisation had been weakened thereby, but strengthened. There was no dissension now—nobody looking for glory. All in the Federation wanted to do everything in their power to further the cause of the great industry in which they were interested. But their moderation from the day they went to arbitration had been mistaken, and there was not the slightest doubt that people in the north were "twisting the contract on them." They thought that the Federation was weak, that there was disruption in their ranks, but they would find out their mistake. All over the country there was absolute unity, and their numbers were increasing. They had got the Award, and were entitled to the privileges it gave them. He would say nothing to embitter the situation between Mr. Tozer and themselves, but there was not the slightest doubt that little proprietors in the north had taken their lead from him, and had said, "Do you think it fair to make me follow the Award when you allow Mr. Tozer to act differently?" He asked Mr. Clemart to read the correspondence which passed between the Federation and Mr. Tozer during the last few days.

Before reading the letters, Mr. Clemart said the representatives of the Federation, consisting of Mr. O'Gorman, Mr. Doughty, and himself, had a meeting with Messrs. Wells, Tozer, and Walter Payne before the Arbitrator on Friday, Sept. 6, when the points at issue were discussed. Up to that time the syndicate contract was made out that "the artist accepts an engagement to appear every evening and on Saturday afternoon (making seven performances per week) at the salary stated in the schedule hereto." Then lower down in the body of the contract appeared Clause 3. "The artist agrees to appear at any matinées required by the management, and shall be paid for each matinée at the rate of one-seventh of the weekly salary." At the bottom of the contract was the schedule .... weeks commencing on .... 190.., at a salary of £.... per week, followed by the amazing clause:—"Of which said salary six-sevenths shall be deemed to be in respect of six evening performances, and one-seventh of such salary shall be deemed to be in respect of one Saturday matinée as above."

Where, then, were they going to pay for their matinée on that? After a long argument it was decided that after "Every evening and on Saturday afternoons" the words "In accordance with Clause 3" should be inserted. In the schedule, after "at a salary of £.... per week" "six night performances" should be added, and the clause splitting the salary into sevenths should be deleted entirely, thus establishing the fact once and for all that the weekly salary is that paid for the evening performances, and that the matinée money is extra.

The day following, Mr. O'Gorman received the following letter:—

1 Durham House-street, Strand, W.C.,
Sept. 10, 1907.

Dear Mr. O'Gorman,—You will be glad to know that the Arbitrator has approved the altered wording of the schedule in the Tivoli and similar contracts. Whilst of opinion that the previous wording (and I think that most reasonable critics would agree therein) was in entire accordance with the meaning of the Award, we assent to the phraseology being altered so as to meet any possible objection in regard to the extra amount being specifically stated in pounds, shillings, and pence, both (a) in relation to the aggregate six nights' salary and (b) in relation to the matinée salary.

Mr. Askwith writes in fulfilment of his intimation on Friday last that he has no objection to the inclusion of the words:—"Saturday matinée, £.... Total £...." We shall have proof ready on Thursday or Friday of the altered form so as to put the fresh contracts into use forthwith. Would you like to have one when ready?

In this matter we have been happy to meet your views as far as practicable, and trust that should any further question arise upon the Award we may be equally successful with yourselves in settling such point or points by agreement.—With kind regards, yours faithfully,

(Signed) Henry Tozer.

In reply to that Mr. O'Gorman sent Mr. Tozer a wire that it was an absolute evasion of the Award, and they would not have it. Mr. Tozer wired back to Mr. O'Gorman that he was under some misapprehension, and he was writing. In the meantime counsel's opinion was taken, and it was decided to hold a special committee meeting on Thursday. As Mr. O'Gorman had not time to get the letter Mr. Tozer had sent him to Cardiff, he telephoned for the letter to be sent to him in town. The letter was as follows:—

Sept. 12, 1907.

OXFORD AND TIVOLI CONTRACTS.

Dear Mr. O'Gorman,—I enclose you copy of letter sent to Cardiff last night.

It seems to me there is but little real difference between us; at the most it is but one of form. My co-directors and I are, as stated in the enclosed letter, determined to abide by the Award and by the Arbitrator's fiat upon its interpretation.

Where practicable and possible we are, as we always have been, desirous of mutually arranging points of difference.

With regard to the clause as to matinée payment, my co-directors and I cannot comprehend your wishes. In order that we may do so, will you kindly say "Yes" or "No" to each of these three propositions:—

1. Do you wish that the artist shall clearly understand from the contract what he is to receive in pounds, shillings, and pence for his week of six night performances?

2. Do you wish that the artist shall clearly understand from the contract what he is to receive in pounds, shillings, and pence for his Saturday matinée?

3. Do you wish that the artist shall clearly understand from the contract what total payment in pounds, shillings, and pence he is to receive for his seven performances?

Awaiting your reply, I remain, yours faithfully,

(Signed) Henry Tozer.

(Enclosure.)

Sept. 11, 1907.

Dear Mr. O'Gorman,—Many thanks for your telegram. Possibly I did not explain the matter sufficiently clearly, and there is therefore some misunderstanding on your part.

You may rest assured that we shall not issue any form of contract whatever until and unless first submitted to and definitely approved by the Arbitrator.

I suggest that you had better see proof when same is ready. Shall you be in town shortly, so that we may meet and clear this up, if necessary?

With yourself and your colleagues I hope we shall be able to satisfactorily arrange any different points of view that may seem to exist, and to work together harmoniously and profitably.—Faithfully yours,

(Signed) Henry Tozer.

These communications were put to the meeting and discussed, and the outcome was that the following letter was sent to Mr. Tozer by unanimous resolution:—

Sept. 12, 1907.

Henry Tozer, Esq.,
1, Durham House-street,
Strand, W.C.

Dear Sir,—In reply to yours of Sept. 10, 11, and 12. We have taken our counsel's opinion on the communications you have sent to Mr. O'Gorman—that the Arbitrator has allowed you to make alterations in your contract other than those agreed upon before the parties on Friday last.

On our counsel's instructions, we now give you until Sept. 14, at 12 noon, to forward us a copy of your "revised" form of contract, and if there is any alteration, amendment, or addition to what was agreed upon before the parties, we give you notice that we shall take immediate steps to enforce the Award in any way we deem necessary. The only alterations we can accept are those made before the Arbitrator last Friday, which are as follows:—

1. The insertion of the words "in accordance with Clause 3," after "every evening, and on Saturday afternoon."

2. The addition of "six night performances after the words "at a salary of £.... per week."

3. The deletion entirely of the paragraph commencing "of which said salary six-sevenths shall be deemed," &c.

Further, we require the alteration in reference to the commission clause, that the words "ten per cent." be changed for the words "the commission payable on this contract." We also require the entire deletion of Clause 2, which limits the artist's appearance at any other theatre.

We are aware that many contracts have been signed between the 14th of July, and now an undertaking from you will be necessary to the effect that all contracts signed, and issued by you from July 14 up to the present moment shall be amenable to the new conditions.

This letter is sent you, having been carried unanimously by the Executive Committee now sitting.—Yours faithfully,

(Signed) Monte Bayly,
General Secretary.

Mr. Tozer replied:—

1, Durham House-street,
Sept. 13, 1907.

The Secretary,
Variety Artistes' Federation,
Wellington-street, W.C.

Dear Sir,—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 12th inst.

The point of difference between us appears to be what was the exact decision of the Arbitrator on Friday, the 6th inst., your contention being that the copy contract as altered in red by the Arbitrator constituted the whole of his decision; on the other hand, we contend that the decision included something in addition. You will, I am sure, agree that this sums up the cause of the present regrettable misunderstanding.

Neither my colleagues nor myself have acted nor desire to act in any way contrary to the Arbitrator's decision nor to the spirit of the Award. Inasmuch as Mr. Askwith is now in Ireland, and cannot for the moment decide the point at issue between us, we have meanwhile no objection to our contracts being made in entire accordance with the form altered in red ink by the Arbitrator on the 6th inst., a copy of which was then given to me by your counsel.

With reference to the Commission Clause, this was not at that time gone into before the Arbitrator, but we are willing to leave the rate of commission in blank, to be filled in by the artists when signing the contract. This will give effect to your suggestion and at the same time leave no possibility of dispute as to what the "commission payable" is.

We requested Mr. Rutland some time since to place this matter before you, and presumed you were in communication with him upon it.

With reference to contracts made between July 14 and Sept. 7, it was agreed before the Arbitrator on Friday last by your counsel that those should remain untouched, but if this agreement is disputed, we are quite prepared to deal with the matter in such manner as Mr. Askwith may suggest.

Lastly, with reference to your suggestion upon Clause 2 in our contracts, we have not had an opportunity of discussing this with you, and it was a pity you did not mention it to us when before Mr. Askwith on the last occasion. If there is any very serious objection to it, we have no doubt that we shall be able to meet you in the matter.—Yours faithfully,

(Signed) Henry Tozer.

In reply to that the Committee wrote:—

Sept. 14, 1907.

Henry Tozer, Esq.,
1, Durham House-street,
Strand, W.C.

Dear Sir,—In reply to yours of the 13th. We regret the misunderstanding equally with yourself, and are only too anxious to avoid any unpleasantness, which would undoubtedly only result in loss to both sides.

We cannot see any reason for the additions you claim Mr. Askwith has allowed you to make to what was agreed before the parties on Friday, Sept. 6. If the weekly salary is stated together with the matinée clause, we fail to see how any possible misunderstanding can arise.

We shall be glad to accept your offer of your contracts being made in entire accordance with the form altered in red ink by the Arbitrator on the 6th inst.—not as a temporary arrangement, until he returns, but as a permanent settlement of the point in dispute between us.

If this meets your views we shall be glad of a letter to that effect to-day for the purpose of reading it at the Camberwell meeting, with the intention of allaying the feeling amongst our members, which we assure you is at the present moment most acute.—Yours faithfully,

(Signed) Monte Bayly,
General Secretary.

Mr. Tozer's reply was as follows:—

1, Durham House-street,
Sept. 14, 1907.

Monte Bayly, Esq.,
Variety Artistes' Federation,
28, Wellington-street, W.C.

Dear Sir,—I am in receipt of your favour of yesterday's date, and shall be glad in every practical way to further your efforts to allay the feeling among your members.

Reciprocating your desire for a friendly settlement, we shall be willing, in accordance with your wish, to permanently adopt the form altered in red. It will, of course, be advisable after the Arbitrator's return to have this and the other little points formally settled with the impress of his approval.

With regard to the allegations of mala fides on our part, it would only be "fair," "just," and "courteous" that these should be withdrawn, which, I presume, you will arrange to be done at your meeting.—Yours faithfully,

(Signed) Henry Tozer.

In reply to that the Committee wrote:—

Sept. 14, 1907.

Henry Tozer, Esq.,
1, Durham House-street,
Strand, W.C.

Dear Sir,—Many thanks for yours of to-day's date just to hand. We assure you that we are only too anxious to allay the feeling of our members and avoid any possible disturbance of the music hall industry. We learn with the greatest pleasure that you are willing to adopt the form altered in red, and in order to avoid the slightest chance of any possible misunderstanding we enclose you a copy made out in your office on Sept. 6. We shall be glad if you will return the same with a short note stating that this is the basis of the agreement between us. We shall, of course, be agreeable to have this confirmed by the Arbitrator on his return, and also to decide before him the other little points referred to.

In regard to the allegations you speak of, it will be a pleasure to inform our meeting that the misunderstanding between us has now been entirely cleared up.—Yours faithfully,

The Variety Artistes' Federation,
(Signed) Monte Bayly,
General Secretary.

Mr. Tozer replied:—

The Tivoli, Strand,
Sept. 14, 1907.

Dear Sir,—Herewith I return form duly endorsed. Nothing now remains but to await the Arbitrator's return.

I trust your meeting will be satisfactory to everybody, and that, as far as we are concerned, your Chairman will withdraw in no grudging spirit the imputation of mala fides.—Yours faithfully,

(Signed) Henry Tozer.

The reading of the final letter was greeted with prolonged cheers.

The Chairman said he must add to what Mr. Clemart had read that on the Friday where Mr. Tozer says our counsel agreed that the contracts already made could not be touched, both Mr. Clemart and himself tried to correct that statement. They did object to them standing, but were not allowed to do so by Mr. Walter Payne, and from that moment he told Mr. Clemart that if that was the way they were going to be treated he had done arbitrating, and was not going before Mr. Askwith any more. The appreciation with which they had just greeted that statement showed that they heartily supported their action. That was considerably emphasised by the reports of the members' meetings in answer to the following question, which was sent out to all their meetings to vote upon:—"That this meeting gives their support to any action that the Executive Committee deem necessary to enforce the Award." Unanimous replies had been received from all quarters. The chairman went on to say that in reply to that part of Mr. Tozer's communication regarding the suggestion of malafides, he withdrew any intention of making a public statement that Mr. Tozer or anybody else acted dishonourably. They wanted Mr. Tozer to be reassured that, so long as he acted straightforwardly with them, they would always act straightforwardly with him. He called upon Mr. Clemart to move the resolution.

Mr. Clemart said the greater portion of the trouble since July 14 was caused by those managers who had not taken the trouble, and evidently had no intention until they were made, of reprinting their forms of contract. It was not fair that they should go on issuing old forms of contract to members of the profession after they had had a month to get reprints. He was not wrong in saying that there were not a dozen managers in the country who had issued new contracts. Messrs. Stoll, Gros, Gibbons, Broadhead, and Curry had carried out the agreement, and other managers were trying to conform. Mr. Grimes, of Brixton, had notified his intention that his contract should conform to the terms of the Award. Why did not men who were represented before the Arbitrator, and who had bound themselves to accept his Award, immediately they saw that Award set about reprinting their contracts? He maintained it was a desire to evade the Award. A manager had no right to keep a contract open to try and tempt an artist to sign it. He would go further, and say there was not only danger in signing such a contract, but there was danger in signing an old form, even if it had been endorsed. They had been advised to write on the outside of such contract, "In accordance with the Arbitrator's Award," and if the manager accepted the contract on those conditions, he was binding himself to that Award. He instanced a case in which an old contract was used by the London Pavilion management, which was endorsed in the manner referred to, but when the artist went to treasury expecting his salary and one-seventh extra, he received only his bare salary. It was argued that the contract was a bargain between artist and employer, and, to their horror, the Arbitrator upheld that view, but they were going to maintain the principle, and sue the London Pavilion for one-seventh part of that salary. That would show the danger of accepting the old form of contract, which they must insist shall be abolished, and he would ask them to support the committee in enforcing a proper form of contract. As regarded the new forms of contract he did not think they would have a lot of trouble with the other people. Mr. Tozer had seen that he was mistaken, and honestly admitted it, and they were going to make the smaller fry admit it. The Award was said to declare that there should be no strike until 1912, but it also laid it down that the Award should be abided by. If managers broke their contracts then the artists would be freed in a similar way. They wanted all the old contracts thrown on the dust heap, and if employers could not afford to print new ones then they would print them for them. They wanted the new contracts printed, and the sum of money per week to apply to evening performances; they could do their own arithmetic with regard to the matinées. They wanted managers to abide by the letter and the spirit of the Award. The difference was this. The letter of the Award was where they finished with Mr. Askwith, but if a manager chopped off salaries just as much as would pay for the matinée, then he would be breaking the spirit of the Award. That was what they would very likely have to face. He would read a letter from an agent to an artist, which pointed to the breaking of the spirit of the Award. The letter was in reference to engagements at certain halls, and the engagement came out at £6 per week, whether there was a matinée or not. The letter concluded as follows: "You can write in the margin as follows: 'If no matinée the salary to be £6 a week.'" Where, then, was payment for matinées? The manager of the hall affected would be asked to pay the same salary all round his tour, and not lower it where there was a matinée. He had the greatest pleasure in moving the resolution, which was as follows:—

"That this meeting deplores the fact that so few managers have made any real attempt to conform with the Arbitrator's Award, and now calls upon the Arbitrator to insist upon all such managers to immediately relinquish the issuing of old forms of contract, and to at once reprint their forms of contract, in the 'form' laid down by the Arbitrator in his Award, and, further, if this be not done, that this meeting empowers the Executive Committee to take any such steps as may be deemed necessary to enforce the same."

Mr Tom Costello seconded the resolution, and said he wished to sound a warning note to artists and proprietors. He had watched the struggle very very closely, and had come to the conclusion that the last stage was about to be reached and finality was close at hand. If proprietors were wise in their generation they would drop this childish quibbling and legal phraseology over contracts and come down to the plane of common sense. If they kept the artists at that business none of them would have time to get up new business to attract the public. As he said at the alleged "peaceful" dinner which preceded the strike, when asked to give a toast—"Here's your very good health, and here's hoping the public will never find us out." The same bridge carried proprietors and artists alike, and if the employers, by their twisting and wriggling, brought about another awful state of affairs, their blood would be on their own head. None of the artists wanted to strike, and had done all they could to bring about a peaceful ending. When they saw the state of ad nauseam that had set in during the late struggle they said "Stop the strike." They had satisfied the public. They went to arbitration; they got an Award, and they had heard how it had been twisted. He begged those proprietors who still held out to work with the Federation, and eventually they would so strengthen the profession that any artist who erred in regard to his work would be liable to be had up before a tribunal of his own people.

Mr. Joe Elvin, who had a rousing reception, in supporting the resolution, said he would make his usual rough-and-tumble speech. They had heard the resolution, which he was sure would be carried unanimously. He had not spoken since the strike, and had almost forgotten how to make a speech. He saw the reports of the trouble in the papers on Saturday, and said, "I can see myself on the old green again at Chelsea, spouting for all I am worth." He was, however, pleased to find that a crisis had been averted, and things looked more peaceful They had all fought honestly, and could make a fair start together. They were all pleased to go to arbitration, and they decided that whatever arbitration gave them they would abide by it as honourable men and women. If, however, the proprietors twisted and turned and tried to "nobble" the Arbitrator, then there was only one thing to do. They had been given a bit of the old joint—only a "little bit off the knuckle," but they would be satisfied with that, and if proprietors did not abide by it they would have to strike again. What annoyed him very much was that they should go to the Arbitrator without taking the artists' representatives. He sincerely hoped they would not have another music-hall strike; but if they did have another strike they would have to be as they were before—unanimous. They would strike and strike until they got their rights, and if they got those rights they would be satisfied; if not, they would fight, and he would have his last "tenner" on the Federation.

Mr. Fred Herbert addressed himself to the smaller fry of the profession. If ever the time came, he said, that they had to take the same action as before to maintain what they had been awarded, he asked them to stand loyally by the leaders and not think too much about themselves. Let them put the cause almost before everything. While they had those in high positions who sacrificed so much in behalf of their humbler brethren, the smaller fry must be prepared to sacrifice something on behalf of the larger fry. It was not a fight ranging round the stars, but a fight ranging round the whole of the profession. It was mainly the smaller turns who would benefit, because the larger people of the profession could possibly afford a great deal better than the smaller to work without getting the little bit that was derived from the payment of matinées. Although the majority of them did not agree with strikes, they must use every possible method available to secure their rights. They had a weapon up their sleeves, and they must resort to that weapon if they did not get what the Arbitrator had given them. He asked them that when the resolution was put to them every hand would go up in favour of it. He asked them to stand loyally by the executive of the V.A.F. because he was a member of that executive, and knew the work they were doing. They might not blaze forth and publish all they were doing, but he was sure that ever since the inception of the Federation men who were sitting upon the platform had sacrificed not only time and money, but their position in the profession in the fight on the artists' behalf. In every battle there were soldiers left dead on the field, while others came out with honour attached to them; but there was no desire for glory on the part of the executive. If in the battle they were fighting the members were prepared to fall with them, then the executive were prepared to fall with the members. They would fight earnestly and honourably in the endeavour to get that which had been justly awarded them, and whatever may come, they would at least have the comfort of knowing they had died in a just and noble cause. If they were obliterated they would have to find a living in some other sphere—they might even have to get into Parliament. He urged them to pass the resolution unanimously, stick by the Federation, and so long as the Federation was in existence they would stick by them. They intended to get that which had been awarded them, and would be satisfied with nothing less. Let them pass that resolution and leave the rest in the hands of the Federation.

The resolution, which was also supported by Mr. James O'Grady, M.P., and Mr. J. Havelock Wilson, M.P., was put to the meeting, and carried unanimously.

The Chairman read a commmunication from Mr. Henri Gros, in which that gentleman complained that the Award was not being adhered to by the artists. He reminded them that in the Arbitrator's Award there was a clause which provided that artists should send in copies of songs and bill matter fourteen days previous to opening. Notwithstanding that he had printed notices to that effect in all the halls with which he was connected, he could not get artists to comply with the requisition. That was a very important question, as it enabled a manager to remove all objectionable matter, to the advantage of the artists, the public, and the management, and was very essential at the present day. He would thank him to bring that letter before the executive, as they expressed a desire that the provisions of the Award should be faithfully carried out. The chairman said he must tell the meeting that the condition referred to in Mr. Gros' letter was agreed to at the Arbitration, and he should advise them by all means to carry it out. It was a small point, but if they considered the proprietors on small points as given by the Arbitrator, then they could hope to be similarly treated on questions of larger significance. He took that opportunity of putting the question before the members of the Federation.

Mr. Bartram said that the Federation had by no means finished their work; there was a much larger world to conquer. English variety artists travelled the universe over, and there were rights to maintain in foreign countries. He referred to abuses which existed in Germany and in America, and said there was work for the Federation to do there.

Mr. Clemart proposed a vote of thanks to the Press, which was seconded by Mr. George D'Albert and acknowledged by Mr. Chance Newton. A vote of thanks to the Members of Parliament who were present was moved by Mr. Dutch Daly and seconded by Mr. Monte Bayly, who expressed the hope that at the next General Election the Federation would run a candidate for the Kennington Division in Parliament.

Mr. Bernard Stavordale, seconded by Mr. Mayville, proposed a vote of thanks to Messrs. Sparrow and Bawn for the use of the hall, a vote which was cordially endorsed.

The Chairman congratulated those present on a very successful meeting, and the dignity and admirable tone which had been maintained. In closing the meeting he urged them to do everything possible to meet the wishes of the proprietors if those wishes were in strict conformity with the Arbitrators' Award. Although they had won, he wanted them to do no boasting or bragging, but to go straight home and—keep their powder dry.

A vote of thanks to the chairman, proposed by Mr. Tom Costello and seconded by Mr. Barney Armstrong, concluded the meeting.

In the course of the meeting the chairman announced that Mr. Oswald Stoll had resigned his membership of the Entertainments Protection Association.

THE AWARD AND CONTRACTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Publicity having been given in various newspapers to disquieting and misleading statements, it is due to the public and to the variety industry that the facts concerning certain London variety theatres affected thereby should be clearly stated. The point at issue has been simply the phraseology to be used in providing for matinée payments to the artists.

Previously to the arbitration in the spring of this year the Oxford and Tivoli contracts, for about fifteen years past, contained the following proviso, which I will term A.

(A) The artist agrees to perform at every evening and on Saturday afternoons
(making seven performances per week)
at a salary of per week.

This was pronounced by the artists' representatives in their evidence before the Arbitrator as fair and acceptable; but it having thereafter been agreed by all parties to the award that the proportion of the salary for the matinée should be specifically stated as one-seventh of the week's salary, the following new wording as to salary was adopted by the Oxford and Tivoli managers on July 15 last. This I will term B.

(B) The artist accepts an engagement to appear every evening and on Saturday afternoons
(making seven performances per week)
at a salary of per week, of which said salary six-sevenths shall be deemed to be in respect of six evening performances and one-seventh of such salary shall be deemed to be in respect of the Saturday matinée required as above.

A proof of this new form was submitted to the Arbitrator before being printed, was returned by him without correction, and has been in use for the past two months.

The Variety Artists' Federation recently objected to this inclusive method of stating the salary, and after an interview on the 6th inst. between the Arbitrator and both parties, the following altered wording was agreed to at my suggestion. This I will term C.

(C) The artist accepts an engagement to appear every evening and on Saturday afternoons (making seven performances per week) in accordance with clause 3 [which states that each matinée shall be paid for at the rate of one-seventh of the weekly salary], at a salary of £ per week (six night performances).

It was pointed out by me at this interview that an artist would naturally desire to understand clearly from the contract not only what he was to receive for his six night performances, but also what he was to receive in pounds, shillings, and pence for his Saturday matinée, and printed provision for this logical addition to the above wording was approved then and since by the Arbitrator. This I will call D.

The Variety Artists' Federation, however, do not desire any such printed provision, which we thought desirable in the interests of the artists themselves.

The Arbitrator is absent from London for a few weeks, and my co-directors and I have therefore agreed to use the form C, without the printed provision (D) of the actual amount of matinée salary. Which method of stating the salary, A, B, C, or D, may be considered the most complete and satisfactory I do not now wish to argue. Business men would, I apprehend, be of one opinion; but in the little dispute no practical issue has been involved, no evasion of any part of the award has occurred, and no admission of error on either side has been made. We have said "Tweedledum"; the other side have said "Tweedledee." Now both have agreed to say "Tweedle."

Thus, through conciliation and compromise, concord has been reached, to the satisfaction of both parties.—Yours faithfully,

HENRY TOZER, Chairman, the Oxford and the Tivoli.

In connection with Mr. Tozer's letter we may quote the following telegram which has been received by both parties from the Arbitrator:—

"Understand some doubt has arisen on my decision and other points not argued. Advise both parties leave any matter in dispute for me to decide on return, in accordance with award.—ASKWITH."

In their reply to Mr. Tozer's letter (which appared in the Daily Telegraph of Tuesday) Messrs. Joe O'Gorman, W. H. Clemart, and Wal Pink, writing on behalf of the Federation, criticise the statement "that they or their representatives in their evidence before the Arbitrator pronounced that seven performances at an inclusive salary was fair and acceptable." They say, "Quite so, and there were many other things that they pronounced fair and acceptable before the Arbitrator. But the Arbitrator gave his Award, and in it differed from the artists' representatives in most of their contentions in favour of the managers, with the exception of the fact that all matinées should be paid for; or, in other words, that for extra work they should have extra pay." In regard to Mr. Tozer's statement that on July 15 he adopted a new wording as to salary, a proof of which was submitted to the Arbitrator before being printed, and that, as it was returned to him without correction, it had been in use for the past two months, the writers say: "That one party to an arbitration should be allowed to go back to the Arbitrator for an interpretation of his Award without the other party being given the opportunity of attending and protecting their own interests, must surely appeal to people as being not only unfair and unjust, but almost unbelievable. Yet Mr. Tozer states that the contract to which we objected immediately it fell into our hands (which was not before the end of August) had been passed by the Arbitrator, without any consultation with us, and has been in use for the past two months. This is our greatest grievance, and one which we think will receive general condemnation." As to the statement that "concord has been reached to the satisfaction of both sides," the representatives of the Federation say, "There is neither concord nor satisfaction." They add, "Will Mr. Tozer and any other managers who fancy his lead kindly remember that the executive committee has in its pocket a mandate from the members of the Variety Artists' Federation to enforce in any manner deemed necessary the keeping of the Award?"

"PHARAOH'S DAUGHTER."

An ancient Egyptian operetta, in One Act, by Ethel Ra-Leslie.

Produced at the Empire, Camberwell, on Monday, Sept. 16.

Prince Rameses .....MR. WENSLEY RUSSELL
Ptolemy .....MR. FRANK LESTER
Grecian Dancing Girl .....MISS RUBY RAVIS
Jambres .....MR. R. STOCKWELL
Hataska .....MISS ELSIE MELBOURNE
Princess Ameusis .....MISS ETHEL RA-LESLIE

Elaborately staged and well acted and sung, Pharaoh's Daughter is sure to win admirers wherever the piece is staged. A pretty little love story is wedded to some charming music, which is admirably rendered. At the opening the Princess is found seated on her throne on the roof of Pharaoh's palace on the banks of the Nile. Hither comes the King's adviser, Ptolemy, with a scroll from his royal master, by which the Princess learns that her lover, Prince Rameses, is decreed to wed one of the Princess's ladies-in-waiting, Hataska. This enrages the Princess, who bids Ptolemy go back to her father and tell him that none shall wed the Prince but herself. The Prince arrives, and the Princess tells him of Pharaoh's decree, and, knowing the iron will of the King, the lovers are in despair. The Prince leaves to crave an audience with the King, and the Princess summonses her rival, the dark-eyed Hataska. In her jealous rage she draws her dagger to kill the kneeling girl, but relents, just as the Prince returns with Ptolemy, who informs the Princess that her royal father had made an error, and meant to give Hataska to her own lover, the Keeper of the Sacred Cat, and that she is free to marry Prince Rameses.

Miss Ethel Ra-Leslie looks bewitching in her royal Egyptian robes and jewels as the Princess, while her acting and vocalisation are beyond praise. She is the fortunate possessor of a voice of great purity and range, and her elocutionary powers enable her to be heard and understood. Her rendering of "Rameses, my king," and her duets with the Prince, "Still we love in secrecy" and "Beloved, good-bye," fairly brings down the house. Mr. Wensley Russell as Prince Rameses renders loyal assistance to his fiancé, and shares in her triumphs. Exponents of the minor parts do what they have to do thoroughly and well, while a special word of praise is due to the tuneful and well-balanced chorus and to the dainty dancing of Miss Ruby Davis. The lyrics and music by Mr. Joseph Tabrar are a strange but agreeable admixture of weird Egyptian melody, and some catchy music reminiscent of popular musical comedy.

"A SISTER'S HONOUR."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I do not in any way seek to belittle the charm of Miss Lofting's writing, nor wish to rob her of her just due as the authoress of the main idea. Miss Lofting, however, is possibly unaware that the above sketch had a trial in its original form, and it was not until after this first production that Mr. Acton arranged with me to write up the finish.

Apologising for so trespassing on your space, and assuring Miss Lofting that both Mr. Acton and myself have nothing but commendation for her admirable work,—Yours faithfully,

ARTHUR O'KEENE.

AN excellent source of revenue is derived from the letting of the curtains at music halls and theatres for advertising purposes. The London and Provincial Advertising Agency have a special department for negotiating for these rights. They are already contractors to the Moss Empires, Ltd. Managers who have curtains to let will do well to apply to Mr. Frank Wood, managing-director, London and Provincial Advertising Agency, 110, Strand, W.C.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Gus Elen has never been away from home before. He has never even crossed the Irish Channel, and he assured me that for weeks before he started the very thought of all the "up and down motion" he would have to go through to get to America made him "sea-sick" on terra firma. If he had been one of those who are always sighing for new fields to conquer he might have enrolled himself on the list of international music hall favourites years ago. But an artist who is an established favourite with the immense multitude that gathers nightly at the music halls of London and the provinces has a pretty good excuse for saying, "Old England is good enough for me," even when a pile of Uncle Sam's dollars looms in fancy before his eyes. At last, however, Mr. Elen decided to accept an American engagement, and after the magnificent welcome he received at the New York Theatre last Monday he must have felt well repaid for waiting. There are many Cockneys in New York, but, as everyone knows, Cockneys are not clannish, and one gets an idea of their numerical strength only on such special occasions as the first appearance here of an artist of the regular or music hall stage whom Londoners claim as their own and delight to honour. Having "assisted" at a number of these reunions during a long residence in America, I can testify that on these occasions they do their best to make their fellow-townsmen feel that he is among friends as well as strangers, and the enthusiasm that prevails makes the blood tingle and warms the cockles of the heart.

This is not to say, though, that the Cockneys did all the welcoming this time. By no means. The audience was a unit in that respect. Nervous as he may have been—and it is quite an ordeal this facing a foreign audience for the first time—Mr. Elen's trepidation must have been relieved by the cordial greeting he received, and completely banished by the manifestations of approval and delight which broke out in all parts of the auditorium after each of his songs. Mr. Elen had heard of the terrible cyclones that visit certain parts of the American continent, and to the writer he had expressed the hope that New York wouldn't see any of them whilst he was there. But he encountered something very like one last Monday when a cyclone of merriment struck the big audience at the New York Theatre and caused quite a disturbance of the ordinary atmospheric conditions of a sedate American music hall, usually filled with people accustomed to the mild sort of excitement aroused by performing dogs and moving pictures.

Mr. Elen sang four songs, and if it had been possible for him to comply with the vociferous demands that came from upstairs and downstairs and all over the house whilst he was trying to thank the audience for its kindly reception of him, he would have exhausted his entire répertoire. Mr. Elen was wise in reserving what I believe is his best characterisation till the last. Some little doubt had existed in the writer's mind as to the likelihood of such a song as "The pavement artist" being understood in New York, because that quaint and interesting character, so familiar to every Cockney, is not to be found in this city. But the song is cleverly written, and the character is so vividly and amusingly described by the singer, that only the veriest dunce would fail to understand it. All doubt on that score was dispelled at the end of the first chorus—

If he draws somebody's phiz
You can soon tell who it is
By the writing what is written underneath.

—which evoked a gust of appreciative laughter and applause, not merely from the enlightened few, but from the entire house. "The pavement artist" would "go" with any audience that understood the English language.

"Down the road" was the first song, and it was well chosen, being one of those lively jingles that tickle the ear and put an audience in a good humour at the start. First impressions are everything. In spite of his very evident nervousness, Mr. Elen had a splendid grip on the song and the character he was drawing, and after the first few lines sang it with a spirit that was simply irresistible. Call it animal magnetism, infectious gaiety, or what you will, it certainly came over the footlights in liberal doses. The little pathetic touch near the end about the old mare's death brought into fine relief the spirited chorus at the close, and when the storm of hand-clapping was reinforced by loud cheering the indications that Mr. Elen was making a triumphal entry into the New World were very plain indeed.

The next number began with a pantomimic display of pugnacity from a "bloke" in corduroys and a loud jersey, who "put up his dukes" and sparred all round an imaginary ring. He seemed to be one of those individuals who would "rather fight than eat." When he expressed in forcible language his contempt for tea and coffee and an overweening fondness for "'arf a pint of ale," we understood where all the fighting blood came from. The more so as his modest breakfast allowance of his favourite fluid was increased to alarming proportions by supper time. The song went very well indeed, the singer's masterly make-up, his expressive grimaces, and his characteristic "walk round" at the finish provoking roars of laughter.

"It's a great big shame" came next, and the playing of the familiar air by the orchestra stirred the memories of many in the audience, and caused them to express their delight in a spontaneous burst of applause. The subjugation of the brewer's drayman with a "leg o' mutton fist" and an altitude of 6ft. 2in. by a wife little more than half his size; and the feeling of disgust it created in his pal's manly breast were described and illustrated in a highly-diverting manner. The applause that followed became tumultuous when it was seen that the singer was about to retire and would not be stilled until Mr. Elen advanced to the footlights and declared his willingness to sing another song. Then the English contingent broke loose, shouting for this song and that one, but more for "'E dunno where 'e are" than any other. As this ditty had not been rehearsed with the orchestra, however, Mr. Elen gave them "The pavement artist" with the happy results already recorded.

Mr. Elen is staying at the palatial Hotel Astor, directly opposite the big amusement pile in Times-square, which comprises the New York Theatre (formerly Hammerstein's Olympia), with its spacious roof garden, and the Criterion Theatre, and there I had the pleasure of an interesting chat with him, and also with his fellow-voyagers, Mr. and Mrs. Romaine. They told me that the big Baltic behaved splendidly, so it may be inferred that Mr. Elen's fears were happily not realised. In fact, the trip was a very enjoyable one.

Arriving here with more than a week to spare before the opening night, they were able to "see the sights" and discover the thousand and one new, strange, and wonderful things to be found in the American metropolis. Mr. Elen had already conceived a partiality for "clam cocktails," and had even tried a "horse's neck"—one of those liquid concoctions peculiar to the States of which there is such an amazing variety, and of which the names alone are sufficient to arouse the curiosity of a visitor. There have been certain artists and others from the old country who have professed to be so overcome with the delights of the New World that (according to the newspapers) they have hied themselves post haste to the naturalisation bureau and declared their intention of becoming American citizens. Needless to say, however, neither the "clam cocktails" nor the "horse's neck" had prompted Mr. Elen to forswear his allegiance to the Crown or lessened his regard for the congenial customs of Clapham Common. He tells me it is ten years or more since he was first tempted with the offer of a lucrative American engagement.

FILM GOSSIP.

Showmen will read in this column news with regard to the best and newest films in the market. Most of these films we have seen ourselves, and can confidently recommend showmen to add them to their stock, either by purchase or hire.

WE direct the attention of our readers and of cinematograph operators to the admirable regulations which are in operation in all the theatres, music halls, and other premises under the control of the London County Council. These regulations will be found in another column of this week's issue of The Era.

The Charles Urban Trading Company.

ON ACCOUNT OF A MOTH is a capital comic film upon which Messrs. Urban may be congratulated. Briefly, the story is this: Jones, calling upon a bachelor friend, Smith, is warmly welcomed, and stops to dine. Seated at table, a large moth disturbs the comfort of host and guest. It hovers over the table and about the viands. The host seeks to destroy the moth by means of a plate, to the destruction of the plate. The guest is next troubled, for in his anxiety to capture the pest he upsets the lamp, with dire results. The moth returns to the attack; both men grow reckless, and chase the creature round the room. Plants are upset, china is broken, pictures are ruined, but the moth is merrily elusive. The alarmed servant, entering to learn the cause of disturbance, is met in the doorway first by the moth and then by Jones wielding a plate, which he smashes upon the head of the domestic. Exit the servant. The moth is not at all dismayed. He flits from point to point, pursued by the now irate Jones and Smith, who are determined to secure him at all hazards. The table is overturned and the dinner hopelessly ruined, but the chase is still in favour of the moth. Smith and Jones are now desperate. They must secure that demon moth! Instead, he takes sanctuary above the china cabinet, making an occasional sortie. In their efforts to dislodge the disturber the cabinet itself is overturned and its contents distributed in pieces about the room. The moth, beginning to find the affair rather stupid, escapes by the open window to carry elsewhere its demoralising influence. Jones leans out to watch its flight, overbalances, and follows the moth, but he does not soar. The photographic quality of this film is perfect.

A WILD GOOSE CHASE, a second Urban number, amusingly depicts the difficulties of a countryman in taking his geese to market. Giles, loaded with geese snugly packed in baskets, bids adieu to his wife and goes to market. Soon there is trouble with the geese, for they escape. In the chase Giles receives willing assistance from his friends. The startled geese run under a ladder and through a china shop, devastation resulting. A hawker's barrow is upset, but the geese give no pause. They next take to water, and are quite at home. Regardless of soaked garments, young men and old wade knee deep and stumble along in excited procession. It is, indeed, a wild goose chase by this time. Down the picturesque stream the hunt is continued; one is caught, and the capture of the whole flock is soon effected.

Pathé Freres.

THIS firm has just issued five very attractive subjects. One of these is 906ft. long, and tells the tragic story of The Adventuress. It seems that a daring woman is engaged to procure certain papers belonging to a foreign government. We see her off to the frontier, and we follow her movements. Of course, she meets with rebuffs and disappointments, but eventually she falls in love—or pretends to—with a young officer. By gaining admittance to his private quarters she is enabled to secure the much-prized documents, after awaiting the opportunity afforded by his temporary absence. Then she returns to two secret service agents, who are anxiously warming their heels in a wood some little distance away. Apparently, however, some shuffling conduct occurs on the part of these men. They do not appear willing to carry out their portion of the contract, and the woman decides to take the papers back to the man from whose room she stole them. She is, of course, closely followed by the secret service agents, and meets with her death as she is performing the honourable action of making reparation.

THE ENCHANTED GLASSES, also a Pathé film, is one of the most wonderful specimens of coloured photography that we have so far seen. At the spell of an enchantress several beautifully-attired young ladies spring into existence and perform various gyrations. They disappear quite as mysteriously, but lo and behold! a few seconds later the magician pours out into half a dozen or more glasses a liquid—which is supposed to represent the girls in essence form—and once more these charming ladies are smiling at us. The colouring of the film is its especial feature, and as a novelty and a clever trick film we can thoroughly recommend it to our readers.

THE HIGHWAYMEN is another extremely interesting but tragic subject which Messrs. Pathé have devised. The period is the period of Claude Duval. A countryman has returned to his cottage with a bag of money, which is to be paid as rent to the landlord the following day. He secretes it under his bed. Unfortunately, however, he has been watched by a band of highwaymen, who force an entrance into his dwelling-place, murder him, steal what they can conveniently take away, and then decamp. The cottager's little son determines on revenge. Shouldering his father's rifle, he sets out upon the track of the marauders. After a variety of adventures he succeeds in shooting seven of the band, and marks that number on a cross which indicates the burial-place of his father. The scenes in this film are exceedingly well arranged and pictorially perfect.

MESSRS. PATHE can also boast a couple of attractive series in The Riding School at Saumur and Poor Little Pig.

The Vitagraph Company.

FROM over the Atlantic there come a couple of splendid films, the productions of the Vitagraph Company. One of these is Two Thousand Miles Without a Dollar, and this is the tale it tells. Dan Burke, a young husband, buys a new hat for his young wife, and takes it home to her. She doesn't like it, and they have their first quarrel over it. Dan packs up his grip, goes out West and becomes a cowboy on a ranch. A few months later a cowboy rides up to the ranch with a telegram for Mr. Dan Burke. Dan opens it and reads "Unto you a child is born—Anna." He immediately becomes wild with excitement, and, jumping on the telegraph messenger's horse, gallops away. The messenger gives the alarm, and a posse of cowboys forms and gives chase to the "horse thief." He is soon caught—a rope is placed around his neck, and he is about to be lynched, when he produces the telegram which caused him to dash away in such a hurry. The boys free him, and send him away with their congratulations. Dan arrives at the railroad station as the train for the east is pulling out. He races along the track, leaps from the horse to the rear platform of the train, and scrambles aboard. The conductor asks for his fare. Dan has no money, but the telegram is his passport; the conductor congratulates him and pays his fare. Arrived in New York he jumps in a cab and speeds to his home. Cabby demands fare. Dan shows telegram; Cabby says "Good luck" and drives away. Dan rushes in, is met by grandpa, who goes into another room and brings out a tiny, little, new baby. The father is very proud and delighted. Grandpa makes another trip and produces another—"twins." Dan holds them both. Grandpa exits again and emerges with a third. Tableau!

MAN, HAT, AND COCKTAIL is also a pleasing Vitagraph novelty. One Jenkins buys a new silk hat, and with it goes to the club. His friends there see the new tile and decide to have some fun. One of them shows Jenkins how to mix a new cocktail, and while the lemon, whisky, sugar, and ice are being put into the glass by one of the jokers, their accomplice is mixing similar ingredients in the new silk hat. Jenkins drinks the cocktail, and then puts on his hat and gets soaked. He goes away in a rage. While visiting the hatter for the purpose of buying another hat his friend Brown comes in. Jenkins takes Brown back to the club expressly to play the joke on him. He tips the boys a wink, and while they are showing Brown how to mix the new drink Jenkins fills Brown's new hat with ice, lemon, whisky, and water. But one of the club jokers changed hats just before the trick started, and Jenkins finds, to his utter disgust, that he mixed the drink in his own new hat. The laugh is on him again. He rushes to the hat store, buys another hat, and just then Jones comes in to buy a new silk hat. Jenkins determines to play the trick on Jones. He insists on taking Jones to the club and keeping a watchful eye on his hat, introduces another victim to the "boys." Jones is shown how to mix the "new drink," and Jenkins industriously fills Jones' hat; but to the consternation and chagrin of all, after Jones finishes his drink, he takes out of his hat a nice little tiny pail, drinks its contents, and putting his hat on his head, gives the "boys" a knowing wink and walks away, while Jenkins, whose feelings overcome him, sinks into a chair and then jumps three feet into the air because he discovers that he has just sat upon his own hat, which one of the jokers thoughtfully placed under him as he seated himself.

THE British Cinematograph Company, who have for some months past successfully conducted a cinematograph show at the Balham Empire on the principle of two houses a night, inform us that they intend opening other theatres and halls with similar entertainments in London and the provinces. Already additional theatres have been taken in London, Liverpool, and Manchester. On the 9th of next month the company will give a matinée in aid of the Lord Mayor's Cripples' Fund, and his lordship has promised to attend.

BY AN OPERATOR

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—To those readers who possess the inborn faculty for practical thought and invention relative to the production of present-day amusements, and who have, at one time or another, witnessed one or more of those shows that result from a clever combination of machines of the kinematographic and gramophonic type—two of the most remarkable inventions the world has known concerning refined entertainment—it will perhaps not come in the nature of a surprise when it is said that the majority of competent judges of the public tastes do not look upon what might be termed the "marriage" of the two popular instruments aforesaid as being likely to create, or rather re-create, the furore that either one or the other of them was responsible for as mere infants. And, indeed, one need not look beyond the "calls" of the different variety theatres appearing each week in the advertisement columns of The Era to prove the truth of this assertion, it being easily seen that the Bioscope, without any 'phono attachment, figures in these handy notices to the odds of about 100 to 1. And why?

Surely the manufacturers of such "combinations" have now had ample time to submit their wares to alert managers, who are prone to snap up any novelty at any cost, providing it possesses the power of attracting the public. Yet the number of phono-bio's is not augmented on the numerous "tours" by one a month. "How, then," I ask, "does it come about that the combination of two of the most interesting instruments in the world, resulting in the 'singing picture,' hangs fire?"

One would have thought, and quite naturally, that the novelty and interest embraced in either the kinematograph or the gramophone would, by means of synchronous operation, be compounded into one solid mass of popular amusement; but in this respect it utterly fails so far to become more than of very common interest. Why?

As a practical person who has been responsible for the comparatively successful production of shows such as those under consideration, and who has closely observed the numerous phases of the motion photo, from its inception to finality from the showman's standpoint, I venture to say that, up to now, the singing picture has failed to "catch on" as an entertainment through being overburdened with science, from the trammels of which it does not seem able to escape.

If each machine is in itself capable of entertaining to a high degree, the failure of a synchronous combination of the two must, in my opinion, rest entirely with the stage managers of the show, and if these persons should happen to be scientists instead of showmen it's long odds that, unlike the showman who delights himself (financially and otherwise) by pleasing others with any mortal thing that lends itself to his purpose, the scientist would rather die a poor man that wander or cause others to wander from his scientific principles to please anybody: so science is placed first and last. Now, science, while always producing food for thought and wonder, very seldom creates a good laugh without the aid of the showman's magic touch, but it is altogether too dry for our present purpose in the hands of the scientist alone.

What does a crowd of people out for pure and simple enjoyment know or care about such a thing as "synchronism," especially when every person in that crowd has been taught—by the bustling, laughable, thrilling, and enjoyable scenes of activity shown by the kinematograph during the last decade—to expect something more from their ever-resourceful favourite than a mere view of a person singing a song in front of an inanimate "cloth" without any variety? What do they care for synchronism? Not two straws. Synchronism is nought without imagination; and in the case of the singing picture synchronism is made the feature of the show, which, nine times out of ten, causes disappointment.

I could always feel that same disappointment myself when directing such shows, and have always considered the results upon the screen an insult to the beautiful instruments used in the productions; machines that must have cost a fortune to invent and make—not to mention the mental strain inseparable from such complicated inventions—and every time I moved those under my care, one of them—the talking one, of course—seemed to say to me, "It isn't our fault. My colleague and I are capable of much greater triumphs, but we must answer the electric button, you know. We have accomplished all that has been asked of us!"

That is how it has often occurred to one who dearly loves a smart piece of mechanical ingenuity; but, of course, to make known my real feelings to my superiors would, in all probability, have meant dismissal; or, worse still, aroused suspicion of my having common sense and reason, so I held my peace till now. I was, and am still, of the opinion that the advent of the really popular singing picture will be the means of restoring to the practical and competent operator his position or status that has of late years been unfairly and unsuccessfully held by persons who, in many cases, had not the common ability to make the necessary electrical connections to the apparatus which they were supposed to operate and understand!

I still entertain the fond hope that the singing picture proper will change this order of things, because I'm given to understand that the competent old-time operators intend to meet any new development as a solid, combined body of men. Then it will be found that instead of the limes-baggage-programme-operator, who no doubt served his mechanical apprenticeship watching the operation of a street organ, we shall have the competent men back again whose work and talented instincts, under the most trying conditions of wrongly-constructed and rudimentary apparatus, laid the solid foundation of the most interesting entertainment in the world to-day.

The sooner the popular singing picture makes its appearance the sooner will the cheap operator and his cheap master disappear; for it's a certainty that the properly-applied combination of instruments will always lick the single machine, and, backed up by a strong combination of skilled men, who do not rely upon the support of penny journals, which in turn rely solely upon the trade advertisements for an existence, we should soon say "good-bye" to the "scopes" that have brought about their premature doom. Yes, good-bye; and good riddance, too.

I trust the promoters of the singing pictures of to-day will pardon my audacity in openly giving them a hint which is put forward as being likely to be found capable of restoring some of the lost vivacity and animation into the kinematographic portion of their singing picture entertainments, and that hint is for them to try a simple process of "illustration" as a remedy.

Illustration, need it be said, is really what this particular kinematographic instrument is intended for; and I'm sure that more interest would be added to displays of the kind under consideration, if instead of the promoters paying such particular attention in making the synchronism—their scientific achievements—the most pronounced feature of the show, and which is, after all, a mere bagatelle as far as the entertainment proper is concerned, they would but devote a little time to illustration. The process is as simple and as cheap as the making of the pictures that have utterly failed to captivate, if not more so, and a trial is recommended.

The modus operandi is given in one paragraph. Place your artist who is to sing the song by the side of a stage whereon you have actors who go through a performance which will serve to illustrate the story conveyed by the words of the song as they appear to issue from the lips of the said artist. Be such words of a comical, sentimental, or descriptive nature, let us have animation. It is absolutely essential. And let us have scientific synchronism by all means, but don't allow it to rob the kinematograph of its interest. Illustration is a very wide term as applied here. For by this means of illustration those beautiful operatic passages which the delicate and refined ear loves to listen to could be dealt with in a manner befitting their importance. And here again we require the competent operator, for to entrust work of this kind to the "Woodbine" martyr would be as disastrous to the success of the undertaking as many of the present-day shows are dangerous to human life. Yes, the singing picture has come to stay, but not in its present form. Try the animated illustrated songs, wherein the artists are plainly visible and each word distinctly audible, and wherein every incident relative to such songs is faithfully and intelligently carried out in a life-like manner, and present these to any audience that has but lately watched and listened to the singing picture as it now stands, and find out which method is best and which is most interesting.

Remember, I only ask the promoters to try the idea. It occurred to me during one of the spells of despondency referred to, as the audience was leaving the show after a performance, every member of it trying to look pleased, but each one doubtless in the same state of mind as the poor touring "pro." is often in after luncheon, when for the juicy beefsteak he has been looking forward to all the morning with the healthiest of appetites he has—through the culinary machinations of "Ma"—been forced to swallow something that resembled an ink-eraser both in taste and appearance. The "banquet" was spoilt through bad cooking in each case. Disappointment was manifest, the audience invariably left the hall quickly, and the next "house" always filled very, very slowly.

That something would have to be done I felt certain, and whether the idle idea set forth herein receives a fair trial or not the same remark applies. Some thing will have to be done; something must be done to give these elaborate mechanisms a proper scope for their work. Pray let it be soon. Good men and good money are waiting.—Yours truly

GEO. R. BEAUMONT.

"PETER'S FINISH."

A Funny Episode, produced by Tom Terriss's Sketch Company, on Monday, Sept. 16, at the Empire Theatre of Varieties, Nottingham.

Peter Piper .....MR. LIONEL VICTOR
The Professor .....MR. FRED L. CONNYNGHAME
Hon. Horace Fitz-John Brougham..
MR. BERTIE WHITE
Fuzzy .....MR. PETER GRATA
Mrs. Piper .....MISS EMILY STEVENS
Ida Piper .....MISS JOSEPHINE ELLIS

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mr. Tom Terriss's company produced on Monday, for the first time on any stage, a new sketch, entitled Peter's Finish. It is the story of a sober-minded provincial Mayor, who, on a visit to London, while watching the frolics of the younger generation in Trafalgar-square, suddenly became imbued with the idea of being young again himself. The opportunity presented itself in the shape of a certain professor, the inventor of elixirs, who offers him the chance by drinking a few drops of one of his decoctions. In his eagerness to obtain his desire Peter swallows a whole bottleful, and immediately becomes an infant. Naturally he is desirous to undo the mischief, and the professor promises him relief by another elixir. Mistakes seem to be the order of the day, for the wrong potion is given to Peter, who, childlike, again drinks the lot, and by the action of the liquid is transported back through ten thousand years, thus becoming what his primeval ancestors were supposed to be—a monkey.

Judicious pruning in places, with careful elaboration in others, will doubtless result in making Peter's Finish a first-class sketch. Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon the staging and mounting. The scenery is of a high order, the presentment of Trafalgar-square, including the Nelson column and lions and the National Gallery, being particularly good. The dresses are beautiful, and evidently no expense has been spared, the result being seen in some very pretty stage pictures. Mr. Lionel Victor worked very hard as Peter, and succeeded in creating a lot of amusement; whilst the rôle of the Professor was ably undertaken by Mr. Fred L. Connynghame, his contortions when demonstrating the action of his elixirs being excruciatingly funny. Mr. Bertie White did well as Horace; and Mr. Peter Grata made a capable Fuzzy. Miss Emily Stevens was in her element as Mrs. Piper, and Miss Josephine Ellis looked very charming as Ida. The chorus was very good, and the various musical numbers pretty and well rendered.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD.

News from the West.

BARNSTAPLE FAIR was held on the 18th, 19th, and 20th of this month, and, as usual, attracted a big crowd of the most interesting shows on the western round. The cinematograph theatres and variety palaces of Messrs. Anderton and Rowlan, W. C. and S. Hancock, and J. Jones were the big shows. That prince of esoteric magicians—Samouda and his equally-gifted wife, "the Princess"—created a furore with their mystic telepathic demonstrations; Alfred Wright and school of boxers gave frequent exhibitions of the manly art of self-defence, and delighted their many patrons with their feats of strength and skill; these, with Smith's novelty booth, completed the list of shows proper.

THE machine list was a very strong one, and included the exhibits of the West of England firms—W. C. and S. Hancock, Marshal Hill, Anderton and Rowland, J. Herbert, T. Wilshire, and Brewer. Swings, big and little, were provided by Chapman, Tucker, and Russet. The Hancocks also exhibited the helter-skelter or "slipping the slope," which was an immense source of interest and the novelty of the fair.

Shooting Ranges, Bottle Batteries, and Varieties.

THESE were provided by Messrs. Middlewick, Oldridge, J. Jones, J. Herbert, W. Whitlegg, G. Russet, J. Gratton, W. Connelly, J. Herbert, T. Rowlands, Chapman, and Wilshire.

Mansfield Fair.

THIS old Derbyshire charter fair was well maintained by the best shows and concerns on the Derbyshire circuit. These included the cinematographs of Messrs. Tuby, Proctor and Farrer, and Tyler, Professor Ruby's two shows, and the freak museums of White and Hobson. The machines were those of Tuby and Sons, Holland, Holdsworth, and Joy. The other novelty providers were Messrs. Lever, Tuby, sen., Richards, Pullan, Brannan, Farrar, Doubtfire, Holdsworth, Wallser, Walker, E. Farrer, D. Farrer, T. Waller, and Griffiths.

Morchard Bishop Fair.

THIS out of the world Devonshire village feast was entirely in the hands of local showmen. The novelties consisted of ranges of park swings, high-fliers, shooting galleries, and the usual coker-sheets and throwing games.

The Leeds Circuit.

"THE dispersion of the clans," which usually follows the great gathering of Yorkshire showmen at Holbeck Feast, provides the material for a number of smaller fixtures in the immediate neighbourhood of Leeds. York-road Feast at the other end of Leeds to Holbeck attracted the most important fairground novelties, and these included Murphy's big show and roundabouts, Dennis' circus, Texas Bill's menagerie, Westray's dime museum, Watson's boxers, Traynor's novelty show, Redfern's machines, Dobson's machines and shooters, Waddington's yachts, and the well-known varieties and throwing games by Cooper, Ashcroft, Baines, Townend, Lee, and other caterers. Gem swings, horses, and motors were in splendid array, and provided by Messrs. Cooper, Gledstone, and Johnson.

ARDSLEY, on the same round, had for its principal entertainers Harry Ashington, with cinematograph and marionettes, Dennis' circus, Warwick's fine art gallery, Mrs. H. Waddington with racing motors, juvenile motors, and miniature swings by Gavan. The other fun merchants with shooting ranges, football penalties, throwing games, and varieties were the Brothers Guthrie, W. Bassett, R. Hayes, C. Warren, W. Williams, C. Johnson, Barker, Vanner, and Jameson.

The Apotheosis of the Fair.

SHOWMEN have been waiting during many centuries for the dawn of the better day when their work and enterprise would receive justice and fuller appreciation. The humanities of the fairground have been treated with some measure of adequacy by writers and historians, who, like the Rev. T. Horne in these latter days, have written with some knowledge of the showman's life. No department of the showman's work has been so much maligned, scorned and ridiculed, as the music of the fairground. There is, in fact, a body of Acts of Parliament and a great mass of municipal bye-laws that have for their set purpose the punishment, and, if possible, the abolition of the music of the fair. It is of great importance for showmen to notice that not only does their life supply material for our authors and romantic writers, but that that much-abused medley of merry sounds that constitutes to the populace one of the charms of the fair, has inspired the motif for one of our gifted British composers. Mr. Havergal Brian's wonderfully original treatment of the music of an English fair is the subject of the successful suite played with great acceptance at the Queen's Hall concert last week. The poetic basis of the composition is the emotion aroused by an English fair. The first movement introduces the gathering of the holiday-makers to go to the fair. Then, after a bustling exordium, the composer takes us through the various side-shows—the dancers, the Punch and Judy, and the fat woman.

THIS movement introduces variations on the dance music incidental to the outside parade and free performances of the shows, and it includes a notable movement in which the composer shows a true grasp of fairground music, great humour, powerful imagination, and most delicate discrimination, for, although he essays many orchestral jokes, they all come off successfully, and are not extravagant, although the grotesquerie is well maintained. The occurrence of "God Save the King," the brass in the midst of the Punch and Judy—tootle toot—and the mock solemnity of the delightfully scored passage that introduces the giant lady met with the quick appreciation of the audience that filled every portion of the great hall.

WE need not despair of the milennium, when the so-called "pandemonium" and "ear-splitting orgy of sound" inspires a dramatic composer and poet with a theme strong enough to receive the universal and unstinted measure of praise which has rewarded the daring effort of Mr. Havergal Brian.

Showmen's Generous Gift.

A VERY pleasing feature of the Lifeboat Pageant in Manchester on Saturday last was the gift of the "White City" to the lifeboat fund. The Manchester Guardian says:—"The best of all the gifts was awaiting the arrival of the lifeboat procession at the White City, where Mr. J. Calvin Brown, on behalf of the proprietors, handed to the Lord Mayor a cheque for £300, which was promptly passed over to the hon. treasurer, Mr. W. A. Bentham.

Astwood Bank.

TEMPLE'S Cinematograph Exhibition has been paying a welcome visit to Astwood Bank.

MRS. SINCLAIR'S Popular Portable Theatre will shortly pay a two-months' visit to Turner's Feild, Astwood Bank.

Redditch.

AT the Public Hall, Redditch, we have had Tomkinson's Gipsy Choir.

Evesham.

SHOWMEN and others please take note of Evesham Statute Fair on Friday, Oct. 4.

Alcester.

STATUTE FAIR, Tuesday, Oct. 8.

Neath.

MESSRS. WADBROOKE have prolonged their visit for a few nights. Mme. Melita made a great hit in her great Russian dance on Tuesday. Some grand new pictures, under the direction of Mr. Jeffries, are also shown. Mr. Haggar's superb No. 2 show is also staying. The great Victoria Falls is one of his many specialities. Mr. E. Danter with his fine new show, for the first time in Neath, is also extending his visit; some very fine pictures and varieties draw good houses. Messrs. Dooner, at Brynmawr, are playing to crowded houses, introducing some smart varieties. Our old friend Gus makes a capable guide. Mr. Goode, the head master of the Neath Reformatory, desires to thank the several showmen friends who so generously entertained the lads on Friday and Saturday.

IN the Swansea Valley Messrs. Henry Studt and Son are holding their annual fairs. Miss Amy Russell, the clever little dancer, who has been for five years with Messrs. Wadbrooke, is marrying Mr. John North, jun. She received a number of useful presents from her many friends. The employees of Messrs. Wadbrooke's also made a handsome present, also Mr. Henry Scard, who felt justified in the old-time remark, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

Glossop Wakes.

LARGE crowds have invaded the wakes, held last Friday, Saturday, and Monday, Sept. 16. The attractions were Messrs. J. Hibbert's galloping horses, cockerels, and swings; W. Royle's photograph; M. Thomas's dolly stall and cocoanut alley; A Sedgwick's shooting saloon; W. Royle's shooting gallery; J. Cordwell's cocoanut alley; W. Cordwell's dolly stall; J. Montgomery's refreshment booth and little horses; W. Montgomery's refreshment booth and steam swings; H. Thomas's cocoanut alley and dolly stalls; G. Sunderland's dolly stalls; A. Whatmore's cocoanut alley and dolly stalls; W. Shaw's striker; D. Montgomery's football; W. Shaw's exhibition; &c.

Witton Wakes (Northwich).

CONTINUING the Round of Cheshire Wakes Messrs. Scott and Sager's premier cinematograph theatre, and Miss Margaret Collins, with aggregation of machine novelties, Mrs. Symons' ghost illusion, and other attractions were at the old Cheshire Wakes of Witton. Famous as the birthplace, and now the resting-place of one of England's greatest showmen—the late James Dean, Witton lends itself admirably to the old customs that cluster round the Wakes, and one of the features of the festival was the presence of the Dixon family, the son, daughter, and grandchildren of the famous showman with their stalls and fairground novelties. Amongst the other notable entertainers and fairground providers were Messrs. Hough, Fletcher, Hall, Simmonds and Hughes

Farnworth Wakes.

THE shows at this notable fixture were the cinematograph palaces of Captain Tom Payne, and Colonel Clarke, Leyland's marionette theatre, and Wortley's colliery show. The machine list, a big one included machines by W. Mitchell, John Collins, and Ben Mitchell. There were a goodly array of throwing games and other fairground novelties.

On the Southern Round.

WE have news of Penn Fair. Chittock's Metropolitan show was the chief attraction. The machine novelties were provided by the Matthews' family, and throwing games in splendid variety by the enterprising caterers on this Round.

AT Maldon Fair the cinematograph theatre was Barker's electrograph; the principal machines were provided by Mr. Bibby, and all the jolly fun of the fair was provided by an attendant throng of amusement caterers.

JACOB STUDT'S entertainments are at Reading for a short season. A splendid series of animated pictures is being exhibited. Purchase's Menagerie will be on view at Reading September Fair, which takes place to-day (Saturday) and Monday.

MITCHAM FAIR ECHO.

SHOWMAN SUMMONED AND FINED FOR OBSTRUCTION BY CROYDON MAGISTRATES.

THERE was an echo at Croydon on Saturday of the Mitcham Fair dispute. Alfred Ball, a showman, was summoned for obstruction.

A police-sergeant said the defendant had a show erected on waste ground at London Road, Mitcham. He was showing animated pictures, and to obtain an audience various artists appeared on the stage in front. He was warned if he persisted he would be summoned.

Defendant: If they had allowed the fair to be where it ought to have been there would have been no obstruction.

The Chairman: All you did was to get the people in?

Defendant: That's it, sir. I've just come up from Oxford to put in an appearance. I think you might dismiss it with a caution.

The Chairman: You must pay a fine of 2s. 6d. on each summons, and 5s. 6d. costs in each case—in all, 16s.

A COPY of "THE ERA" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps. The Era is posted on Saturday in time to reach London Subscribers by the first Town Delivery, and Country Subscribers should receive their Papers by the first London Post. Address, the PUBLISHER, 5, Tavistock-street, W.C.

SHOWMEN'S GUILD IN SCOTLAND.

Up to the present moment the propaganda work of the Showmen's Guild, to bring the claims of trade protection and defence before the Showman World, has met with remarkable success. So great was the need for this work that, at some of the earlier meetings, between Easter week and Whitsuntide, the very strangeness of the effort seemed to prevent the attendance and enthusiasm so vital to its success. To hold meetings on the fair-grounds during the show season was so rare an event that it took some little time for the idea to take root in the minds of show-people, and so it happened that every meeting was an improvement, both as regards attendance and enthusiasm, upon the meeting just going before. It was not that the average showman was indifferent to his own interests and the interests of the whole Showman World, but that he required to be impressed and moved to a great extent in order to break the habit of his working life, to take Sunday to himself either for necessary rest or for social intercourse with his fellows. Habits of life are very difficult to break when once formed. It was not only a novelty to ask him to attend a two hours' conference in the afternoon, and the Guild service, lasting quite an hour, in the evening; but it was also a demand upon his all too scanty spare moments, that nothing short of urgent necessity could justify.

The Guild Executive and Trade Defence.

The necessity for increasing the interest in the trade defence movement, and thereby increasing the financial support of the people engaged in the show business, was fully recognised at the annual meetings of the Society, in both London and Manchester. Following the splendid, though hastily arranged, benefit night for the Guild funds at Rotherham Statutes, when close upon £26 was realised, and the annual benefit, the proceeds of the Bolton ball amounting to £21 19s. 4d., the executive committee decided that a special effort should be made to place the Guild on a sound financial basis. A number of the principal lessees of fair-grounds and show proprietors present at the Manchester committee promised to organise Guild benefits at the fairs under their control. Amongst those who have already carried through this generous intention we may mention Messrs. P. and J. Collins and George Green. Benefit performances have taken place in addition to the one at Rotherham already mentioned, at Queen's-road (John Collins's management), Wrexham (P. Collins's management), at Longsight (P. and J. Collins, in conjunction with J. Whiting and other proprietors), and at Ayr, under Mr. George Green's management. It is extremely gratifying to notice that Scotland has established two records this year—at Greenock Fair, under Mr. John Wilmot's control, the biggest gathering of show-people gathered to hear the organising chaplain that had, up to that date, rewarded his missionary effort; at Ayr the Greenock record as regards attendance was broken, and the highest record with regard to money taken at the benefit was established.

Hard Work and Good Results.

It is to the honour of Mr. George Green and his admirable and original business methods that the two highest records, one for attendance at the showmen's meetings and the other for financial results, were attained.

In order that the tenants at Ayr Fair might understand what was expected of them re the benefit for the Trade Defence Fund, Mr. George Green sent out the following circular to his showmen tenants:—

AN APPEAL.

It has been proposed to give a benefit to the Van Dwellers' Protection Association on the opening night (Thursday) at Ayr Races, the organisation which has done so much for the protection of travellers' interests in Parliament and elsewhere.

This Society has been kept alive, to a great extent, by Lord George Sanger, who has yearly contributed £100 to the Society's funds.

Notwithstanding this, the Society is considerably in debt owing mainly to the expensive Parliamentary work, and an endeavour is now being made to place it on a sounder financial footing, as it is felt to be a reflection on travellers generally that the Association should be so largely dependent on the generosity of one gentleman.

Those who are not in for the Thursday can give their first night's takings.

If you are willing to give your first night's takings as above kindly sign here—

Yes .....

If you are not willing, sign here—

No .....

All subscriptions will be acknowledged in the giver's own name.

It is to the credit of the whole showman body in Scotland that not a single refusal was sent in, and in one notable instance a show proprietor (already an annual subscriber, and this year a special subscriber) to the Guild funds—we refer to Mr. Arthur Henderson—sent a donation of £5 to the benefit funds although for business reasons he was not able to take Ayr Fair this year.

Taking Up the Guild Benefit.

Very unfortunately, the first night of the fair was marred by showers of rain at the very time when the patrons of the fair were deciding whether they would visit the opening night or not. But for the untoward downpour of rain, there is very little doubt that a very much larger sum would have been actually taken at the various shows, riding machines, shooting galleries, stalls, and fairground novelties. Even as it was, the record sum of £52 12s. 9d. was the magnificent response to Mr. George Green's appeal. We give the list of subscribers with this explanation, that in several notable instances, marked in the list with the words "and donation" the amount actually taken was supplemented by an additional sum freely given to augment the fund:—

George Green (including donation); £12 12s.; John Wilmot (including donation), £10; Arthur Henderson, second donation 1907, £5; P. Swallow, £2 12s. 6d. (including donation); Mrs. Johnson, £1 10s. 5d.; Mr. Macintosh, £1 7s. 10d.; C. Baker, £1 2s. 2d.; J. Howard, £1 3s. 9d.; J. Biddall (circus), £1 1s. 6d.; J. Wingate, £1 1s.; W. Moore, £1 1s.; Mr. Rayner, £1 9s. 2d.; T. Paulo (circus) £1 1s. 6d.; Mr. Gibbons, 12s.; J. Day, 10s. 6d.; H. Irvine, 10s. 1d.; H. Irvine, jun., 10s.; J. Wilmot, jun., 10s. 6d.; S. Rostron, 9s. 5d.; Mrs. Newton, 5s. 10d.; J. Caddick, 6s. 6d.; Mrs. Lawrence, 7s. 6d.; Mr. Dawson, 5s. 8d.; W. Merrick, 5s. 9d.; J. Anderson, 5s.; D. Moore, 8s.; Mrs. Stevenson, 5s.; Mr. Westray, 5s.; Mr. Beatty, 7s. 10d.; Mr. Milligan, 5s.; Mr. Buckley, 6s.; J. Blockley, 4s. 9d.; Mrs. Bradley, 2s. 6d.; Mr. Goldberg, 1s. 3d.; Mr. Robertson, 3s.; Mr. Styles, 3s. 2d.; Mr. Dunseath, 1s. 2d.; Mr. Hiscoe, 1s. 1d.; C. Irving, 1s. 10d.; Mr. Sheeran, 2s.; C. Nelson, 3s. 4d.; J. W. Kelly, 2s. 11d.; Mr. Brady, 1s. 1d.; Mrs. Blockley, 3s. 8d.; Mr. Stevenson, 3s. 8d.; Mr. Russell, 2s. 8d.; Mr. Gow, 2s. 7d.; Mr. Dobbing, 3s.; H. Smith, 3s. 8d.; W. Irvine, 2s. 1d.; George Blockley, 2s.; Mr. Hughes, 4s. 2d.; Mr. Millar, 6d.; Mr. Newey, 2s. 11d.; D. Kennedy, 2s. 1d.; Mr. Testo, 1s.; N. Boswell, 1s.; Mr. Davis, 4s.; Mr. Martin, 2s. 6d.; Mr. Johnson, 6d.; Mr. Kelso, 8d.; Mr. Hadfield, 7d.; Mr. Shaw, 3d.; Mr. Cook, 11d.; and Mr. Knight, 2s. 1d.

We have given the smallest amount the same acknowledgment as the larger sums, because even the "threepence" represented the business result at a small stall which, owing to the bad weather, only took the three pennies, and it was given in loyal compliance with the universal idea that governed the benefit. Every concern, big or little, was to give its takings, and we are glad to say that "the widow's mite" was as welcome as the rich man's guinea or pound.

Conference of Scottish Showmen.

Mr. George Green's cinematograph pavilion was quite half filled with show people only—men and women, proprietors, artists, and employees at both machines and shows—in fact, as we have already intimated, notable as the gathering at Greenock was, the splendid answer to the call to attend the meeting at Ayr created a second record. Space forbids us giving individual names; we must content ourselves with saying that practically every showman and stallholder on the ground was present at the conference. Mr. Geo. Green, vice-president, was voted to the chair, on the motion of the Rev. T. Horne and John Wilmot, V.P. On rising to address his fellow-showmen, Mr. Green was received with cheers. In one of his characteristic and business speeches (terse and to the point) he intimated that the principal object of the gathering was to hear the story of the Showmen's Guild from the organising chaplain, the Rev. T. Horne. He was proud to have the pleasure of introducing their reverend friend to so representative a gathering of Scotch showmen. He had known Mr. Horne now for many years, and he ventured to assert that he proud to be numbered amongst the many keen admirers of their reverend friend and champion. He had seen Mr. Horne at work; and whether it was in addressing large public meetings, advocating the showman's claim to recognition and to just treatment by the State or by municipal bodies, or whether it was in the committee-room of the House of Commons, speaking in their behalf and in defence of the trade and business, or interviewing Members of Parliament and obtaining their assistance against obnoxious Bills, or in the deliberations of their committees, he had ever found Mr. Horne the sturdy champion, defender, and wise counsellor of his people. In fact, it was to him an utter impossibility to conceive how they could have achieved the noble work which the Guild had accomplished without the ability and the leadership of such a man as the Rev. Thomas Horne. He therefore had much pleasure in asking Mr. Horne to deliver his promised address and to read (as he had undertaken that it should be read) the individual contributions to the Guild Benefit Fund. (Cheers.)

The Organising Chaplain's Speech.

Mr. Horne was received with acclamation. He very gladly assented (he said) to the request of their Chairman to read out each individual contribution that made up the record benefit of the present year for the funds of their Society. He could assure them that it was an added pleasure to the many pleasures he was enjoying by his renewed acquaintance with his Scotch friends, to find that all the prospective work of arranging for and taking up the benefit was already finished, concluded and settled before he had set his foot in Ayr. He felt also at the very outset of his remarks that he ought to express his personal satisfaction not only at the magnificent result, but at the unanimity and the loyalty of the whole body of fairground traders in responding to Mr George Green's appeal, and further that he must add a generous tribute of acknowledgment to those proprietors who to their actual takings had added additional money by way of a donation.

Scotland, he said, had established two notable records. Of the very encouraging and important meetings he had addressed this year, the gathering before him in the point of numbers was the greatest, and also that the money realised at the Benefit, £52 19s. 9d., was more than double the highest previous record of benefits given upon fairgrounds for the funds of the society. (Great applause.)

He then read the names and contributions given in detail above.

Proceedings with his address Mr. Horne dwelt with considerable length upon the Parliamentary work of the Guild, making a special reference to the very objectionable Private Bill dealing with the education of vagrant children which the Parliamentary agent of the society was successful in getting blocked in the Session of Parliament 1906. In order to make the bearings of this Bill understood by his hearers, Mr. Horne read the important clauses of the Act, as follows:—

Be it enacted by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same as follows:—

1. When a child is so moved from place to place as to prevent such child from receiving regular education under the Elementary Education Acts, 1870 to 1902, the parent or person having the custody or charge of such child shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and shall be liable, upon summary conviction, to imprisonment with hard labour for a term not exceeding three months and such child may be adjudged to be a child of vagrant parents within the meaning of this Act.
2. Any constable may take into custody without a warrant and charge before a Justice of the Peace with the commission of an offence under Section 1 of this Act, any person whom he shall have cause to suspect of having committed such an offence, and such Justice of the Peace may order the detention of such person in prison until the charge is heard, and such constable may take charge of any child in respect of which an offence is suspected, and deliver him for safe custody to the master of the workhouse of the parish or union in which the aforesaid person has been apprehended until the charge is heard.

Here was a Bill that ostensibly aimed at the unfortunate children of criminal parents, tramps, and begging imposters—the wretches who drag a string of cruelly ill-used children about the country for either begging or criminal purposes. That, on the face of it, was the pious intention of its promoters—with that intention the showmen were in fullest sympathy. But, and the reservation was a most important one for them, no case was taken; no attempt was even made to discriminate between the child of the criminal tramp and professional "moucher" and the child of the genuine worker out of work and seeking it—as thousands were obliged to do owing to fluctuations in trade—or the child of the hard-working showman or fairground trader.

First of all notice, he continued, that the Bill would create an entirely new offence; it makes the parent guilty of a criminal offence if they move from place to place, taking their children with them. No attempt is made to distinguish between parents and parents, children and children, showmen and itinerant traders. Circus, variety, and theatrical children, and their parents, would all come under the stigma and power of this law, and would be classed with criminal parents and tramps as being vagrants, and subject to the pains and penalties of the Act. In the second clause it gives any constable power, on suspicion, without any warrant, to apprehend the parent and to take the child to the nearest workhouse. Now, we ask you (he demanded) to imagine how this would affect some of the most interesting of our travelling shows. For instance, the small circus or variety show, in which every member of the family takes part. The show enters a town; the constable, with the responsibility of this Act upon his shoulders, notices that one or two of the children appear to him to be under the age of fourteen. He is empowered, without any warrant from a magistrate, to lodge the parents in prison, and to take the children suspected to be under fourteen to the nearest workhouse. The parents are in prison, the children are pauperised, and the show is sold up to pay the expenses of the prosecution. There is nothing in the Bill to prevent the picture we have drawn you from being realised in fact. You must not forget that in all legislation it is not the pious intention of the legislators that becomes law, but the actual wording of the Bill when it passes Parliament, and has become part and parcel of the statute law of the land. (Shame.)

Mr. Horne briefly referred to the great and constantly growing departments of the society's work—the defence of shows and showmen whenever unjustly attacked.

The Work of the Showmen's Guild.

In a powerful concluding passage he made eloquent reference to the great work that the Guild had done, and was still doing, for the protection and betterment of the show business of the Empire and the popular amusements of the people. All that he had done had been, from first to last, inspired by the one great and enduring ambition of his life to be of use to the men, women, and children of the road—his brethren of the fairground. He asked them, therefore, to not only subscribe—as they had already generously done in the benefit—but also to join the Society and become members and yearly subscribers to its funds, that its great and beneficial endeavour may go forward to higher planes of usefulness and to the preservation to the peoples of the Empire of the time-honoured open-air entertainments and recreations of the fair. (Great and continued applause.)

The Conference and its Speakers.

The CHAIRMAN, in asking for speakers on the subject before the Conference, added that there was one important clause that Mr. Horne had not referred to in his masterly treatment of the Vagrant Children's Education Bill. That was the third clause, and it read thus:—

"3. When any parent has been convicted of an offence under Section 1 of this Act, the Court may adjudge any child in respect of which an offence has been committed to be a child of vagrant parents, and may order that the child of vagrant parents shall be received into the workhouse or the union in which the parent was taken into custody, or the child was adjudged to be a child of vagrant parents, whereupon Section 1 of the Poor Law Act, 1899, as amended by Section 1 of the Poor Law Act, 1899, shall apply, and the Guardians of the poor of such union shall be empowered as regards such child of vagrant parents to pass a resolution vesting in themselves, as provided by the said section, the rights of the parent or parents of such child. If the Court orders such child of vagrant parents to be received into a workhouse, the Court may order that the whole or any part of the cost of the maintenance of such child shall be provided by the parent of such child, and paid to the Guardians by whom such child is maintained." (Shame!)

They would thus see how completely the family life of show people (obliged to travel, as some were, with their children) was threatened by such proposed and ill-considered legislation—the parents cast into prison, the concern sold to pay the lawyers, and the children forcibly taken from parental control and care and emigrated. Such was one specimen of threatened legislation that Mr. Horne, acting for them, had been able to avert. (Cheers.)

A Circus Proprietor on the Bill.

Mr. TOM PAULO felt that it was his bounden duty to thank Mr. Horne and the Guild for the good work they had done for him and his family. His was just the kind of show that would have suffered most if that Bill had not been defeated. They knew, he proceeded, that the entire performance in his circus was given by his family. His heart misgave as he thought of what possibly would have happened to him, going about the country with his circus, in happy ignorance of the doom threatening him and his, until the fatal bolt fell, and he found himself, at the mere whim or prejudice of any casual informer, or constable, cast into prison as a criminal, for neglect of a duty—the care of his family, for which he had always been ready to use his whole mind and strength. It was monstrous. It was, indeed, an outrage on all the best feelings of their homes and their lives to even threaten such evil. (Great applause.) Mr. Green, their worthy Chairman, had spoken with intimate knowledge of Mr. Horne and his great work. He would now assure Mr. Horne that he and all his fellow-showmen in Scotland would better appreciate, and better support, his grand work for their good, because he had come amongst them, and had told them in his own glowing words what the old Society had done in the past. (Cheers.)

Mr. John Wilmot's Speech.

At the urgent desire of the Conference, the "Father of the Scotch Fair-grounds," Vice-President JOHN WILMOT, said a few words. He was too full for mere words, he said, his heart was good enough, but speech was faltering. This he would say, that from its very inception up to that grand meeting he had ever been a supporter of, and whenever possible a worker for, the Society. Their meeting at Greenock was a most successful one in every way. This one was—he rejoiced to see it—a greater success still. He was geting on in years, and the tale of his life would, he anticipated, be soon told. Gladly, therefore, he welcomed the younger generation—men like their good Chairman, George Green, to enlarge their ideas, and to carry forward their work to greater perfection and success. He counselled all present to join the Guild, and to give it at all times generous support. (Cheers.)

Votes of Thanks to the Speaker and Chairman.

Mr. JAMES STYLES, in moving a vote of thanks to the Rev. Thomas Horne for his address that afternoon, paid an eloquent tribute to the personal force of character and ability of the Guild Chaplain. He felt sure that those who had enjoyed the privilege of listening to the addresses of Mr. Horne would agree with him, that no man living had greater powers to move his listeners, particularly his showmen friends, than the Rev. Thomas Horne. The secret of his wonderful power was the manifest sincerity of his soul, and the intense sympathy he always displayed when pleading for a larger charity and a fuller hope for humanity at large. He moved, therefore, with great pleasure the best thanks of the meeting to Mr. Horne. (Great applause.)

The CHAIRMAN seconded the vote, and it was passed amidst great enthusiasm.

The Rev. T. HORNE fittingly acknowledged the vote, and concluded by moving a vote of thanks to the chairman.

Mr. GREEN concluded his reply by reminding the meeting that new members could be at once enrolled by the conference secretaries, Messrs. Styles and T. Caddick, jun.

New Scotch Members, 1907.

Per Messrs. Styles and Caddick:—John Howard, £1; Mr. Sheenan, 5s.; J. Day, 5s.; Mrs. E. Blockley, 5s.; R. Russell, 5s.; J. Blockley, 5s.; J. Biddall, 5s.; J. Hughes, 5s.; J. Anderson, 5s.; J. W. Kelly, 5s.; W. Moore, 5s., G. Carter, 5s.; G. Dobbit, 5s.; C. Nelson, 5s.; W. Merrick, 5s.; H. Irvin, 5s.; H. Irvin, jun., 5s.; C. Irvin, 5s.

The Guild Service.

George Green's superb show was crowded to its utmost capacity by the showpeople and their Ayr friends in the evening. The Guild service was taken up heartily by the great congregation, and it went with a devotional fervour that was most encouraging to feel and to participate in. The hymns were led by a few ladies from Newton Church, the organist was Miss Rainee from the Manse, and Mrs. Rainee, the wife of the minister of Newton Church, took part in leading the congregational singing of the service and the hymns from the Guild Service Book. The Guild Chaplain preached on the subject of the Holy Gospel for the day, and was listened to with the deepest attention. The Rev. J. Vavasour Hammond, of Holy Trinity Church, Ayr, has consented to act as Hon. Local Chaplain to the Guild.

AYR FAIR.

The County Burgh of Ayr is famous as the birthplace of Robert Burns, the Cottar Poet, who "sang the songs of the people."

It is a place of pilgrimage for all "the Intellectuals" of "all peoples, kindreds, and tongues." Not to have visited Ayr, not to have stood in the humble cottage where Burns was born at Alloway, in Ayr, is (if you have passed the opportunity by) to stand confessed a sorry worshipper at national shrines.

No showman would be so untrue to all the inspirations of his life as to miss the great national show at Alloway in Ayr.

The town itself, with its many monuments of a glorious past, and (not less important) its many signs of a vigorous and progressive present, is also worthy of note. In the world of shows Ayr has a distinctive place.

Only in one direction has Ayr been reactionary, and that is the way in which the Burgh Council have treated the showmen. The ancient fair of Ayr was held at the Quayside, an admirable site for the ready access of the people. When the time came to recognise the yearly increasingly congested nature of the old fair-ground at the Quayside, owing to two causes—the growth of the town, and the yet more rapid development of the shows and machine novelties attending the fair—the Corporation took a very arbitrary line in deciding to remove the fair without any consultation with or regard for the expert opinion of the showpeople. The leading Scotch showmen, Messrs. Wilmot, Green, and Swallow, speaking for the best interests of the fair, wished it to be removed to the spacious green and esplanade on the sea front, an ideal site within easy reach of the heart of the town, and every scope for the fair to grow with the growth of the town. But the leading spirits on the Council were most evidently out of sympathy with the fair, and not at all anxious to give better opportunities. They rejected the advice and opinion of the showmen and banished the fair to Newton Park, a suburb of Ayr, and a long and expensive (to working people) tram ride from the centre of the town.

The New Fair-Ground.

Had English conditions of freedom of trade obtained in Scotland (but alas! they do not) the enterprising showman would have settled the question by taking a suitable piece of land near at hand for the people, and letting the Corporation pay for its own lack of business enterprise.

In Scotland the show business is handicapped by a bad old law, which compels the showman to obtain a licence from the Mayor or the bench of magistrates before he opens his show. Acting within the severe compulsion of this law, the Corporation refused to license any ground but their own at Newton Park. We understand the Corporation endeavoured to impose a number of vexatious and unfair conditions with regard to the letting of Newton Park. So loyal to their leaders were Scottish showmen, that various attempts to set one lessee against another, and so to divide them, utterly failed. So real and so keen was the struggle between the Corporation and the showpeople that one year there was no fair. The whole of the allied fair-ground traders kept away, and the attempt to exploit them for the gain and profit of outside interests was defeated by the splendid generalship of George Green, who had behind all the principal lessees and proprietors in Scotland. It was, indeed, an object lesson in effective combination, and it served its purpose, for the fair is controlled for the showpeople by Mr. George Green, and it is set out in a manner that reflects the highest credit upon the expert originator and controller of the Glasgow carnival, whose praise is in all showland.

How to Nurse a Fair into Popularity.

To make a fair—nearly two miles away from its proper base—a business and a popular success is no small enterprise, and requires persistent pluck and enterprise.

One method—in fact, the only successful foundation to build upon—is to see to it that only the best and the most acceptable shows and amusements are allowed on the ground. This is an essential mark of show enterprise as far as we have investigated in Scotland. Both at Greenock, under the control of John Wilmot, and at Ayr, under George Green's management, only the very best of entertainments are admitted on the ground.

The second essential condition of success is to secure the sympathy and the patronage of all good men and true, who have liberal and broad-minded ideas about the pleasures and the recreation of the people. This is a much more difficult work in Scotland than in England, for the severest types of religion obtain, and puritanism takes longer to die down in the Scottish mind than in the English. In connection with this side of our subject, the work of the Guild in holding services, and in enlisting the sympathy of the clergy, is of real value.

Another means, and one that all wise showmen never neglect, is the judicious feeding of the Press. Showmen, of all men, cannot afford to let their light be hidden. They must show to the world what they are doing; they must "advertise." We do not presume to say a single word about the necessity of advertisement to the expert lessee of Ayr Fair-ground. His well-known up-to-date methods are a proverb in the land of shows. You can neither walk nor ride in Ayr without having before your eyes bills and placards directing your attention to the shows and entertainments at the fair. You are not left to ask your way, for every tramcar is labelled "To the Shows," "To the Shows."

The Setting Out of the Fair.

There is one great advantage at Newton Park—when you get there: it is large enough to hold the ideal modern fair; there is space enough and to spare to display every show, every machine every stall, every shooting gallery, to its fullest advantage. We only know one or two other places where the advantage of ground space is so ample as it is at Ayr. We refer to Hull and to Gloucester under their modern conditions. The ground is arranged in four-square form. One side of the huge quadrangle is occupied by shows big and little, one side by shooting concerns, and the two other sides by throwing games, stalls, and variety frames.

The centre of the ground is set apart for the big riding machines, and well and fully displayed they are. We have never seen a better-arranged or more carefully-thought-out plan of a fair than the one we saw last Saturday night, in all its magnificent display of moving charm of life and electric lighting.

The Shows—the Shows.

George Green's premier cinematograph theatre, Mr. J. Styles' lectures and dramatic illustration, both at the screen to describe the up-to-date films and at the front to speak to the outside crowds.

Mrs. Johnson's variety Empire, hippodrome, and living picture annexe; Paulo's circus, with the clever arena turns of the Paulo Family; Biddall's variety and cinématograph theatre; Buckley's menagerie and trained animals; Rayner's model of divers at work; Davies's technical mining school—a coal-pit model in working order below and above ground; Prof. Moore, the Scottish Sandow, and school of athletes; and several side shows, with palmistry and white magic.

The World of Whirligigs.

What an amazing, bewildering, entrancing, whirling world it is! In very truth, the heart and centre of the fair. Here you pay your penny and you take your choice. Motor-cars, airships, flying ostriches, mountain ponies, gondolas, Roman chariots, galloping and jumping horses, helter-skelter, steam and manual swings, overboats, oscillating Japanese wheeley whirley, all alight with electric glory, all ablaze with brightest colour and golden glitter—the world of machine novelties, ready to be your world for the open sesame of a "bawbee." This magnificent aggregation of steam and electric driven marvels of mechanical skill and invention consisted of the concerns of George Green (two sets), John Wilmot (two sets), Peter Swallow, J. Wingate, C. Baker, J. Howard, J. Wilmot, jun., Stevenson, and Lawrence, with juvenile and gem sets by Wilmot, Baker, and Swallow.

The Shooting Ranges and Galleries.

These were well displayed, and occupied nearly the whole length of one side of the fair-ground. Winchester ranges, shooting tubes, bottle and egg smashing batteries, by Messrs. Lawrence, J. Wilmot, jun., Sheeran, J. Day, Rostron, Dawson, Smith, Hughes, Merrick, Newton, and Irvine.

Throwing Games, Varieties, and Stalls.

These gave a most attractive display with an immense frontage, nearly two sides of the quadrangle. The up-to-date concerns of Messrs. Macintosh (2), Merrick (2), Kelly (2), Sheeran (2), Hiscoe (2), Knight (2), Wilmot, jun. (2), H. Irvine, sen. (2), J. Anderson (2), Smith (2), and single concerns by Messrs. Cooke-Nelson, Stevenson, Stevenson, jun., C. Irvine, H. Irvine, jun., Russell, J. Blockley, J. W. Kelly, J. Dobbit, Wm. Merrick, jun., and Mesdames E. Blockley and Newton. The refreshment booths were those of Hughes, Moore, and Galloway. At the principal entrance to the fair stood the well-known photo. van of J. Caddick and Son, the fair-ground photographers from the Fun City, Olympia, and famous on the great fair-grounds of the Empire.

CINEMATOGRAPH REGULATIONS OF THE LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL.

As a good many mistaken notions exist as to the safety of cinematograph apparati and performances, we give the following regulations respecting the use of cinematograph lanterns, etc., in theatres, music halls, and other premises licensed by the London County Council:—

(1) No cinematograph, or other similar apparatus involving the use of a lengthy combustible film, shall be exhibited on premises licensed by the Council, until the Council has been satisfied that all reasonable precautions have been taken against accident and danger to the public.

(2) Notice of any intended exhibition shall be given to the Clerk of the Council by the licensee of the premises in which such exhibition is to be given, and the licensee shall be held entirely responsible for the proper and safe use of the apparatus. Such notice shall be given at least three days before the first day of exhibition. Opportunity shall also be afforded to the Council's inspector of inspecting the apparatus before the public exhibition takes place, in order to allow time for any necessary alterations to be carried out and approved by the Council. No gangway or exit must be in any way affected.

(3) The cinematograph shall stand in a suitable fireproof room or closed sheet-iron box of sufficient dimensions to allow the operators to work freely, and fitting closely to the floor, which shall be covered with fire-resisting material within such room or box. The door or doors shall open outwards and be self-closing, and of the three windows which are necessary in the front face of the enclosure, the centre one shall not exceed 8in. square, and the windows on each side shall not exceed 6in. square; a flap-screen to cover all these three holes shall be fitted and actuated both from the inside and from the outside of the enclosure; the space separating the audience and seats from the iron enclosure shall not be less than 2ft. in width at the sides and in the front of the enclosure, and the space at the back in which the door is situated shall not be less than 6ft. from the enclosure. The audience shall be completely excluded from the above space around the enclosure by a suitable barrier. No unnecessary combustible material shall be within the enclosure, and, as far as possible, all necessary combustible material shall be rendered fireproof, or shall be enclosed in fireproof receptacles. The part of the film immediately opposite the lens shall be provided with an apparatus which prevents the film, if kindled, from burning towards either of the spools.

(4) The body of the lantern shall be constructed of wood or other non-conducting material, and shall be coated inside with asbestos; it shall also have an inner lining of sheet-iron, and an air space shall be left between the iron and the asbestos lining. In the bottom of the lantern shall stand an iron tray, which shall be surrounded by a vertical edge at least 1in. in depth. The lantern shall be provided with a metal shutter, which shall fall freely between the source of light and the condenser. This shutter shall be immediately dropped in the event of any accident to the apparatus or stoppage of the film, and shall only be raised when the film is in motion for the purpose of projection. One of the firemen of the establishment shall be in attendance near the apparatus with a wet blanket and two buckets of water.

(5) Where possible the electric arc light shall be adopted as an illuminant, the usual rules for securing safety in an electric installation being observed. Ether and other inflammable liquids shall not be employed under any circumstances for producing light. If limelight be used in the lantern the general regulations for its safety, which are issued by the Council, shall be complied with, and any additional precautions which the Council may deem necessary for securing safety shall also be adopted. The use of acetylene gas, other than "dissolved acetylene," will not be permitted. When "dissolved acetylene" is used the conditions set out in Order No. 6 of the Secretary of State, made under the Explosives Act, 1875, must be complied with, and the gas must not be allowed to come into contact with copper or copper alloys.

(6) The space in which the cinematograph stands shall, where possible, be illuminated by electric glow lamps; but a miner's safety lamp may be substituted, if necessary. No naked gas or oil flames or matches shall be allowed in the space. The lighting of the hydrogen flame in the lantern shall be accomplished by means of an electric lighter.

(7) The films, when not actually passing through the lantern, shall be kept enclosed in metal cases. The film which is passing through the lantern shall be re-wound, either automatically or by hand, upon another bobbin as fast as it emerges from the lantern front.

(8) Not less than two, nor more than three, operators shall be engaged within the lantern space, and no other persons shall be within the lantern enclosure during the exhibition. The whole duty of one of the operators shall consist in taking charge of the film after it has passed through the lantern.

(9) The licensee shall be held responsible for the employment of competent, experienced, and trustworthy operators, and shall be prepared at any time to supply to the Council satisfactory credentials in this respect.

(10) Smoking within the lantern space shall be absolutely forbidden at all times.

(11) The Council reserves to itself the right of modifying any of the above regulations and of requiring the adoption of any further precautions, in addition those specified above, as circumstances may require.

G. L. GOMME,
Clerk of the Council.

MR. TOM E. SWIFT, the popular comedian of the Cleveleys Bohemian Entertainers, by permission of Mr. Stratton Wells, was accorded a benefit on Thursday last, the 12th. Several presentations and speeches were made, and a capital programme was contributed.

AMERICAN AMUSEMENTS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

NEW YORK, SEPT. 11.—The Ranger, a realistic and exciting melodrama in four acts, by Augustus Thomas, has been well received at Wallack's Theatre. In the first act Captain Esmond, in command of a company of rangers, arrives in Gordo Loma, a small town on the Mexican frontier, pursuing a couple of miners, who have robbed and murdered one of his men. The fellow has sought the protection of Mr. Harrington, the manager of a mine being operated for American capitalists. Harrington, in addition to robbing his employers, has incited the hatred of the natives by buying a Mexican girl from her mother without the father's consent. Harrington has previously employed "Jack" Blennus, one of the murderers, in some of his own crooked work, and tries to save him. But Esmond orders him to be shot on the spot, and the rangers obey their leader. The other murderer escapes in a buggy borrowed from the United States Consular official, who is a friend of Harrington. In the meantime the mine owner, with his daughter Dorothy, has arrived on the scene, and it develops that she and Esmond have figured in a romance on a previous occasion, when he fished her out of the river with his lasso. The act is brought to a close by an attack of the Mexicans, who demand Harrington's life, but Esmond, mounted on a pony and armed with a six-shooter, puts them to rout.

In the second act the Americans are awaiting further attacks. Water is low and bullets scarce. Esmond learns that the Mexicans are armed with dynamite, and realises that their only safety lies in a relief by troops stationed sixty miles away. After some parleying—he believes it is safer to go than to stay, and tries to induce Harrington to make the journey—he is chosen as the one to make the ride for life. Then he tells the girl of his love for her, leading up to it with descriptions of plays and actors, ranging from John McCullough in Virginius to a cheap répertoire company in The Relief of Lucknow. Before he can complete his history of the acted drama the girl is in his arms. Then he bravely rides away. It is now discovered that the thief who was shot by Esmond's orders carries a passport proving him to have been Dorothy's brother; and subsequently Harrington, who loves the little lady himself, tells her that Esmond is responsible for the boy's death. Being a villain of the deepest dye, he further imperils Esmond's chances of matrimonial bliss by laying the blame for the uprising on Esmond's shoulders and charging him with his own crime.

In the third act the corral is shown in badly-damaged condition, the Mexicans having used dynamite to get at the superintendent, whom they hate. Things are at their worst when Esmond comes back; the American regulars on the other side of the Rio Grande have refused to ride into Mexican territory He brings no help, but he has come back to share with his friends and the girl he loves an almost certain death. But as dawn breaks shots are heard, and over the Mexican mesas come a party of Mexican soldiers. Their relief is for everyone but Esmond, who is told that he is under arrest for riding into Mexican territory and for killing a man. There is a quick trial; Esmond is found innocent, while Harrington's villainies are all laid bare, and he is stabbed by the father of the Mexican girl he bought from a worthless mother. Then it turns out that Dorothy's brother was not killed after all, and she finds happiness with Captain Esmond.

Mr. Dustin Farnum, who appeared as Esmond, made a manly hero, acting with commendable sincerity and self-restraint, and scoring a complete success. Mr. Charles Lane as Harrington acquitted himself well; and Miss Mary Boland as Dorothy Osgood was a winsome heroine.

"THE MAN ON THE CASE," a comedy in three acts, by Grace Livingston Furness, produced at the Madison-square Theatre on the 4th inst., kept the audience in a good humour from start to finish, and won several hearty rounds of applause. Courtney Longacre, "of Wall-street," is caught on the wrong side of the market, and, in order to tide over his difficulties, he first robs his wife of her jewels, which he pawns, and then plans to marry his daughter, Nell, to one Carroll Dempsey, of lowly lineage, but heir to thirty millions. To prevent any suspicion attaching to himself in the matter of the theft he has gone so far as to hire Betterton, the famous detective, to look into the case. So much we learn before the curtain has been up five minutes. Dempsey reaches the Longacre country place before Betterton—head foremost from his motor-car over the garden wall. Being mistaken for Betterton by the Longacre family, who have not previously made his acquaintance, he has the inspiration of persuading Betterton, when he does appear, to exchange identities with him. While he is masquerading as the detective Nell Longacre falls in love with him, but not with his calling. He well sustains the character he has assumed, however, by discovering that Longacre himself has taken his wife's jewels and pawned them, and by quick action is able to save his prospective father-in-law from exposure. This means, of course, the dismissal of the real detective and a happy understanding between the lovers. Betterton, the professional "sleuth," is a coarse, ill-bred fellow, who naturally shocks the girl he is presumably to marry, while Dempsey, the millionaire, has the manners of a Chesterfield. Moreover, the amateur triumphs over the professional at every turn. One of the funniest moments in the piece comes when he tells his sweetheart of some of his famous cases, and is interrupted by such questions as this: "But how could you tell by the cigar ash on the doorstep that it was the cook who stole the famous jewels?" To all of the questions he makes the illuminating reply, "Yes; that's just it." Finding a short yellow hair in the drawing-room gives him the clue that the culprit was a blond. When he learns that it was shed by the household dog he finds another clue.

Mr. Jameson Lee Finney, as Carroll Dempsey, realised all the humorous possibilities of the part, and made a decided hit. Miss Elsie Leslie, who endeared herself to thousands of theatre-goers as the gifted child actress in Little Lord Fauntleroy many years ago, emerged from a long retirement to play Nell Longacre, and received an enthusiastic greeting, her performance pleasing the audience immensely. Miss Mary Hampton and Messrs. Charles Lamb, Fred W. Peters, William Herbert, and Chester W. Beecroft played prominent parts well. Produced under the direction of Mr. Walter N. Lawrence, the piece has some pretty scenic effects that are admirably carried out on a very shallow stage, these including a storm of wind and rain and a set showing two lighthouses in the distance—one with a fixed white light, the other red and revolving. This is probably the last season of the Madison-square Theatre, as it is to be pulled down when the lease expires to make room for another "skyscraper."

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL LAW.

BY A. A. STRONG, LL.B. (LOND.), SOLICITOR.

Your book will, I am sure, be a valuable aid to all managers and actors.—SIR HENRY IRVING.

Mr. Strong states the whole case very clearly.—Illustrated London News.

Should be found very useful.—Pelican.

The work succeeds in making plain the thorny legal path that every manager and artist must tread, and by a timely consultation of its pages they may avoid much misapprehension and trouble.—Star.

Mr. A. A. Strong has compiled an exceedingly useful volume dealing carefully, intelligently, and fully with the law bearing upon things theatrical. As a book of reference this excellent digest will be found invaluable.—The Bra.

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, AUG. 13.—PRINCESS' THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. J. C. Williamson.—Lady Madcap is here. It can only be staged for three more nights, the theatre having been taken by Mr. Edwin Geach for a short season, starting from Saturday evening next, when he will present the English actor, Mr. Ernest Leicester, and a specially imported company in the powerful play Human Hearts.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. J. C. Williamson; Business-Manager, Mr. George Tallis.—On Saturday evening The Ragged Earl was here. Mr. Andrew Mack has introduced a number of new and tuneful ditties into the production, which met with great approval. Although in the zenith of its popularity, The Ragged Earl can only be played for three more nights, as Mr. Mack's season is rapidly drawing to a close.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. Bland Holt; Business-Manager, Mr. Simonsens.—The Bondman is here. On Saturday evening there was a record house, hundreds having to be turned away long before eight o'clock. The vigorous acting of Mr. George Rignold never fails to reach the audience. He is ably supported by the rest of Mr. Bland Holt's capable company. The realistic scenic work of Mr. John Brunton nightly calls forth loud applause.

OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Rickards; Business-Manager, Mr. Fred Aydon.—On Saturday evening Mr. Edward Cranston made his first appearance in Australia, presenting his original Irish racing sketch Terry. During the action of the sketch the audience is treated to a number of highly dramatic situations, while the acting of Mr. Cranston and his company is entirely to the taste of the Opera House patrons. A number of changes have been made in the programme, which includes Bijou Russell, Leonard Nelson, Techow's Cats, Baby Watson, Ernesto, Fred Bluett, Pearl Hellmrich, Harold Reeves, Carden Wilson, Eileen Lyons, the Four Rosebuds, the Ranger Sisters, Joseph Dewhurst, Harry Saddler, Nellie Kilburn, and Les Warton; while too much praise cannot be bestowed upon Mr. Hamilton Hill, baritone, for his splendid singing. Mr. Hill is the possessor of a voice of great strength and richness.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Joe Solomons.—Thelma Woods, contralto, and Vesto, trapeze artist, made their first appearance on Saturday evening, and were each accorded good receptions for their respective turns. A strong programme was presented by the rest of the company, which includes Jerry Hart, Bella Perman, Walter Melrose, Nellie Hill, Harry Leggett, George Silcock, Gertie McLeod, and many others.

WEST'S PICTURES and the Brescians continue to attract large audiences at the Athenæum Hall. On Saturday evening there was a complete change of programme, when a new series of pictures were shown, which met with great approval. The musical portion of the programme was also greatly appreciated.

THE Royal Besses o' th' Barn Band gave their final concert at the Town Hall on Saturday evening, in the presence of a large audience. The programme submitted was an excellent one, and each item was thoroughly enjoyed.

SYDNEY, AUG. 13. — HER MAJESTY'S. — Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. C. Williamson; Business-Manager, Mr. G. L. Goodman.—La Mascotte fills the bill to the entire satisfaction of all concerned. On the 17th The Belle of New York will be revived. In this cast Mr. Alf. Stephens is to be the Ichabod Bronson, as Mr. George Lauri is to have a needed rest.

AT the Criterion Mr. Hopkinson is fulfilling its laughter-making mission, with Miss Grace Palotta, Mr. Hugh J. Ward, and Mr. George Willoughby as chief perpetrators.

THE Palace is doing good business with Miss Florence Baines and her company in Miss Lancashire, Limited, and the comedienne is increasing in favour. His Excellency the Governor, learning that the breach of etiquette was unintentional, has fixed another night as a vice-regal command night, to witness the performance.

THE Royal sees Miss Maud Hildyard in her vigorous and forceful acting in The Great Awakening. But good as the lady is in these melo-parts, it is evident that she is capable of higher thespian flights, and we are hoping to see her in a legitimate rôle. Meanwhile, she, Miss May Congdon, and Mr. Charles Vane are ably supported in making money for Meynell and Gunn, their enterprising "chiefs."

"THE PRAIRIE SCOUT" is the play at the Hippodrome, and Mr. E. J. Cole has cast it well. For a popular-priced house things are done remarkably well.

THE Tivoli holds a full hand at present. The newest cards played by Mr. Harry Rickards are Fred Graham and Nellie Dene in a screaming sketch, Packing Up; and Miss Olive Sinclair, a new ballad singer, charmed her audience, and made a legitimate success. The Svengalis, Michael Nolan, Agnes Hazel, Ernest Fitts, and other clever artists, give a fine show, and the new bioscopic views are a most attractive finale.

WEST'S pictures at the Lyceum are witnessed by a crowded house every night, each event of the day being taken by Mr. West, and reproduced as speedily as possible.

THE National Amphitheatre has a very long list of artists in its programme, the latest additions being the Driscolls and Jarvis and Martyn. The actor-vocalist, Sam Gale, has returned, and Mr. Brennan has an inexhaustible stock of talent, managed by Mr. Bain.

THE city is full of picture and vaudeville shows, and each additional one is as well patronised as the last.

THE late Mrs. Edouin Bryer was sixty-five, not seventy-five, as I was informed.

MME. BLANCHE ARRAL (Mlle. Claire Lardonois) finished her series of operatic recitals on the 10th amid a scene of wild excitement. The glorious singer sang selections from the operas, and one or two ballads in English, loud cheers being given at the conclusion. At the end of the programme the audience refused to leave, and Mme. Arral, with the tricolour flag in hand, sang "La Marseillaise," everybody standing, and when the singer joined the flags of England and France, and sang "God Save the King," the delighted folks joined in and made it an event never to be forgotten by anyone present. Signor Torzillo played several harp solos, and Herr Paans led an orchestra which was conducted by Miss Ruby Guest.

MISS BEATRICE DAY and Mr. Herbert Flemming left for London on the 10th in the Miltiades to organise a new company and secure more plays for Australasia. On the 8th some four score ladies and gentlemen met at the A.B.C. Café to witness a presentation to Miss Day from the company now disbanded. Mr. H. W. Varna made the presentation—a set of solid silver flower vases and a large block of opal, surmounted by a silver emu (from Mr. Flemming)—in a graceful speech, to which Miss Day replied in felicitous terms. All had tea and cakes, and said regretful adieus.

THE departing conductor, Signor Roberto Hazon, is to have a mighty send-off. Large committees are collecting moneys for a testimonial.

THE engagement, to be married, is announced of Miss Gillian Scaife and Mr. Warburton Gamble, of the Willoughby and Ward Comedy Company, now at the Criterion.

MR. ALFRED W. NEWTON, the popular manager of the Corporation entertainments, Cheltenham, on Wednesday evening took a benefit in the Town Hall. Several of the season's favourites rallied round him for the occasion.

(INCLUDING THE LONDON COLISEUM, LTD.).

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office.

Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns.

Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow :—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT,
MR. S. GETHING,
Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT,
MR. T. GERALD MORTON,
Empire Palace, Leeds.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT,

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT,
MR. J. CHRISTIE,
The Empire, Cardiff.

LONDON DISTRICT,
MR. WILLIAM COLLINS,
The Empire, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

THIS WEEK'S NOVELTIES.

RIDING SCHOOL AT SAUMUR.

Code Word, COMPRIS.

Here we have cleverly shown all kinds of horse training and exercise. There are thoroughbreds and jumpers, racers, etc. There is one thoroughbred high jumper, whose rider would seem to be in great peril, so full of life and "beans" is the animal. He bucks, jumps, and does the most alarming things, but the rider is equal to him, and they seem to move as though one being instead of two. Very fascinating film.

460 ft. The Subject, £7 13s. 4d.

THE ENCHANTED GLASSES.

Code Word, COMTESSE.

A diabolic person comes into a room, does all sorts of weird things, and disappears in a smoke. His spirit returns, however, and goes into a skirt hanging on the wall, which moves about as if alive. Next a feminine silhouette comes and with her hand takes out of the enchanted glasses, one by one, the most quaint little imps who skip about and have a fine time. All is soon finished, however; the dress hangs flat against the wall; the wonderful people disappear, and all is quiet. Very pretty.

330 ft. The Subject, £5 10s.
Colouring, £3 12s.

POOR LITTLE PIG.

Code Word, COMTE.

Master Pig has been let loose by a couple of mischiefs, and is about to have a grand time. Soon, however, the farm hands, men, women, and children, are on his track, and a most laughable chase takes place. They come at last to a river, in goes Master Pig, but, poor little thing, he soon finds it is too much for him. The farm hands bring him quickly to the shore; he is wet, cold and miserable. What a fright! Awfully funny.

198 ft. The Subject, £3 6s.

THE ADVENTURESS.

Code Word, CONCLAVE.

Daring and thrilling story of a female spy. After many efforts she succeeds in entering the private room of one of the officers, steals some plans, and gets the aide-de-camp into trouble, and in trying to undo the mischief she has done she is fatally wounded.

906 ft. The Subject, £15 2s.
Colouring, 18s.

THE HIGHWAYMAN.

Code Word, CONDITION.

A landlord is returning from collecting his rents from the Saltpit and is followed by a brigand, who caused, he and his kind, no end of trouble during the Revolution. They were then called "chauffeurs," because they burnt the feet of their victims in order to find out where their money was hidden. In these pictures we see a very realistic story of the times.

595 ft. The Subject, £9 18s. 4d.
Colouring £1 17s.

2,000 MILES WITHOUT A DOLLAR: A SENSATIONAL NOVELTY.

Copyright, 1907, by The Vitagraph Company of America.

Dan buys new hat for his wife. Doesn't suit. Quarrel. Dan leaves home, goes West. Becomes cowboy. Months later cowboy delivers telegram proclaiming him a father. Steals cowboy's horse. Caught. Nearly hanged. Message saves him. Takes train for East. Telegram is his passport. Arrives in New York. Rushes into cab. No money. Again message saves him. Reaching home, "Grandpa" brings out tiny baby, then another, and finally the third one. A grand surprise after travelling 2,000 miles without a dollar. Length, 430ft.

MAN, HAT, AND COCKTAIL: A NEW DRINK, BUT AN OLD JOKE.

Copyright, 1907, by The Vitagraph Company of America.

Gentleman wearing new silk hat calls on his friends. Invited to have a drink. While one man prepares decoction in glass his accomplice mixes a drink in Jones's new silk hat. Jones tries to work same joke on a friend. Friend changes hats and Jones gets drink in his own hat. Length, 400ft.

THE EASTERNER: A TALE OF THE WEST.

Copyright, 1907, by The Vitagraph Company of America.

Outside typical Western hostelry. A group of cowboys and Mexicans are startled by sudden appearance of automobile (first they've ever seen) with a young "Easterner" and his bride as occupants. "Bad Bill," a notorious character, appears. His horse shies at strange vehicle. Bill contemptuously glances at auto, and offers to race his horse against machine. Wager is laid and exciting race ensues in which horse is bested. Back to the hotel. Wager is paid. Defeated man enters in bad humour. Attempts to shoot young bridegroom. Held up himself. Autoist agrees to fight "man fashion." Easterner soundly thrashes "Bad Bill."

A GENUINE "VITAGRAPH" HIT. Length, 475ft.

THE STARVING ARTIST: OR, REALISM IN ART.

Copyright, 1907, by The Vitagraph Company of America.

Poor artist in garret room bewailing his ill-luck. Looks out of window, sees links of sausage hanging in butcher's shop across the street. Paints on canvas a realistic picture of same. Substitutes painting for real article. Returns home. No means of cooking ill-gotten meal. Paints a fire on canvas so realistically that flames burst forth. Butcher discovers deception, suspects artist, summons officer, and starts for thief. Artist hears searching party. Paints open fireplace on window shade. Butcher, officer, and followers see apparent opening, rush in, fall through window into street below, while artist devours sausage with evident relish.

NOVEL—ORIGINAL—AMUSING. Length, 650ft.

ANOTHER STRIKING NOVELTY. LIGHTNING SKETCHES: MARVELLOUS—BEWILDERING—LAUGHABLE.

Copyright, 1907, by The Vitagraph Company of America.

A cartoonist draws with wonderful rapidity a number of sketches the characters in which move just as if alive, although they are merely sketches in outline, not living people. A bottle, glass, and Vichy syphon are drawn, the bottle pours out whisky, the syphon squirts Vichy, and the high-ball is complete—even running over a little, and still at all times it is not a real liquid—not actual bottle and glass, only a charcoal sketch. A dude and a poster girl are drawn. The dude makes love to the girl, juggles with his cane and hat, and finally, being very short, stands on his silk hat in order to kiss the young lady. The artist now rubs out the centre of the picture, but the upper and lower portions continue to move.

VERY MYSTIFYING AND NOVEL. Length, 600ft.

Sir,—

It may possibly interest you to learn that a Quarter-Column Advertisement in "The Era" (One Insertion) resulted in over £1,000 Bookings for an Entertainment with which I was connected some little time ago. The Entertainment was entitled

"THE CRUISE OF THE OPHIR,"

Cinématograph Show, and the Bookings were effected within a week.

Yours faithfully,
H. GOLDSMITH-WHITTON,
Late Manager, West's "Our Navy," &c.
London, May 19, 1906.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
"The Era" Annual for the current year, besides having all the usual valuable features which make the work so necessary for reference, has, for a special feature, a series of short articles, stories, or sketches by prominent members of the dramatic and musical profession, a well-executed portrait of each writer accompanying the text. The obituary for last year—unfortunately a heavy one—is given in a series of photograph likenesses of those departed. The full-page portrait of Mr. J. L. Toole is, indeed, worth more than the humble shilling at which the Annual is sold. The monthly calendar is, as usual, a storehouse of interesting facts connected with the stage. — Weekly Times and Echo.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
The "Era Annual" for 1907 is now out. It is full of good things, and will be eagerly perused by all who are interested in dramatic and musical affairs and personnel. Portraits of, and original contributions by, several public favourites and managers appear, including Miss Ellen Terry, who tells "How I Spend My Day"; Mr. Frank Cooper, Mr. Arthur Collins, Mr. Charles Collette, Mr. Frank Curzon, Mr. Matthew Brodie, Miss Constance Moxon, Miss Edith Cole, and Mr. Tom Craven. There is, in addition, the usual store of miscellaneous theatrical information which is indispensable to all who are interested in stage matters.—Liverpool Post, Jan. 26.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
"The Era" Annual for 1907, published at a shilling from 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, is, as usual, a happy combination of record, almanac, and literary symposium. The last-mentioned aspect is one that most commends the work to the lay reader. The literary contributions are signed by well-known artists who have contributed personal experiences of remembered incidents, and whose portraits adorn the pages. A touch of pathos is lent to an otherwise cheery publication by the inclusion of stage and music-hall favourites who died last year, one of whom was Mr. J. L. Toole.—Financier and Bullionist, Feb. 6.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
That invaluable annual, "The Era" Almanac, has just made its appearance for 1907. In addition to its usual record of the important productions and revivals of the past twelve months in London and Paris, there is a series of bright contributions by Miss Ellen Terry, Mr. Edward German, Mr. Frank Cooper, Mr. Frank Curzon, Mr. Charles Collette, Miss Alma Murray, and other well-known members of the profession.—Sunday Times, Jan. 27.

Dear Sir
I wish to thank You for cleaning the linen costume for me, & giving it me at such very short notice, & I think it simply wonderful being able to do it in the time, & they looked & felt new.
I shall gladly say how pleased
I am under the circumstances

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MACREADY'S EARLY DAYS.

At the early age of sixteen, says Macready in his "Reminiscences" collected by Pollock, my lot was decided, and henceforward my resolve was taken to do the best I could with the means presented to me. My kind friend Birch undertook to pay the Rugby bills, exceeding £100. My brother Edward, younger than myself by five years, continued his studies at a day-school at Manchester, whilst I, making myself as useful as I could to my father in his struggle through the remainder of his theatrical season, divided the time at my disposal between occasional snatches of work at my old classic authors, taking lessons in fencing, and getting by heart the words of such youthful characters in the drama as would seem most likely to suit my age and powers. I have had reason to question the judgment of my father in much that he would recommend and insist upon in my preparation for the stage. With a certain amount of cleverness, his notions and tastes were what I may call too "stagey" to arouse or nurse the originality of a first-rate actor. He referred always to what he had seen, and cited the manner in which past celebrities would deliver particular passages. Among dramatic poets his preference ran rather to Otway, Rowe, &c., than to Shakespeare, and in after life I had in consequence the difficult task of unlearning much that was impressed on me in my boyish days. Among players his models of excellence in their particular walks were Macklin and Henderson, the theatrical Titans to whose remote grandeur he looked back with confident veneration. He held with high esteem Kemble, and even Pope and Holman, with whom he was contemporary; but Macklin and Henderson, who had been the admiration of his early youth, held the foremost rank in his estimation. He had acted the part of Horatio in the Dublin Theatre three times in one week with three different Hamlets—Holman, Kemble, and Henderson—and with all the personal advantages of the two former, he regarded Henderson as immeasurably their superior. A criticism in one of the papers of the day distinguished the three; Holman as Hamlet; Kemble, Prince Hamlet; and Henderson, Hamlet, Prince of Denmark. His career was short, but from the testimony of those who witnessed his performances, he must have been a worthy successor of Garrick, and indisputably pre-eminent in the characters of Hamlet, Iago, Falstaff, Shylock, Benedict, &c.

Macklin, whose personation of Shylock to its true reading had elicited the impromptu of Pope, "This is the Jew that Shakespeare drew," was my father's theatrical oracle. His portrait hung over the fireplace of our little dining-room, with the inscription, "Charles Macklin, aged 98." In some of his visits to Dublin he had instructed my father in the part of Egerton in his comedy of the Man of the World, and on the occasion of his last benefit there he sent for his pupil from Waterford (where my father was playing) to act Egerton.

It was said of him that at nineteen he could not read. It is, however, certain that he was servant, similar to what at Oxford is called a "scout," at Trinity College, Dublin. The custom was for these servants to wait in the courts of the college in attendance on the calls of the students. To every shout of "Boy!" the scout first in turn replied, "What number?" and on its announcement went up to the room denoted for his orders. After Macklin by his persevering industry had gained a name as author and actor, in one of his engagements at the Dublin Theatre some unruly young men caused a disturbance, when Macklin in very proper terms rebuked them for their indecent behaviour. The audience applauded, but one of the rioters, thinking to put him down by reference to his early low condition, with contemptuous bitterness shouted out "Boy!" Poor Macklin for a moment lost his presence of mind, but, recollecting himself, modestly stepped forward, and with manly complacency responded, "What number?" It is unnecessary to add that the plaudits of the house fully avenged him on the brutality of his insulters.

His manner was generally harsh, as indeed was his countenance. So much so, that on someone speaking to Quin of the "strong lines" of Macklin's face, he cut short his remarks with, "The lines of his face, sir? You mean the cordage." My father has described to me his mode of speaking to the players at rehearsal. There was good advice, though conveyed in his gruff voice and imperious tone. "Look at me, sir, look at me! Keep your eye fixed on me when I am speaking to you! Attention is always fixed; if you take your eye from me you rob the audience of my effects, and you rob me of their applause!"—a precept I never forgot, and to which I have been much indebted.

After he had left the stage, which the utter loss of memory compelled him to do, my father paid him a visit in London, and his account of it gave curious evidence of an inveterate prejudice surviving the decay of physical and intellectual power. The old man, with lack-lustre eye, was sitting in his arm-chair, unconscious of anyone being present, till Mrs. Macklin addressed him: "My dear, here is Mr. Macready come to see you." "Who?" said Macklin. "Mr. Macready, my dear." "Ha! who is he?" "Mr. Macready, you know, who went to Dublin to act for your benefit." "Ha! my benefit? What was it? What did he act?" "I acted Egerton, sir," said my father, "in your own play." "Ha! my play. What was it?" "The Man of the World, sir." "Ha, Man of the World. Devilish good title! Who wrote it?" "You did, sir." "Did I? Well, what was it about?" "Why, sir, there was a Scotchman ——" "Ah, d——n them!" My father finding it useless to prolong this last interview with his old preceptor, took his leave.

The weeks between Christmas and midsummer dragged their slow length along, and a miserable period it was. My poor father, in frequent apprehension of arrest, was from time to time obliged to absent himself, and to study modes of concealment whilst taking measures (at that time necessary, from the state of the law) to make himself a dealer in goods, in order to pass through the Court of Bankruptcy. By the kind aid of friends he was enabled eventually to accomplish this; in the meanwhile his release from the Manchester Theatre was obtained by the sacrifice of all the valuable property he had placed in it, and an additional £1,000 paid by his securities, my grandfather and uncle. Before the close of the theatre, Mr. John Fawcett, an excellent comic actor, a man very much respected, and an old friend of my father, came down to fulfil engagements with him at the Manchester and Newcastle Theatres. During his performances at Manchester he was our guest, and in discoursing on the subject of my adoption of the player's profession, he most kindly urged the advisability of my seeing the first actors of the day, of my learning to fence from the best masters, and very kindly gave me an invitation to spend some weeks at his house in London for this purpose. At the close of his Manchester engagement, I travelled with him to Newcastle-on-Tyne, where he acted during the race week, and where I was commissioned by my father to overlook the course of affairs during a short summer season; in fact, to be the deputed manager.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERDARE.—New Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Z. Andrews.—Mr. Chas. Macdona's company is here in The Gay Parisienne. Mr. Will Harmon is an exceedingly quaint Ebenezer Honeycombe; Mr. Chas. MacLagan as Major Fosdyke is decidedly good; Mr. Cyril Biddulph as Tom Everleigh is most successful; Miss Alice Nixon makes an excellent Julie, her singing and dancing being of a high standard; Mr. Herbert Walton as M. Pompier worked hard for the success of the piece; Miss Holford Beringer is a most efficient Mrs. Honeycombe; Miss Adeline Burgon is deserving of great praise as Nora; Miss Madge Soutter as Ruth creates much laughter; Mr. C. A. James as Amos Dingle and Mr. T. Brooklyn as Algernon P. Ducie are worthy of special mention. The vocal quartettes given by Messrs. Jones, Rose, Biddulph, and Fitzjames were greatly appreciated. The Major's daughters were well taken by the Misses G. Davies, E. McHardy, Loie James, and L. Sheldon.

ABERDEEN.—His Majesty's Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Adair Nelson.—Mr. Wilfred E. Payne plays Jack Frobisher in The Walls of Jericho with great freedom; Miss Dora Hole is an excellent Lady Alethea; Mr. Spencer Geach as Hankey Bannister, Mr. Kingsford Pearce as the Marquis of Steventon, Mr. Charles Fancourt as Harry Dallas were all good; and in Miss Elsie Ross Lady Derenham found a first-class exponent. All the ladies of the company were well placed, and served materially to make a fine all-round representation of this excellent play.

Palace Theatre. — Lessees, The United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—Roland succeeds in mystifying the audiences to an extraordinary degree. He is ably assisted by Miss Marjorie Russell. The next great turn is that of the Pasquali Brothers, who are extraordinarily agile acrobats; Natalie and Diana are remarkably good aerial artists; the Society Quartette are admirable singers and dancers; and Mr. Jimmy Shields is, as usual, loudly applauded. Among the other artists included in the company are the Cosman Couple, clever comedians; Mr. Geo. Acre, a promising comedian; Recco, who combines acrobaticism with amusing comedy; and the Three Sisters Glenn, vocalists and burlesque actresses.

ABERTILLERY.—Theatre Metropole.—Lessees Messrs. Carlton and Duckworth; Resident-Manager, Geo. W. Dentom.—That amusing musical comedy drama, A (K)night in Armour is being well presented here this week, much merriment being evoked by the numerous comic situations. Mr. Louis Nanton as Bill Newton is extremely funny; James Melbourne is admirably played by Mr. Harold B. Lewis; Mr. Fred J. Webb scores heavily as Frank Melbourne; Mr. Walter Kenyon takes the part of Dorminie Domino in a delightful manner; Lady Priscilla is well played by Miss Lallah Price; Miss M. Danvers-Smith is excellent as Olive Webb; Miss Emmiline Roselle is good as Florrie; the Misses Cleveland and Dorris are much appreciated in their dances; and Mr. George Paradise as Warder Keyes; and Mr. Tom Hanley as William Herlock do full justice to their respective parts.

Pavilion.—Lessees, Messrs. E. and H. Tilney; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. Pryce.—The Yiulians give a truly marvellous Risley acrobatic turn; Ryde and Beeman are very amusing and clever acrobats; the Paolas, in a refined act, give expositions of strength and muscle; Nellie Potter is highly successful with chorus songs; Harry Wright supplies topical songs, his impromtu verses producing much merriment; Peggy Fame, with songs and dancing, is good; Nellie Gannon is well received with descriptive songs; Nancy Renshaw contributes a song and bone solo; Geo. Penn, with fiddle, and Bioscope completes a most entertaining performance.

ACCRINGTON.—Prince's Theatre. — Proprietor, Mr. J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Barnes.—This week we have a return visit by Mr. Mark Blow's company in Cripple Creek. Mr. Stanley Bedwell, in the leading part of Joe Mayfield is capital; Mr. Eric Hudson gives a good performance as Martin Mason; Mr. R. Harley-West must be complimented for his impersonation of the faithful Indian; Mr. J. L. Leigh cleverly depicted Manuel Alvarez; Mr. Will Hook, a very smart comedian, played Reggie Harwood with success; Miss Nancy Roberts gives a very pleasing performance as Bell Gordon; Miss Daisy Carlton is an ideal Maggie Mason; Miss A. Verity is happily cast as Dynamite Ann.

Hippodrome. — Proprietors, Messrs. Willmot, Vandy, Potter, and Weisker; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Mould.—A very smart bill is provided this week, including Fred Moules and E. D. Nicholls' company in The Battle of Belles, which fairly brings down the house; the Falcons are very clever comedy acrobats; Will Johnson was very soon in favour with his songs and patter; Stelling and his very clever dog were loudly applauded; Ted Saunders is very good as mimic; the Ellimans must be complimented for their musical turn; Daisy Martell is chic and pleasing, and was duly appreciated.

ALDERSHOT.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Gladwin.—The Dairymaids is being played by Mr. Robert Macdonald's company. Joe Mivins, the ubiquitous, effervescent, always-on-the-spot Jack Tar, is provocative of most of the mirth, and in Mr. Dan Agar the A.B. had a most capable and energetic exponent, and with Miss Maud Lucy, as Eliza, he was the hero of quite a romantic little episode in the last scene; as Peggy, one of the precocious sisters of Lady Brudenell, Miss Empsie Bowman was chic and clever; and in conjunction with Mr. Richard Telford, as Sam Brudenell, she is responsible for several smart duets, the marionettes being very funny, while in her solos Miss Bowman was tuneful and appreciated, especially in "The little stranger"; Miss Annie Heenan, as the educated sister Helen, showed herself possessed of a voice of fine range and marvellous sweetness, and in "The little wild rose" she received a vociferous recall; Miss Mollie Tremaine was stately and dignified, while as Captain Loverton Mr. Victor Huntley sang a baritone song; Miss Dalla Gordon, as the head of Pyechave Academy, had the "tube stare" badly, but it was greatly appreciated; as the Irish Naval doctor Mr. A. Gordon Begg was clever, and as Lieut. Brudenell Mr. Robert Bottomley did splendidly; Miss Doris Dickens made an extremely sweet Winifred.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Revill.—Mr. Chas. Macdona's chief combination for the provincial performance of the lyrical comedy The White Chrysanthemum is here. Miss Lillian Hubbard gives a charming impersonation of Sybil Cunningham, and as actress and vocalist wins many plaudits; she is most ably supported by Mr. Victor Kahn, who makes an excellent Lieut. Reginald Armitage; another favourite is Mr. Erskine Lang, who sustains the part of Chippendale Belmont; Chippy is represented with that quiet, unobtrusive humour which finds immense favour; he scores with his song, "I wonder." Mr. Frank Weir as Sin Chon scores both in dance and song; no less funny is the Private Perks of Mr. Walter Westwood; Miss Blanche Astley is a sweetly pretty American girl as Cornelia; Miss Harriet Fawn is well placed as Betty Kenyon; Mr. William Hartigan capably sustains the character of the Admiral.

Empire Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech.—There is a splendid bill at the Hippodrome, and it is difficult to do justice to the many talented artists in the limited space. A capital and popular opening is made by Elzer (late Sergt.-Major, Army Gymnastic Staff) with Clarice, lady ju-jitsu expert. His many clever juggling and balancing feats are away from the beaten track; Fields and Lewis give a funny burlesque display; Charles Serra "on the Roman column" gives a graceful display of posing; the popular Harry Nelson reappears with his capital "dame" song; Angelo's portraits of present and past celebrities are exceedingly good; Mabel Holt, ballad vocalist, sings a tuneful song; Harry Wedon creates great fun with his burlesques of the coon artist; and the Wakeman Quartette (with a dancing parlourmaid) are a combination of great vocal ability and pleasing humour. The Melody-Makers, in The Burglar's Dream, present a most original and entertaining show; and the famous Cumberlands, four in number, who pay a return visit, commaud attention and applause as readily as ever.

ATTERCLIFFE.—Palace Theatre of Varieties. —Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Lacy Lyne; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Bert Lester.—An exceptionally strong and attractive bill is presented here this week, headed by the Soho Trio in a pleasing original drawing-room entertainment. Mr. Frank Purcell and his comedy company, including Miss Fanny Newnes, present a laughable sketch, entitled Husbands Three, which is received with hearty applause; Zanfretta and Napio, eccentric musicians, are well received on a return visit; Mr. Clayton's Attergraph pictures include "A Case of Arson"; the Melroses (lady and gentleman) furnish an acceptable item in an amusing scena, The New Page; fun and skill are pleasantly blended in an acrobatic act by the Smarte Brothers; Miss May de Rowse is a pleasing comedienne and dancer; and Mr. Tom Moore finds favour as a descriptive vocalist.

AYR.—New Gaiety Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry W. Day.—Following on Sunday and Miss Nita Faydon's fine interpretation, we have this week again a variety show, under the auspices of Mr. E. H. Bostock's Hippodrome company. Miss Delaine made a good impression with songs and dances; Williams and Warden got plenty of fun out of their act, entitled Dooley; Souplessi, both as a contortionist and gymnast, gave a clever performance; and the animated pictures were exceptionally interesting. The Rio Tintos, comedians and acrobats, made the audience roar with laughter; Johnny Danvers, an old pantomime favourite, sang three songs in his own quaint style; then followed the star of the evening—Miss Florrie Gallimore. This lady at once made herself a prime favourite. She has a fine presence, a powerful voice, and a charming manner. The Eight Lancashire Lads received much applause for their singing and dancing.

BACUP.—New Court Theatre. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Frank Denman-Wood.—Mr. Geoffrey Fulton's company is appearing here this week in A Girl Redeemed from Sin. Miss Helena Walbran is deserving of praise for her embodiment of Nancy Lee; the part of Will May is played in a highly acceptable manner by Mr. A. H. Barnes; Mr. Harry C. Momber gives a brisk impersonation of Jim Jakes, being ably assisted by Miss Ada Oxley as Peggy Gray. Mr. Gifforde Reynolds furnishes a good impersonation of Samuel Lee; Miss Nellie Waddington as Mrs. Lee is well placed; Mr. Walle Spinner as Robert Denham is responsible for a reliable performance; and Mr. Wm. Burgess as the villainous Ernest Sylveston plays with considerable ability. Mr. Wallace Cowan is exceedingly amusing as the Hon. Bertie Boyes; and Miss Gertie Pawle, as Nancy's landlady, acquits herself creditably.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS. — Royalty Theatre and Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone. —Mr. Reginald Dance's company in Raffles is here. He himself in the title-rôle is exceptionally diverting, and Mr. Edward Irwin gives a fine performance of Mr. Curtis Bedford. Miss Katie Yates is a charming Gwendoline; Miss May Brooke a capable Mrs. Vidal; Mr. Briscoe Owen a good Harry Manders; and Mr. Rivers Bertram as Crawshay, Mr. Oswald Griffiths as Lord Amersteth, and Mr. Stanley Lathbury as Lord Crowley all distinguish themselves. Miss Rita Ward as Marie is seen to advantage.

His Majesty's Theatre.—Lessees and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge.—The musical comedy, A Trip to the Highlands, is here this week. Mr. Wal Croft is a versatile and diverting Scottish comedian as the MacMutchkin, and Mr. Frank Barclay is very capable as the Hon. Fredk. Lackington. Miss Isa Bowman as the heroine, Miss Winnie, is artistic and smart; Miss Nellie Burdette is a winning Fannie; Miss Clara Moore a good Flora; and Mr. Willie Scott a capable valet. Misses Grace Desmond and Kate Robey and Messrs. Wellesley Smith, James Somerville, and Harry A. Gribben all do excellent work.

Tivoli Theatre of Varieties.—Lessee and Manager, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Edgar Laban.—The Klein Family of cyclists do some clever things; the Maples in their latest success, How to Treat a Burglar, are popular; Whisper, comedy juggler, is responsible for some good tricks; Rosie Colema i is a pleasing comedienne and dancer; De Voy and Cameron are refined comedy artists; Harry Conlin is an amusing comedian; and Miss Bloom a good singer and dancer.

BATH.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Egbert Lewis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lewis A. Long.—A revival of Our Flat forms the bill for the current week. Mr. Rollo Balmain and Miss Sara Mignon are starred in the leading characters of Nathaniel Glover and Bella, each giving highly amusing impersonations of their rôles. Amongst the rest of the company by far the best acting is that of Mr. Percy Watson as Reginald Sylvester, who rattles through the embarrassments of the part in the true spirit of farce, receiving hard-working support from Miss Athole Robertson as Margery. An engaging Lucy McCullum is found in Miss Miriam Holt; Miss Vera Fordyce is satisfactory as Madame Volante; Mr. Wilfred Compton undertakes the light-hearted Clarence Vane with success, Mr. McCullum being enacted by Mr. G. Randall. In the dramatic playlet One of the 93rd Mr. Rollo Balmain is seen to advantage as Sergeant Branscombe, being assisted by Miss Athole Robertson (Nelly) and Mr. Wilfred Compton (Harry).

Palace Theatre. — Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Schuberth.—The feats of marksmanship by the Three Dreadnoughts are creating no little stir amongst local rifle shots this week, their exhibition being received with much applause. The sweet vocalism of Flora Leonard in "Roses blooming" and a Scotch medley is charming; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Finden appear in one of their smart little farces with capital results; Maude Vera, comedienne and dancer, has a taking manner and appearance; Harry Morgan, coloured comedian and dancer, is a great favourite; as is Harry Simms, a light comedian of promise; the Bros. Ashley, with Mr. Frank Yapp in his old part of the Barber, are once again giving their well-known boxing sketch Next, Please; Raymond's Bio-Tableaux are always of the best.

Assembly Rooms.—On Wednesday and Thursday the Brothers Howard gave their mystifying entertainment of silent telepathy, which aroused considerable curiosity as to "how it's done." Mr. E. Leslie Conroy was the business-manager.

Roman Promenade.—To-day marks the opening of the season of the famous Pump Room Orchestra, again under the musical directorship of Mr. Max Heymann. The vocalist engaged for the occasion is Miss Edith Clegg, the well-known ballad singer and light opera artist.

BEDFORD.—Royal County Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham-Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter R. Wilson.—There was a very hurricane of hearty, sustained, and infectious laughter at the above this week, caused by the antics of The Dandy Doctor, a three-act musical "something to laugh at," by Mr. Edward Marris. And it was Mr. Marris's excellent company who so ably presented the piece. As Ivy Pondered, Miss Ethel Ward is as dainty and delightful an actress as can be imagined; Miss Florence Smithers, an old favourite here, is exceedingly clever as the "general"; and Miss Rosie Chandler introduced some clever dances. Mr. James Danvers is the soul of humour as the tinned-meat millionaire; Mr. Herbert Pearce as Col. Pendered left nothing to be desired, and his song, "Roses," was deservedly encored. Mr. Walter Nugent was screamingly funny as the well-groomed Bertie Bolingbroke; and Mr. Leslie Winter was a capital hero.

BELFAST.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. James M. McCann.—Mr. George Edwardes's company is here with the Chinese comic opera, See-See. The cast includes that delightful actress, Miss Denise Orme, who in her original part of See-See completely captivates all hearts. Mr. Leonard Mackay appears to much advantage as Yen, his fine baritone voice being heard with pleasure in several items; and who could desire a more droll impersonation of Hang Kee than that furnished by Mr. Frank Danby? Mr. W. H. Rawlins was also excruciatingly funny as Cheoo, and there was not a dull moment while he occupied the stage. Miss Maud Boyd was unfortunately unable through indisposition to appear on Monday, but her rôle of the fortune-teller, Mai Yai, was admirably sustained by Miss Lilian Hewitson. Mr. Ernest Freshwater was inimitable as Hang-Wang; and Miss Daisy, a pretty See, made quite a hit in the humorous scenes. Miss Dora Langham appeared as So-Hie, and her graceful dancing was much admired by all. Other rôles were cleverly sustained by Miss Octavia Barry, Miss Adeline Lester, and Messrs. E. Climpson, T. Birtley, &c. The excellent chorus and talented orchestra were under the able direction of Mr. Arthur Spittle.

Palace Theatre of Varieties.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; General-Manager, Mr. J. De Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris. —The chief attraction here is provided by the Colini Clarion Octette, who have made a great hit with their novelty, The Artists' Festival. Graham's Premier Juveniles are certainly a most excellent troupe of national singers and dancers; and Imro Fox, the original comic conjurer, contrives to keep the audience highly amused with his really entertaining act. The Osranis Troupe of Continental eccentrics create roars with their pantomimical absurdity, Yvette's Birthday; and Mr. Frank Harwood acquits himself with distinction in the scena, My Pipe. Also in the programme are the Fitzroys, society athletes; Miss Helen Martin, comedienne, and the Palace pictures.

Royal Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Will Sley; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs.—Miss May Moore Duprez tops the bill, and this fascinating comedienne—whose Dutch impersonations are such a treat—has been most successful. The Hadji Mahomed troupe execute some marvellous tumbling feats; and Klein and Clifton, the American comedy duo, appear to the utmost advantage in their novel speciality act. Mlle. Sylvia's vocal tableaux is one of the best items on this excellent programme; and Mr. Gus Harris, as a Hebrew delineator, would be difficult to surpass. Miss Nellie Lunelle is a bright and clever comedienne; and also here are Mr. Albert Letine, impersonator and speciality artist; Eugene, comedy musical act; and the Hipposcope pictures, which are always a great attraction.

Empire Theatre of Varieties, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. John A. Walker.—Mr. G. H. Elliott tops the bill, and his coon songs and dances have been accorded a good reception. Miss Harriett Vernon, the charming comedienne, delights all with her rendering of several songs; and Miss Ella Retford gains deserved encores for her clever treatment of catchy songs, while her dancing is certainly first-class. Fred Cullane and company produce with much effect their miniature musical comedy, Pipple from Poppleton; and Virto and Venitas's musical act is one of the best before the public. Rezene and Robins's gymnastic act is certainly par excellence; and also here are Howard and St. Clair in their sketch, and Mr. J. P. Ling, comedian and mimic.

New Alhambra Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Sinclair Neill.—The Alhambra Dramatic Company, under the personal direction of Mr. M. Montgomery, present here this week the ever-popular Irish drama, The Shaughraun. A feature of the piece is undoubtedly the droll impersonation of Con by Mr. Thomas H. Solly. A charming embodiment of Moya is submitted by Miss Nattie Crawford. The iniquities of Corry Kinchella are well portrayed by Mr. Wilford Cheetham, his acting throughout calling for high praise; and his coadjutor in crime, Danny Mann, was admirably represented by Mr. Cyril Grier. Mr. Fred Terriss plays the rôle of Captain Molyneux in manly style; and Miss Nina Blake-Adams delighted all with her charming impersonation of Claire Ffolliott. A word of praise is due to Mr. Ed. Smythe for his admirable impersonation of Robert Ffolliott; and Mr. Elmore Frith was Father Doolan to the life. Miss Kathleen Magee would be difficult to surpass as Arte O'Neale; and other rôles were sustained by Miss Alice Clarke (a capital Mrs. O'Kelly), Miss Louie Tetley, and Messrs. R. Gogan and J. E. Davies. The stage management was in the able hands of Mr. Tom H. Solly, and more than a passing word of praise is due to Mr. J. E. Davies for his admirable scenery, which certainly reflects much credit on him. The Alhambra Bioscope exhibits a fine picture this week, entitled Just in Time.

BILSTON.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Battersby.—Yet another partly Russian drama comes to this house under the title of The Woman from Scotland Yard. Mr. Alex. C. Grant is responsible for his part of Paul Obanoff as well as the management of the company, and it is almost needless to state that his exertion in the rôle is as effective as his superintendence of the entire cast. He obtains excellent aid from Mr. George Henry Clive as Harry Stanhope. Miss Evelyn Clyde makes herself very useful as Edith Mayne, the title-character. Mr. Frank Lester as Sergius Strogoff and Miss Dorothy Wilkinson as Mary White appear successfully; and so do Mr. John L. Schofield as Ivan and Mr. Louis Newman as Algernon Fitzmaurice.

BIRKENHEAD.—New Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Grant; Secretary, Miss Isabel Morris.—Mr. Joseph Betts' company, in The Prodigal Daughter, forms an attractive entertainment. Mr. Charles Herberte is prominent with a capital performance of Sir John Woodmere; Mr. G. Clifton Boyne exhibits a thorough grasp of the part of Maurice Deepwater; Captain Harry Vernon is cleverly sustained by Mr. Frederick Harker; Mr. Lionel Attvill is well suited as the Hon. Julian Belford; and Mr. Sydney Lynn is a good Lord Banbury. The important rôle of Rose Woodmere is admirably undertaken by Miss Millie Ford; Violet Woodmere is suitably enacted by Miss Marjorie Davenport; and remaining rôles are in efficient hands. The play is produced with due regard to scenic effects.

Argyle Theatre of Varieties.—Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke.—Mr. Fred Karno's company, including Mr. Fred Kitchen in The Bailiff, are in the second week of a highly successful engagement, the house being packed twice nightly. Mr. Dan Crowley, a comedian of resource, is received with acclamation; and Miss Marie Blythe, an accomplished comedienne, is a general favourite; Haig and Novel, acrobatic and variety artists, present a capital turn; and Mr. Charlie Williams, negro comedian, Miss May Marton, comedienne, Mr. Fred Keeton, comedian, and Brown's Royal Bioscope are also prominent.

Olympian Gardens, Rock Ferry.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton.—The pierrot season here continues to be a success. This week's company comprises Mr. Charley Harvey, the droll; Mr. J. W. Hughes, basso vocalist; Mr. Norman Osborne, ventriloquist; Miss Emilie Tait, soprano; Mr. Harry Herbert, comedian; and Mr. J. A. Tunbridge, pianist.

The Tower, New Brighton.—Manager, Mr. William Holland.—Mr. John Tiller's sketch The Alabama Coon and the divertissement Her Birthday are prominent attractions during this, the last, week of the present season.

BIRMINGHAM.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Tom B. Davis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Philip Rodway.—Tom Jones, Robert Courtneidge's brilliant success from the Apollo Theatre, is drawing the public here. Miss Ruth Vincent is with the company in her picturesque and inspiriting portrayal of Sophia; Mr. Dan Rolyat's peculiar form of humour as Partridge affords the utmost amusement; Miss Carrie Moore gives a charming performance as the maid, Honour; Mr. Harry Welchman acts the part and sings the songs allotted to the title-rôle with an air of distinction; Mr. Ambrose Manning's assumption of Squire Western is popular; Mr. J. L. Laurier is very successful with the rôle of Gregory; and Messrs. John Morley and Arthur Soames as Mr. Allworthy and Blifil respectively, act in strict accordance with the spirit of the play; Miss Dora Rignold shows dramatic ability as Lady Bellaston; and the general support is excellent, while the scenery and dresses evoke great praise.

Prince of Wales's Theatre, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. J. F. Graham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Johnston.—Liberty Hall on Monday once more showed that clever and esteemed comedian, Mr. Edward Terry, in his popular part of the quaint old bookseller, Todman. Mr. Terry was pathetic and humorous in turns, after his own inimitable, convincing style; Mr. Thos. Holding was a very manly and satisfactory hero as "Mr. Owen," otherwise Sir Hartley Chilworth; Mr. B. A. Pittar gave a good account of himself as Harringay; Mr. William Dexter played the difficult rôle of Brigginshaw in a very capable manner; Miss Marion Ripley marked the transition in character of Blanche Chilworth with rare charm; Miss Evelyn Ormonde was effective as Amy; Miss Eugenie Vernie gave a clever piece of low-comedy acting as Crafer; and the other parts were well done. Since Monday Mr. Terry has delighted his admirers with Sweet Lavender, The Magistrate, The Rocket, and Paul Pry.

Alexandra Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Lester Collingwood.—The Stepmother is winning fame here, with Mr. William Holles, Miss Nannie Goldman, and company. Mr. Holles as the captain, Bob Bristow, gives an impersonation which finds much favour with the audience; Miss Goldman as the son, Danny, has a keen grip of the part; Miss Winifred Symonds as the wife, Amy, displays a clever capacity for pathos; Miss Phyllis Manners as the stepmother, Anna Vickers, duly emphasises the malevolence of the character; Mr. Murray Yorke is well placed in the part of the detective, David Blake; Mr. Arthur Rodney exercises a commanding influence on the play as Abraham Wiggins; Mr. William Macready combines the rôle of stage manager with that of Luke Trixel, of which he makes a clever character study; Mr. Fred Dark brings humorous relief as Timothy Yapp; Miss Ida Taylor is successful as Clara; Miss Florence Harcourt is a lively Johanna Jones; and the remaining parts are also well played.

Metropole Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Andrew Melville; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hindle Taylor.—Home, Sweet Home is the theme here, played by Mr. Frank Lindo, Miss Marion Wakeford and company. Mr. Lindo gets rapt attention and much enthusiasm for his earnest acting as Stephen, the husband; Miss Wakeford is intense and emotional in a very clever way as Joan; Mr. D. Lawrence Doyle makes a successful appeal as the old fisherman, David Armitage; Capt. Gerald Gambier makes a dignified rôle of the Duke of Ancaster; Mr. F. Miles Hodgson is successful in a subtle way as the secretary, Lucas Lyle; Mr. Geo. Overs is forceful and sympathetic as Dick Redmayne; Mr. T. Armitage as the Hon. Percy as Miss Ray Rochefort as Sybil Fay lend acceptable humour to the scenes; and Mr. Ernest E. Owens, Miss Hetty Webster, and Miss Daisy Rochefort are well suited to their rôles.

Carlton Theatre, Saltley.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Alexander.—Dan, the Rake, is received here with tears, cheers, and laughter, for the excellent humour and pathos it contains. Mr. Martin Cross's company is responsible, and Mr. Cecil Morand in the title-rôle provides a perfect feast with his clever songs and diverting acting of the rôle; Miss Gertrude Walsey as his vis-à-vis, Madge, also sings and acts with great vivacity and talent; Mr. Stephen Crossley does excellently in the serious and heroic rôle of Lieut. Kavanagh; Mr. George H. Doyle has a steady grip of the audience as the villain, Captain Cooper; Mr. John S. Sheridan is quite perfect as Col. Flamer; and Messrs. Walter Clarke, Albert Verner, and George Nelson Wallace ably fill their positions; Miss Florence Halton as Helen wins much affection; Miss Rose Carew gives a clever sketch of Dan's Mother, Mrs. Donnelly; and the mounting is very good.

Theatre Royal, Aston.—Lessee, Mr. Charles Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. B. Hewitson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Whittles. — The Traitor is once more playing to excellent business here with Mr. E. Hill-Mitchelson's company. Mr. Stephen E. Scanlan enacts the title-rôle, the traitor Chief, with great skill; Mr. Graham Woods makes an interesting character of the Crown Prince, Rudolph; Mr. Wilton Reed is most reliant as General Hertz; Mr. Alf Richards is resourceful as Captain Ross; Mr. Edward Duff acts well as General Franz; Miss Marie Robson gives a strikingly dramatic impersonation of Zula; Miss Gwynne Warren enacts the Countess of Zicka in clever style; Miss Lilian Matthews contributes a good portrayal of Elsie Dupres; Miss Jessica Black renders valuable aid as "the little martyr"; and the humorous passages are played in a bright and entertaining manner by Mr. Val Gully as Jack Boult, and Miss Polly Denville as Cen-Cen; assisted by Mr. Henry Heller as the rival, Zoff.

Empire.—Resident-Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham. —The bill this week boasts of several star turns, of which top place must be given to Bert Gilbert, who gives an idea of a drunken kangaroo with great success; Alice Lloyd, the chic comedian, ranks next, with some very pretty songs, which are well rendered; the Casey Army also prove a big draw. A neat turn is given by J. A. Wilson as a recruiting sergeant, with a remarkably intelligent dog as a private; the Parisian mimic, O'Gust, proves very entertaining, as usual; and the McNaughtons are as drolly quarrelsome as ever; Orpheus shows himself to be a master of melody, as he is aptly described; and the evolutions of Grik Bros. are worthy of praise; Mr. Walter King, comedian, also does well.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thos. Barresford.—Music reigns supreme at this house, under the able direction of Master Max Darewski, the youngest composer, conductor, and pianist in the world; another musical turn is provided by Birmingham's old favourites, the Bensons, who are appearing in a scena, entitled The Page and the Maid; Jack Collinson's Troupe, in their screaming farce, The Topsy-turvy School, provide plenty of fun; and the Hartfords exhibit some very clever acrobatic feats, in which a bicycle takes part; Arthur Reece has a capital song, "Bohemia," of which he makes the most; and Arthur Albert is also high in favour. Agnes Asher is a very dainty singer; while Nash and Noel provide the fun; Ted Cowan and Bert Brantford, comedians, complete a capital programme.

Gaiety.—General-Manager, Mr. Albert Bushell.—One of the many good items on the bill here is a capital sketch, The Bank Clerks, which is produced by Charles Baldwin and a clever company of comedians; a welcome return visit is that of Harry Champion, who has several new songs; Swan and Vesta produce a pretty little sketch, In Nelson's Days; and the Howards appear in an original turn, entitled Military Mad. A musical scena by Bosanquet, and several other good turns complete the bill.

Bordesley Palace.—Acting-Manager, Mr. Edward Foster.—The Violas (the White Mahatmas) are mystifying Palace audiences with a performance similar to that of the Zancigs; T. E. Dunville, in his own inimitable style, provides unlimited mirth; Mysterious Mr. C. tells some funny stories, which are heartily appreciated; Max Gruber and Miss Adelaide present a clever animal combination; a sketch by Johnson and Bert, entitled A Queer Customer, and another by the Honyns, The Fancy Baker, are very well received; and Maude Courtenay, soubrette, sings very prettily.

Curzon Hall.—Animated pictures still continue to attract large audiences with up-to-date films, Chain-making at Cradley Heath being extremely interesting to Birmingham people. The musical part of the show is provided by Miss La Clair, illustrated songster, and Mr. William Kingsley with selections on a peal of silver bells.

King's Hall has been established permanently in the town by Messrs. Moore and Kennedy, with a good show of animated photography, and variety artists, and is successful in obtaining audiences at three performances daily.

BISHOP AUCKLAND. — Eden Theatre. — Lessees, Messrs. R. Addison, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. Huntley.—Mr. T. Arthur Jones' company is here this week, in When Other Lips. The part of Ted Daunton is creditably sustained by Mr. T. Arthur Jones; Mr. Edwin J. Collins as Basil Cunningham is satisfactory; Mr. Albert H. Clarke presents Robert Lingley capably; and Mr. W. S. Parkes does well as Phylocrates B. Jenkins; Messrs. David Hamilton, Hyland O'Shea, Robert A. Felton, and Miss Lucy Murray, in the respective parts of Duddle Topwash, Tommy Neccles, and Ginger and Kitty Topwash, cause great merriment.

BLACKBURN. — Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Yorke; Manager, Mr. Reginald C. Yorke.—Mr. Frederick Mouillot's company are proving a capital attraction, in The Blue Moon. The part of Childra Nil, Blue Moon, is prettily taken by Miss Kathleen Severn, whose singing and acting are both excellent; Mr. Charles T. Howard is good as Captain Jack Ormsby, and he also sings exceedingly well; Mr. Robert Brog gave a realistic representation of Prince Badahur Sanatsinghi. The chorus is strong, and the piece is excellently staged.

Prince's Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Page.—Miss Marie Dagmar and Mr. Fred Somerfield's company are appearing here in the drama, The Tyrant.

Palace Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Will Murray.—Among the artists here is Miss Dot Stephens, whose first appearance in the town it is since she recovered from her terrible accident. She is well received in her little sketch, What is Home? Another capital turn is that of Alice Raymond and her musicians, who appear in a picturesque musical scena, entitled A Night in Egypt; Will Van Allen, musical comedian, Lawson and Namon, speciality artists, Will Gardner, skate dancer, and W. B. Roby, comedian, contribute to a capital programme.

BLACKPOOL.—Her Majesty's Opera House.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—The Bondman, played by Mr. George D. Day's company, is drawing big houses here this week. The engagement is all the more attractive by reason of the fact that Mr. Frank Cooper appears in his original part of Jason, and fully maintains his high reputation. Greeba is capitally played by Miss Ida Phillips; Mr. Henry Doughty makes a good Michael Sunlocks; Father Ferrati is capably impersonated by Mr. Gilbert Yorke; Mr. Edward Gee plays with distinction the part of Dr. Boni; and Mr. Adam Alexander as Adam Fairbrother and Mrs. Edwin Palmer as Mrs. Fairbrother likewise merit approbation. The staging is a special feature.

Grand Theatre.—Owner and Manager, Mr. T. Sergenson.—Mr. George Dance's company is reaping a good harvest here this week with Miss Hook of Holland. In Mr. Leslie Holland the important part of Mr. Hook has a tip-top exponent; whilst the title-rôle is played by Miss Deborah Volar in a manner most bewitching. Miss Mabel Sealby does well as Mina; Miss Barbara Dunbar is exactly suited to the part of Gretchen; Messrs Frederick Hobbs, George Ide, and Arthur Harrold find congenial parts as officers of the Mounted Artillery; and credit is also due to Mr. Charles D. Cleveland, who plays Ludwig Schnapps, and to Mr. Fred Lyne for his Simon Slinks—a very clever character sketch. The quaint dances are warmly appreciated.

Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. G. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Waller.—The programme here this week is replete with turns of unusual excellence. Bransby Williams, who tops the bill, meets with an ovation nightly. Sid May, who occupies the second place, likewise comes in for a most cordial reception at every performance; Muir and Bartlett find favour with an amusing sketch; Prince Kuroki proves himself to be a clever conjurer; Shirley and Ransome present their very popular coster sketch; the Vernon Quartette fully merit the hearty plaudits bestowed on them for the tuneful and highly artistic manner in which they sing several well-known ballads; Carpo Bros. give a clever equilibristic exhibition; Sinclair and Parr are favourite comedians and vocalists; and Will Haines is an able character comedian.

Hippodrome.—Manager, Mr. T. P. Duignan.—Although this is the last week of the season, the bill contains some very good names. Lalie Brooke, in an original scena, entitled Girls, Past and Present; the Stanley Four, in a musical comedy, and the Three Phydoras, in an eccentric musical novelty act, are the chief stars. The other contributors are Ada Martine, comedienne; Charles Batchelor, vocalist; Maud and Sidney Wood, duettists and dancers; Robb Gilmore, comedian; Pearl Mystr, conjurer; Steeley and Dowton, comedians; and Marie Gibson, a sweet singer.

North Pier Pavilion.—Manager and Secretary, Mr. James Walker.—Mr. Harrison Hill gives his recital, Mirth and Music, here this week with great success.

BLYTH.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arthur C. Moody.—The Blind Foundling, on a return visit, has proved a strong attraction here, Mr. Harry Tilbury's excellent company being responsible for the production.

Gaiety.—Lessee and Manager, Mr George E. Good.—The Attillor Bros., in feats of strength, are the chief item. Marie Liston poses as the ideal principal boy, and has a good reception; Sinclair, in a juggling act, does well; the Sandows, in Olympian games, render a pleasing turn; the Clarkes are good fun-providers; Maudie Clifton, comedienne; J. F. Ellis, comedian; and the Bendons, in song-scena, also appear

BOLTON. — THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jos. B. Lloyd.—Peter's Mother was submitted for the first time to a Bolton audience on Monday last by Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company. Miss Violet Ley delights her audiences with her charming and dignified portrayal of Lady Mary Crewys; Mr. E. F. Meads was successful as the selfish and arrogant Peter, whose father, Sir Timothy Crewys, had an excellent representative in Mr. Ernest Rusten; Mr. Henry Renouf acts with great dramatic power as John Crewys, Q.C., and evoked enthusiastic applause in his stirring scene with Peter in Act III; Miss Hilda Sims made a bright and winsome Sarah Hewell; Mr. William Mallalieu's Canon Birch and Mr. Townsend Whitling's Dr. Blundell were good character studies; and Miss Eileen Barry was effective as Mrs. Hewell; while Miss Evelyn Shelley as Lady Belstone and Miss Mallalieu as Miss Georgina Crewys were delightfully entertaining. The comedy is preceded nightly by a one-act play, Chalk and Cheese.

GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kenyon.—The attractions here comprise a return visit by the Dandies, who appear in a musical mélange, entitled Song, Mirth, and Dance; Sylvia Martin, with her Arabian mare and dogs; George Young, blind musician and concertinist; Alice York, supported by Mr. Royston Keith, in a duologue, A Yacht for Sale; F. V. St. Clair, versatile and extempore comedian; Lady Julia, "the ape with a human brain"; Mark Merry, quaint comedian, in Mirthful Melancholy; the Narow Bros., comedy cyclists, and the Imperial Bioscope.

BOOTLE. — MUNCASTER THEATRE. — Proprietors, Messrs. Pennington; Director of Entertainments, Mr. Fred Willmott; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Young.—The Muncaster stock company are this week presenting Jane Shore to crowded houses. Mr. Stanley S. Gordon is a good John Milverton; and Mr. H. Arnold Allen is well placed as Lord Hastings. Mr. Alfred D. Adams is seen to advantage as Richard, Duke of Gloucester; Miss Nina Vaughton is a capable Jane Shore; and Miss Lilian Radbourne a good Queen Elizabeth. Miss Effie Macintosh scores in the part of Drusilla.

BOSCOMBE. — HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, Messrs. F. Mouillot and W. de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Ball.—The premier position on the bill here is occupied by the Achmed Ibrahim troupe of Bedouin Arabs, whose acrobatic feats command much applause. Howard and Collinson present a neat little comedy and dancing act, entitled The Porter and the Parcel; Henry A. Moore, actor-mimic, is exceptionally clever; Janet Hall, lady baritone, is gifted with a fine voice; Cole and Rags are a pair of eccentric jugglers; Frank Cass is a popular vocal comedian; the Brothers Hayes, Australian humorists, cause much laughter; and the Hippodrome pictures still prove an attraction.

BOURNEMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietors, Messrs. David Allen and Son; Sole Lessee, Mr. Mouillot.—Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company are paying a return visit with Peter's Mother, which is drawing large audiences. Miss Lilias Earle, in the name-part, is highly successful; Mr. Percy Hutchison as Peter repeats a clever sketch; Mr. Alfred Bucklaw is really excellent as John Crewys; while Mr. Charles Harley as Sir Timothy is very well cast. Miss Mary Griffiths as Lady Belstone, Miss Annie Stalman as Miss Crewys, and Mr. F. G. Thurstans as Canon Birch complete a strong company.

BRADFORD.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. John Hart; General Manager, Mr. T. F. Doyle; Acting-Manager Mr. J. Richardson.—On Monday night last Mr. Hart presented his magnificent revival of As You Like It to a very large and highly appreciative audience. Mr. Gerald Lawrence gave a finished and highly artistic performance of the part of Orlando, and the brilliant performance of Miss Fay Davis as Rosalind was marked by much grace and sweetness; Mr. William Farren, jun., earned well-merited applause for a well-studied performance of the character of the melancholy Jaques; Touchstone was quaintly and cleverly played by Mr. Harry Paulton; there was much charm in Miss Valerie Salberg's acting as Celia; Mr. John Nesbitt as the Duke, and Mr. Francis Chamier as Frederick, left nothing to be desired; Mr. Fred Percy effectively filled the part of Charles; Miss Violet Chamier made an acceptable Audrey; Adam was excellent in Mr. Orlando Bennett's hands; and the other parts were well filled. The forest scenery and sylvan surroundings are beautiful, and Mr. Edward German's incidental music is well rendered.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. Francis Laidler; Acting-Manager, Mr. N. Hepworth.—The Girl who took the Wrong Turning, another of Mr. Walter Melville's very striking dramas, is being played for the first time here this week, and its reception is very cordial. The company is a good one, and as Sophie, the country girl, whose doings suggest the title of the piece, Miss Rona Merrick acts sympathetically and with grace. She has good support. As her good sister Lucy Miss Hilda Baynton earns distinction; Miss Nannie Meade is fairly impressive as the mysterious Vesta le Clere; and very brightly Miss Marie Kildare fills the part of the good-hearted Poppy Fitzgerald; Mr. Roy Redgrave gives a good breezy performance of the tender-hearted tar Willie Mason; Mr. Kenneth Black is good as Richard Fenton; Mr. Walter Thornton is effective as the undiscovered criminal James Harcourt; Mr. Sidney Sarl fills the character-part of Bill Slater well; and as Johnny Walker Mr. W. Reid is in evidence.

THE EMPIRE.—Moss Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Percival Craig.—A very welcome return visit is being paid here this week by Happy Fanny Fields, who is as bright and merry as ever in her Dutch character sketches; De Gracia's wonderfully trained performing elephants go through an astonishing performance as cricketers and football players to great applause; Ben Albert's comedy and humour are very laughter-provoking and original; and there is much humour in Vanando's turn as a ventriloquial barber. Aunt Matilda is a very funny sketch, submitted by Frank Elliston and company; Rich and Rich submit a turn full of capital comedy; there are some clever dancing and singing by the agile Imperial Russian Troupe in national dress; Elsie Roby as a comedy pianiste "The Slavey" is good; in Fun at a Railway Station, Farley, Rennie, and Farley go through some clever acrobatic dancing; and Grace Merton, the street singer, earns plaudits for her well-rendered soprano songs.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harrison.—Shirley Liggins and company are here with the pleasing turn, with good part-singing, Farmyard Pastimes; Sadie Simpson, comedienne, and Tom Yorke, comedian, both provide excellent and acceptable turns; and there is much quaintness in the style of Coverdale, the comedian. In the speciality turn by Bert Coote's Yankee Doodle Girls there is plenty of dash and "go." A very notable contributor to the programme is Anthony, the conjurer, the "Swanky-Swankier," who is smart; Cullen and Carthy (with Little Cluley) are very amusing; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux show some good pictures.

BRIDLINGTON.—NEW SPA THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Manager, Mr. Henry Hague.—Mr. Hague has afforded the patrons of the new theatre a great treat by the engagement of Mr. Herbert Ralland's company in La Poupée, in which Mr. Fred Seymour gives a most finished rendering of Hilarius; Miss Alice Rocke plays the part of Alesia in just the right vein; Mr. Arthur Cozens is admirable as Lancelot; and Mr. Walter Balfour's fine baritone voice is heard to advantage in the part of Father Maxime.

ROYAL PRINCE'S PARADE.—Manager, Mr. Charles Palmer.—The Flockton-Foster Entertainers, who have been such a great success during the season, and Mr. Will H. Emerson, of the Loyal Dominion Animated Picture Company, who has given such delight to thousands of visitors, were accorded a complimentary benefit on Friday night (20th), when they were rewarded with a crowded house in the Grand Pavilion, and had the assistance of a host of talent, including Mr. Flockton-Foster's musical play, A Country Comedy; Mr. Charles Beanland and Mr. Bob White, in humorous items; Mr. Harry Thornton, baritone; that clever little artist, Miss Dolly Palmer, in a special song and dance; and Will Erardo, harpist. The Loyal Dominion Animated Pictures were a source of delight, and the Waterloo Pierrots played one of their laughable farces.

NEW SPA AND GARDENS. — General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. Harry Hague.—Mr. Andie Caine and his pierrots are giving some capital programmes here this week. Mr. Caine's songs and dances are cleverly rendered. Mr. Percy Loftus is amusing in his various items; Mr. Victor Denning renders nicely some capital baritone songs; Mr. Joseph Bell and Mr. Kenneth Scott are loudly applauded for their numbers; and Mr. Ernest Westley is an efficient pianist and accompanist. The sketches are well put on and capitally played.

SUMMER GARDENS.—Lessees, Messrs. Beanland, Bath, and Danton; Manager, Mr. Charles Beanland.—This is the last week of the popular Waterloo Pierrots, and they are still a big draw to this popular resort. The songs and concerted numbers are admirably given, and the Pierrots' sketches and burlesques are most amusing. Wednesday night was a specially attractive one, and the programme included a grand beauty show, for which valuable prizes were awarded to the prettiest ladies competing.

BRIGHTON. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Licensee and Manager, Mr. H. Cecil Beryl; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harcourt M. Beryl.—The Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company opened a week's engagement here on Monday. Tannhäuser was announced for the initial performance, but on the termination of the opening scene of the first act further representation of the opera was abandoned, Mr. Julius Walther, who was suffering from a sudden attack of hoarseness, being unable to continue his enactment of the title-rôle. The overture had been played superbly, and Miss Amy Rolda had sung admirably as Venus. Mr. Walter Van Norden, in a short speech, claimed the indulgence of the audience, and announced that the last four acts of Faust would be performed. Owing to the excellence of the local stage-management, only twenty minutes' delay occurred, and a fine rendering of the greater portion of Gounod's popular opera was given. Miss Grace Nicoll sang and acted with distinct success as Marguerite; Mr. Edward Davies acquitted himself admirably as Faust, and sang superbly; Mr. Arthur Winckworth fairly surpassed himself as Mephistopheles; and Mr. Dillon Shallard was highly effective as Valentine. Miss Edith Alvord as Siebel, Miss Douglas Wilson as Martha, and Mr. Alec Richard as Wagner gave excellent support. The choruses were well sung, the orchestra displayed sterling work, and the duties of conductor were ably carried out by Mr. Eugene Goossens. The programmes for the week included Carmen, Rigoletto, Il Trovatore, Don Giovanni, Lohengrin, and The Merry Wives of Windsor. The performances have attracted large audiences.

Evelyn makes a great hit as Gabriel Garth; Mr. Howell Travis gives a capital portrayal of Duncan Bly; as Jack Halyard Mr. Edwin Turner is happily suited; Mr. F. W. Graham causes amusement as Mike Copplestone; Mr. Claude Merton is capable in the two parts, George Bloggs and Job Merry; and Mr. Kenneth Black does well as Ned. Miss Kate Newton is excellent as Gertrude Garth; Miss Violet Hammersley is a charming Lilian Garth; as Mercy Merry Miss Winnie Donovan is good; and Miss Lizzie Jacobs is a lively Poppy.

PUBLIC HALL.—Messrs. Dobito and Buxton's animated pictures are attracting large audiences here.

DERBY.—GRAND THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Denley.—Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Benson opened here on Monday night with The Taming of the Shrew. It is late in the day to do other than remark of Mr. Benson's Petruchio and Mrs. Benson's Katherina that they remain the admirable stage portraits which playgoers have never wearied in admiring for so many years past. Miss Olive Noble was responsible for a charming presentment of Bianca; and a manly and commanding Lucentio was found in Mr. Geo. Buchanan; Mr. H. O. Nicholson and Mr. Stanley Hewlett were in every way well fitted as Gremio and Hortensio respectively; Mr. E. A. Warburton was a capable Baptista; and a capital depiction of Biondello was given by Mr. J. P. Wilson; Mr. G. R. Weir repeated his finished characterisation of Grumio; Mr. Murray Carrington was an acceptable Tranio; and Mr. R. McLeod played Vincentio very well; Mr. Hannam Clark was good as Pedant; and among minor parts that of Miss Cissie Saumarez should be mentioned, as also her tuneful rendering of "Should he Upbraid." Macbeth for Tuesday, The Merchant of Venice for Wednesday, Julius Cæsar for Thursday, and The Merry Wives of Windsor for Friday were underlined.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Herbert Taylor.—Madge Grey, baby mimic and comedienne, is allotted the chief place this week, and has a fund of good things with which to entertain a most appreciative audience. The sketch element is provided by C. Wordley Hulse and Dramatic company in The Fight in the Forge, which is capably portrayed and staged; Hill and Mac, comedians, have some smart patter; Percy Farramond, Singing Collier, is a vocalist of no mean order; Maude Beaumont, comedienne, introduces some tuneful numbers; Les Kauvers, acrobatic equilibrists, give a smart turn; Vincent, the high table expert, acts up to his designation; and the Bioscope terminates with two capital films.

DEVONPORT.—METROPOLE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. G. S. King.—The celebrated spectacular play, In the Shadow of the Night, by James Willard, is proving a big attraction at the Metropole, it being on of the best dramas staged at the Metropole for a considerable period. Mr. H. Dobell Lyle gives a highly accomplished rendering of the part of Gordon Allington; Mr. George Harvey is creditable as John Allington, Squire of Hazelmere; Mr. Charles Clifford is excellent as the villain Clifford Yorke; and Miss Nina Shaw contributes—as Mollie—no small share to the success of the production.

DEWSBURY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, The Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. H. Asquith.—Robin Hood is presented by Mr. Lewis Waller's company. Mr. Ethelbert Edwards easily idealises the valiant forest outlaw, Robin Hood; Mr. Edwards succeeds, moreover, in convincing with the excellent quality of his elocution; Lady Marion de Vaux (Miss Fyfe Alexander) is particularly bewitching, and a more picturesque and fascinating heroine one could not desire to meet; Mr. Leslie Rea is worthy of very warm praise for an essentially well-conceived version of John Little, the large outcrop of humour emanating from the character being due to the painstaking and thoughtful work of this more than intelligent actor; Mr. Bellender Clarke plays Prince John in an exceedingly creditable manner. The intriguing suitor, Hugo de Longespée, is in the excellent hands of Mr. Elliott Ball, who makes the character thoroughly virile; the rôle of Friar Tuck is filled by Mr. C. Brune Winston with peculiar gusto and marked judgment; Miss Madge Devereux impressed one as a stately and regal Eleanor of Acquitaire; Adela was portrayed by Miss Barbara Hanney, whose sauciness of manner and speech gave a piquancy highly palatable; Allan A'Dale, the minstrel, was characterised efficiently by Mr. Henry Kerr. The numerous pastoral songs are creditably rendered by the artists, and add much to the play's interest. Richard Cœur de Lion was well acted by Mr. Henry Lesmere.

DONCASTER. — NEW GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. W. Chapman.—The tout ensemble of the company appearing in the musical comedy, The Cingalee, is equal to anything previously witnessed here. The Hon. Harry Vereker is admirably presented by Mr. Wilfred Heath; and Mr. Tom Payne in the rôle of Chambhuddy Ram, a Baboo lawyer, has a perfect conception of its requirements; Miss Cora Mansell is responsible for Lady Patricia Vane, and, being a cultered vocalist, gives a number of acceptable and popular songs; Miss Margery Gray, in the title-rôle is exceptionally dainty; Bobby Warren, plantation overseer, has a clever exponent in Mr. W. J. Austin, who is vociferously received. The scenery is well adapted, the orchestration fine, the dresses handsome, and large houses are being nightly delighted.

DOUGLAS.—GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Hemming; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. R. Wood. — Good attendances have been the rule here this week, during which Mr. Frank Bertram's company has been appearing in The Breed of the Treshams. The romantic play has been received with applause, and it is enacted with enthusiasm. Miss Grace Harlington is dramatically effective as Batty. The Lady Margaret Hungerford of Miss Mildred Hodson is a talented impersonation; the performances of Miss Madge Cottier and Miss Mildred Hodson are quite good; Mr. Sydney Bland gives a fine rendering of Lieutenant Reresby, alias "the Rat"; the Viscount Dorrington of Mr. Alfred Holles is painstaking. The rôle of Colonel Sir Clement Hungerford is efficiently portrayed by Mr. Benson North; and Mr. George Trail and Mr. Robert do justice to the characters entrusted to them. The drama is well equipped in regard to scenery and effects.

THE PALACE, LTD.—Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Fox, jun.; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Gray.—This, the last week of the season at the Palace, has been well attended. Mr. Harry Wood's orchestra, dance competitions, and an excellent variety programme have proved attractive. Miss Ada Fawn, a clever serio-comic singer, has made a popular success. Other artists appearing are Mlle. Sylvester, the Three Seabornes, and Dexter; they have one and all secured public approval.

DOVER. — THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Chairman of Directors, Mr. B. Carter; Managing-Director, Mr. Fred C. Dew.—Messrs. Cowper-Smith and Douglas Payne's company opened here on Monday with the musical absurdity, Such a Nice Girl. The title-rôle is taken by Miss Rosa Bennett, an attractive vocalist and a graceful dancer. Some pleasing numbers are given by Miss Maude Percival, a pretty Cerise, who also dances exceedingly well. Much laughter is caused by the rendering of Martha Grumm by Miss Amy Fanchette; while Miss Kate Glover as Little Flossie impersonates a precocious child with success. Mr. C. Lionel Brockner is to be complimented on his humorous portrayal of Bertie Holbrook; Mr. Henry Ainsworth is a manly yet romantic Harry Harrow; a clever study of Brown, a butler, is contributed by Mr. Douglas Payne; and Mr. Mark Lester is a dashing exponent of Colonel Bullet, V.C. The Smart Set Girls, capitally played by Misses Ada Smart, Millie Hazelton, Linda Lange, and Ethel Adams, add brightness to the various scenes; and Miss Beatrice Sutherland gives a quaint performance as Jane. The White Chrysanthemum was billed for the latter part of the week.

THE PAVILION PROMENADE PIER.—The Zingari Ladies' Orchestra, under the able direction of Mme. Clara Muntz, is this week pleasing everyone by some tastefully rendered selections. The concert artists assisting included Miss Agnes Appleton, whose brilliant vocalism is warmly applauded; Mr. Henry Jordan, a melodious tenor; and Mr. Edgar Berte, the well-known and versatile humorist. A special Irish night was arranged for Wednesday, and a grand Scotch concert for to-night (Saturday), the last night of the season.

ON Wednesday a testimonial benefit was given to Miss Agnes Beckwith, when, in addition to the charming performances of Miss Beckwith, and the Misses Maud, Mabel, and Ethel; G. W. Houghton, the champion high diver, gave a sensational and scientific swimming exhibition, and also an effective dive in flames of fire from the pier head.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Sydney Mason and Theresa Moore's company have a fine dramatic sketch in The Parson of Daneville. Mr. Brooks is a particularly successful comedian; Metz and Metz are clever dancers, and Lizzie Daniels a prepossessing vocalist; Jessie Star's Scotch songs are applauded; and Leo, the ventriloquist, is wonderfully good. Louie Hurman scores in her "goey" songs.

DUBLIN.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fredk. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Parrington.—The Girl Behind the Counter is being played here this week by Mr. Mouillot's excellent company, and has been well received. Mr. Arthur Cartwright acted the rôle of Charles Chetwyn in capital style, and his vocalism was well appreciated. Miss Nora Brocklebank was a pleasing and effective Winnie Willoughby, her songs being excellently rendered; Mr. Ellis Holland gave a clever and humorous reading of General Sir Wilkie Willoughby, and was warmly applauded; Miss Winifred Knightly was excellent in her portraiture of Lady Willoughby; and Mr. Howard Cridland's conception of the Viscount Gushington was particularly good. In the part of the office-boy, Adolphus Dudds, Mr. Frederick Park caused no end of laughter, and his duets with Miss Irene Lavington, who makes a captivating Susie, were heartily encored. Monsieur Duval was successfully represented by Monsieur Jules Charmettes; Miss Florence Lee as Millie Mostyn and Miss Eileen Clanford as Ninette were praiseworthy. The chorus and orchestra were satisfactory under the conductorship of Mr. G. M. Saker.

GAIETY THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mrs. Michael Gunn; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Hyland.—Mr. Robert Courtneidge's company in The Dairymaids is paying a return visit here this week, and proving a big attraction. Miss Phyllis Dare, although suffering from a bad cold on Monday night, made a delightful Peggy, singing and dancing with much grace and charm. Mr. John Alexander keeps the fun at high pressure as Joe Mivens; and Miss Edith Blanche gives a capital study of the rôle of Lady Brudenell. Lieutenant Brudenell has an efficient representative in Mr. Frank Steward; and Miss Gay Gilvani is also very acceptable as Winifred; as Dr. O'Byrne, Mr. Percy Marshall acquits himself thoroughly well; and Miss Cissie Sephton is particularly good as Eliza. Sam Brudenell is capitally represented by Mr. E. Statham Staples; and Miss Beryl Vaudrey as Helene and Miss Hetty Chapman as Penelope Pychase are both creditable in their respective parts. The ladies who appear as the farm hands, dairymaids, and schoolgirls are also worthy of praise; and the chorus and orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Edwin Thornton, discharge their duties ably.

EMPIRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager and Secretary, Mr. George H. Marsh.—The star turn here this week is Carrie Laurie's kindergarten in The Model School, which meets with an enthusiastic reception. Queenie Leighton achieves a triumph in her captivating songs; and Tom Wootwell is a quaint comedian who causes much laughter by his humorous ditties. George C. Doughty and company are appearing in a comedy scena, entitled Captain Cupid, which is well received; and Will Cornish gives a much-appreciated musical turn. The Lashmars in their comedy act, Bits and Pieces, are highly diverting; and Bert Danson's funny songs and smart patter keep the house in good humour. The Calcotts, speciality artists, win assured success, and the ever-popular Empire pictures conclude a well-varied entertainment.

TIVOLI.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles M. Jones; Secretary, Mr. H. A. Murphy.—Wilson and Waring, in an amusing sketch, entitled A Bit of Nonsense, convulses the audience with laughter; Charles Fisher's Pocket Opera Company, in their speciality, The Music Master, are highly successful; P. A. Hope, baritone vocalist, is heard to advantage in several well-chosen songs; Ernest Montifore and company, in their sketch, The Little Colonel, are nightly recalled; Lily Eyton is a pleasing character vocalist; Lennard and Vereker, in illustrated songs, find much favour; Bennett and Martell are an amusing pair of comedians; the banjo selections contributed by the Clarkes are well appreciated, and H. Scott Leslie, character-actor, scores a distinct success. The Bioscope exhibits some good pictures.

ROTUNDA.—After a most successful season the Irish Animated Photo Company entered on their last week here on Monday, when large audiences were present both at the afternoon and evening performances. The new pictures exhibited were highly appreciated, and the vocal items contributed by Messrs. Patrick O'Shea, R. W. Goggens, and Miss May Durkin were loudly applauded.

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION, BALLSBRIDGE. — The Virginia Serenaders, instrumentalists, coon singers, and buck dancers, are attracting very good audiences here this week; and Mr. Arthur Helmore, reciter, also appears with success. The band of H.M. Grenadier Guards, under the conductorship of Mr. A. Williams, Mus.Doc., receive a hearty welcome; and Herr Mority Wurm and his Viennese Blue Orchestra are paying a return visit to the delight of everyone. Mr. Brendan J. Rogers' organ recitals are well patronised; Ludwig's concerts and the cinematograph by Films, Ltd., also come in for a good share of appreciation.

PAVILION, KINGSTOWN.—An attractive programme of vocal and instrumental music, interspersed with amusing sketches and some clever dancing is provided here this week by Randal's Middies and Maids company, consisting of Mr. Walter Forder, Miss Mabel Ashtown, Mr. Douglas Marrs, Mr. Arthur Mervin, Mr. William Bradley, Mr. Bert Williams, and Mr. Arthur Randal. The animated pictures are both interesting and entertaining.

WORLD'S FAIR AND MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. C. A. James.—A good variety bill here includes Albert Morrow, comic conjurer; Bert Dove, ventriloquist; James Murphy, comedian and dancer; Ivy Vine, ballad vocalist; the Two Cashlings, duettists and dancers; and the cinematograph.

DUDLEY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. Maurice Clement; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. Tilley.—Miss Ida Millais' company is here with No Man's Land. The piece is under the direction of Mr. Henry Herne, who in the principal rôle of Harry Oaklands acts in manly and spirited style, while Miss Millais as Mary Bathurst quickly wins the sympathy of her audiences, and brings down the house in the last scene where she takes a real "header" into the old weir. The villainy of the piece is well put in by Mr. Herbert Cecil as Silas Moore and Mr. Ernest Percy as Mat Marsden. The comedy element is well to the fore in Solomon Jacobs by Mr. Charles Daly and Thompson Poodle by Mr. Leonard Marshall. Another prettily-played part is Bessie Poodle by Miss Sybil Hammersley, and Miss Emma Stockley is an excellent designing widow as Mrs. Poodle.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred. H. Anderson; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. B. Peberdy.—Great amusement is being caused here this week by the Great Hughes, who in his sketch, Codology, exposes the many tricks of hypnotism. Hyde and Cody, the eccentrics, are exceptionally clever and amusing; Phil Rees, double-voiced vocalist, is a great favourite; and Alpho, novelty ventriloquist, also receives a good reception. Other good turns are given by Lewin and Binns, musical comedy duologue artists; Gladys Warren, in songs and dances; Jock McKay, Scottish comedian and piper; and the Empire Bioscope.

PUBLIC HALL.—Honorary Secretary, Mr. William Pearson.—The London Animated Pictures Co. is presenting a series of pictures that is interesting, pathetic, and amusing. There is a change of programme nightly, and at intervals during the show Mr. Walter Arnold, American song illustrator, entertains the audiences.

DUMFRIES.—THEATRE ROYAL. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Payne Sedden.—For the first three nights of this week we have Miss Lydia Donovan's Company in Her One Great Sin. Mr. John Cecil as Ruben Warhurst played his part in a most successful manner; Mr. Jack Armitage was well placed as Arnold Thornhill; Mr. Alfred G. Raymond as Jerry Jumble kept the house in merriment; Miss Nellie Lambert was very smart as Nancy; Miss Lydia Donovan as Grace Warhurst played her part with great power and pathos, the rest of the company lending good support.

DUNDEE. — HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE. — Proprietors, The Robert Arthur Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident Manager, Mr. Louis Karpe.—Mr. George Alexander's company is here with His House in Order; Mr. J. Edward Pearce repeats his highly successful delineation of Filmer Jesson; Mr. Stephen T. Ewart in the attractive character of Hilary Jesson submits an earnest and impassioned rendition of the part; Mr. George Fitzgerald is very successful as Sir Daniel Ridgeley; and Mr. E. R. Hollway does well as the priggish Pryce Ridgeley; Miss Grace Armytage Noble as the sorely-tried Nina gains the sympathy of the house, her acting being extremely fine; Miss Augusta Haviland is admirable as Lady Ridgeley; the Geraldine of Miss Blanka Stewart is a very capable piece of acting; Mlle. Lilli Kehr makes a clever and attractive French Governess; and Miss Victoria May Harris submits a good study as the child Perek; the other parts are in capable hands.

PALACE THEATRE. — Lessees, United County Theatres Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sam McIntosh.—The Honour of the Regiment, a stirring military sketch, occupies chief place here this week; the piece is elaborately mounted, and the acting is in capable hands; Ryan and Hall are an exceedingly smart pair of acrobats, and as comedians they excel; Geo. Bernard, descriptive vocalist, raises the enthusiasm of the house in his dramatic scena "The Charge of the Light Brigade"; James Toner, the Belfast Newsboy, in his impersonations of well-known artists, takes well; Little Vio-Lette as a male impersonator, is well received; Janet H. Reynolds has a sweet voice, and renders her songs in a pleasing manner; Dunningarto provides an excellent sleight of hand turn; the two Walonells in their acrobatic and gymnastic turn are very clever; Lola Dalby, comedienne and dancer, and Vernon's Imperial Bioscope complete the programme.

NEW GAIETY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. R. A. P. Williams.—The Tally Ho Trio, who top the bill here, are recalled again and again, their singing being delightful; Mlle. Eldee, in her refined and artistic poses is loudly applauded; Spencer and Marks in their original act "The Page's Holiday" are very entertaining; the Sisters Love are charming duettists and dancers; Lizzie Hands, vocalist and comedienne, sings some catchy songs; Mlle. Haydee, aided by brilliant electric effects, submits a very good marionette show; and a funny sketch entitled, "They Wanted to Act," causes roars of laughter; the electro-motoscope concludes a first-class programme.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Frank Percival.—An entertaining programme is being submitted here this week by Kennedy's Juvenile Highland Band, who create a good impression with their musical selections, while the songs and dances given by members of the band are greatly appreciated; Gaumond's chronophone is a great success, besides which many brilliant and interesting animated pictures are shown.

DUNFERMLINE.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. E. Potts.—Mr. Dickie Clare's company of comedians, in the musical farcical absurdity, Luck 'Liza, is here this week, and opened on Monday to a large house. Mr. Clare in the triple part of Silas Slim, the Judge, and the French Waiter is a host in himself. Mr. T. W. Benson as Peter Pettitoe proves himself an actor of no mean order; Mr. Martin Alwyne puts in some good work as Paul Pettitoe; Mr. H. A. Griffiths is a capable William Biffins; Mr. A. W. Thompson makes a capital Barnaby Blatherwick; and Mr. Bert Collins is highly amusing as Thomkins, the Court Usher. Miss Madge Brownie as Eliza Bird is a great success, Miss Vesta Brownie is a charming Virginia Blatherwick, Miss Helen Douglas is characteristic as Marie Pettitoe, and Miss Victoria Carman sings well as Sadie Potts. The clever dancing of La Belle Trio is much appreciated.

EASTBOURNE.—THE PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. George Hayes.—Mr. C. W. Somerset and his capital company are appearing here very successfully in The Sorrows of Satan. Mr. Somerset again enacts the part of Prince Lucio, and his experienced work is powerful and impressive; Mr. G. H. Lindon is a pleasing and polished Paul; Mr. W. A. Lister does happy and effective work as Adolphus; and Mr. Will Smith helps as Crafton Lyle. A special word of praise must be accorded to Miss Agnes Russel for her refined, expressive, and sympathetic work as Margaret Foster; Miss Helen Russel, too, plays the trying part of Lady Delila with real artistic ability; Miss Geraldine Somerset, bright and smart, is an admirable Ethel Vane; Miss Florence Nelson is a handsome Lady Dragnette; Miss Pollie Marshall a particularly good Mother Wurrell; and Miss Iris Forsyth a satisfactory Mary Foster. A Chinese Honeymoon is billed for the latter part of the week, and Miss Louie Freear will appear at a special matinée.

DEVONSHIRE PARK THEATRE. — Proprietors, the Devonshire Park and Baths Company; Managers, Messrs. Murray King and Clark.—Mr. Charles Macdona's principal company is appearing here during the week in The Duchess of Dantzic. Miss Anna Hickisch is quite a triumph as Sans Gêne, for her acting and singing are both deserving of very high praise; Miss Edith Martin is full of brightness and life, and is a pretty and happy Lisette; a delicate and charming Renée is found in Miss Daisy Kersey; Miss Alice Hamilton is a stately and dignified Josephine; and Miss Catherine Burke, with Miss Gertrude Hart, are admirable as the sisters of Napoleon. Mr. Frank Bradley plays with realism and distinction as Napoleon; Mr. Harold Batt is a graceful dancer and very good Papillion; Mr. Marshall Vincent sings very ably, and is a very fine Lefevre; Mr. C. B. Williams is finely effective as Phillip and Adhemar; and other parts in a long cast are capably filled. An excellent and tuneful chorus and orchestra are under the direction of Mr. J. Morton Hutcheson.

THE HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Day.—Mr. Joe Osgood as top of the bill gives exhibitions of wrestling; Billy, a splendidly-trained horse, is very popular; the Eva Lumley Trio play very cleverly in a taking sketch, All of a Twist; one of the prettiest and most graceful wire acts to be seen is given by Mlle. Yetta, and is highly appreciated; the Vaudeville Cadets give a varied and pleasing turn; Miss Ethel Dove is a pretty dancer and effective singer; Mr. J. Morris is a highly-amusing comedian; Miss Carrie Victoria is a successful comedienne; and new pictures are shown on the Bioscope.

EDINBURGH.—ROYAL LYCEUM THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs Howard and Wyndham, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Geo. T. Minshull.—Increased interest in Mr. Martin Harvey's ever-welcome appearances in Edinburgh has been aroused by the production of his new play, Great Possessions, which was seen here for the first time on Monday evening. Mr. Harvey's artistic impersonation of Nathaniel was marked by the care and finish characteristic of all his stage creations; and able support was prominently rendered by Mr. Charles Glenny in the strong part of Asarga, Mr. Charles J. Cameron as Joram, Mr. Albert E. Raynor as the Rabbi Jehuda, and Mr. Vincent Sternroyd, who made a vigorous Spintharos. Other parts notably well filled in an excellent all-round cast were the Malchiel of Mr. Philip Hewland, the old Beggar of Mr. Fred Wright, sen., and the Zaccheus of Mr George Cooke. The leading feminine rôle of Ruth was suitably acted by Miss Coleridge; Miss Maud Milton made the most of the comparatively minor part of Rachel; and another small part was played in spirited fashion by Miss Bessie Elder; while in Miss N. de Silva the possessed boy, Simon, found a sympathetic and earnest interpreter. The Breed of the Treshams was on the bills for Friday and Saturday.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Whitehead.—The Lady Slavey is one of the phenomenally successful musical comedy productions which comes round annually, and is always welcomed as an old friend. On the present visit, Mr. Keino Johnston is again in the genial rôle of Major O'Neill; Messrs. W. T. Thompson and Paul Presano still revel in the humours of the Sheriff's Officer and his Mate; and Mr. J. C. Piddock has the original part of the Tomato King. Needless to say, all these players are as effective as ever in developing the fun and interest of the piece, the attractions of which are further maintained by Miss Winnie Volt as Phyllis, Miss Rita Presano as Flo Honeydew, and Mr. Frank Henderson as Lord Lavender; with Misses Evie and Gladys Anderson as Maud and Beatrice, and Miss Ethel Ford and Miss Amy Hilton as the two French milliners.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Horace Cole.—The popular pantomime favourite, Mark Sheridan, has been the leading attraction this week, much to the delectation of his many Edinburgh admirers, who evidently do not tire of his quaint methods and lively style. Other vocal artists contributing commendable turns are Harry Anderson, Winnie Derson, and Ian Colquhoun, whose fine baritone voice is heard to great advantage in sundry ballads. The Clement Trio appear in a novel trapeze act, exhibiting some difficult feats very dexterously performed; Russell Wallet creates considerable amusement as a female impersonator; the Sleedes combine humour with mystery in their original illusions; Woodhouse and Lee put in some comedy patter and clever dancing; Tom Terriss's sketch company submit a farcical episode, entitled Peter's Finish; and the Bioscope shows a series of new films.

KING'S THEATRE. — Proprietors, The Edinburgh Construction Co., Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Amand Mascard.—Miss Annie Purcell charms the audience by her expressive rendering of several melodious songs. On Monday she was the recipient of a handsome bouquet, and had a vociferous recall after singing "In the valleys of Switzerland"; she responded with a piquant interpretation of "The Zuyder Zee." Miss Mabel Mavis's musical act is clever; and Farr and Farrland are not only excellent comedians, with fresh patter, but proficient players of the banjo. Miss Violette Gibson and her Four White Coons are expert dancers; and the McConnell Trio are highly successful as vocalists and actors in a laughable sketch. The Woodwards, in an exciting equilibristic performance display marvellous powers of balancing; while the comedy element is strongly supported by the entertaining sketches of Mr. George French and Mr. George Reeves. Mr. Pinero's comedietta, Hester's Mystery, is one of the most enjoyable items in the programme. An admirable piece of acting, full of strength and pathos, is given by Miss Pattie Groves as the Nance Butterworth of the play; Miss Maude Terry is a graceful Hester; and good work is done by Mr. Horace Pollock as Mr. Owen Silverdale; Mr. Arthur Edwards as John Royle; and Mr. H. Grey Dolley as Joel, the old farm servant.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Acting-Manager, Mr. Ventom Swift.—Nothing is lacking in diversity and interest in the bill at this house. Enthusiasm marks the feelings of the audience at the clever, pretty performance of little Dolly and Madge McAlla, two gifted children; Miss Sheila McNeil, Scottish comedienne, deserves the hearty applause she receives; and Grant and Allen evoke peals of laughter in the amusing sketch, Where's Snooker? Capital turns are also given by the Lorrisons, in a smart act; by Miss Rosie Morris, a graceful comedienne; and by Messrs. Harvey and Holt, comedy artists, and Mr. Nat Travers, an effective coster comedian. The Alhambrascope winds up a capital programme.

PORTOBELLO NEW TOWER PAVILION.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. H. Marvello.—Excellent business is being done at this house, the Indian summer of September having attracted crowds of visitors to popular Portobello. The esteem in which Mr. Marvello is held is shown by the strong bill for his benefit on Friday, at which many well-known artists are announced to appear.

EXETER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Chairman and Managing-Director, Mr. Edward J. Domville, J.P.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy M. Dunsford.—Mr. Frederick Mouillot's Daly's Theatre Repertoire company is here this week, and on Monday The Geisha was presented to a crowded and appreciative house. In the rôle of O Mimosa San Miss Joan Ritz was splendid, and her voice earned her several recalls; Miss Florrie Saunders was a vivacious Molly Seymour, while Miss Violet Kenyon was good as O Juliette Diamente. Miss Eva Howard as the Middy was all that could be desired, and Miss Aubrey Ashton did well as Lady Constance Wynn. As Wun Hi Mr. Edward Carlton well sustained the reputation he has gained as a clever comedian, while Mr. Lionel Braham, whose imposing form well suits him to the part, was very amusing as Marquis Imari. Mr. Cyril Dane was in excellent voice as Reginald Fairfax, and was encored for both his numbers. The augmented orchestra is under the able direction of Chevalier Le Grand. During the visit A Greek Slave and San Toy will be produced.

FALKIRK.—GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace W. Ebbutt.—One of Mr. E. H. Bostock's Hippodrome companies occupied the boards of this theatre on the three first nights of the week, and served up a first-class variety programme, varied by Bioscope views. Prominent in a good company were the Sisters Cecilia, lady instrumentalists, whose turn was highly pleasing. Yamamoti, the Japanese Blondin, Dunlop and Gold, comedians, the Sisters Lotus, juvenile duettists, Euston and Pancras, black and white comedians and dancers, Nan de Courcy, a clever lady juggler, Adams and Ward, eccentric comedy acrobats, and J. Gar Kiddie and company, in their laughter-provoking absurdity, The House of Tinn, made up the rest of a thoroughly entertaining programme. For the remaining nights of the week, the bill was filled by H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh's company in Lucky Durham.

FLEETWOOD.—QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. J. Snelson.—Miss Dora Dench's company in A Prince of Rogues occupies the boards this week. The company is a strong one, with Mr. Newton Buckland standing out as a dashing hero, Richard Harwood; as his wife, Winnie Harwood, Miss Dora Dench merits the applause which greet her efforts. The villain of the piece, Geoffrey Flint, is in the capable hands of Mr. Leonard Lawrence; while Mr. Bert Dench as Flint's servant, Josh Buggins, quickly puts the audience in good humour. On Wednesday and Thursday Conn, the Shaughraun, was played.

FOLKESTONE.—PLEASURE GARDENS THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland. — Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's principal company, in The Stronger Sex, opened here on Monday, to an appreciative audience. Mr. H. J. Carvill acted in the best possible manner as Warren Barrington; Miss Margaret Fareleigh took the difficult rôle of Mary with an ease and charm which won all hearts; Mr. George Rowlands was an excellent Oliver Thorpe; Miss Margaret Cavania acted brightly as Joan; Mr. Claude Agnew and Mr. George Child submitted amusing studies of Joseph Jameson and James Josephs; and Miss Emma Hutchison played the part of Mrs. Van Garkerken with complete success. During the latter part of the week The Walls of Jericho occupied the boards.

LEAS PAVILION.—Manager and Musical-Director, Mr. D'Arcy Clayton.—The Gipsies and their Jester are paying another return visit, and meet with every success. Mr. Will Gane, the Jester, keeps the house in roars. On Wednesday, the genial and hard-working manager, Mr. Clayton, took a well-deserved benefit, and was rewarded with an overflowing house, a novel programme being submitted.

"BLACK & WHITE"
THE WHISKY OF WORLD WIDE REPUTE

GAINSBOROUGH.—King's Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. H. Stear.—Mr. W. Penrhyn Foster's company appeared here this week in The Officers' Mess. Miss Nellie Sheffield gave a lively representation of Rose Smith; Miss Edith Harmer was a charming Sybil, and introduced some pleasing songs; Mr. Charles Danvers and Mr. Harry Liddle were amusing as Antonio Wilkins and Thos. Rugg respectively, and the rest of the cast was well filled by Mr. Jerrold Manville, Mr. Victor Tollemache, Miss Clara Nicholls, and Miss Millie Gordon. Miss Minnie Dorina and the Alston troupe contributed some clever dances.

GATESHEAD. — King's Theatre. — Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Resident-Manager and Licensee, Mr. Harold Arnold.—"Starring" here this week we have Ethel Whiteside and Picaninnies in some new songs and dances. They go well. Booker and Narbis are capital comedy duettists; Fred Land is the fortunate possessor of songs that are really funny, and the very music of which compels laughter; Kitty Clover and company present a clever little sketch, entitled Mr. There's Hair, which is duly recognised; Walter Wade tells some genuinely funny stories; and L. B. Athol (descriptive vocalist), Jock Walker (Scotch comedian), and the usual pictures are also on the bill.

Metropole Theatre.—Lessees, Messrs. Bolam and Bacon; General-Manager, Councillor Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Thomas France. — Mr. Harry Foxwell's company in An Abandoned Woman, appears at this house this week. Mr. Albert Sefton portrays Herbert Seaton with good effect; Mr. Frederick Hendry is excellent in the part of Marmaduke Seaton; Phillipe Malvoisin is well looked after by Mr. Hag-Gray; comedy is a dominant feature in the drama, and Mr. Jun. K. Woods makes the most of every opportunity to score with the lines of Paddy Boyle; a clever impersonation of Ninon is submitted by Miss Edith Blande; Miss Christine Middleton is sweet and womanly as Eleanor Dene, and a bundle of vivacity is found in the person of Miss Elsie Dene who plays Sally Sloper.

GLASGOW.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy Humphrys.—The amusing musical comedy Mr. Popple (of Ippleton) is paying a second visit to this city, the company being under the management of Mr. Charles Macdona. Mr. Edwin Brett and Miss Emmeline Orford appear with every success as Mr. Popple and his fair charmer, La Bolero. As Popple's smart brother, Norman, Mr. Louis du Cane bears himself well; the fine resonant voice of Mr. Francis Rayne (Kenyon) is heard in several pleasing numbers; as Platt Mr. Tom May is very good; amusing character-studies are seen in the Hennay of Mr. Sydney Courtenay and the Doring of Mr. Henry Chichester; Miss Kate Graham Beck gives considerable style to the rôle of Mrs. Doring; the part of Mrs. Hennay is handsomely represented by Miss Ella Daincourt; Miss Raynor Golden is charming and ingenuous as Violet Brinton; and as the maid, Louise, Miss Nora Morra is smart. The chorus and orchestra are under the able direction of Mr. W. T. J. Damant.

Royalty, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. M. Downie.—There were many indications on Monday that Mr. James Welch's company, in When Knights were Bold, are going to have a successful week here. Admirably acted throughout, the farce is bound to prove a popular draw for a long time to come. Mr. Nelson Key's Sir Guy de Vere has much to commend it; he displays an excellent grasp of the character, and handles it in an able manner. Miss Emilie Polini makes a fine Lady Rowena Egginton; Mr. Charles Ommanney brings the part of Sir Bryan Ballymote into due prominence; and the Isaac Isaacson of Mr. Augustin Symonds was a clever performance. Mr. William Lockhart is well cast as the Rev. Peter Pottleberry; Mr. Thomas Pauncefort sustains the rôle of Charles Widdicombe in fine style, his jester song and dance meeting with much favour. Miss Lena Flowerdew does good work as Hon. Mrs. Waldgrave, as also did Miss Marjorie Chard as Sarah Isaacson; Miss Nannie Hume gives a good impersonation of Alice Barker. The farce was preceded by a duologue by H. O. Hughes, The Miller, the characters in which were undertaken by Mr. Talbot Homewood and Miss Eva Leonard Boyne.

King's, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Business-Manager, Mr. H. Macfarlane. —Amasis is being presented by Mr. Louis Calvert's company. The chief performers may be specially noted in Mr. Rutland Barrington as Pharaoh, Mr. Roland Cunningham as the Prince, Miss Winifred O'Connor as the Princess, Miss Madge Vincent as Natis (her maid), Mr. Lauri de Frece as Sebak, and Mr. Arthur Watts as Ptolemy. All these artists delight and revel in their respective parts, and they make a combination, whether as actors, humorists, singers, or dancers, that would go to make any production a sure success. Where there is so much in the departments indicated that is in every way excellent we need not particularise, save to add that Mr. George Fox as the High Priest, Mr. Frank Perfitt as the Captain, and Mr. John Doran as the Scribe are each worthy of note for good work done.

Grand, Ltd.—Managing-Director Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Anthony. —This week the Grand presents to crowded houses Miss Annie Bell and company in The Idol of Paris. The drama is a new one, and depicts some of the many occurrences in modern aristocratic and Bohemian life in the French capital. Miss Bell, who portrays the principal part of Flare-Flare, is admirably suited to the part, and her clever acting is much appreciated; as Victor Cashelle Mr. Sidney Arnold is quite at home, and he, too, is the recipient of well-merited applause; the part of Phillipe D'Esterre, which is an onerous one, is ably carried through by Mr. Otto Minster; Mr. Arthur McCullock gives a capital rendering of his part as Prince Zoreski; Mr. Bert Ware is well suited as Gustave Langlois. To Miss Annie Megson and Mr. H. Vyvian Thomas is due a word of praise for their acting. As Ann and Tarave respectively this couple get through excellent work. Miss Esther Carthew makes an ideal Mme. Sancterre.

Metropole, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Gordon Jefferson.—Mr. James Hare's company is here this week with A Destroyer of Men, in which Mr. Hare acts with telling effect the part of the exiled Karl Mischla, and also assumes successfully various disguises. Olga Mischla, an adventuress, and the "destroyer" referred to in the title, is strongly depicted by Miss Irene Clifford; while the contrasting character of Vida Ravel is pleasingly rendered by Miss Emmie Barton. Miss Alice Buckland as Nina Pattakake contributes some lively comedy, ably assisted by Mr. Ross Warren as Coco Totchoski, both artists enlivening their parts with songs; Mr. C. P. Wentworth as Count Starevitch acts the villain successfully; while the hero, Michael Mischla, has a fine exponent in Mr. Charles Bickell. Military and police characters are ably undertaken by Mr. Charles Coventry as a Police Spy, Mr. Arthur Swain as Col. Linievitch, and Mr. Arthur Conroy as General Drakensburg.

Lyceum.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. H. Oakden.—That stirring play The Sign of the Cross is being given here this week by Mr. Wm. Greet's company, and the patronage accorded it proves that it has lost none of its attractiveness. Mr. Cyril Austin Lee makes a dignified and striking representative of Marcus Superbus; and as Mercia Miss Gladys Leslie is particularly well placed. Mr. C. Yorke as the hard-hearted Nero and Miss Mary Newcombe as Poppœa give able performances; Mr. Charles Aldred acts well as Tigellinus; the part of the boy Stephanus is played with much pathos by Miss Dulcie Greatwich.

Empire.—District-Manager, Mr. Sam Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Manners.—Those great favourites Bella and Bijou are again here in a capital burlesque sketch on a new woman subject, and it may safely be said they have not hitherto given a more enjoyable item. The Georgia Piccaninnies, in a realistic American series of negro songs and dances, depict the life admirably. Marguerite Broadfoote, a charming comedienne, Lowenwirth and Gold, Hebrew comedians, and Gwilym Naish, in chorus songs, have each a good reception; and other turns of varied excellence are ably given by the Four Jumels, musical artists; the Legay Quartette, Parisian singers and dancers; and May Mars, a popular artist in Glasgow, in a neat song-scena, each have a large share of pleasing recognition. Very amusing are Lowell and Lowell, whether as acrobats, jugglers, or dancers. The Bioscope is again notable for the interesting pictures shown nightly.

Zoo-Hippodrome. — Proprietors, Moss' Empires Ltd., and E. H. Bostock; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—The bill this week is headed by Bob Hutt and his company in a laughable sketch called Welcome Home, in which Mr. Hutt acts the part of a bridegroom who is welcomed home by his mother-in-law and a noble army of spring-cleaners whom he finds in possession. Hymack, the chameleon comedian, gives a novel turn, in which the colours of his clothing change as if by sleight of hand. Lola Patey is a talented burlesque actress and pleasing singer; Madge Esmond is very engaging in her impersonations of a schoolboy on holiday and an up-to-date young man; Whalley and West keep the fun going briskly with lively patter; Conn and Conrad blend lots of fun with their daring trapeze feats; Powell's marionettes, trained dogs, and chromatic fountain constitute a pleasing turn; Reg. Williams, with his powerful voice, gives vivid expression to his finely-illustrated songs; Barrett and Knowles are comedians of great versatility, whose fun never flags; the Bioscope concludes an excellent entertainment.

Pavilion, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd.—The Zampa overture is finely played, and opens an attractive programme, in which the conductor, Mr. Howard W. Galpin, is specially down for a violin solo; he shows technique and style of admirable quality, and his playing is very warmly applauded. Harry Tate and company provoke the usual merriment with their funny scena, entitled Fishing; and the smart show by the Three Sisters Silcott, in song and dance, wins them a loud recall. Tom E. Hughes is again a most popular comedian, and scores with his latest song, "Can London do without me?" Wyndham and Waters, comedy artists, are very amusing in a light musical sketch; the Okito Family, in a Chinese magical act, and Ethel Loftus all contribute with success; and much applause denotes the ability of Alma Obrey, a clever Australian burlesque artist. The genial Bob Baxter is also favourably received, and this popular house has always its big share of patronage at each performance.

Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; General-Manager, Mr. Harry McKelvie.—Rose Elliot, with her tuneful choruses and sensible songs, is always a great favourite here, and is repeating her former success. Morny Cash as a comedian takes a leading place, and he is heartily enjoyed; Lowenwirth and Cohan give an amusing Hebrew comedy sketch; Geoffreys and Benson cause much amusement with their lively sketch, Spoofed. Tatten Hall is another smart comedian included in this week's bill, as is also that amusing artist Harry Maxim. Gerhardi Mohr does some wonderful feats in jumping. The Wiltons are clever duettists; and the turn of the Mayfair Comedy Quartette made a decided hit.

Coliseum.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Burdette.—George Lashwood has been enthusiastically received here this week, and his "Oh, for a night in the west" and the new scena, in which he is assisted by the Eight Empire Girls, are two striking items. Oswald Williams is a conjurer of much ability, and his illusions are cleverly carried through; Esta Stella receives the welcome of an established favourite, and her songs go well; the Bros. Corcoran give a smart musical turn; Frances Letty scores a success in her latest songs and dances; the Eight Empire Girls give an enjoyable turn, and are equally successful singing or dancing. An attractive item on the programme is Hamish McCann's musical setting of The Wreck of the Hesperus; Charles Gardiner, a smart comedian, and the Bioscope complete a first-rate programme.

Gaiety.—Acting-Manager, Mr. Andrew Cowe.—A smart and clever cycling show by the Five Sisters Warwick receives a well-deserved recall; and another outstanding turn is that by May Lilian Levey, who is heard with much favour in some bright chorus songs. The Decars, in Off to the Races, give a burlesque sketch, introducing a donkey, and they create much merriment; Mary Gray gives a fine rendering of several Scotch songs, including "Caller Herrin'." Tom Kelso and company, in The Silly Servant; Wal Owen, "the comedy man"; and Zelda, an able performer on novel instruments, go to complete a first-rate programme, in which the Bioscope plays a good part. Good audiences are attracted nightly.

Britannia.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. A. E. Pickard.—The quality of the entertainment here is well maintained, amongst the artists being Bert Brecon, eccentric comedian; and Bristol and Hull, patterers and comedians, who are specially well received. Other commendable turns are given by May Garry, Irish vocalist; Dave Abbott, comedian and dancer; and Reiff Knott, who features naval songs. A well-selected series of films is shown on the Bioscope.

GLOSSOP.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Sydney Spenser.—Mrs. Ann Hughes' company, in The Young Lieutenant, is paying a welcome visit this week. Mr. Saxton Granville, in the title-rôle, gives a fine portrayal, and renders his songs with fine effect; Mr. Harry Walsh gives an amusing portrayal of the part of Dick Bouncer; Mr. Edwin Sykes as Admiral Sir Stoke Newington is well placed; and Mr. Llewellyn C. Hughes is exceedingly successful as Duke of Bowminster; Mr. Leslie Hawkins is effective as First Lieutenant Charles Greenlaws; Mr. Steane Louch as Bill Barnacle sings the bo's'un's song in a finished manner; Miss Maggie Robertson as Marjorie Mayfair possesses a rich musical voice, and is applauded for her artistic assumption of the character; Miss Katie Kyrle as Dowager Lady Harlington is very pleasing; and Miss Ethel Robertson as Lady Evelyn Archer is fascinating; Miss Marion Lewis creates humour as Mother Price; Miss Hettie Gale as Polly is full of vivacity, and scores with songs and dances; Miss Lily Armstrong (Kitty Green), and Miss Flo De Ferry (Nellie Brown) sustain their parts in a creditable manner. The chorus and orchestra are under the able conductorship of Mr. Alexander Humphreys.

Victoria Hall.—Proprietors, Corporation of Glossop.—The Aldwych Animated Picture Company, under the direction of Herr Pareezer, is at the above hall this week. In addition to the latest up-to-date films, a good variety entertainment is presented by Dick Bradley, tramp trick cyclist; Miss Sophia Pareezer, coon and serio vocalist; Mint and Mart, comedy sketch artists. Miss Mildred Needham is an able accompanist.

GLOUCESTER.—Palace.—Owners, Messrs. C. W. and J. R. Poole; Manager, Mr. R. T. Rea.—The bill is headed this week by Sahib Fasola, Eastern wonder worker, whose illusions are exceptionally clever. Barney, Burke, and Bray, in spectacular absurdity, London to Madrid, amuse; and the Emmell Comedy company, including Adele Levy, in My Statue of Grace, are entertaining. Harry Jennings, comedian and dancer; Miss Jennie Fergus, comedienne; Martinette and Wallace, comedy musical artists; Tom Laurel, comedian; Miss Alice Lovette, in unique statuary act; and Alec Kendal, comedian, are also billed. The Bioscope completes the programme.

GOOLE.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr. John E. Tomlinson.—Mr. Alfred B. Cross and company presented The Manxman here on Monday night, when a large audience received the play enthusiastically. Mr. Cross is to be complimented on his earnest and zealous acting as Pete; Mr. Sydney C. Kearns gives a powerful portrayal of Philip; Mr. E. W. Cudd is excellent as Cæsar Cregeen; and Mr. Howard Brenan is a capital Ross Christian. Miss Minnie Watersford submits an artistic and impressive portrayal of Kate Cregeen; Miss Kathleen Barrett ably presents Miss Christian; and Miss Dorothy Duncan is a charming Nancy. The minor parts are in capable hands. David Garrick and Divorced were also announced.

GRANTHAM. — Theatre Royal. — Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. A. Campbell; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. Marshall.—The attraction this week is Mr. Campbell's own company with The Sin of Childhood. Mrs. Campbell, who plays the title-rôle, is a talented actress. The part of the villainous Stephen Haysel is ably played by Mr. W. Summers; Mr. Guy Hastings does full justice to the part of Rev. Alan Grey; Mr. Frank Liston also gives a good interpretation of Captain John Thornton; Mr. H. Bradey as Barney O'Reilly and Miss Katie Lever as Eliza Muggins contribute the humorous element of the piece. Little Dorothy does her part as Eric Dugdale very well. Miss Nellie King acts with ability as Hannah Spry; and Maria Haysel is also cleverly enacted by Miss C. Santley.

GREAT YARMOUTH.—Royal Aquarium.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale.—Mr. Wentworth Croke's company is this week presenting The Prodigal Son. Mr. Hugh Montgomery gives a virile and forceful representation of Magnus Stephenson; Oscar is well played by Mr. Henry Watson; Miss Margaret Murch realistically portrays the temptress Helga; and Thora is sweetly represented by Miss Maude Stewart Drewry.

The Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert. —The Bob Hanlon troupe give an exceedingly clever acrobatic turn; Miss Chloe Convere introduces her cake-walk horse; Amurat contributes a musical turn; De Ora submits a daring aerial act; Arthur Kenny gives a sensational display of cycling; Silbon's circus wins high favour; and many other items in the programme gain plenty of applause. Baby and Beauty shows are billed for the last days of the week.

GREENOCK.—Alexandra Theatre.—Proprietors, The Greenock Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. R. E. Buchanan; Resident-Directors and Managers, Messrs. A. B. and J. J. Wright.—Mr. Robert Courtneidge's company in The Blue Moon is here. The title-rôle is capitally sustained by Miss Clarice Lockstone, whose acting and vocalisation are equally popular; Miss Laura Leycester makes a fascinating Lady Augusta; Miss Ida Stratham achieves distinction in the rôle of Evelyn Ormsby; and Miss Maude Aston vocalises sweetly and dances charmingly in the rôle of Millicent Leroy. Mr. Alfred Clark makes an excellent Major; Mr. J. Edward Fraser acts well and sings to perfection as Capt. Ormsby; Mr. Horace Mauger does well as Bobbie Scott; Mr. Alfred Beers amuses greatly as Moolraj; Mr. Reginald Switz scores as Private Charles Taylor, his dancing and singing being much applauded; and Mr. H. Asheton Tonge is seen to advantage as the Prince. The chorus is strong and tuneful, and the augmented orchestra is ably conducted by Mr. Carlton Mason.

Empire Theatre of Varieties.—Lessees, The Greenock Empire Syndicate; General-Manager, Mr. H. L. Skivington.—The New Macs top the bill here this week, their appearance being greeted with warm applause; the Two Eltons are good as horizontal-bar performers; the Marblesque Trio appear in a series of beautiful poses; Henri Bekker's skilful conjuring feats are seasoned with quaint humour; Cyrus Dare's interesting turn includes clever imitations of children; Ivey Aberdare, coon singer and sand dancer, Sisters Dorrell, duettists and dancers, and the Empire Pictures make up a good bill.

Pavilion, Ltd. — General-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chas. A. White.—Maidie Scott is the star attraction here this week, and had a splendid reception. The Musical Schaffers submit a pleasing instrumental speciality; the Bros. Obo amuse with eccentric comedy; Karr and Kooney, vocal comedians, are much appreciated; and Miss Olive Tree is a pleasing vocalist, while the Paviscope shows an amusing series of pictures.

GRIMSBY.—Prince of Wales' Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. H. Curry.—The actor-musician, Auguste van Biene, is again presenting The Broken Melody, Monday being the 4,770th performance. The centre of interest is, of course, Mr. van Biene himself, whose acting as Paul Borinski is an admirable realisation of the artistic temperament of a gifted musician. Miss Lena Burnleigh portrays the strongly emotional part of Mabel with complete success; the Duchesse of Verviers is most satisfactorily represented by Miss Constance Elgin; Mr. Henry Ludlow is a prominent figure as General Ivanoff; Mr. Brember Willis is good as the faithful Dickson, and Mr. G. H. Child is a capital exponent of the quaint character of Mortimer.

The Tivoli. — Managing-Director, Mr. J. H. Curry; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. North. — Scottish comedy, as depicted by Jack Whiteford is highly diverting, and his burlesque of a football spectator is especially funny; Miss Ray Wallace repeats her realistic impersonations of well-known artists; Texas Hattie gives a novel display on the tight rope; Les Elgonas contribute a smart gymnastic act; Maggie Bowman and Tom J. Morton appear in an amusing comedy speciality; the Claymores combine good dancing with club jugglery; the Tiger Lily is a coloured vocalist and acrobat with original business; Madoline Rees is a popular vocalist, and Sylvesta mystifies with his wonderful clock.

The Palace.—Proprietors, The Grimsby Palace Theatre and Buffet, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. G. Rhodes Parry.—A mystifying exhibition of illusions is given by Mlle. Von Etta, the feats being entirely new in character; Martin Conway is as popular as ever in his quaint songs and smart patter; Will English scores another success; the Herald Comedy Four combine harmony and humour; Aeriel and Astarte are skilful gymnasts; Maud Mortimer is an engaging vocalist; Morell and Mooir are versatile artists; Harry Morris presents comedy; and Russell Carr contributes a good ventriloquial turn.

GUERNSEY.—Theatre St. Julian.—Lessee, Mr Edward Marris.—On Monday Mr. Eugenie C. Stafford's company opened here with The Private Secretary. Mr. W. Hargreaves has a part in Mr. Cattermole in which he excels; Mr. David James enacts the Rev. Robert Spalding with a considerable spice of originality; Miss Dora Gray is not only charming as Edith, but her performance is thoroughly artistic throughout; a very effective and winsome Eva is Miss Elsie Davidson; Miss Cicily Wade carefully utilises her chances as Mrs. Stead, and Mrs. Alfred Davis is very acceptable as Miss Ashford. On Thursday Mr. Van Maclaren's Shakespearean Répertoire company came.

HALIFAX.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. William Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling.—The Lady Dandies is being played to capital houses by Mr. George Dance's company.

Grand Theatre, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. Sam Winks. —The proprietors here are continuously changing, and after a sequence of vaudeville programmes they are trying the experiment of drama twice nightly. This week Mr. Lingford Carson's company are putting on Heart of a Hero, The Shaughraun, The Octoroon, and Ticket-of-Leave Man, which have been well patronised.

Palace and Hippodrome, Ltd.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. R. H. Foster.—The popular lessee of this important house of amusement is to be congratulated for his enterprise in being gallant enough to bring the great Moody-Manners' company, in a répertoire of grand English opera, to a town of Halifax's dimensions. When they opened on Monday with Aïda, Verdi's masterpiece, the cheering was deafening and curtain calls most frequent. From a dramatic standpoint the production was brilliant in every way, while the magnificent singing of the principals and chorus alike, together with the delightful music extracted from an orchestra of forty-five skilled musicians, completed a performance previously foreign to us here. The Oriental rôle of Aïda was picturesquely embodied by Mme. de Vere Sapia, who looked the part of the Ethiopian slave to perfection, while her superb vocalisation enchanted all present. Nothing could be finer than Mr. Joseph O'Mara's characterisation of Radames, captain of the Egyptian Guards. Blessed with a magnificent, well-trained tenor voice, his lines were beautifully delivered. At times, however, he was badly interrupted, so persistent were the people in applauding him. As the High Priest Mr. Charles Manners sustained the character with dignity, and his rich, deep voice has lost none of its old-time effectiveness. To eulogise too highly Mr. Lewys James as Amonasro is an impossibility. Possessed of more than a little histrionic talent, it is delightful to hear his superb singing and to study his deportment. Mr. Chas. Magrath was excellent as the King of Egypt. The celebrated bass singer was in his very best mood, and sang brilliantly throughout the opera. Miss A. Brown, Miss Toni Seiter, and Mr. Charles Moppett were one and all admirable. The composer's work was beautifully rendered, especially the intricate music, orchestrated under the vigilant eye of Signor Romualdo Sapio.

HANLEY. — Royal, Ltd. — Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Douglas Elphinstone.—Mr. Arthur Hardy's company in Beauty and the Barge is again welcomed here. The cast has altered but little since its previous visit, and includes, as before, Mr. Blake Adams, whose impersonation of Captain James Barley is immensely amusing and interesting; as Lieut. Seton Boyne Mr. Aubrey Mallalieu is distinctly successful; Mr. Walter Pemberton is capital as the fiery Major Smedley; Mr. Atheling Farrar acts with ease as Herbert Manners, his impersonation being both natural and effective; Mr. Charles White is seen in the character part of John Dobbs, and his portrayal is excellent; Mr. Horace Kennedy does well as Augustus; Mr. Ewart Drake gives a smart representation of George Porter; Mr. Fred Knight is seen to advantage as Tom Codd; Miss Dido Drake contributes a charming performance as Ethel Smedley, this young lady portraying the part most cleverly; Miss Mona Robin makes an impressive Mrs. Smedley; and the Lucy Dallas of Miss Mary Pemberton is a performance of all-round excellence; Miss Kate Osborne is all that can be desired as Mrs. Baldwin; and Mrs. J. W. Braithwaite's Mrs. Porter is most amusing. The mounting is excellent, the last scene being a real masterpiece.

Grand.—Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. James Wynes.—A bill of all-round excellence is drawing packed houses here this week. Harry Lauder holds the premier position, and scores a gigantic success; Tom and Marie Motramo return in their exceedingly funny musical sketch; the Daunton-Shaw company of cyclists provide a truly clever and daring act; Dan Conroy tells stories capitally, and sings a good song; J. H. McCann is a clever dancer on roller skates; the Lukushima Troupe of Japanese acrobats are highly appreciated; Howe and Ardie, comedy acrobats, are well received; Beattie and Blanche are capital dancers; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux shows some admirable pictures.

HARROGATE.—Grand Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. F. Smith.—This week the attraction here is Mr. George Edwardes's company in the new Chinese opera, See-See. As See-See Miss Dorothy Chard sang very well; Mr. Colin Coop made an amusing Cheoo, and Mr. Edmund Sherras looked and sang well as Yen. Mr. Bertie Wright as Nang-Kee was a host in himself, and both sang and danced well. Miss Lena Maitland's Mai-Yai was one of the features of the show, and Miss Lilian Pollard appeared with great success as So-Hie; Miss Kate Chard was well placed as Poo-See, and made the most of her scene with Cheoo. The play was beautifully mounted and dressed, and Mr. Leonard Leslie conducted.

The Kursaal.—Manager and Musical-Director, Mr. Julian Clifford; Assistant-Manager and Secretary, Mr. R. Eldrid.—On Monday afternoon and night Miss Madge Lessing and Mr. Nelson Jackson were the attractions. On Tuesday Miss Agnes Coates, soprano, and Mr. Curtis Leo, conjuror and magician, were in the bill for all the week. For the last three nights Mr. Wilfred Virgo, tenor, is the vocalist. On Thursday Miss Bessie Stibbs was announced as solo pianist.

HARTLEPOOL.—Empress.—Proprietors, Messrs. Councillor Everton and J. W. Cragg; Manager, Mr. Harry Burns; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Charlie Ferrier.—The principal item in the bill for this week is Frank E. Burdette's company in a military sketch, Mutiny. Nebu Singh has a capital exponent in Mr. Gerald Spencer; Mr. Walter Steele does justice to the rôle of Lieut. Manley; Ghuznah is played with excellent effect by Miss Agnes Kingston; Mr. Michel Madden is droll as Terry O'Brien; and Miss Marion Mayne does well as Kitty. The Waldrons are irresistibly funny in their absurdity, The Silly Burglar; sand-dancing is well demonstrated by Pete and Juno; Joe Humphreys is as breezy as ever; the Sisters Brenton are smart dancers; and Sira, a one-legged hand-balancer, Charles Rowson, comedian, and the pictures complete the bill.

HASTINGS.—Gaiety Theatre.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles E. Scutt.—A return visit was paid here on Monday by Messrs. Silvanus Dauncey and M. V. Leveaux's company in The Walls of Jericho, the fine drama proving of thorough interest to the large house assembled. Jack Frobisher was admirably presented by Mr. H. Lawrence Leyton; Mr. Russell Barry played effectively as Hankey Bannister, and also stage-managed; and the Marquis of Steventon had a good exponent in Mr. Ben Lewin. Miss Edith Cuthbert did excellently well as Lady Alethea Frobisher; Miss Nona Wynne ably played Lady Lucy Derenham; Miss Millie L. Emden was commendable as the Duchess; as also was Miss Pauline Strauss as Miss Mornington. Effective impersonations were also submitted by Mr. Ed. Coutts, Mr. Eustace Burnaby, Mr. Geo. Percy, Mr. Douglas E. Hayward, and Mr. H. Browning. For Thursday and the remainder of the week The Stronger Sex, by Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company, was announced.

Hippodrome Theatre of Varieties.—General-Manager, Mr. H. Vivian Fisher; Acting-Manager, Walter Norman.—A varied and interesting programme is opened by the Sisters Bronson, duettists and dancers; Hal Chapter is very original in his songs and patter; Saxo is very expert on a variety of instruments; the special films on the Bioscope are exceedingly amusing, particularly The Fatal Sneeze; Elsie Earle gives a sweet rendering of her song scena, "Holly and Mistletoe"; Barney Stuart gives a capital portrait of a miser in his song scena of that name, a character that is admirably drawn; a clever and successful turn is introduced by Lieut. Albini, who changes the position of two young ladies, locked and corded in a box, an illusion watched with keen interest; Geo. Adams possesses a fine baritone voice; the songs and business of Rell and Butt are most amusing, their droll sayings and manner are much appreciated.

Pier Pavilion. — Pier Master, Mr. R. Turner; Entertainment Manager, Mr. J. D. Hunter.—A variety entertainment is holding the boards here this week. Kahn and Kahn are specially attractive as expert drawing-room illusionists; Miss Constance Milestone sings some pleasing songs; the interesting films shown by Payne's Biophotoscope contributes a good turn to the bill; Mr. Charles Coborn, a superior comic vocalist, is accorded a hearty reception; Walter George's Smart Set entertainers introduce some very tuneful and pretty singing, and when associated submit delightful renderings of trios and quartettes, which are thoroughly appreciated.

Beach Concert Pavilion.—Manager, Mr. George Blackmore.—This is the last week of Mr. Wallis Arthur's season, and his excellent company of vocalists and comedians has met with the success it deserved from the large audiences attracted both here and at the daily al fresco entertainments in the Park and St. Leonard's Gardens.

St. Leonards Pavilion Theatre.—Pier-Master and Entertainment-Manager, Mr. Elvey Thomas.—Little Lord Fauntleroy is being performed here this week. Miss Minnie Omar is singularly natural in the part of Cedric Errol, evincing decided aptitude for comedy; Miss Rosemary Rees in the character of Mrs. Errol is exceptionally gentle, sympathetic, and womanly; Miss Madge Lacey acts admirably as Minna; Mr. Arthur Goodsall gives an intelligent representation of Mr. Hobbs, the storekeeper; the Earl of Dorincourt, by Mr. Charles Carey, is a performance sound, conscientious, and entirely satisfactory; Mr. Chas. Swinburne is very good as Mr. Higgins.

HEREFORD.—Garrick Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. P. Barnsley.—Messrs. Quartermayne and Raynor's company are presenting A Bunch of Violets. Mr. Frederick Annerley as Sir Philip Marchant gives a fine reading; so dexterously does he handle the part that there is not the slightest suspicion of over acting, yet all his scenes are powerfully rendered. Miss Katherine Harrington undertakes the part of Lady Marchant in a charming manner, playing upon the feelings of the audience most effectively and holding its sympathies throughout. Miss Enid Ross as Mrs. Murgatroyd has a character in which she excels. Mr. Leonard Cheetham is satisfactory as Harker. The small parts are without exception admirably handled, and the piece is creditably put on.

HORWICH.—Princes Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. A. P. Patterson; Manager, Mr. Alec Harcourt.—Mr. Stanley Carlton's company in A Secret Wedding had a very hearty reception on Monday. Mr. Carlton's Herbert Harrington is a very fine performance; Mr. Herbert-Evelyn plays the villain, Edgar Hartington, with power; Mr. Kellen Taylor's Ben Drummond, the old butler, is good; Mr. Fred Conway as P.-C. Foot is a fine specimen of the Force; Mr. Edgar Morgan as Billy Barton is responsible for plenty of comedy, being very ably assisted by Miss Nellie Freeland in the part of Polly; Miss Maude Steeple plays Jack, a waif, in good style; Miss Florrie Vennimore as Elise Marchand is satisfactory; Grace Edmondson is ably played by Miss Rubie Maude; and Miss Ethel Lawson appears as the Avenging Angel.

HOYLAND.—Metropole.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Geo. S. King; Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. R. Baker.—Miss Hettie Jeffries and company are presenting A Nobleman of Nature. A manly Prince Ivan is found in Mr. W. H. Wilson, and Mr. Whitmore Ledger is an excellent Paul Berndoff. Mr. David Urquhart as Philip Hampton and Mr. Richard Harris as Michael give an excellent reading of their respective characters. The comedy element is introduced by Mr. Dan Mining as Bill Drinkwater, ably assisted by Miss Dot Russell as Polly Bouncer. Miss Alvina Mining gives an excellent interpretation of the twin sisters, Edith and Katusha, and as Vera Miss Hettie Jeffries is very winsome and pathetic.

HULL.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. Morton; Resident-Director, Mr. W. F. Morton.—For the first time, Mrs. Pat Campbell appears in Hull with her own company, having, however, been previously seen on the occasion of the visit of Mme. Bernhardt, when the former essayed to play in French. The opening item this week being Mrs. Tanqueray, it is obvious that in a rôle which made this artist famous there is nothing new to add. Excellent aid was given by Miss P. Campbell, who in her impersonation of Stella gives evidence of great promise. That sterling actor, Julian Royce, was a delightful Cayley; whilst Mr. Chas. Garry played Aubrey with merit. Suderman's Magda and Hedda Gabler (Ibsen) are also in the bill.

Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; Local Manager, Mr. Wynn Miller.—English opera at its best can be well applied to the Turner Opera Company, who gave an admirable interpretation of the old favourites. Mr. Turner, whom one remembers pleasantly for his work in this city as a member of the old Carl Rosa company, in addition to management, undertakes several of the heaviest rôles with wonderful effect, his voice being still flexible and pure. In the title-rôle of Maritana, with which the company opened, Miss Christine Gomez sang her numbers with much feeling. Admirable was Miss Jessie Dennis as Lazarello. The music of the King of Spain was well rendered by Mr. Tom Griffiths; Mr. Turner was a fine Don Cæsar; and the Don José of Mr. Ridding was commendable. The chorus is effective and the orchestra well balanced. During the week The Bohemian Girl and The Lily of Killarney have been in the bill.

Alexandra Theatre.—Mortons, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. Morton.—For Her Sake is here this week, presented by Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company. The company is a strong one, and includes Miss Mabel Manners, a favourite here, to whom is entrusted the rôle of Olga; Mr. Wellesley Drage, a fine Prince Vladimir; and Miss G. Nellerville, an American heiress. The comic relief gives full scope to Mr. Sydney Benson and Miss Maimie Rendal.

Hippodrome.—Lessee, Mr. Alfred Graham; Manager, Mr. Tom Lunn.—Appearing here are Jack Lorimer, Dorothy L. Clark, Stella Stahl, Charles Ulrick, Jonty Hayton, Tyrol Bros., Bob Morgan, and the Meymotts.

The Empire.—General-Manager, Mr. Harry Slingsby.—A very good programme is provided by the Four Watsons, the Days, Edie Anderson, Bert and Dora, Mozetto, Evie Hamilton, and Harry Rayley.

The Circus.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Emerson. —Dyson's Choir are proving most popular here.

HYDE.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Fred Granville; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. R. Feather.—The Coal King pays a return visit here this week, and Messrs. G. M. Polini and L. Maitland's company present the play in an able manner. Mr. Sydney Leyton as Tom Roberts makes a manly hero, whilst the villainies of Mr. W. P. Mansfield as Walter Hartford earn due recognition from the Unsolicited Testimonial. — Criterion Theatre, Piccadilly, W., Sept. 23rd, 1907. Dear Mr. Harris,—I am glad to be able to state that Miss Mary Moore and Sir Charles Wyndham are very satisfied with the manner in which you have cleaned the tableaux curtains and all the draperies at the New Theatre; they look as good as new.—Yours very gallery. Mr. Ernest Rivars makes a stately Sir Reginald Hartford, J.P., and as Dick Shirley Mr. Frank Dalton is excellent. The humour is in the hands of Mr. Alfred Terris as Jim Williams, and he receives capital support from Armaminta Green played by Miss Winifred Love. Miss Dorothy Clifton makes a charming Grace Shirley, and a clever character sketch is given by Miss Sinna St. Clair as Mad Ann. The scenery and effects are special features of the production.

ILKESTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. L. F. A. Rogers.—Two Little Vagabonds is proving an attraction here. Dick is charmingly portrayed by Miss Marjorie Murray; Miss Josie Belham plays with pathos as Wally; George Thornton is well handled by Mr. Wilson Coleman; Miss Violet Ellicott's clever impersonation of Marion Thornton is much applauded; Barbara Scarth is capably presented by Miss Mabel Ormonde; and Miss Lenna Vernon is well suited as Sister Randall. Mr. Douglas Cecil gives a good reading of Capt. Darville; Mr. John F. Traynor fills the rôle of Bill Muggins capitally, and Miss Marie Pritchard as Biddy Muggins is grimly humorous.

IPSWICH.—LYCEUM THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Leonard Grey.—On Monday Mr. Junius Booth and company opened with Monte Cristo. Mr. Booth deserves high praise for his interpretation of the chief part of Edmond Dantes; Danglars was well sustained by Mr. A. Bowerman; Mr. C. W. Crowe as Fernand and Walter Huson as the King's Attorney were most satisfactory; and Miss B. Doyle as Mercedes showed ability.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor Mr. E. H. Bostock; Manager, Mr. Stead.—The programme this week is a strong one. Miss Minnie Hunt and Mr. Rhys Thomas appeared in an amusing duologue, Her Birthday, in which Miss Hunt has good scope for her vocal powers. Miss Minnie D'Aubyn is a pleasing vocalist, and Charley Russell, who gave his experiences of managing a coffee stall, was well approved. Mr. Henry Coulle is clever and expeditious in his many changes. Messrs. Mount and Corelli have a duologue entitled Master and Maid, which caused much laughter; The Three McGregors were heartily welcomed back; Madame Lumiere in the "Fairy Grotto," with lights of various colours, was a very charming impersonator. Another return visit was Professor Duncan with his beautiful Scotch collies.

JARROW.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Rex Sugden.—Mr. Russell Norrie's company is paying a visit here with the comedy-drama, Mr. Smith. Mr. Norrie gives a clever rendering of the title-rôle; Capt. Simmons Lynn as the Duke of Angleland is interesting; Mr. C. Cecil is responsible for a good account of the Millionaire; and Miss M. Cottell looks and plays the part of Ruth Anheuser, the Millionaire's daughter, to perfection; Miss Sophie Lingwold is well placed as Mrs. Smith; Miss Bertha Forest gives an excellent rendering of the Duchess of Angleland; Mr. C. Willis, as the Earl of Oxted, is at home in the part; and Miss Gladys Lloyd is a charming Lady Mary.

JERSEY.—OPERA HOUSE.—There were packed houses last Saturday when the Zancigs made their bow before the Jersey public. Amongst those present at the evening performance were His Excellency Major-General H. S. Gough, C.B., C.M.G., Lieut.-Governor, Mrs. Gough and party, Lady Otway, Mr. A. Hilgrove Turner (H.M.'s Attorney-General), the Officers of the 1st East Surrey Regiment, etc. Miss Ethel Grimes gave a perfect interpretation of Thomas's "I'm Titania," and a couple of songs were well rendered by Miss Katie Moss, a great favourite here; whilst Mr. Thornley Dodge's sketches were highly appreciated; Mr. and Mrs. Zancig received quite an ovation for their inimitable performance.

KEIGHLEY.—QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Carson and Kendall.—A capital variety programme is headed by Mr. James Willard's company in The Ace of Hearts. Mr. James Willard, Mr. Jackson Wilcox, and Miss Mabel Carr are excellent in their respective parts. Other turns are provided by Tate and Tate, the Four Ramlos, the Olmars, Russell Brandow, Shrills, the Cromwells, Irene and Laura, and Ray Ford.

KIDDERMINSTER.—NEW OPERA HOUSE.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr. Jas. P. Moore; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. C. Gudgeon.—For the first three nights of this week Mr. Charles Macdona's company appeared in A Chinese Honeymoon. Mr. Leo Kloss as Hang Chon is excellent; Chippie Chop is in the capable hands of Mr. Louis Ashmeade; and Mr. Lindsay Harmon makes a perfect Li Hung; Miss Lydia Bland is a charming Loo Loo, and Miss Fanny Bass a pretty Mi Mi. There is a capital chorus under the direction of Mr. Leonard Gautier, and the piece is well mounted.

KING'S LYNN.—NEW ROYAL THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Herr B. Pareezer.—Mr. Arthur H. Horner's company has been presenting the two farcial comedies, Walker, London, and The Play-Actor, here this week. In the former Mr. Harry C. Morton sustains the part of Jasper Phipps in a droll manner; Mr. Forrester Harvey gives an admirable interpretation of the part of "W.G."; Mr. C. H. Hughes makes a sturdy Kit Upjohn; and Mr. W. Rene Hammersmith capably fills the rôle of Renard von Burg. Miss Katharine Parry is extremely good as Belle Golightly, B.A., and Miss Ruby Hamilton Belasco is well placed as Mrs. Golightly.

KIRKCALDY.—KING'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan.—Lucky Durham was presented on Monday night by Messrs. Armitage and Leigh's company. Mr. Edmund Kennedy was responsible for a sound and effective rendering of John Durham; as Lord Mountfallow Mr. T. Renaud Lockwood filled the villainous rôle splendidly; Mr. A. E. Walker was very successful as Mr. Vallerton, while Mr. W. Dunlop made quite a pleasant Arthur Walcombie; Mr. John Hartt as Tasker was undoubtedly clever, and Mr. Arthur Leigh as the Hon. Reggie was quite inimitable. Praise is due to Miss Alice Esther Belmore and Miss Florence Dulhunty who, as Helen and Margaret, were satisfactory in every way; Miss Rosabel Dodd was decidedly good as Lady Mountfallow, as was also Miss Louisa Gourlay as Mrs. Durham.

LANCASTER.—ATHENÆUM.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alfred Hook.—Mr. George Testo Santé and company are presenting here The Life of a Showman to good houses; Mr. Santé in the rôle of Brien Leader appears to special advantage both as actor and athlete; the villain, Hendrick, is well presented by Mr. Morris Maud; and a clever impersonation of the Rev. Cyril Arliss is given by Mr. Edward Warden; Miss Constance Medwyn is most successful as Agatha Winter, and the juveniles, Miss Lizzie Power and Master Harry Warden, do very well.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. John Porter and W. G. Fergusson.—Are You a Mason? the attraction here, is being capitally presented by Mr. C. Macdona's company; Mr. Howard L. Tracy displays excellent qualities in his depiction of Frank Perry, and Mr. Eric Albury's highly characteristic impersonation of George Fisher causes keen enjoyment; Mr. E. H. Patterson plays Amos Bloodgood with well sustained comedy; Mr. Buchanan Wake is droll as John Halton; Mr. G. R. J. Austin is successful in the rôle of Tarvers; and Mr. Erskholme E. Clive submits a finished portraiture of Ernest Morrison; Miss Adelaide Grace gives a capital portrayal of Mrs. Caroline Bloodgood, and the Lotty of Miss Gwen Clifford is a clever and artistic study.

LEAMINGTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Manager, Mr. Walter P. Wright.—The celebrated Hungarian actor-violinist, Jan Rudenyi, is this week topping the bill in his musical romance, entitled The Power of Music, in which he treats the audience to some artistic playing; Miss Marie Jones, a versatile protean actress, presents her quick-change novelty duologue, The Way to Win a Bet, a clever performance; whilst the Lannons are well received in their high pedestal dancing act. Other interesting turns are given by Billy French, the clever American wooden shoe dancer; Percy Johnson, an excellent comedian; Wheeler and Wilson, eccentric acrobats; and the Sisters Bartholomew, vocalists and dancers. Some interesting and amusing pictures are shown by Vernon's Imperial Bioscope.

LEEDS.—GRAND THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager, Mr. Edward Cadman.—An enthusiastic welcome was here accorded that popular pair, Miss Julia Neilson and Mr. Fred Terry on Monday last, when a crowded house foregathered for the opening performance of their successful romantic play, The Scarlet Pimpernel. Mr. Fred Terry enacted the many-sided character of Sir Percy in delightful style, every phase being depicted with consummate skill; as Lady Blakeney Miss Neilson has a heavy part, and her acting, both of tragedy and comedy episodes, is superb and convincing; that sterling actor, Mr. Horace Hodges is well placed as the French envoy, Chauvelin, and gets through his work with distinction; Miss Mary Mackenzie displays great ability in her handling of the part of Susanne; Mr. T. Wigney Percyval plays the royal part in satisfactory style; whilst those other well-known members of the company, Mr. Alfred Kendrick, Mr. Frederick Groves, and Mr. Malcolm Cherry, enact their usual parts in accomplished manner.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; General-Manager, Mr. R. Ernest Liston.—The popular drama, The Midnight Mail, opened here to good business on Monday, and a fine presentation by Messrs. Dottridge, Longden, and Willard's company was much enjoyed Mr. George Havard plays the important part of Harry Steyne in great style, his work being much applauded; his wife, Mary, is a distinctly pleasing effort by Miss C. Errington; whilst Miss Jeannie Weston and Miss Mildred Carr are seen to advantage in other leading feminine rôles. Mr. Ernest Evison is to be complimented on an excellent effort as Billy Brewer; and Mr. E. Ferguson achieves distinction as Leonard Royle.

EMPIRE.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. T. Gerald Morton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Alex. Galley.—That clever comedian, Toy Foy is vastly amusing in his Yorkshire Lad in London sketch; Lockhart's elephants go through a most interesting and intelligent performance under the guidance of Captain Taylor; the mystery, "Dida," arouses a big show of interest; May Henderson makes quite the "hit" of the evening in a vivacious song and dance speciality; an impressive strong-man show by Launceston Elliott is well received; Horace White, the ventriloquist, achieves the usual good success; charming Florence Esdaile pleases her numerous admirers with vocal renderings; whilst Rita and Roma, speciality entertainers, and Beatrice Renee, dialect vocalist, also encounter a good reception.

QUEEN'S.—Proprietor, Mr. F. W. Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Bush.—At this popular place of entertainment a pretty vocal scena, The Garden of Girls, is the pièce de résistance, and is cleverly enacted by Haley's company of vocalists and dancers; Agnes Molteno brings her company in a well-acted and enjoyable playlet; a popular comedian, Ernie Myers, is a strong success; and J. W. Gallagher is another favourite comedy contributor. Ruby Dahl presents her novel marionette show; and other good turns this week are the Sprees, novel speciality; Jack Martin, actor-vocalist; Mezzetti and Mora, acrobatic humorists; and Pietro, contortionist.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Thos. Barrasford; General-Managers, Mr. Chas. Weldon and Mr. Claude Shayler.—The musical comedy production, The Duchess of Tooting, is a merry thirty minutes' interlude, and has proved very attractive this week at the above hall; Mr. Stephen Adeson is the chief executant, and is very humorous in a liberal part; the Columbia Comedy Trio are immensely sucessful in an original act; a very smart acrobatic show by the Hilgert Arkas Troupe is received with acclamation; whilst Wright and Lawson are also deservedly popular in a turn which comprises some remarkable acrobatic feats. Nell Emerald, in song and dance, is as lively and pleasing as ever; Ford Williams, the vocalist, finds favour; a comedy act by Mr. and Mrs. Royston Dene and company goes well; and Stidder and Dunbar, in musical comedy, complete a strong programme.

CITY VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. F. W. Wood; General-Manager, Mr. J. C. Whiteman; Acting-Manager, Mr. S. Jones.—The clever and versatile Harvey Boys lead the Varieties bill this week with a popular entertainment; Curwen and Belle find great favour in a neat musical comedy sketch; Johnny Holland and company are doing a knock-about sketch, which is uproariously funny; the Ottawas, in vocal and instrumental interlude, are a popular feature; two good examples of the up-to-date comedian, George Prince and Charlie Dillon, are having a good week; and of the rest, Gena Manon, vocalist; and the Sisters Albert, duettists and dancers, are particularly well received.

LEICESTER.—ROYAL OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Business-Manager, Mr. Charles Hermann.—A good all-round performance of the musical play The Blue Moon is being given here this week by Mr. Robert Courtneidge's principal company; Miss Marie Wilson gains golden opinions for a charming impersonation of the title-rôle; Miss Florence Imeson makes a captivating Millicent Leroy, and Miss Ethel Callanan as Ethel Ormsby, Miss Violet Hobson as Oma, and Miss Marie Regnold as Lady Augusta Brabasham are also prominent; Mr. Edward Lewis maintains his reputation by creating endless laughter as Moolraj; Mr. Horace Mills is very good as Private Charles Taylor; Mr. Roland Bottomley sings and acts well as Captain Jack Ormsby; Mr. Jack Cannot is excellent as Major Vivian Callabone; and both Mr. George Mudie, jun., as Bobbie Scott, and Mr. Jack Spurling as the Prince are deserving of high praise; a meed of commendation should also be accorded the chorus and augmented orchestra under Mr. Ernest Hurman; the play is staged and dressed in a tasteful manner.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Business Manager, Mr. E. R. Beaumont.—Mrs. Bandmann-Palmer and her well selected répertoire company form the attraction this week. On Monday evening a really fine performance of Catherine, Duchess of Dantzig was given, which evoked unstinted praise, the costumes and staging being done on an elaborate scale; in the principal part Mrs. Bandmann-Palmer displayed her histrionic abilities in a manner calling for nothing but the greatest approbation; Mr. F. Skein as Fouche is also to be complimented on a performance of exceptional merit; Mr. Ernest Griffin made an excellent impression as Napoleon I., and Mr. Walter Raynham as Marechal Lefebvre, Mr. Howard Rose as Lieutenant Adrian Lefebvre, and Mr. A. Harvey as D'Esparre acquitted themselves admirably; Miss Gwladys Faunce was good as Rosalie, and Miss Irene Knox was a capital Madame de Stall. Bast Lynne, Hamlet (with Mrs. Palmer in the chief part), Sapho, and Jane Shore were also underlined for presentation.

PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hatton Wharton; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Bertram G. Iles.—Harry Ford tops the bill here this week, and creates great merriment with some really funny songs and patter; Miss Isabel Derrie and Co. present the military episode, La Vivandière, in a manner leaving nothing to be desired, Miss Derrie as Cigarette being especially good; Amy Anderson and Co. cause the heartiest laughter with her popular scena The Banana Queen, in which a male member of the company gives a remarkable acrobatic display; the Sisters Grovini are seen in a smart acrobatic act; Leipzig does some clever things as a conjuror; Cissie Curlette is a popular and entertaining mimetic vocalist; J. B. Preston is a funny Scotch comedian and neat dancer; Cumminger and Colonna, the Octoroon and the English girl, are good, the sand dancing of the former arousing the usual applause; E. J. Sheldon also entertains, and the bioscope depicts "Life on a British Reformatory Ship," etc.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joe Lawrence.—J. Wright Aitken and Co. take the lead here this week with the sensational dramatic romance The Devil's Hand, which is meeting with great success; Miss Una Wright as Dorothy Milburn, and Mr. J. Wright Aitken as Victor Margo being very conspicuous, and Mr. George Stanley as Frank Vernan, and Miss C. Durano as Nurse Williams lending able assistance; Wild Willie and West create roars of laughter in their comedy acrobatic act; Will and Rose are entertaining in their funny pot-pourri act Le Café Magique; the Sisters Della, descriptive vocalists, are meeting with a cordial reception; Little Dando, eccentric comedian, scores a well-deserved success; and Bert Keppel, coon vocalist and sand dancer, and Alvar, gymnast, also appear; Walter H. Pallister's bioscope, with "A Tour Through Switzerland," and a beautifully coloured subject, "The Enchanted Glasses," is a great feature.

TEMPERANCE HALL.—Mr. Walter Jeffs's New Century Pictures have attracted full houses, who have evinced the greatest delight with the entertainment submitted, comprising as it does the very latest films, both comic and serious, and many beautiful coloured ones. The visit will be brought to a close this (Saturday) evening.

ASSOCIATION HALL.—Messrs. Maddox and Lawton and their Bohemian Concert Party have given delightfully enjoyable and refined entertainments here, which have been received with unstinted applause; Mr. Harry Lawton is a smart humorist and mimic, and others who are also to the fore are Will Giddings, light comedian and dancer; Arthur Bearle, society jester; Ernest Cass, baritone vocalist; Dan Harley, droll comedian and dancer; Reginald A. Maddox, vocalist; and T. E. Maddox, a solo pianist of ability.

LEIGH.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. J. W. Cragg; Manager, Mr. Walter Childs.—Mr. G. Carlton Wallace's company, in the new play, The Lancashire Lad, is drawing good houses here this week. Mr. Henry Wolston commands great admiration for his exposition of the title-rôle; Miss Gertrude Sterroll plays with a deal of tact and sweetness as Jessie Wincote; Max Carton has a creditable exponent in Mr. Graham Winsford; Miss Florence Walton ably depicts the womanliness of the wife's character; Miss Alice Williams is highly successful as Kitty de Vere, her singing and dancing being greatly admired; Miss Harriet Russell soon instals herself a favourite as Mother Wardle; and too much praise cannot be allotted to Mr. Harry Rousby as John Willie Wardle, his eccentricities throughout being as original as they are amusing. A better exponent than Miss Nell Rene as Jane Alice Clitheroe could hardly be found, her singing in Act. III. calling forth great applause. The remaining parts are all in capable hands, and the scenery is most excellent.

LEITH.—NEW GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. John Darlison.—The emotional Russian melodrama A Beautiful Fiend, with Miss Sidney Crowe seen to great advantage in the title-rôle, has been staged here this week by Mr. Montague Beaudyn's Company; the parts of Ivan Paulovitch and Nadine Karoteff, hero and heroine of the piece, are well played by Mr. Oliver Birrell and Miss Irene Munroe; the funny element is plentifully provided by Mr. Matt Russell and Miss Annie Clunn as Christopher Crackles and Patty Woodlands; and Mr. Beaudyn himself is successful in his impersonation of the arch-villain Count Karoteff; Sergius Strozoff finds a capable exponent in Mr. Julien Mitchell, and minor parts are all adequately filled.

LINCOLN.—ROYAL.—Sole Lessees, Mr. W. Payne Seddon and Mr. Ernest Pope.—The Little Breadwinner is presented by the company of Mr. J. A. Campbell, the author of the play. Miss Marjorie Laurence is charming as Meg; and the other characters are admirably played.

PALACE.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Eric Longden.—A remarkably clever animal turn is given by Leoni Clarke's trained pets; Mulvey and Mirian in The Reporter, Lord, Murray, and Lord in The Intruder, with some smart boxing, and the Bros. Adderley in An Officer's Servant, present clever sketches; and the Sisters Lytton sing most tastefully. Ena Richards is a taking comedienne, and Raymond's Bioscope adds to the interest of a very strong programme.

LIVERPOOL.—ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Lawrence.—A hearty welcome has this week been accorded to Mr. George Alexander and Miss Irene Vanbrugh, who have submitted, for the first time in Liverpool, His House in Order. Pinero's brilliant work has proved exceedingly acceptable, and so great was the demand for seats that an additional matinée had to be arranged. In the rôle of Hilary Jesson, Mr. Alexander has added another to his already long list of stage triumphs; the fine dramatic power of Miss Vanbrugh, with all their delicate lights and shades, were shown with effect in her impersonation of Nina; Mr. Cyril Harcourt played adequately as Filmer Jesson; Miss Iris Hawkins showed delightful intelligence in the difficult childish part of Derek; Mrs. Kemmis gave a picture of the staid Lady Ridgeley that would be hard to surpass; Miss Ruth Maitland deserves every praise for her rendering of Geraldine Ridgeley; Miss Beatrix De Burgh made an admirable French Governess; and worthy support came from Messrs. E. Lyall Swete (Sir Daniel), George Silver (Pryce), Norman Trevor (Major Maurewarde), and Reginald Owen (Harding).

SHAKESPEARE THEATRE.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. E. Stevens and R. C. Buchanan; Manager and Secretary, Mr. John Gaffney.—Mr. Beerbohm Tree put in another seven performances here, staging the same programme as last week. Public support has been enthusiastic.

ROTUNDA THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—Mr. Hill-Mitchelson paid a visit to the north-end house with his own drama, Rogues and Vagabonds, which has delighted large audiences. Mr. Mitchelson gave a fine rendering of the part of Nathan Baxter; Mr. George Dalper proved eminently successful as Harry Stamford; Miss Violet Carlyle ably played the character of Hilda Jeffries, the escaped convict; Mr. W. Heilbron acquitted himself well as Ferdinand Delair; and other satisfactory rôles were undertaken by Miss Alice Barber, Miss Mary Collier, Miss Cissie Podmore, and Mr. Russell Bogue.

STAR THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineberg.—Two Little Sailor Boys has been played here this week before large audiences. Included in Mr. W. H. Hallatt's able company were Messrs. Horace E. Herbert, whose Commander Tregarthen was a capital study; Miss Beryl Mercer and Miss Effie D. Crawford, the two boys; and Miss Blanche Steele, a powerful Lola Grey. Others who worked hard towards a successful presentation were Messrs. Leonard Clarke, Charles Boult, Forbes Harrison, and Miss Alice Defoe.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred Granville; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred L. Arthur.—The Best of Her Sex has been given here during the week, and has proved a source of keen enjoyment to large audiences. Mr. William A. Armour, who brought the company, distinguished himself in the part of Philip Faringdon; Mr. Herbert J. Walton held the rôle of Colonel Faringdon with credit; Miss Dora Price showed high accomplishments as Vera Delamore; and other worthy supporters were Messrs. Wilfred Protheroe, Herbert De Ville, Cole Aspinall, and Fred Rignold. The play was well put on.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Albert C. Duncan.—Harry Randall has met with a rousing reception here this week; the mystifying conjuring of Hermann Meiot was watched with the deepest interest; F. W. Purcell's company, which included Herbert Russell, George Elliston, and Ethel Stalman, gave the laughable sketch, That Brute Simmons; Rhoda Paul submitted a pretty musical incident, entitled The Schoolboy's Dream; Gus Garrick pleased immensely with his "music hall tit-bits"; the clog-dancing and singing of the Six Lancashire Lassies proved particularly enjoyable; a merry musical sketch, The Bugler, came from the Warsaw Bros.; and also in the list were Bessie Butt, soubrette and dancer; and Gwladys Elvey, musical comedy artist.

TIVOLI, LTD.—Director of Entertainments, Mr. Fred Willmot; Manager, Mr. James Marks.—Top of the bill here this week are the humorous Six Brothers Luck, with Blazes, which has been richly enjoyed; Walter Emerson, the tall comedian, has been responsible for much laughter; the Grisse Trio of Continental speciality artists have proved very diverting; some excellent banjo playing has been given by Francis O'Flynn; the Temples Trio are admirable vocalists; the juggling by Saidos is particularly clever; Violet Morgan proves a talented mimic; and Charles Lilburn is full of eccentricity.

LYRIC.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—In big type here this week we have Mme. Irma Glasen's living art bronzes, which have proved exceedingly interesting; the harmonious singing of the King's College Boys has been appreciated; Ford and Barras gave a pleasing turn of dancing and music; Sadler and Ross, Irish comedians, caused much laughter; a refined musical act came from the Coes; Frank Coyle had a number of funny songs and patter; and also in the bill were Edna Latonne, vocalist; Eileen Douglas, comedienne; and Harry Lewis, comedian.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Walter Hassan.—Top of the programme here this week is the beautiful ballet divertissement, Electra, which has proved a source of delight; Mooney and Holbein, with their vaudeville intermezzo, have earned cordial appreciation; as a mimic of animals, Carl Lynn distinguished himself; Herbert Clifton, "the man with the £1,000 voice," had a most hearty reception; a smart comedy acrobatic sketch was submitted by Lanos and Montes; as cross-talkers and dancers, Conan and Doyle were especially entertaining; Nellie Moor's character impersonations proved popular; a neat little comedy, My Landlord, was presented by Fred Lawrence's combination; and the list likewise included the names of Ailsa Douglas, vocalist; and Joe Conway, comedian.

ROYAL PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole.—The Royal stock company have been giving Why Woman Sins here this week. Mr. Harry Tresham proved a manly Lieut. Maxwell; Mr. Sydney Grant played strongly as the scoundrel, Captain Carlton; Mr. R. Wilton afforded every satisfaction in the rôle of Cecil Spencer; Mr. Cecil Ravenswood creditably held the parts of Oliver Desmond and Admiral Steadfast; and good work was likewise done by Miss Beryl Ravenswood, Miss Florence Palmer, and Miss Florence Cameron.

PADDINGTON PALACE.—Proprietors, Liverpool Theatres of Varieties, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. N. Edwards.—Excellent business continues to be done here by the established stock company. This week The Mistress of the Seas has proved an attraction, the principal rôles being undertaken by Messrs. Ernest Wingfield, Frank S. Strickland, Charles Winter, W. E. Griffith, H. G. Brandon, H. Hesslegrave, Francis B. Wybert, Miss Gladys A. Walton, Miss Lina Nazeby, and Miss Florence Barnes.

PARK PALACE.—Proprietors, Liverpool Theatres of Varieties, Ltd.—The stock dramatic company here have this week given The Voice of the People, from the pen of Max Goldberg. In the rôle of the Rev. Walter Meredith, Mr. Hugh Carmichael played with excellent effect; Mr. Albert Sember gave a fine rendering of the broken-down actor, Phelps; the villainous sweater, Morris Morris, was cleverly handled by Mr. Walter Foster; Mr. Archie Helsby did well as Steve Morris; Miss Nelson Ramsay infused a deal of tenderness into the unfortunate Liz; and Miss Lilian Burns made a sweet Mary Maynard.

HAYMARKET.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. Edwin W. Smith.—Harry Calden and his dramatic sketch company continue to occupy the greater portion of the programme here. This week they have given The Shamrock, Rose, and Thistle; or, Unity. The Brothers Patty are pleasing vocal duettists; Preston Holmes shows much skill on musical instruments; and Cissy De Prenton and company have a funny absurdity, entitled Mrs. Mink's Mistake.

WESTMINSTER.—Lessee, Mr. Fred E. Weisker; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Montgomery.—Principal here this week are Charles Windermere and Clare Manifield, a smart pair of comedy artists; Dick Powell and company present a very funny sketch, entitled An Antiquarian; Jack Lane, the Yorkshire comedian, has some humorous songs and sayings; the popular Charles Santon renders a number of acceptable songs; and Violet Stockwell, comedienne, also appears.

OLYMPIA.—District-Manager. Mr. Albert Bulmer; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wighton.—The always-popular Eugene Stratton has delighted everybody here this week; Miss Marquis gives an interesting show with her highly-trained cobs; Albert Whelan proves as entertaining as ever; a high-class vocal and dancing act comes from Charles Parker's Six Æolians; as vocalists and acrobatic dancers, the Three Sisters Kilner show much ability; Gracie Moore's illustrated chorus songs find ready acceptance; the smart monologue artist, R. H. Douglass, comes in for hearty applause; and also in the list are Les Frasettis, musical entertainers; and Dot Hardy, character comedienne.

ROSCOMMON.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Willmot.—The Octoroon has been the attraction here this week, presented by the stock company. Mr. J. D. Geddes was a capital Jacob McClosky; Mr. Herbert H. Young acted well as George Peyton; Mr. C. H. Maxwell afforded satisfaction in the part of Wah-No-Tee; Mr. Percy Boucher played his old part of Salem Scudder with credit; Miss Lilian Beaumont put a deal of feeling into the character of Zoe; Miss Evelyn Kington was Paul; and Miss Enid Wilde did justice to Dora Sunnyside.

LONDONDERRY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. W. Payne Seddon.—Mr. Lawrence Brough is here this week producing The Lady from Ostend and Saucy Sally. In the former Mr. Harry Hampson fills the rôle of Dick admirably, and as his wife Miss Kate Milford is capital. Mr. Dan F. Roe and Miss Bessie Harrison as Dick's father-in-law and mother-in-law fill their parts excellently. Mr. Watkin Wynne as the prize-fighter delighted the audience, and as the Baron Mr. Brough himself is very good indeed.

LONG EATON.—ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Lindsey Edwards.—A visit is being paid this week by Miss Maude Western's company in the military melodrama, The Prodigal Son. Sir John Fanshaw, the squire, is well taken by Mr. F. Dudley; his sons, Captain Harry and Jack, capably represented by Mr. W. A. Buckstone and Mr. Claude Seaton. Much of the fun of the piece rests with Mr. Godfrey Hunsley as Larry McGehan, and the maid, Miss Connie Meadows, who is encored for a smart dance. Mr. John Levey as Bill Burke and Miss Molly Rees are effective in their respective parts. The military business is prominent, and Miss Western figures as the pet of the regiment with distinction.

LOWESTOFT.—MARINA.—Manager, Mr. H. A. Smith.—Mr. C. W. Poole's myriorama is here this week. Amongst the pictures is a striking illustration of the Battle of Trafalgar. The variety turns include Miss Kitty Woodford's performing dogs in a clever act.

THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert; Manager, Mr. Frank Freeland.—The animated pictures here are still meeting with warm approval, crowded audiences being the general rule at each performance. The recent motor races at Dieppe are a fine item. The variety artists include Les Uniques, gymnasts; J. H. Crewe, comedian; The Florias, wire artists; and W. H. Downs and his piccaninnies in The Darkies' Dream.

LUTON.—GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. E. Graham Falcon; Manager, Mr. Louis J. Beard.—Luton people are interested this week with the visit of Go-Won-Go-Mohawk and her American company in the sensational drama, written by herself, entitled, Wep-ton-no-mah; some very interesting scenes are witnessed, especially those in which two ponies take part.

MACCLESFIELD.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. K. Gatley.—The return of Mr. Lingford Carson's company in The Drama of Life is welcome. Mr. Algernon J. Hicks is admired for his portrayal of Harry Beech; Mr. Edward M. Hamilton gives force to the part of Walter Beech; Mr. Clarence Ibbotson in his clever way makes the most of Sir Dobson Wilde; Messrs. Andrew Money and George Vinning as Jack Lawson and Dare Crane respectively present striking portrayals; Mr. J. Dobson Clyde ably represents Richard Benton; and Mr. Edward Van Bienne is successful as Count De Foi. Miss Marie Ramus gives a charming rendering of Lady Jane Wilde; Miss Kate Hallam is seen to advantage as Sylvia Beech; and Miss Amy Ross-Clyde is a droll Betty Black.

MAIDENHEAD.—TOWN HALL.—Secretary, the Town Clerk.—Three nights' good business has been done by the Great Western Animated Picture Co., the business manager of which is Mr. Harry Berry. The subjects illustrated are of a varied description, and include the singing pictures, "Death of Nelson" and "The Old Chorister." Mr. Albert Groves in an excellent manner performs suitable pianoforte selections.

MANCHESTER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, the United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edmondstone Shirra.—A visit of Mr. H. B. Irving and his company to this theatre was welcomed by a large audience on Monday. Mr. Irving appeared as Mathias in The Bells, and achieved a distinguished success. It is, of course, essentially a one-part play, but the support rendered by (among others) Miss Gwladys Wynne as Annette, Miss Elly Malyon as Catherine, and Mr. Bernard Limpus as Christian, was valuable and noteworthy. It was preceded by The Lion and the Unicorn, Mr. H. B. Irving playing King Charles the Second in this clever and entertaining farce. On Tuesday, Charles the First was successfully presented; on Wednesday, The Lyons Mail; and on Thursday (for the first time by Mr. Irving), Louis XI.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietors, the United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Lee.—An excellent performance of The Walls of Jericho is the nightly fare here this week. Mr. Arthur Bourchier's delineation of Jack Frobisher, always good, could not have been better than it was on Monday night; and Miss Violet Vanbrugh's depiction of Lady Alethea was as near to perfection as could have been desired; Mr. Charles Goodhart remains in the cast as Hankey Bannister, a capital impersonation; Mr. Arthur Whitby is excellent as the Marquis of Steventon; and Miss Pamela Gaythorne as Lady Lucy is quite one of the successes of the cast. Among others, Mr. Cyril Keightley as Harry Dallas, and Miss Nella Powys as Lady Westerby, are worthy of praise. Mr. Bourchier and his company remain three weeks, with a highly interesting change of programme.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Proprietors, the United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. M. Thorburn.—The Maid and the Motor-man continues popular here.

ROYAL OSBORNE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Mason.—Messrs. Hardie and Von Leer's company are here this week, with Two Lancashire Lasses in London. Mr. Herbert Pearson as the poor inventor, Edmunds, acts in manly style; Mr. Chris. Mason makes a robust Lancashire lad as Samuel Hallett; the Rev. Frank Selby is capably impersonated by Mr. E. Rayson-Cousens; and Mr. Arthur Elwyn successfully brings out the villainies of Jonas Deane; while as Jim Price Mr. Edward Chester has a strong part and does well, supported by Mr. Walter Walmsley as Gabbitt. The two sisters, Constance and Nellie, have able representatives in Miss Rosslyn Vayne and Miss Ada D. Hatchwell; and other good parts are well handled by Miss Marguerite Trevosper, Miss Evelyn Shaw, and Miss Elsie Forster. The play is well staged.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hearn.—Miss Ethel Van Praagh and Mr. J. Edward Whitty's company are here this week in a sensational drama, An Unwedded Wife. The play is above the average, and is very well received. Miss Ethel Van Praagh as Marion, the title-rôle, is really admirable; while valuable support is rendered by Mr. Bernard Copping as the villainous Philip Blakstone; Reggie is well played by Little Doris, a juvenile actress; and Miss Beatrice Kelvin does well as Elsie Langham. Plenty of fun is supplied by Mr. J. Edward Whitty as P.C. O'Runyin, Mr. Will Casey as Napoleon Boomer, and others.

GRAND JUNCTION THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Dry.—A Girl's Cross Roads, last week's attraction at the Royal Osborne Theatre, is being played here with equal success this week.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—The top attraction here this week is provided by Courtice and Louie Pounds, the well-known vocalists, in a sketch, entitled Charles, his Friend. Brown and Le Clerq are also here in their negro comedy business, which proves highly popular; while a fine vocal and musical turn is offered by Olgar and Elgar. The programme is in halves, breaking a horse-shoe, giving an illustration of ball-punching, and successfully holds in check two motor-cars set at high speed, and, finally, wins in a severe tug-of-war with a powerful motor. A splendid musical turn is offered by the Sisters Transfield; Edie Veno is a smart comedienne and dancer; Talberto and Douglas are clever acrobatic comedians; Harry Taft whistles Sousa's marches in vigorous style; Alfredo Nardi plays classical selections in masterly fashion; Carrie Laurie's Juveniles are smart singers and dancers; Jose Collins, comedienne, sings "My Firefly" in a pleasing way; the Jackley Trio introduce some clever tumbling and acrobatic feats in their speciality, and one of the trio is a smart whistler and dancer; and Horace Wheatley, an old favourite here, scores with funny patter and neat step-dancing. Pictures complete.

Tivoli.—Managing-Director, Mr. Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—Miss Ethel Newman tops the bill here this week, and is exceedingly good in her latest monologue, Her Wedding Day. Some clever and weird dancing is done by La Malaya and troupe of eight ladies, in an effective scena; Ike and Will Scott score a distinct success, both being good comedians; Cliff and Kean make a hit with exceptionally smart dancing; and Ye Merrie Peasants are good singers. Other enjoyable turns are those of Lilian Rigby, in a musical dancing act; the Sisters Edwards, vocalists, drummers, and dancers; and the Trefelyn David Duo, in a smart vocal duologue scena. On the occasion of our visit De Vere and Oakes, American Duo, did not appear, but Maston, a clever mimic, was a good substitute. Raymond's Vivagraph Pictures complete.

Queen's Park Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meek.—An excellent programme is provided here this week. The Gem Family, who head the bill, are wonderfully clever Risley artists, and meet with a big reception. An interesting show is given by Yeotha (an Indian girl) and Capt. G. Grade in a bow and arrow shooting act; Lucy Coventry is a smart versatile comedienne and dancer; King and Stanley receive applause for their patter and singing; and Kendrick and Laura sing and dance exceptionally well. The Lyricos, operatic duettists, sing in admirable style; Stephens and Rennior are smart sand dancers; and Vardon is a good ventriloquist. Entertaining turns are also given by Freddie French, comedian; Will Freedo, comedian; and Bert Weston, comedian. Accidents Will Happen is the subject of the Bioscope.

King's, Longsight.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. B. Taylor.—Prominent here this week are Ajax and George, in their clever act, A Scene on Board; the Five Musical Tritons in a great instrumental act; Leo Trainer, vocal comedian; and Harrigan and Holt, comedians. Other entertaining items are furnished by the Victorians, duettists; Horace Sade, dancer; the Sisters Belmont, duettists and dancers; Alf. Ripon, Scotch ventriloquist; and the Carney Brothers, character duettists. A smart deputy turn appeared on the night of our visit, in the place of Perrette and Mona, who figure on the programme. Pictures complete.

Hulme Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Kay.—Arthur Rigby, the well-known comedian, and Carney and Armstrong, comedians, are highly successful here this week; David Poole, ventriloquist, is greatly enjoyed; and capital turns are offered by the Wakomic Brothers, instrumentalists; Troba, juggler; Gibbon and Bell, in smart speciality; Arthur Pearl, a versatile comedian; the Dancing Gilberts; and Will Sullivan, patter comedian. The Unfortunate Lady is shown on the Bioscope.

Mansfield. — Grand Theatre.—Proprietors, Mansfield, Sutton and District Theatres, Ltd.; Managing Director, Capt. Cecil Clayton.—By arrangement with Mr. Wm. Greet The Shulamite was produced here this week. Mr. Scott Leighton in the rôle of Simeon Krellet proved himself an actor of great power; Mr. Bartlett Garth capably filled the part of Robert Waring; as Jan Vanderberg Mr. George Rammell was quite at home; comedy was well supplied by Mr. Albert Rogers as Klass; and Miss Chrissie Bickersteth as Memke. In the difficult part of Deborah Krellet Miss Ella Thornton played with exceptional brilliance, and Miss Corona L'Estrange was effective as Tante Anna.

Hippodrome.—Managing Director, Mr. Herbert Darnley; Resident-Director, Mr. Tom Jennings; Acting Manager; Mr. Mark Lorne.—Mr. A. Campbell Kelly's company is here this week with The Trail of the Serpent. Mr. S. Lannen in the double rôle of Gerald Kingston and Old Jack played with ability; Mr. Henry K. Penn filled the rôle of Sir Gerald Kingston with credit; Mr. A. Campbell Kelly gave a powerful rendering of Ralph Hammond; Mr. George Porteous was capable as Gipsy Jake; and the same remark applies to Mr. Peter Morris as Ben Chucks. Miss Nana Cameron gave a brilliant exposition of Rachael; Miss Mamie Stanton was a sympathetic Ethel; and the comedy part of Rose Wilson was finely played by Miss Jennie Gibson, Mr. G. H. Godfrey being amusing as William Higgins.

Margate.—Theatre Royal.—Exclusive Manager, Mr. Edward Michael; Resident-Manager, Mr. Wallis Clark.—An excellent change from musical comedy and modern drama has been provided this week by Mr. Norman Macowan's company with the costume play, Monsieur Beaucaire. The piece has been admirably presented, Mr. Norman Macowan playing the title-rôle with conspicuous success. Miss Violet Sterne has endowed the part of Lady Mary Carlisle with dignity and sweetness, her acting being particularly refined and graceful. Mr. Murray Hathorn has done exceedingly well as the sinister Duke of Winterset. Other parts were capably presented by Mr. Ramsey Forman as Captain Badger, Mr. Robert Antwistle as Beau Nash, and Miss Mary Masters as Lucy Rellerton.

Hippodrome.—Sole Proprietors, Messrs. Fredk. Monillot and Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. F. Bawtree.—The bill here is headed by Brinn in his "postures on a battleship," in which he performs some remarkable balancing feats; H. C. Lovell and company appear in a laughable sketch, Mlle. Pom-Pom; and other contributors include Ned Neiman, ventriloquist, who used to visit Margate in the palmy days of the Assembly Rooms; Flo Schubert, comedienne; Alice Durrant, with her pictorially illustrated songs; Godfrey James, the singing collier; and Harry Russon, comedian. The Hippodrome pictures are as amusing as usual.

Merthyr Tydfil.—Theatre Royal.—Lessees, The South Wales Entertainments, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. W. Player.—Mice and Men is here this week, presented by Mr. Herbert Ralland's company. Mr. J. Graeme submits an excellent study of Mark Embury; Miss Helena Parsons makes a graceful and charming Peggy; Mr. J. H. Twyford skilfully enacts the part of Captain Lovell; and Mr. Fredk. Tyrrell is successful as Roger Goodlake. Miss Grace Baring is delightful as Joanna Goodlake; and Miss Julie Temple is all that could be desired as Mrs. Deborah.

Temperance Hall.—Manager, Mr. Israel Price.—The Arthur Saxon trio occupy the top of the bill, and present a capital weight-lifting show; Slippere, the blind entertainer, is loudly applauded for his musical efforts; the Four Dorians are gymnasts of ability. Also appearing are the Prunellas in a farm-yard scena, entitled A Country Flirtation; Magna, in classical poses; Drum and Major, comedians; Jimmy James, humorist; Rodin, the comedy cyclist; and the Biograph is showing some excellent pictures.

Mexborough.—Prince of Wales' Theatre.—Manager, Mr. W. H. Melton.—Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company is presenting here A Soldier's Honour. Mr. Clavering Craig makes a fine soldierly figure of Capt. Deane, the Capt. Temple of Mr. G. Fulford is another highly capable rendering; Mr. Arthur Pringle gives a vigorous interpretation of Henry Thornton; Mr. A. Anderson cleverly typifies the hypocritical character of Holly; Mr. Edward Bikker is a dignified General Rochester; Miss L. Addison (Mrs. Kimberley) plays with her accustomed skill and dramatic force the rôle of Cora Lee; the Doreen Illingsworth of Miss Violet Langley is thoroughly sympathetic and womanly; Miss Edie Macklin presents a delightfully humorous study of Jemima Eliza; and Miss Isa Lyndon is a winning child-actress as Queenie.

Middlesbrough.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Charles Imeson.—The realistic play When London Sleeps, by Charles Darnell, pays a welcome return visit here this week. It is a most natural and interesting piece, and is presented by Mr. Lester Collingwood's company. Miss Mabel Scudamore gives a capital rendition of what is a most exacting part, and the rôle of David Engleheart is in the capable hands of Mr. Edward Ashley; Mr. Richard Ferris does full justice to the part of Captain Haynes, and Mr. D'Arcy Kelway is amusing as Billy Blyth; Miss Lilla Wilde is good as Hilda Carode, and Miss Emmeline B. Lewis is pleasing in the rôle of Carrie Jones. Mr. Frank Howard, Mr. F. E. Thomas, Mr. Ernest Edwards, Miss Bella Power, and Miss Ethyl Sinclair are also entrusted with interesting rôles.

Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. Jno. Ed. Jowsey; Manager, Mr. W. Ker Chatto.—Miss Decima Moore and her company produced for the first time on Teeside the comedy The Truth, by Clyde Fitch. This charming actress filled the difficult rôle of Becky Warder in a manner that gave much delight to the large audience. Miss Moore found full scope for her great abilities in an admirably written piece, and at the fall of the final curtain she was the recipient of hearty applause. Mr. Robert Minster acted with great distinction in the rôle of Tom Warder; whilst for the part of Becky's father a clever representation was given by Mr. Arthur Hare. Miss Maud Lindon was charming in the rôle of Eve; and Miss Kitty Lofting as Laura Fraser was exceedingly good. Miss Elspeth Dudgeon was very amusing as Mrs. Crespigny, and Mr. Hugh Ardale was excellent as Fred Lindon. Mr. Howard Leslie as Jenks and Mr. W. H. Herdman as the messenger did well.

Empire Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Brill; Manager, Mr. Charles G. Rembges.—Some exceedingly good representations of classical statuary are given by the Seldoms here this week: the posing and grouping are most artistic throughout. Charles Diamond and Miss Beatrice provide a most pleasing musical turn; while Dusty Rhodes creates roars of laughter with his patter. The Two Bees are excellent in their new scena, The Man in the Moon; Charles Denton is a capital comedian; and other turns are provided by Woolmer Young, vocal comedian, and Mamie Cannon, comedienne.

Oxford Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Alf. Graham; Manager, Mr. R. L. Griffiths.—A very entertaining turn is given by the Bros. Horn here this week in a sketch entitled The Biter Bit. Considerable amusement is caused by the Flockton-Foster Sketch company in a sketch entitled Ferdie's Ma-in-Law; and Miss Gladys Wells, a charming ballad singer, has a great reception.

Morecambe.—Royalty Theatre and Opera House.—Sole Lessee, Lieut. Julian Malvern; General-Manager, Mr. Chas. M. Julian.—Messrs. Lionel Glenister and Wood-Ingram's company have been appearing with marked success in All-of-a-Sudden Peggy, a clever comedy by Ernest Denny. The character of Peggy O'Mara is admirably suited to Miss Kate Cutler. She has captivated everyone with her delightful interpretation of the Irish girl—original, impetuous, candid, "all-of-a-sudden," in fact. Mr. Lionel Glenister is also excellent as the Hon. Jimmy Keppel, who is put on to "dazzle" Peggy, and ends in marrying her. Mr. Wood-Ingram does exceptionally well as Lord Crackenthorpe, who specialises in spiders; and he has a staunch scientific friend in Mrs. O'Mara, a part successfully played by Miss N. Neilson. Miss Kate Wingfield is capital as Lady Crackenthorpe; and other parts are well played by Misses Estelle Despa and Leonora Thomas, and Messrs. Colin Johnson, W. H. G. Wynne, Harry Phillips, and Patrick Fitzgerald. The comedy is preceded by After Seven Years, by Marie Muggeridge.

Motherwell.—New Century Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Hales.—Mr. Chalmers Mackey and his company are paying a return visit here in a new Irish legendary play, Rollicking Rory. In the title rôle Mr. Mackey is decidedly effective, his sly humour keeping the house in a continuous ripple of laughter; Mr. Charles Homer appears with success as Desmond Fitzgerald; and Mr. David M'Farlane is sufficiently villainous as Stephen D'Arcy. Miss Nana Fleusberg is bright and pleasing as Rosie, and Mrs. Chalmers Mackey admirably sustains the rôle of Rosaleen. A pleasing feature of the production is the vocalism of Madame Constance Bellamy. For the last three nights of the week Mr. Louis Calvert's company in Sunday was announced.

Nelson.—Grand Theatre.—Proprietress, Mrs. T. Greenwood Croft; Business-Manager, Mr. Geo. E. Mudd.—Mr. Geo. Kirk and Miss May Neil's company, in Her Luck in London, have occupied the boards here this week. Miss Mary Neil charmingly presents the character of Nellie Harborne; whilst as Richard Lenowen Mr. Charles Stirling acts very effectively. The rest of the characters are in capable hands, Mr. Stephen Langton as the Hon. Fitzgerald O'Connor and Miss Florrie Groves as Maud Gladys Shovepenny being specially good. There have been large and appreciative audiences each night. The play is well staged, and the dresses pretty.

Newcastle-on-Tyne.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. Teale Lingham.—The company here is playing in My Darling; Miss Marie Studholme acts daintily and engagingly and sings with pleasing archness; Miss Ethel Negretti also vocalises with much success, and Mr. J. Robert Hale makes a capital Jack Hylton; the part of Le Blanc is undertaken by Mr. Alexander Chentreus, a good tenor; Mr. J. F. McArdle makes a hit as the proprietor of "The Daily Butterfly"; Miss Alice Barth contributes an able study of Lady Heldon, and Miss Edyth Goodall is heard to advantage; Mr. Tom Graves, Miss S. Ronalds, Miss Watt Tanner, Master Archie McCaig and Mr. Frank Hector are other members of a good company.

Tyne Theatre and Opera House.—Lessees, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. C. Sutcliffe.—The George Edwardes's company is here in The Lady Dandies; Evie Greene's beautiful singing and engaging manner again captivate all; Miss Dolly Castles as Illyrine, and Miss Mable Russell as Egle are both charming and able; and Mr. W. Talleur Andrews in the part of Dorlis sings magnificently; the comedians—Messrs. Eric Thorne, John Humphries, and Grafton Williams—are a fine trio; the graceful and skilful dancing of Miss Vivien Talleur is also admired.

Palace Theatre.—Manager, Mr. T. W. Rowe.—The Assassin is here this week, played by Mr. Augustine Knight's company; the rôle of Prince Demetri is sustained by Mr. Knight, and is in excellent keeping; Ivan Ipanoff is ably portrayed by Mr. Bonhote Wilson, and as Countess Wanda Miss Ella Vane displays real dramatic power; Miss Hettie Senior as an American girl, and Mr. Edwin Jenner as a British officer supply amusement, and agreeable fun is created by Messrs. E. Swinton and Tom J. Taylor.

Grand Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Sidney Bacon.—Mr. Douglas Brace's company is here with The Girl Who Lost Her Character"; among those who portray principal rôles are Mr. Charles Whitlock, Mr. Edward Lloyd, Mr. Frank Adair, Mr. George Mitchell, Mr. George H. Asquin, Miss Ethel Bracewell, Miss Joan Ellis, and Miss Lydia Manning-ton.

Empire Theatre.—Resident-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wells.—The Boissets head the bill here in The Bricklayers, which is becoming more amusing than ever; Mr. Whit Cunliffe is a smart comedian; in coon songs Miss Ella Shields scores a distinct success, and Ted and May Hopkins contribute a quaint and amusing interlude; Burley and Burley are clever acrobats and finger balancers; Collins' Eight Stella Girls provide a good dancing act, and others in the programme are Miss Nettie Starr, comedienne and dancer, and the Wedburns, instrumentalists and dancers.

Pavilion Theatre.—The Barrasford Company; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. H. Boardman.—A novel performance is given here by Captain Frank Taylor's educated baboons; Billy Williams, a comedian, makes a hit, his humour being enjoyable; Colby and May present an excellent entertainment, "The Ventriloquist and the Dancing Doll," and in a refined episode "Hunting," the three Sisters Tree display ability; Datas again proves very entertaining; Ernest Rees is a droll comedian, and Ruby Aston, comedienne and dancer, does a capital turn; the three Sisters Thurban, vocalists and instrumentalists, show undoubted skill.

Newport.—Lyceum.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Sidney Cooper.—His House in Order, presented by Mr. George Alexander's company, is paying a return visit here this week, and commands good houses. Mr. Frank Fenton's Hilary Jesson is a fine piece of acting; Miss Marie Polini plays Nina with fire and energy; and Mr. Ernest Young is the insufferable prig, Filmer Jesson, to the life. Miss Maisie Richardson makes a charming boy as Derek; Mr. Richard Dalton does well as Sir Daniel Ridgeley; and Mr. Chas. Tyrel presents an adequate performance as Major Maurewarde. Mr. Langford Browne's Pryce Ridgeley is all that could be desired; Miss Madge Johnstone makes a capital Lady Ridgeley; and Miss Henrietta Leverette does well in the part of Geraldine Ridgeley. Miss Jean D. Cadell (Mlle. Thomé), Mr. Frank Hill (Dr. Dilnott), and Mr. Burnett Parker (Harding) acquit themselves creditably in their respective parts.

Empire.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.—Manager, Major Gallagher.—A good bill is provided here this week, headed by Harry Grey, the Australian Nugget, whose witticisms and humour keep the house in roars; the Lyrus Trio, in their sketch, present a popular turn; Millie Payne, a capable comedy artist, scores; and the artistic musical turn of Florence and Lillian is accorded a warm reception. The Brothers Egbert cause much amusement with their sketch, The Happy Dustmen; and Alf. Chester, a clever comedian, is extremely amusing. Boyd and Gilfain sing songs that are acceptable. Mr. Joe O'Gorman, and the Bioscope, showing pictures of the International Horse Show at Olympia, complete the bill.

Northampton.—Opera House.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. E. Barnett.—The Scarlet Patrol, fresh from Fulham, is gaining high approval here. Miss Blise Cooke, a dainty Myra Myrtle, makes a bewitching chief of police in a well-fitting, smartly-designed scarlet costume. Miss Reydon Dallas is graceful and distingué as the heiress Amazon North; Miss Florence Linton is very nice as Ernestine; Mr. Leonard Russell as Inspector Jury has a fine baritone voice, and his solos and also his duets with Miss Cooke are deservedly applauded; Mr. Arthur Stigant as Nicholas Quiller is full of eccentricities, and his topical song in the second act with local allusions is a great hit. Mr. St. John Hamund is quaintly comic as Phineas Fogey; Mr. Percy Rogers also provides fun as the rhyming London tailor; and Mr. J. H. Bishop scores as a coloured boy servant. Mr. Mark Strong controls the orchestra, and the production is under the personal direction of Mr. Herbert Cottesmore.

Palace of Varieties.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Fred H. Anderson; Manager, Mr. Thos. A. Evans; Musical Director, Mr. Walter Ashton.—Rachel Lowe is paying us a return visit, and her song, "Take me down to Blackpool," is a big success. Dan Thomas, comedian, provides a very funny turn; Clifton and Gibson cause great merriment with their cross-talk; and Sylvene, assisted by Mlle. Florence, gives a good balancing display. The Palace pictures, operated by C. Vincent, are intensely interesting this week. Amy Elcock is a pleasing vocalist; Mr. and Mrs. Shelly provide a laughable duologue, Miss Summerson's Baby; and the Manards are clever exponents of small bore marksmanship.

North Shields.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Horace Lee.—The boards here this week are occupied by Mr. James Willard's company in A Woman's Pluck. Mr. Harry Emmerson scores heavily as Dick Darrell; Mr. Matthew Boult as Winstone Dale presents an admirable rendering; Mr. Arthur Temple as Sir Noel Fordyce does full justice to the part; Mr. Clive B. Rawlings is good as Matthew Pope; Mr. J. P. Dryden in the dual rôles of Mark Scanlon and Jim Daremont displays considerable ability; and Mr. Herbert Claremont has much to recommend him as Sir John Daredevil. As Grace Daremont Miss Marion Fawcett depicts the character in a clever manner; Miss Kitty Johnstone is smart as Bertie Daredevil; Miss Dolly Gilroy makes the most of Jessie Pope; Miss Nora Kingsley is pleasing as Lady Daredevil; and Mr. Dickey Bird as Roger Pippin and Miss Fanny James as Ophelia Pippin make quite a hit.

Central Palace.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Wm. Mould.—Messrs. Deranda and Green in their smart juggling act are meeting with great success here; Messrs. Juan and McQue, comedians and dancers, create much hearty laughter; Jean Seul, illusionist, performs some clever feats; Miss Grace Darling, with her illustrated songs, is received with much favour; Mr. Dan Noble, actor-vocalist, is popular; Mr. Tom E. Odlin, comedian, is funny; and the Bio-Photoscope concludes.

Northwich.—Central Theatre.—Proprietress, Mrs. S. Golden; Secretary, Miss E. Golden.—Theatre-goers here this week are given a treat by the visit of the Milton Rays in Don Quixote, in which, from first to last, merriment reigns supreme. Mr. Arthur Milton as Sancho Panza is the source of endless amusement; as Donna Betsiana Mr. Joe English is the possessor of a never-failing fund of dry humour; Messrs. Sandy and Carl are two marvellous dancers; Mr. Forshaw Kershaw, the well-known society entertainer, gives high-class entertainment, his musical monologues being very fine; and the entertainment concludes with a sketch entitled Rich and Poor.

Norwich.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Manager, Mr. Fred Morgan.—The Moody-Manners Opera company is delighting large audiences here this week. On Monday Faust was rendered in excellent style. Mr. Seth Hughes in the title-rôle sang admirably; Mr. William Anderson was an interesting Mephistopheles; Mr. Rosina Beynon a delightful Siebel; and Miss Una Bruckshaw a most pleasing Marguerita. Miss V. Barry as Martha and Mr. Mann as Wagner deserve mention. Lohengrin, Il Trovatore, The Lily of Killarney, Carmen, Tannhäuser, and The Bohemian Girl are also in the répertoire. Mr. Harrison Frewin is a most painstaking and efficient conductor.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. F. W. Fitt.—Belloni's Cockatoos are one of the principal attractions this week; their marvellous training and intelligent tricks are wonderful to see. Ethel Arden and Geo. Abel's (Ltd.) company gave a laughable turn, entitled Three of a Kind; the Four Emilions are skilful acrobats and hand balancers; Miss Lilian Travellic, ballad vocalist, and Miss Barbara Babington, vocalist and vaudeville artist, have good receptions; Munro's Black and White comedy team are very amusing; George Antill is successful as a comedian; and Sam Dalton scores in his turn.

Nottingham.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Howard Finney.—The visit of Mr. Lewis Waller, in the romance, Robin Hood, has caused a flutter of excitement. Here, in the heart of Sherwood Forest, the picturesque outlaw is again made to enact some of his doughty deeds, and a packed house on Monday gave ample token of their pleasure. Mr. Waller was repeatedly called before the curtain, and finally expressed his thanks in a few words. In depicting the chivalry and boldness of Robin Hood, Mr. Waller's easy syle made him an ideal hero, and he moved through the scenes with a breeziness that was truly delightful to watch. Miss Norah Lancaster, graceful in figure, and of winning mannerisms, made an alluring exponent of Lady Marion, and her artistic rendering of the part won all hearts; Mr. Shiel Barry essayed Prince John, his fine acting giving point to the scheming of that unsavoury character; Mr. J. H. Irvine played carefully as the merciless Longespee; and Mr. S. B. Brereton furnished a capable study of Fitz Aylwynne. Mr. Frank Woolfe realised the dignity of King Richard; and Mr. Herbert Vyvyan humorously portrayed the Abbot of Jourvaulx. Miss Dora Barton invested Adela with all necessary pertness and natural liveliness; and Miss Helen Layton aptly assumed the unscrupulous Eleanor of Acquitaine. Miss Eleanor May capitally represented the light-hearted and buxom Alison Much; Mr. Herbert Jarman made many friends as John Little; and the Friar Tuck of Mr. Charles Rock was an excellent embodiment of that bibulous old reprobate. Too much praise cannot be accorded Mr. Cecil Cameron for his singing of several songs.

Grand Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Harry Upton.—Woman and Wine had a hearty reception here on Monday last. Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds gave a forcible impersonation of the misguided and weak-minded Dick Seymour; while Mr. J. Milne Taylor did well as the blind father, Hugh Seymour. Mr. Fred W. Goddard vigorously enacted the rôle of the bully, Alphonse Beaudet; and Mr. Edwin Kisby played Caliban in a light and humorous vein. Miss Cissie St. Elmo thoroughly illustrated the heartlessness of Marcel Rigadout, putting plenty of dash and abandon into the part; Miss Violet Sims made a graceful and refined Mary Andrews; and in striking contrast was the La Colombe of Miss Joan Pereira. Mr. Wm. Manning offered a comical reading of the frivolous Professor Sauter, in which he was capitally aided by Mr. Harry Harrop as Charles Sauter. Miss Ethel Vinroy proved amusing as Janet Marlow; and Miss Madge Northcote sustained Mme. Perinet satisfactorily.

Empire Theatre of Varieties.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. H. Bowmaker.—'Midst gorgeous scenery and dazzling electrical effects, the Elliott-Savonas manipulate their various musical instruments with delightful results, and are accorded an enthusiastic reception. Belle Davis presents her two pick-chicks, whose nimbleness and dexterity in dancing evoke the heartiest applause; the Haytors compel laughter in a sketch, Cabby and His Fare; James Edie and Cissy Ramsden introduce a musical duo, in which the former includes some remarkable gymnastic feats; the Smythsons supply a humorous piece of work, entitled Love Germs; and interest is shown also in a sketch by L. A. Cooke and company, descriptive of Zululand. Walter Munro's Irish songs and patter find a willing response from his audience, and a smart little dancer is seen in Ina Lorimer. Jessie Mooney contributes her original song, "Silly Sally," and the American Bioscope shows interesting films of Casa Blanca.

Nuneaton.—Prince of Wales' Theatre and Entertainments Co., Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. A. F. Cross; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter J. R. Bryan.—Mr. J. Rice Cassidy's In Holy Russia company is here. Mr. Cassidy as Mikey Nolan is enthusiastically received, and the Renee Rubinoff of Mrs. Cassidy at once gains favour; Mr. Robert Cockroft as the Czar is effective; Mr. Henry Compton as Colonel Richard Forrest is deserving of praise; Miss Ada Roscoe cleverly portrays Catska Lavaski, and Mr. Austin Lauraine capably represents Michael Natolski; worthy of mention are Mr. J. Cuthbertson, Baron Von Pleve; and Mr. Rolf Leslie, Count Gregori Petrolski; the remaining characters are ably taken.

Oldham.—Empire Theatre.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hulme.—A welcome return visit is being paid by Mr. Wm. Maclaren and Miss Lily C. Bandmann in Claudian. Mr. Maclaren, in the title-rôle, delights the audience with his fine acting; and Miss Bandmann is no less successful in her portrayal of Almida. Miss Maud Garth is a capital Edessa; Mr. Chal T. Chaloner an amusing Belos; Miss Kitty Field a very good Clio (with solo); Miss Pamela Hodson a successful Galena; and Miss Nellie C. Bilbe an effective Hera. Miss Rosa Webster is very capable as Serena; and Little Geraldine Meredith makes an interesting Carenos. Mr. Weston Hubbard is a capital Alcares.

Colosseum Theatre.—Manager, Mr. W. Eastwood.—The Prodigal Parson is staged here by Messrs. Northway and Garrod's company. Mr. W. V. Garrod as the Rev. Tom Godley acts the part of the wrongly-accused man in a powerful manner; Miss Bertha Kingston as Fern is excellent; Mr. Fred Beckett is responsible for a good study of the hypocritical Enoch Jaggins; and Mr. Arthur Tomlin is a satisfactory Ben Jaggins. Miss Violet Jeffries as Myrtle acts cleverly; Miss M. Grayce as Gretchen is very bright; and Mr. Owen Remonde causes hearty laughter as Phil Drive.

Royal Theatre of Varieties.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Howgate.—Miss Amy Augarde heads the bill here in her vaudeville version of Carmen, singing delightfully. Good support is given by Mr. W. Howard (Don Jose), Mr. Cameron Carr (Lucas), and Messrs. Colman and Barton. The Great Carmos are a fine juggling and balancing duo; Miss Gertie Gitana, on her first visit here, has an enthusiastic reception for her singing; Kioto has also caught on in his balancing feats; Lieut. Travis is a capital ventriloquist; and James and Alexander are a good pair of entertainers. Tod Lowen, comedian, also appears with success.

Hippodrome.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Nuttall.—Miss Lillie Soutter is meeting with success with "Tumpti No. 1" Flo Hilton is a dashing male impersonator; Topsy and Usher are excellent in plantation songs and dances; Ormonde Penstone, assisted by Tsaou-Ngo, gives a capital sleight-of-hand show; Miss Marie Wall, comedienne, sings nicely; Fraser and French, with their dancing, are repeatedly recalled; Harry Zetter is very good in his eccentric dances; and the Dottoscope is showing a most amusing picture.

Oxford.—New Theatre.—Proprietors, Oxford Theatre Company, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. C. Dorrill.—Arthur Carlton's company, including the Stebbing Troupe of acrobats, is here this week in The Span of Life, which met with an uncommonly hearty reception from a good house on Monday. Mr. Arthur Chisholm as Richard Blunt is a manly and natural hero; Mr. Sanderson Moffat gives a most realistic performance of Dunstan Leech; Mr. Walter Dale causes many a hearty laugh by his droll acting as Nutty Brown; and Mr. Leon Ainscliffe gives a clever impersonation of the lighthouse keeper, Joshua Gurnet. Miss Phyllis Graham does well in the boys' parts of Cecil Jeff and Cecil Blunt; Miss Phyllis Hamilton is a satisfactory Mrs. Jelf; Miss Ella Wilmer an interesting Kate Heatchcott, and Miss Kitty Russell—excellent alike in song and dance—a vivacious and laughable Shrove Tuesday. The Stebbing Brothers contribute some very clever acrobatic business.

East Oxford Theatre.—Lessees, Miss Winifred Stuart and Mr. C. Watson Mill; Manager, Mr. Frank Stuart.—Mr. Wilson Benge's company is presenting here this week The Eve of Her Wedding. Mr. Wilson Benge gives a manly, simple, and unaffected portrayal of the hero, George Tremain; Mr. Henry Dawson works meritoriously as Dean Clifton; Mr. Gilbert Ainslie deserves well as Giovanni; and Mr. Charles Groves, jun., is successful in the dual rôle of Paul Cairshaw and Hiram P. Younger. Mr. Charles H. Gallier sustains Dick Leverton with ability, and Mr. Charles Digby shows he possesses humour as Rudolph Earle. Mr. Arthur E. Holland makes a natural and effective Jack Herne, while Mr. Arthur Keand makes the most of Squire Leverton. Miss Adeline Raby's acting as Renie de Telle deserves high encomium, her performance being clever and telling; Miss Violet Ingram does well as Gwendoline Younger (Kinkie); and Miss Sadie Smith appears to great advantage with her sympathetic and graceful interpretation of Mavis Leverton.

Paisley.—Paisley Theatre.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. H. Savile.—The engagement of Mr. Wentworth Croke's company in The Christian is resulting in satisfactory business. Mr. Frank Beresford endows the rôle of the Hon. John Storm with considerable dramatic intensity; and Miss Daisy Scudamore looks very handsome as Glory Quayle, and acts with distinction; Mr. Edwin Ling gives a very fine impersonation of Father Lamplugh; Mr. John J. Hooker as Archdeacon Wealthy is in every way excellent; Lord Robert Ure is most effectively portrayed by Mr. W. J. Butler; Mr. Wilfred Noy presents an admirable study of Horatio Drake; the rôle of the Faro King is well sustained by Mr. Bert Conway; Mr. Charles Hill is quite satisfactory as Parson Quayle; and Mr. P. Gedge Twyman makes a capital Brother Paul. Miss Dorothy Milne submits a capable and sympathetic rendering of Polly Love; Mrs. Callender has an excellent exponent in Miss Molly Hayden; and others in the cast include Misses May Dudley, Violet White, Nelly Hastings, Kate Lee, May Weir, Messrs. Arthur E. Maskell, and James Ryan.

Hippodrome.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Douglas F. Bostock.—Tom Hearn, in his novel and amusing eccentric comedy juggling act, tops the bill this week, and is well received; the Donatos, one-legged acrobats, are loudly applauded; and O'Malley and Brown, in an amusing comedy sketch; Selby and Myres, comedians and dancers; Stewart and Morgan, in a vocal speciality; the Elvio Trio, in an up-to-date absurdity; Julia Kent and Alex. Keith, comedy duologue artists; the Raymond Trio, in a musical and dancing act; and the Hippodrome Bioscope complete a very effective programme.

Peterborough.—Theatre Royal.—Manager, Mr. A. Darville Vernon.—Miss Ida Molesworth's and Mr. Mark Blow's company opened here on Monday night with Under Two Flags. Mr. Austen Milray gave an admirable impersonation of Bertie Cecil Royellieu; and Miss Amy Maitland gave a delightful portrayal of Cigarette. Excellent work was done by Mr. Dermot Fitz-Gibbon as Barklie Cecil Royellieu, Mr. Charles Brooke as Lord Royellieu, Mr. C. Faulkner as Lord Rockingham, Mr. Harry Benson as Rake, and Mr. Roy Jackson as Colonel Chanteroy. Miss Kitty Douglas was an excellent Lavina, and Miss Madge Stevens was successful as Lady Beatrice.

The Hippodrome.—This week we have the Tom Davies' Trio, who motor in mid air; Dan Filmer, comedian and dancer; Lozelle, gymnast; the Lynches; Spry and Monti, in The Guardsman; Joe Macklin, speciality artist; Gordon Walsh, comedian; and Austen Lenton and company, in The Bigamist.

Plymouth.—Theatre Royal.—Manager, Mr. J. Langdon Lee.—The Beauty of Bath is on her first local visit, and is drawing crowded houses every evening. To Miss Gladys Guy is entrusted the title-rôle, and this accomplished actress gives a finished rendering of a part requiring very careful treatment; Miss Jessie Lonnen is particularly smart as Truly St. Cyr, her dancing being an additional strong feature; Miss Gertrude Hope has an excellent voice, by which she does full justice to the songs allotted to her; Miss Ida Laurie gives a clever impersonation of Mrs. Goodge—a character of the Louie Freear creation; and Miss Edith Cruickshanks is dignified as the mother of Lieut. Allington. Mr. Andrew Higginson infuses plenty of "go" into a part for which he is admirably adapted, that of a naval lieutenant, his topical song, "Humpty-Dumpty," being rapturously redemanded; Mr. Jack Crichton as Sir Timothy Bun, the father of the Bath Buns, is excrutiatingly funny, his comedy work being excellent; Master Basil Clifford as Lemon Goodge, a love-smitten programme boy, should have a brilliant future as a comedian; and Mr. F. C. Leister is good as the aristocratic Lord Bellingham.

Palace of Varieties.—Manager, Mr. Jack Field.—The principal attraction is Mr. Arthur Roberts in his inimitable sketch, The Importance of Being Another Man's Wife. The well-known comedian has not been West for some years, and a large company assembled on Monday to greet him and enjoy his ever-original fun. Another first-class contribution was that of the Brothers Durant, who treated the audience to a marvellous exhibition of contortionist business; the Sisters Finney provide a turn of a distinctly novel nature, giving an attractive aquatic display; Talbot and Pearce are possessors of excellently-trained voices, and are heard to great advantage in a Japanese monologue; Harry Werburn has some taking songs; and Maxwell and Francis and Jack Rae conclude a very good bill.

Pontypridd. — Royal Clarence Theatre. — Owners and Proprietors, Mrs. Trenchard and Miss L. Jones; Manager, Mr. Charles Trenchard.—The attraction at the above theatre this week is furnished by Mr. E. H. Knight's company in The Grip of Iron. Mr. Fred Powell

PORTSMOUTH. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Bell.—The Dairymaids is being presented here this week by Mr. Robert Courtneidge's good all-round company. Mr. John Osborne as Joe Mivens keeps the house in great good humour by his eccentricities; Sam Brudenell is well taken by Mr. Clifford Seyler; Mr. Richard Adams is a very able Lieut. Brudenell, R.N.; Dr. O'Byrne is well sustained by Mr. H. Langdon Bruce; and Mr. Boris Bellew also does capable work as Lieut. Bereton, R.N. Miss Maud Denny is a delightful Eliza; Miss Mabel Younge a careful and dignified Lady Brudenell; and Miss Vera Vere a vivacious Peggy. Miss Dorothy Ward as Winifred does well; Miss Aimée Grey is all that could be desired as Helene; and Miss Madge Avery thoroughly realises the part of Miss Penelope and Pychase.

PRINCE'S THEATRE. — Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. E. Agate.—Mr. Tom H. Taylor's well-selected company is here this week in Walter Melville's successful drama, The Worst Woman in London. Miss Olga Andre gives a powerful and realistic rendering of Frances Vere; Miss B. Watkins as Ruth Milford acts with well-sustained force; Jack Felton is ably depicted by Mr. George Gaisford; Vincent Lyle, in the hands of Mr. Paul Barry Lewers, is well drawn; and Mr. Leonard Booker gives an impressive portrayal of Philip Armstrong. Mr. Vernon Travers does well as James Milford. The comedy is well looked after by Miss Polly Marsh as Matilda Parker, Mr. Will Corrie as Bob Goldfinch, and Mr. H. W. Monte as Hugh Drayton.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Captain Warren Wright; Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt.—John Lawson and company are here in a series of their capital productions. On Tuesday evening the powerful and exciting society episode, The King's Minister, was given, John Lawson playing the name-parts in most convincing style to a very large and appreciative audience; Little Don, rightly named "the quaint oddity," sings and patters amusingly; Estella, International dancer, is a clever terpsichorean artist; Challis's dogs, with capital tricks, please well; the Clarion Trio of comedians and dancers are encored; Nellie Chandos, soubrette and danseuse, is popular; Vere and Royal, in a speciality act, are warmly greeted; T. C. Callaghan, character comedian, sings most agreeably; Margaret Ismay and White Coons, in the Indian scena Kickaboo gain great approval; Effie Stuart, Scotch comedienne, is much liked for her admirable dancing; Baker and Balfe are excellent exponents of xylophone playing; and Payne's Bioscope, with some fine pictures, complete the programme.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—Mr. George Gray and company are engaged here for the second week, and are giving a new sketch, Parson Gray, V.C. The presentation is most realistic. The Katos, living marionettes, are most amusing; Blarney and Kennard are a smart pair of comedians and banjoists; the Picquays, equilibrists, are exceedingly graceful; Miss Nina St. Elmo is a pleasant comedienne and dancer; Miss Helen Charles, a versatile entertainer, gives a turn of great merit; the Jees, in The Village Smithy, create much merriment; and the Hippodrome's very interesting pictures complete a capital programme.

PRESTON. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Proprietors, Exors. of the late W. Johnson; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. Stephen Pritt.—A very welcome attraction here this week is the visit of Mr. William Mollison. A large audience on Monday fully appreciated the representation of Macbeth, in the title-rôle of which Mr. Mollison gave a finished and scholarly rendering, which made a deep impression. Miss Evelyn McNay as Lady Macbeth treated her hearers to a consummate piece of acting. Mr. W. A. Mackersey was an excellent Duncan; and Mr. William Calvert distinguished himself as Macduff. As Banquo, Mr. Henry Worrall gave an admirable portrayal of the part; those of Malcolm and Donalbain were sustained by Mr. Henry Deas and Miss Jeannie Fitzgerald; and Mr. Alec F. Thompson and Mr. Whitford Kane as the Porter and First Witch respectively did well. The remainder of the caste was in the able hands of Messrs. Leslie Lingham, Stuart Black, Murray Graham, Lee Antony, Harold Neville, Fred Ellis, William Hughes, Kendal Chalmers, Miss Hermina Black, Miss Josephine Woodward, Miss Alice O'Dea, and Miss Elsie Vron, each and all of whom gave a good account of themselves. During the week Hamlet, As You Like It, The Merchant of Venice, and The Bonnie Briar Bush were to be given.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Sawyer and Woodruff.—Miss Adria Hill and Robert Ayrton's company is presenting A Gambler's Daughter here this week. As Desmond O'Dare, Mr. Robert Ayrton appeals powerfully to the audience; Mr. Alfred Sanders as Solomon Solomons and Mr. A. G. Lytton as Stephen Brand present as good a pair of cold-blooded stage villains as one could desire. Miss Harriett Loydall as Auntie Zeb (a negress) adds considerably to the humour of the play. Mr. Richard Pitt as John Grant is effective; and the part of Jack (his son) is ably sustained by Mr. Bazil Mitchell; Mr. Harry Belford portrays the character of an American capitalist in quietly effective style; Mr. F. Croft as Captain Stanhope is much in evidence. Miss Adria Hill showed considerable versatility in the dual rôle of Miriam and Mildred Grant (mother and daughter); and Miss Lizzie Gordon is a spirited adventuress in the character of Carmen Sancho. The rest of the caste is in good hands. For Friday, East Lynne was billed.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. E. J. Lindsell.—An attractive bill is enthusiastically received by two huge audiences nightly. Miss Lydia Yeamans, supported by Mr. Fred J. Titus, tops the bill, and richly merits the generous applause she receives for her inimitable impersonations in the musical pot-pourri, The Wrong Organ. A turn that is always welcome here is that given by Barton and Franklin, a pair of refined versatile musical artists. Kirke and Saraski, billed as aquatic acrobats, perform a variety of evolutions while submerged in a tank of water; the Four Regals give a marvellous exhibition of strength; Bonetti and Corrie cause much laughter with their funny juggling act; Edith Sinclair is an acceptable comedienne; and Sam Shipley causes roars of laughter in his song and patter as the policeman. Lambeth and Robertson have a novel sketch, Scots Folk's Wooing, in which Miss Lambeth renders some of the old Scotch songs in a most captivating manner; the Sages (Will and Jenny) display a good deal of novelty and versatility in their song-scena, If You're Coming In, I'm Going Out; the Bros. Foy and company present an amusing pantomimic knockabout sketch, entitled Pat in China. Jessie Jukes also contributes an acceptable turn, and displays some good all-round dancing. The pictures depict the woes of an amateur athlete.

RADCLIFFE. — GRAND OPERA HOUSE. — Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. George T. Sante; Acting-Manager, Mr. James Boothman.—Mr. Charles Macdona's company is here with A Country Girl. The oddities and eccentricities of Mr. Arthur Staples as Barry receive constant applause; Mr. Bernard Vaughan as the Rajah and Mr. Martin D. Pitts as Geoffrey Chaloner are both in fine voice, while Mr. W. O. Billington does ample justice to the part of Sir Joseph Verity. Miss Gladys Christie is charming as Marjorie Joy; Miss Barwell does good work as Madame Sophie; and Miss Poppy Dale both sings and acts with much effect as Princess of Bhong. The vivacity and splendid singing of Miss Blanche Lynd makes the part of Nan a great treat. The choruses are full and well balanced, the entire musical production reflecting great credit upon Mr. Ernest Wolfe, the musical director.

RAMSGATE.—AMPHITHEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry Bowman.—At the Amphitheatre on each evening of the past week Mr. Charles Harrington's No. 1 company in Uncle Tom's Cabin has been giving excellent representations. Mr. Albert G. Wray makes an effective Mr. St. Clair; and Mr. Charles Vincent scores in the rôle of George Harris; Miss Hathway does excellently in the part of Eliza; as Phineas Fletcher Mr. Harrington is as good as ever; Mr. J. Carr portrays Uncle Tom with decided skill; Miss Hetty Johnson makes a capital Cassy; Mr. J. Henry Rogers is appropriately severe as Legree; Miss Sylvia Stella is a lively Topsy; and the remaining parts are capably handled. Incidental music and other variety turns are introduced, and considerable local colour is given to the performances by the participation in the play of a talented body of negroes and negresses. The plantation festival is extremely effective.

ROYAL VICTORIA THEATRE.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Jules Richeux.—Mr. Jules Richeux has established a reputation for good bookings at the Royal Victoria Theatre, Ramsgate, a reputation which is sustained by the production there this week of the pretty play The Youngest of Three, the old-world style of which is distinctly refreshing. Mr. H. F. Maltby achieves a notable success in the part of the father, whose alternate severity of demeanour and tenderness of affection give a fine opportunity to the capable actor, and Mr. Maltby is undoubtedly a capable actor. Another fine feature of the production is the character of the young lover as presented by Mr. Wyn Weaver; while the manner in which Miss Daisy England sustains the rôle of the charming heroine calls for nothing but eulogistic reference. As a comedian Mr. F. Stuart Wilson presents the dual part of Prynne and Paul in praiseworthy style; and the Philip Radford of Mr. W. Reginald Favell and the Somuel Johnson of Mr. William E. Passmore are interpretations thoroughly creditable to those to whom they are entrusted. The other parts are in good hands, the contributions of Miss Janet Hodgson and Miss F. Hunter-Watts adding to the general excellence of the production. On Thursday Sir George of Almack's filled the bill, being repeated on Friday, with The Youngest of Three for Saturday.

READING.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Milton Bode; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. M. Harcourte.—Mr. George Dance's principal company is appearing here in The Catch of the Season. Miss Moyra Mannering is a captivating Angela; Mr. Frank Lincoln sustains the part of the Duke of St. Jermyns very successfully; Master Peter Grata causes much amusement by his acting as the page boy; Mr. Franklin Miles gives a good sketch of Mr. Gibson; Mr. Tom Shelford is a humorous Lord Dundreary; Mr. John Wigley represents Sir John Crystal well; Miss Louise Bentley acts with dignity as the Duchess of St. Jermyns; Miss Ernestine Walter as Lady Crystal and the Misses Doris Greville and Muff Carew as the two step-daughters sustain their parts excellently; Miss Irene Averill is a graceful dancer; and Miss Emily Mellon plays the part of Lady Caterham, the modern Fairy Godmother, very effectively.

REDHILL.—MARKET HALL.—Proprietors, Market Hall Co.; Secretary, Mr. A. Simmons.—Miss Inez Howard's well-balanced company in The Girl who took the Wrong Turning is here, under the direction of Mr. Henry Chattell. Mr. Charles Leverton makes Bill Slater a character to be both pitied and admired; Mr. Ted D. Dennis makes a pleasing Jack Fenton, whilst the Johnny Walker of Mr. Will Glaze creates roars of laughter. Mr. Charles Coleman's portrayal of the villain James Harcourt leaves nothing to be desired; the Richard Fenton of Mr. Arthur Knight is strong. Miss Betty Seymour is a most amusing Poppy Slater, the cake-walk scene being particularly funny; Miss Nita Langford gives a splendid impersonation of the heartless courtesan as Vesta Le Clere; Miss Carrie Ellis as Lucy Coventry shows true sisterly devotion in her efforts to reclaim Sophie (Miss Edith Knight) who "took the wrong turning," in such a capable manner as to carry the interest of the audience throughout the performance; Willie Mason, a true-blue British tar, is admirably done by Mr. Leslie Beaufort.

RHYL.—QUEEN'S PALACE.—Manager, Mr. Fred Benton.—Joseph Poole's myriorama opened here on Monday; the pictures, with beautiful effects, were greatly appreciated. An excellent variety company includes De Marce's well-trained animals; the Four Rosaires, the Seddons, the Tissots, Johnny O'Rourke, Eileen Mayne, the Three Boleros; and a capital guide is found in Bert S. Berry.

PIER PAVILION.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Manager, Mr. J. Macdermott.—A great success, as usual, attended the visit of Messrs. Adeler and Sutton's "Gay River Party," who give their well-known entertainment to full houses. Frank Dunlop, Welsh comedian; Bert Byrne, comedian; D. Gibson, tenor; Mildred Bryan, soprano; Winifred Norman, comedienne; Eleanor Crawford, comedienne; and Casa Crawford, contralto, all contribute good turns. Jack Macdermott pleases everyone with his song, "On the isles of Anglesea" and several other items.

ROCHDALE.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing Director, Mr. W. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Hague.—The Prodigal Son appeared for the first time here on Monday evening, and was greeted by a full house. Mr. Albert Ward is an actor of high rank, and submitted a fine impersonation of Oscar Stephenson; Mr. Oswald Cray is no less an artist, portraying with realistic power the part of Magnus Stephenson; Mr. Lewis Sealy was admirable as Stephen Magnusson; Mr. James Skea acted to the life the part of Oscar Neilson; Doctor Olsen and the Pastor were cleverly represented by Mr. Robert Forsyth and Mr. H. H. Barrington. Miss Betty Castle enacted with skill the part of Helga Neilson; Miss Isabel Grey deserves every praise for her spirited portrayal of Anna Magnusson; Miss Mima Renouf acted with true motherly feeling as Margaret Neilson; and the talented Miss Lily Hall Caine showed true histrionic abilities in an impassioned embodiment of Thora and Elin.

CIRCUS AND HIPPODROME.—Lessees, Messrs. J. and J. Jackson and J. White; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Jackson, sen.—The Jackson Family, musicians, are paying a most welcome visit here after their tour round the world, their brilliant and cultured execution on various instruments fairly bringing down the house. Ed. E. Ford, Australian Sundowner, created roars of laughter with his burlesque entertainment; Miss Marie Weston, vocalist and dancer; Sisters Brand, comediennes; Bros. Brooks, in a comedy act; the Three Zaracs, comedy sketch artists; the Ladderites, and the Circus Biograph complete an unusually attractive bill.

EMPIRE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Thomas Hargreaves; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Hargreaves.—A capital programme is submitted to the patrons here this week. The Selbinis contribute an amazing performance on bicycles; Charles Chard is an amusing comedian and dancer; May Zant and her juveniles contribute songs and dances that win great favour; other artists appearing include Alpharado and August, the Continental barrel kings; Denby and Dent, comedy act; Maros, triple bar comedians; Annie Casey, comedienne; and the Empire Bioscope.

RYDE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Charles Constant.—The Parisian play, Nana, was presented here on Monday before an appreciative audience. Mr. F. Douglas Howard was an easy and admirable Phillipe Duval; Miss Rosie Neville played effectively in the part of Nana; Mr. Edward Neville sustained that of Hector with success; Mr. Edwin Ramsdale was a life-like M. Fontaine; and good impersonations were submitted by the Misses Loie Esmond and Ethel St. Baube. Mr. J. Le Fleming was an excellent George Hugon. A flying matinée was given on Tuesday by Miss Louie Freear and her company. Miss Freear made decided hits with her three songs, rendered in her own characteristic fashion, and she later appeared in the amusing farcical absurdity, Snooks, in which she impersonated Jemima, the slavey. Mr. Vivian Foster's clerical impersonations were funny, and Miss Belle Green proved herself a clever mimic. Mr. Edward Brightwell's pianoforte playing was highly appreciated.

PIER PAVILION.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Herbert Jay; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. L. Furst.—Good business is being done with William Seaton's animated pictures, with a varied and interesting programme.

SALFORD.—PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden.—The Seal of Silence, Mr. C. Watson Mill's play, appeared to give every satisfaction on Monday to the large audience. Jack Ellerslie is well played by Mr. E. G. Batley; and Miss Florrie Green is well placed as Victor. Miss Daisy Tueskie is charming as Lilian Desbrooke; Mr. H. Balesmere cleverly portrays the villain, Hedley Norman; Mr. Mark Draper makes an impressive Dr. Mark Renwood. Comedy is presented by Mr. Henry P. Kennedy as Bimbo Bouncer, Miss Nora Temple as Dora Jenkins, and Mr. Thompson Carruthers as Sharkey Shepps; and good character-studies are also provided by the various other members of the company.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wilberforce Turner; Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Secretary, Mr. J. C. Patterson.—Several old favourites are paying return visits this week, prominent among whom are Marie Santoi and the merry little Japs, in the vocal scena, A Japanese Tea-Garden; Grant and Grant, American octoroons, in A Georgia Flirtation, are also well received. The programme also includes Vera Mayne, vocal comedienne; Walton and Lester, comic jugglers; Annie Laurie, comedienne and dancer; Charles Ashdowne, eccentric comedian; Captain Devereux's performing dogs; Hans and Lux, patterers, &c.; and D'Arc's marionettes.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, W. H. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. Percy B. Broadhead; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. Wentworth.—Why Men Love Women is presented here twice nightly, and Miss Ellen Snow creates a good impression as Violet Livingstone. Mr. Hilliard Vox ably sustains the part of Gerald Fielding; Captain Staniloff is represented by Mr. Lionel Gadsden with ability; Mr. Harwood Roberts as Orlando, and Miss Nita Owen and Miss Freda Vaughan as Birdie and Baby, contribute to the laughable scenes.

STRETFORD PAVILION.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Sidney Weatherilt.—This week's programme includes Jack Dunn, quaint comedian; Nellie Brennan, with her illustrated songs; Little Dot Wren, coon singer and dancer; Amy Connolly, soprano; Sam Howell, versatile entertainer; the Brothers Redmond, comedy acrobats; Jack Webb, comedian and dancer; Len Rayton, clever ventriloquist; and Bainton Boscoe's living pictures. A complimentary benefit was given to Mr. Sidney Weatherilt, on which occasion a large number of artists gave their services.

SALISBURY. — COUNTY HALL. — Proprietor, Mr. Arthur Whitehead; Business-Manager, Mr. T. Brinsmead.—Mr. J. Bannister Howard's company, with The Earl and the Girl have played to crowded houses here this week. Mr. Bert Beswick as Jim Cheese kept the house in roars of laughter; as Dick Wargrave Mr. Cecil Lloyd, who has a fine voice, acted in manly fashion; Mr. Arthur Radcliffe as Crewe Boodle handled his part in faultless manner; Miss Dorothy Dempster, a capital Elphin Hay, sang daintily; Miss Ada Waugh made a diverting Liza, dancing skilfully; Miss Daisy Lake as Daisy Fallowfield made a great hit with Sammy; and as Mrs. Shimmering Black, Miss V. March was excellent. The remaining parts were all creditably played.

SCARBOROUGH.—LONDESBOROUGH THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Waddington and Son; Manager, Mr. J. T. Carpenter.—Raffles is here. Mr. Leonard Boyne as Raffles is admirably adapted for the part; Mr. E. W. Thomas as Curtis Bedford acts with realism; as Bunny, Mr. Lewis Edgard does exceedingly well; Mr. Dalziel Heron as Crawshay is most realistic; Miss Dorothy Plonden as Lady Ethel is praiseworthy; and as Mrs. Vidal, Miss Lilian Hallows is admirable.

PEOPLE'S PALACE.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. Walter Kitchingman.—The chief attractions here are the Gentrys, who are great favourites; Caselli, banjoist, is a master of his instrument; Mr. Hy. Liston and Miss Lumley are seen to advantage in Merry Moments; Vela is clever on the wire; Harry Bentley, comedian, causes amusement; Miss Editb Cummins has a well-trained voice; the Cedrics, speciality artists, receive warm recognition; Prof. Jennion's Electric Fantochies, are entertaining. The Bioscope is an important item in the programme.

SPA THEATRE.—Proprietors, Cliff Bridge Co.; Manager, Mr. Fras. Goodriche.—Mr. Walter Maxwell's company is here in The Lion and the Mouse. As John Rider Mr. Leslie Carter is in every respect adequate; Miss Florence Jackson as Shirley Rossmore shows real culture; Mr. Gordon McLeod as Jefferson Ryder is admirable; Mr. H. Montague Love as Alfred Stott is effective; and Mr. Herbert Chown as the Hon. Fitzroy Bagley is full of humour.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. Garside; Manager, Mr. F. P. Morgan.—Here this week is Dare-Devil Dorothy. Mr. Walter Ashley plays Capt. Geo. Fielding with telling effect; Miss Dorothy Desmond in the title-rôle may be highly complimented; Mr. Henry Ward, as the villain, deserves cordial recognition; Mr. Harry Ugar as Silas Crump shows ability; Miss Nellie Harcourt as Judith is lively and vivacious; the Misses Blake do some original dances; and Mr. Louis Batten as the Parson assists materially in the success of the evening.

SEACOMBE.—IRVING THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. James Kiernan.—Mr. Allan Wilkie and his repertoire company are here this week with Hamlet, The Merchant of Venice, Romeo and Juliet, Othello, Bamboozling, The Sleigh Bells, and Richard III.; in the first named Mr. Allan Wilkie played the title-rôle with ability, and Mr. Alexander Marsh declaimed excellently as the Ghost; Mr. Paul Lovett (Laertes), Mr. John Paley (Claudius), Mr. George Munro (Polonius), and Mr. Ernest Diggs (Horatio), all gave adequate impersonations; the first and second grave diggers were invested with humour by Mr. George Munro and Mr. Edward Beverley respectively, and the players were skilfully presented by Mr. Charles Kingsley, Mr. T. Willoughby and Miss Mildred Surrey; Messrs. Gordon Ash, G. Lampton and Gordon Philpott did well as Rosencrantz, Guildenstern and Osric respectively; Miss Carrie Bailey gained golden opinions for her artistic rendering of Ophelia, and Miss Mary Lovett played cleverly as Gertrude.

SEAHAM HARBOUR.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. A. C. Harrison.—Messrs. Fred Acton and C. H. Nash's company is here with Between the Lights. Capt. Robert Hinton finds a skilful representative in Mr. Edward Stream; Mr. Frederick Garrett is a capable Gerald Warren; the villainy of Stanley Crofton is ably shown by Mr. Wm. R. Winning; Mr. Frank Orchard presents the rôles of Oswald Warren and Ben Armley with much skill; as Charles Stott Mr. Frank Daleno is very amusing; Mr. Fred Acton supplies a highly amusing study of the part of Jimmy Tickle; Violet Warren finds a charming exponent in Miss Phyllis Elton; Miss Fannie Williams is a capable Madge Armley; and as Kittie Miss Millie Doris is very popular.

SHEFFIELD. — LYCEUM THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont.—Mr. Bannister Howard's company opened to a large and evidently delighted audience on Monday in the popular musical play Florodora. Mr. Fred Eastman kept the house in roars as Tweedlepunch; Mr. J. B. Fox sang his tuneful numbers with sympathetic expression; Miss Edith Housley made a pretty and vivacious Lady Holyrood; and other characters were cleverly played by Mr. Edmond Russell, Mr. Harold Perry (a dashing Captain Donegal), Mr. C. Roadnight, Miss Marion Armytage (a charming Angela Gilfain), and Miss Maisie Ellenger (a graceful and accomplished representative of Dolores). The well-known songs were encored, and the chorus, dresses, and scenery were admirable. Mr. Hubert S. Brook conducted.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont.—Mr. Walter Howard's interesting drama Second to None was performed to a good house on Monday by Mr. T. E. Ward's company. That excellent dramatic artist Mr. Jerold Heather did sound and conscientious work as the manly hero; and Miss Ward won the sympathy of the audience by her womanly and charming acting. All the characters were effectively played, and the artistic scenery was much admired.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. W. D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Ramsay.—Messrs. Dottridge and Longden's company, including Mr. Sam Livesey, are again acting the stirring drama The Village Blacksmith to crowded and enthusiastic audiences.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Proprietors, The Moss Empires Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar.—The pièce de résistance this week is a lively musical farce, in three scenes, entitled The Prince of Monte Carlo, which is played with exhilarating "go" and vivacity by Mr. Harry Roxbury and a first-rate company. The Craggs are loudly applauded in the acrobatic sketch The New Steward, and others scheduled are Mr. W. Poluski, jun., eccentric dancer; Mr. Walter Curtis, humorist; the Carina Sisters, two elegant and clever musicians; Mr. Frank Sylvo, comedy juggler; Mr. Barrieton, vocalist; Lady Mansell's talented juvenile troupe; the Bioscope; and Miss Lily Burnand, the handsome and dashing comedienne.

GRAND HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, the Vaudeville Syndicate; Manager, Mr. A. W. Turpin.—Mlle. De Roze, vocalist; Mr. Percy Currie, eccentric comedian; Mr. J. H. Hawtrey, comedian; the Custances, novelty entertainers; the Sisters Ford, duettists; and the Four Hernes, in a smart comedy act, are doing good business at this popular resort.

ALBERT HALL.—Mr. Sydney Carter's artistic animated pictures entertainment, with all the latest films, is affording pleasure and instruction to large and appreciative audiences.

CENTRAL HALL.—Mr. Mark Melton, the Sisters Selwyn, the Lancashire Harmony Boys, Little Bobbie, and the Bioscope constitute the programme this week.

SHREWSBURY.—THEATRE ROYAL. — Licensee and Business-Manager, Mr. W. C. Dornton.—Mr. J. Maundy-Gregory's talented company was here on the first three nights of this week, with Lights Out. Mr. Arthur Stone made a fine Capt. Von B. Bannewitz; Mr. Herbert Lugg acted splendidly as Lieut. Von Howen; Mr. Wernham S. Royott, in the trying rôle of Lieut. Von Lauffen acquitted himself with distinction; Mr. Frank Powell acted with power and considerable ability as Sergeant Volkhardt; Mr. Thos. Heath made a smart and capable Corporal Queiss; Mr. Alexander Munro was a soldierly and dignified Major Pascke; Mr. Lambert Plimmer acted creditably as Capt. Lebdenburg; Mr. W. Victor merited praise as Lieut. Hagemeister; Mr. Francis J. Bithell as Corporal Helbig was worthy of high commendation; Mr. Geo. W. Barnes made a capital Private Michael; Mr. Willie H. Smith was a satisfactory Private Speiss; Mr. J. Lister was bright and amusing as an Orderly; and Miss Dorothea Desmond, the only lady in the play, was graceful and accomplished in the exacting rôle of Klara Volkhardt, which she played splendidly.

SMETHWICK.—ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. C. Barnard, Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson.—The Power of the Cross is represented here by Mr. Lingford Carson's company. The chief character is ably portrayed by the author of the piece, Mr. George A. de Gray; Miss Marie Menzies plays the rôle of Margaret Seaton with commendable skill; Miss Lily Roselle displays more than ordinary skill as Rita Lascelles; and Mr. Alexander J. Haviland as Dr. Leslie Fairfax and Mr. Frank Brunell as Gerald Fairfax are both capable in their respective rôles; Miss Phyliss Vaughan as Blanche Kingsley and Miss Etta Turner as Dolly Gray act successfully; Mr. A. Hall Menzies is well placed as Benjamin Hawkes; and Mr. John S. Chamberlain as Timothy O. Dowd creates much merriment.

SOUTHAMPTON.—GRAND THEATRE. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Fredk. Monillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Weston.—The first visit of When Knights Were Bold has been an empahtic success; in the leading part, that of Sir Guy, Mr. Vincent Erne scores all along the line and is the life and soul of the play; Miss Ernita Lascelles as Lady Rowena is excellent; Mr. Cory Thomas as Sir Brian is particularly good, and the other members of the lengthly cast are all good in their respective rôles.

PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. William Trussell.—Paul Kauvar is admirably presented by Mr. Arnold Bell's company; Mr. Bell himself plays the title-rôle in admirable style, and he is well supported; Mr. Marshall Moore appearing successfully as the Duc de Beaumont; Mr. Leslie Bell and company are responsible for a sketch on the Thaw case entitled, The Red Letter, which is magnificently played and staged; Zarmo, the mad juggler; Will Driscoll, comedian; the Delomes, expert dancers; Leoni Dixon, clog dancer, and Nellie Farrell, comedienne, complete a capital programme.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. F. Mouillot and W. de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. P. Howell.—Chung Ling Soo mystifies every one with his wonderful tricks, and his performance evoke thunders of applause; Fred. Carey is a smart comedian and a sort of Robey and Dunville rolled into one; the Twin Brothers Dean dance beautifully together; the Elgars, vocalists; Bob Hamilton, Scotch comedian; Frank Keegan and Co. excel as cyclists; Martine and Son, pictorial songsters; and Henderson, blind musician, complete an excellent programme.

PIER PAVILION.—Acting Manager, Mr. H. C. Sait.—The Creoles are giving the concluding performances of the season at this favourite resort; the artists include Miss Hilda Vining, Miss Mabel Dent, Miss Marna Chalcraft, Mr. Alec Clunes, Mr. Hal Gaze, and Mr. Harry Buss, comedian, and they gain unstinted applause for their original entertainment.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA.—EMPIRE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing Director, Mr. George Conquest; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. Lingham Power.—The ever-popular Chinese Honeymoon was presented for the first three nights of this week, Mr. Milton Bode's company providing merriment of the highest order by a bright and enjoyable portrayal. Mr. Edward H. Whitehall gave entire satisfaction as musical director. The dresses were of a pleasing and costly nature. Chief honours fell to Mr. Rudolf Kioss as Hang Chow, Emperor of Ylang-Ylang; Mr. Harry Jennings as Tom Hatherton; Mr. George Rydon, a most popular Mr. Pineapple; Miss Rosie Begarnie, who as Mrs. Pineapple, sang and danced admirably; Miss Maud Adams, who gave a commanding interpretation of Mrs. Brown; Miss Gwennie Harcourt, who as Fi-Fi, acts with humour; and Miss Elsie Skillings, who sang and acted with distinction as Soo-Soo. The other attraction commenced on Thursday in My Wife.

PIER PAVILION.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. E. Angless; Acting-Manager, Mr. Stanley E. Angless.—The return visit of Mr. Norman V. Norman is heartily welcomed. On Monday and Tuesday first-class presentations of The Adventure of Lady Ursula gave real enjoyment to thoroughly appreciative audiences, who accorded repeated recognition of good work at the end of each of the four acts. Mr. Norman as Sir George Sylvester and Miss Wilson in the title-rôle gave masterly impersonations; while other notable exponents were Messrs. Alfred Gray, Francis Hope, G. T. Norman-Burt, Norman Leslie, Chas. Casson Freer, Thomas Peter, and Fredk. Lock, and the Misses Hilda Gregory and Sybil Ruskin. By special request, Mr. Sheridan was produced on Wednesday and Friday, while David Garrick proved a pleasing attraction on Thursday, and will be repeated this (Saturday) evening.

SOUTHPORT.—OPERA HOUSE, WINTER GARDENS.—Proprietors, The Southport Opera House and Winter Gardens Co., Ltd.; Secretary, Mr. R. Singleton.—An attractive entertainment is furnished here this week by Mr. Milton Bode's principal company, with The Belle of Mayfair. Mr. Harry Parker plays Sir John Chaldicott in highly-diverting style; Miss Queenie Finnis depicts the title-rôle with charming vivacity and effect; Miss Nellie Cozens is an admirable exponent of Lady Chaldicott; Miss Veronica Brady is smart and attractive as Pincott; Princess Carl has a chic representative in Miss Agnes Tandy; Mr. Fern Pounds submits a praiseworthy portraiture of the Hon. Raymond Finchley; and Miss Aurelie de Loriere figures prominently as the "Gibson" Girl.

SOUTH SHIELDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. John and Fred Coulson.—Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Levy and J. E. Cardwell's Juvenile Pantomime Company appear in The Sleeping Beauty to good houses. Miss Dolly Dodds makes a charming Beauty and renders her vocal numbers in excellent style. Her duet with Miss Kittie Trewhitt as Prince Florizel stands out. Another good vocalist is Miss May Gibson, who enacts the Fairy Queen; King Fearnought is smartly interpreted by Master Jack Harrison; Wee George Wood is a wonderful child performer, giving good recitations and impersonations of various artists; plenty of fun is contributed by the Brothers Armstrong, Messrs. Doyle and Gibson, and Pat Sloan and S. Jefferson; the piece is bright and entertaining, the ballets smartly arranged, the well-balanced chorus and efficient orchestra being under the baton of Mr. W. B. Levy.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietors, the South Shields Empire Palace, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Resident-Manager, Mr. George F. Thompson.—Crowded houses welcome the return visit of Vesta Tilley, who sings her latest songs, "When the Right Girl Comes Along" and "The Seaside Smile," with all her old charm and vivacity, and an old favourite, "Following in Father's Footsteps"; Mark Adams goes well in a musical episode "The Wanderer"; St. Clair Bros., trick cyclists, cause a good deal of fun; Cull-pit contributes some smart patter and conjuring; D. W. Watson is an expert on the cornet and coach horn; the remaining enjoyable items are Sisters Morgan, duettists and dancers; Millie Denham, comedienne; Edgar Budden, speciality dancer, and the bioscope.

SPENNYMOOR.—CAMBRIDGE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. Hugh Robertson; General-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Clarance; Resident-Manager, Mr. David Collins.—On Monday night a crowded audience assembled to witness the first performance locally of The Master Criminal, as presented by Miss Winifred Chalmers' company. Miss Chalmers appears as Cecile, and her fine stage presence enables her to fill the part with success. Mr. Henry L. Osmond's interpretation of the name-part does that artist infinite credit; Mr. Edward Avinal submits a good all-round portrayal of Philip Manners; and as Mabel Manners Miss Kate Somerville submits a charming delineation of that heroine. Mr. John C. Carlyle appears to great advantage as the detective, Ben Beaudy; as Gentleman Jim Mr. Victor Vernon is at times very droll, and Mr. Walter Rousby as the irrepressible Tommy Dale is always mirth-provoking. Miss Nellie May submits a smart impersonation of Peggy Perks, and little Nellie Stephens is very pleasing as Winnie. Last (Friday) night the company presented Oliver Twist.

ST. HELENS.—THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. McLeod Loader.—A fine performance of Her Forbidden Marriage by Frederick Melville's Company under the management of Mr. Roland Yorke commands excellent business; Mr. Henry Lonsdale earns considerable popularity by a vigorous and incisive performance of George Maddison; Mr. Louis Hector gives a telling rendering of Charles Devereux; Geoffrey Broughton is admirably impersonated by Mr. Leonard Maxwell, and Mr. E. Campbell is an excellent Sir George Lancaster; Miss Gertrude Bonser is a charming representative of Lucy; and Miss Gertrude Hunt as Lady Lancaster, and Miss Imlay as the Mother Superior are irreproachable; the comedy element is brought well to the front by Mr. Fred de Vere, who as Timothy Tuttutt is very funny, and he is ably supported by Miss Sybil Hare as Patty Lovejoy.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford, Sley, and Willmot; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. Vic Carrell.—Kelly, Gillete, and Bart, "The Bounding Billiardists," head the bill this week, and are heartily applauded for their smart performance; Miss Carlotta Levey scores a success with her songs; other capital turns include Rappo and Ella, gymnasts; Mr. H. O. Wills, comedian; Miss Patty Yole, comedienne; Mr. Arthur Woodville, swell comedian; the Riberoes, musicians; and Regan and Ryan, comedians.

STOCKPORT. — TH

LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

KING'S, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, Sept. 23, the Musical Comedy, by Seymour Hicks and Ivan Caryll, entitled
"THE EARL AND THE GIRL."

The present visit of this lively musical comedy is announced as its farewell. Regret will be expressed at the departure, as in its time it has served to create many a hearty laugh. The Earl and the Girl has had a fair innings. Written by Mr. Seymour Hicks, it necessarily possesses all the mannerisms peculiar to that mercurial comedian's humour, while Mr. Ivan Caryll's music is always graceful and melodious. The audiences at the King's this week have been very appreciative of the piece, and the efforts of the artists have met with due reward. A most humorous characterisation is that of Jim Cheese, the dog trainer, in which Mr. William Stephens is screamingly funny, and proves himself a comedian of infinite resource. Mr. Thomas Kinnard as Dick Wargrave plays exceedingly well, and is approved. The Hon. Crewe Boodle has a spirited representative in Mr. Percy E. Wright, and Mr. H. Courtin portrays the heavy uncle, A. Bunker Bliss, with truly American emphasis. Mr. W. Norman is a sprightly and energetic Downham, and Mr. George Ruff's Mr. Talk is of the usual stage type of solicitor. Mr. R. Mansell Fane is admirable as Mr. Hazell, host of the Fallowfield Arms. Miss Chrissie Ralland as Elphin Haye charms everyone by her dainty rendering of the American heiress. As Liza Shoddam Miss Jennie Richards gives a very correct picture of Jim Cheese's Cockney sweetheart. Miss Kathleen Gerard is an imposing Mrs. Shimmering Black, and Miss Virginia Bliss is neatly undertaken by Miss Frances James. Miss Ethel Erskine acts pleasingly and sings artistically as Daisy Fallowfield. The chorus is an excellent one, and the costumes and scenery are in the best taste.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

Holloway is again favoured by a visit from Mr. and Mrs. Kendal, who with their company are this week appearing in a number of well-known plays with which they have been associated for so long. The répertoire includes Still Water Run Deep, The Housekeeper, A Tight Corner, The Elder Miss Blossom, and The Ironmaster. An overflowing audience assembled on Monday to greet them in Still Waters Run Deep. Mr. Kendal as John Mildmay and Mrs. Kendal as Mrs. Sternhold have parts eminently suited to them, and they are very ably supported by Miss Jessica Thorne, who as Mrs. Mildmay acts throughout with praiseworthy earnestness and sincerity; by Mr. Bassett Roe, who treats the part of Captain Hawkesley with much skill; and by Mr. Ernest Hendrie, who plays throughout most naturally and interestingly as Mr. Potter. The remaining characters—Dunbilk, Langford, Markham, Gimlet, and Jessop—are capably handled by Messrs. Metcalfe Wood, R. Burnett, C. W. Standing, F. Chas. Pool, and Mr. W. M. Rutherford, and the mounting of the play is also worthy of favourable mention.

That The Housekeeper is a highly-popular play as presented by Mr. and Mrs. Kendal and a well-appreciated one was well shown on Tuesday evening by the state of the house, which was well filled throughout. The interest naturally centred in the impersonations of Colonel Lionel Trent by Mr. Kendal and Lady Audrey Whitby by Mrs. Kendal, and both scored distinct triumphs. The delightful ease and force of their readings kept the entire house in rapt attention throughout. Mr. Bassett Roe scored well in the part of Lord Runswick, and Mr. C. W. Standing distinguished himself as Robert C. Sledmere. We have nothing but praise for Mr. Ernest Hendrie's portrayal of William Hickson; and Mr. F. Chas. Pool was well placed as Pennington Greene. Mr. Metcalfe Wood took full advantage of his few opportunities as Crane, the butler; Mr. W. M. Rutherford's finished playing was of valuable assistance to the general scheme, and his Chippenham Berkeley must be recorded as a notable success; Mrs. A. B. Tapping was happily cast as Lady Robertson; and a delightful portrayal of Mrs. Rellington was given by Miss Dora Fellowes. We have seen Miss Marie Löhr in parts far more worthy of her ability than Cicely Blake, but she made the most of the rôle. Miss Jessica Thorne completed the cast as Mrs. Pennington Greene. The scenery was pretty and appropriate.

THE CAMDEN.

On Monday, Sept. 23, the Play, entitled
"THE STRONGER SEX."

Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's principal company are proving an attraction here this week, where they are appearing in that interesting play by John Valentine, The Stronger Sex, which is being played by arrangement with Mr. Otho Stuart, and all the original scenery and dresses are being used, so the production is on the most complete scale, which alone should secure success. Miss May Blaney undertakes the character of Mary, the American wife, who proves herself to be such a strong character, and no better choice could have been made, for Miss Blaney acts the part in a most perfect and finished manner, and charms everyone by her winning personality. The Hon. Warren Barrington is depicted with much skill by Mr. D. Lewin Mannering, who plays in an easy style, making a great success for himself; Mrs. Van Garkerken, the good-natured but outspoken widow, is depicted in the most effective way by Miss Gladys Ffolliott, who causes many rounds of laughter by her wittily-spoken lines; Mr. Stanley Harrison is decidedly good as Oliver Thorpe, the man from Texas who has such a droll way with him, and never wastes his words; Miss Nancy Beresford is very entertaining as Joan Forsythe, a rôle which she plays in a delightful and most natural fashion; Miss Ida Richardson is good as Mrs. Davenporte; and Miss Eva Stuart does well as Mrs. Prescott-Lane. The two money-lenders find a couple of clever representatives in Messrs. R. Van Ranney and G. H. Kersley, who make the most of the one short scene in which they appear. There are many other smaller parts, which are all carefully played. The play is preceded by that clever little piece, The Peacemaker, by E. M. Bryant, in which Mr. R. Van Ranney and Miss Eva Stuart are most successful. The mounting of the play is very pretty, and the dresses must have been of interest to the fairer members of the audience. Mr. R. F. Symons is the manager for the company. Mr. George F. Ford's orchestra also contribute greatly to the evening's pleasure by their melodious selections.

THE DALSTON.

On Monday, Sept. 23, the American Play,
"THE FATAL WEDDING."

Plenty of excitement is being provided for patrons of the Dalston Theatre this week by the performances at that popular house of the American play, entitled The Fatal Wedding. The piece is presented by members of Mr. Bert Coote's company, and the choruses rendered by a number of well-trained children, together with some specialities by artists, prove as attractive as ever. Mr. Cecil A. Melton as Howard Wilson (a wealthy clubman) submits an interesting impersonation, and Miss Ethel Kay as Wilson's wife assists materially in sustaining the dramatic power of the story. Miss Gertrude Harrison gives a clever portrayal of Cora Williams, an adventuress, and the audience appears to be quite gratified when she meets with her deserts. Robert Curtis, a man about town, finds a telling representative in Mr. Henry W. Hatchman; Mr. Charles Locke as Toto, a French butler; Mr. Cyril Melton as Peter Schwartz; Mr. Frank Ashley as O'Reilly, a policeman of the right sort; and Mr. J. Newton as the Rev. Dr. Lanceford, are each indispensable in their way. Miss Ethel Sarjient causes amusement as Bridget, a lady cook; while Miss Marie Wilson as Jessie, the "little mother," and Miss Hilda Mahlert as Frank, Jessie's little brother, elicit a good deal of applause.

THE CORONET.

On Monday, Sept. 23, the Comedy, in Four Acts, by Madeleine Lucette Ryley, entitled "MICE AND MEN."

Mr. and Mrs. Forbes Robertson form an artistic alliance that has very deservedly won the heartiest recognition of English-speaking playgoers in the two hemispheres, chiefly because they uphold the best traditions of the British stage by their great gifts and their high ideals. The reappearance, therefore, in the London district of the happily-associated pair has received an enthusiastic welcome this week at the Coronet, where packed houses have enjoyed their most interesting repertory, which includes Mice and Men, The Light that Failed, and Hamlet. Madeleine Lucette Ryley's clever comedy was given on the opening night. Mr. Forbes Robertson, in his original part of Mark Embury, who finds that the wayward heart of woman can never be ruled by gratitude when Cupid lays siege to it, once again delighted us by his polished humour, and the little touches of pathos that distinguish his rendering of a favourite part. Both the gaucherie of the waif and the tenderness and devotion of the carefully-nurtured ward of the philosopher are conspicuous in Miss Gertrude Elliott's rendering of Peggy. There was good support forthcoming, too, in Mr. Charles Langley's Roger Goodlake, a ripe impersonation; in Mr. A. Wheatman's Kit Barniger, and in Miss Elizabeth Watson's housekeeper. Mr. S. A. Cookson made a dashing and loverlike Captain George Lovell; Miss A. Gordon Skinner was responsible for a capital study of the frivolity of a would-be woman of fashion as Joanna; and other parts were adequately filled by Miss Dorothy Paget, Miss Lily Price as the matron, Mr. Frank Ridley, Mr. Sam T. Pearce, and Mr. W. Pilling. Mr. Ian Robertson stage managed.

On Wednesday was revived The Light that Failed, adapted from Rudyard Kipling's novel by George Fleming (Constance Fletcher), and originally produced at the Lyric Theatre. The infinitely touching portraiture of Dick Heldar by Mr. Forbes Robertson again held the house in thrall; and Miss Gertrude Elliott's Maisie has gained in sureness of touch and depth of sympathy. Miss A. Gordon Skinner as the Red-Haired Girl has the tragic intensity demanded; Miss Dorothy Paget is characteristic as Bessie Broke; and Miss Elizabeth Watson as Mrs. Haynes is cockney to the finger-tips. Mr. Ian Maclaren as Torpenhaw, Mr. Percy Rhodes as "The Nilghai," Mr. S. A. Cookson as James Vickery, Mr. Walter Ringham as Cecil Vincent, Mr. A. Wheatman as Beeton are responsible for excellent work in their respective parts, and Messrs. Frank Bickley, J. Troughton, C. B. Vaughan, Frank Ridley, and Lewis Willoughby add to the effectiveness of the representation.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Sept. 23,
the Comedy, by Bernard Shaw, entitled
"CAPTAIN BRASSBOUND'S CONVERSION."

Miss Ellen Terry's suburban tour brings her this week to Mr. Robert Arthur's Kennington Theatre, where nightly a large and enthusiastic audience eagerly awaits the rise of the curtain in order to give this famous actress, so dear to the hearts of all theatre-goers, a hearty welcome to South London. Miss Terry selected Mr. Bernard Shaw's comedy, Captain Brassbound's Conversion, for her visit to this theatre, in which she appears as the light-hearted, unsuspecting Lady Cecily Waynflete. Admirably suited to her part, "the Lady of the Lyceum" displayed even more than usual those charms of manner, gesture, and grace with which she and the part have become identified. At the conclusion of each act Miss Terry was the recipient of a magnificent ovation, and at the conclusion of the performance was several times recalled. Mr. James Carew as Captain Brassbound easily established himself a favourite, and may expect a welcome greeting on his next appearance at this theatre. Of the other parts, it is almost needless to say that Mr. Rudge Harding as Sir Howard Hallam made a decided impression by the forcefulness of his acting; and the "true inwardness" of the problem was most adequately interpreted by, amongst others of a very excellent company, Mr. Story-Gofton as the Rev. Leslie Rankin, Mr. George Elton as Felix Drinkwater, Mr. Dare Austin as Redbrook, Mr. William Walshe as Johnson, Mr. David Hallam as Marzo, Mr. David Powell as Sidi el Asif, Mr. Frank Powell as the Cadi of Kintofi, Mr. John Hood as Osman, Mr. Gerald Hoffman as Hassan, Master Roberts as Muley, Mr. W. T. Lovell as Captain Hamlin Kearney, U.S.N., and Mr. James Fergusson as an American bluejacket. The mounting and stage arrangements, under the direction of Mr. Frank Powell, were fully up to Mr. Robert Arthur's usual standard of excellence. Now that the autumn season has set in, it may be expected that with the promising programme that has been provided, the Kennington Theatre will be a constant centre of popular attraction.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, Sept. 23, the Light Opera,
"THE LITTLE MICHUS."

The clever, tuneful, and amusing production above-named is delighting numerous audiences at the Royal County Theatre at Kingston this week, a capable company, under the direction of Mr. George Dance, giving a creditable representation of the play. Miss Alice Coverick and Miss Gracie Sinclair appear as the Little Michus, and make a most favourable impression, their singing being especially well received. Mr. Foster Courtenay as General des Ifs makes a great hit, his whimsicalities keeping the house in constant good humour. He is ably assisted in this respect by Mr. Gilbert Childs, who makes an amusing Sergeant Bagnolet. Others in the company who deserve special mention are Mr. Edward Wynn as Captain Gaston Rigaud, Mr. Wm. Benson as Pierre Michu, Miss Mary Young as Mme. Michu, and Mlle. Marjorie, whose clever dancing is one of the features of the performance. It is needless to add that the opera is admirably mounted.

THE STANDARD.

On Monday, Sept. 23,
the Play, in Four Acts, by Walter Howard, entitled
"HER LOVE AGAINST THE WORLD."

The very successful play, Her Love Against the World, is paying a return visit to the Standard this week, and this, coupled with the fact that the interval between the two visits has been but a few months, is sure testimony that the play is an attraction of an unquestionable nature. On Monday an enthusiastic reception was accorded to the excellent interpretation supplied, and the performance all through was a conspicuous success. Much praise is due to Mr. Walter Howard for his conscientious impersonation of Eric, Earl of Strathmere; his embodiment was stamped with genuine manliness and ability, and created a profound impression. Miss Ivy Millais scored exceedingly well as Nello; her reading of the rôle was the essence of pathos and feeling, and her efforts in declamatory elocution were delivered with pleasing effect. As Ulric, Prince of Ravensburg, Mr. Lewis Gilbert played with all the necessary vindictiveness, and discharged his duties of a callous nature in a manner worthy of special commendation. Mr. Ronald Bayne made an excellent Prince Othmar; whilst Mr. Douglas Vigors admirably portrayed Prince Maurice of Saxonia. Mr. T. W. Henson was a satisfactory Kasper; and Mr. A. H. Hallett gave an excellent character-study of the good-natured surgeon, Captain Helgar. The parts of Hendrick and Fritz Pimpernickle were played with irresistible drollery by Mr. Percy Compton and Mr. E. H. Dobell respectively; and the Katinka and Gretchen of Miss Maisie Ash and Miss Kathie Lennon were amusing to the extreme. Miss Annie Pearson did all that was possible as Corona; and Miss Evelyn Hope made a decided success of the part of Shulah, Countess of Rassellyn. Miss Ethel Warwick successfully encountered and overcame the many difficulties offered in the rôle of Iris, Princess of Idalia. She played with telling effect throughout, and thoroughly deserved the applause which, from time to time, rewarded her efforts. The play was admirably staged and mounted.

CRYSTAL PALACE THEATRE.

On Monday, Sept. 23, the Play, entitled
"SHERLOCK HOLMES."

From the opening scene until the curtain fell on the happy conclusion of the last act on Monday, the audience was closely held and thrilled by the many strong situations and dramatic surprises in this clever play, and its success was in no small measure due to the realistic and convincing representation given to it by each and all concerned. The personality of Mr. H. Hamilton Stewart was most telling in the title-rôle, as he possesses in an eminent degree that quiet force so necessary to this part. The somewhat unsophisticated Dr. Watson was intelligently acted by Mr. Douglas G. Murray; Mr. Norman B. Cannon infused much meaning into the part of John Forman, Holmes' helper and spy; and Miss Beatrice Egerton as Therése, the French maid of the Larrabee's, had a similar task, well performed. Professor Moriarty was a grim study in the hands of Mr. H. Ryeland Leigh; his assistant, Alfred Bassick, and his creatures, Jim Cragin, Leary, and McTague, being strongly played by Messrs. W. Mountjoy, C. M. Davidson, H. Pinder, and Harold Broughton respectively. A special word of praise must be given to the page boy, Billy, of Master Leslie Hall, whose small part is so necessary to the piece. Miss Celia Gordon made Madge Larrabee a most uncompromising "villainess," in no way sparing herself or her sex in her rendering of an unpleasant character. As the unhappy Alice Faulkner, Miss A. Bruce-Joy could not but enlist the sympathies of all by her life-like impersonation of the unhappy heroine; and Miss Angela Cunningham was all that was required as Mrs. Faulkner, her mother. Miss Grace Howard was Mrs. Smeedley, the volatile visitor at Dr. Watson's consulting-room; and Mr. Wm. Wilson and Mr. Charles Hood filled the parts of servants satisfactorily. Messrs. Hy. Littlejohn and Frank H. Moore appeared as Sir Edward Leighton and Count von Stahlburg in the last act, assuming effectively the needful dignity of such exalted personages.

BRIXTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Sept. 23, the Drama, entitled
"THE UGLIEST WOMAN ON EARTH."

Another enormously successful Melvillian drama, The Ugliest Woman on Earth, is presented here, and secured a warm greeting on Monday evening. It is well staged and mounted, and the scenic accessories deserve praise. In the title-rôle, Miss Beatrice Homer displays great ability, especially good being her fine performance in the third act. Valuable support is accorded by Mr. Philip Darien as Jack Merriman. In the scene where Philip is rendered blind, this clever actor carried the house with him. As Hubert Gold Mr. Leyton Cancellor was the cool, calculating villain to the life; and his accomplice, Antonio Luchessi, found a worthy representative in Mr. Leonard Thackeray. Mr. Alfred E. Wood gave a good study of the kindly Doctor. Mr. Tubby Edlin caused roars of laughter by his comical acting as Tubby, and soon made himself a favourite with the Brixtonians. Miss Nellie Jackson as Aggie gave a bright and charming rendering of the part. Miss Nell Oliver was duly passionate, and made a handsome Rose Courtenay; Morita, the Italian girl, was in the hands of Miss Violet Macaree, especially fine. Her pathetic scene in broken English made a deep impression on the large audience. The Purser of the steamship found a breezy representative in Mr. Gerald Valentine; Mr. Harry Wimpenny was first-rate as Raggles; and the remaining parts were all well played. The resident orchestra played nicely the incidental music and some selections throughout the evening, under the able conductorship of Mr. Edwin Moss. Mr. Tubby Edlin is business-manager, and Mr. L. Thackeray the stage-manager for Mr. F. Melville. A beauty competition was announced for yesterday (Friday) evening, when valuable prizes were to be presented to the prettiest Brixton ladies.

THE ELEPHANT AND CASTLE.

On Monday, Sept. 23, the Drama,
"BETWEEN TWO WOMEN."

A special attraction has been provided for patrons here this week in Mr. Fred Melville's complete production of his own drama, Between Two Women. It is splendidly staged and mounted, and the excellent company engaged could not be bettered in their respective rôles. The drama is much to the liking of audiences here, and the continued applause is most marked. Mr. Edward Thane, in the rôle of the Earl of Millard, is an elderly English nobleman who has made a large fortune on the diamond mines in South Africa and has returned home to reclaim his impoverished estates. Mr. Clifford Denbigh capably fills the part of his rather "go-ahead" son, whose entanglement with the two women gives the title to the drama. Mr. Fred Morgan as James Durwood makes a sufficiently intense villain, who by his nefarious schemes poisons the hero's mind against his wife; he is well assisted in his villainies by Mr. Herbert Goddard, who is Major Strangeways, and whose experience of hard work in the Army is living on champagne and tinned meat. The important part of the Rev. Philip Carton is entrusted to Mr. Harry Turner, and he it is who has to strangle Major Strangeways, who he finds has compromised the heroine by a trick. The subsequent contrition and remorse for his impulsive act are well expressed. Miss Louise Frampton fills the part of the sorely-tried and compromised heroine, and her pathetic treatment of it called for much sympathy from the audience. Miss Winnie White is the heartless Carmen de Savereaux, the woman who tries to lure the hero from his wife, and, when she fails, falsely accuses him of murder, and only relents when confronted with her blind son, who has been lost to her for some years. Miss Lulu Bowes is a very pathetic figure as the Blind Boy, and her song of the same title is much appreciated. Mr. Newman Maurice as Jack Pringle is the cause of much merriment, especially in his "shop-lifting" business, and there are no dull moments when he and his extremely able and pretty partner, Miss Sybil Hare (Pollie Popp), are in possession of the stage.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, Sept. 23, the Drama entitled
"THE LIGHTS O' LONDON."

George R. Sims' famous drama, The Lights o' London, twinkled brightly in Marylebone this week, and Mr. Herbert Hollister's carefully selected company obtained a hearty West London welcome. Mr. C. F. Collings sustained the important rôle of Harold Armytage with much genuine fervour and restrained force; and Miss Jeanne Burgoyne won the sympathy of all by her patient, womanly impersonation of the sorely-tried Bess. The old showman, Jarvis, found a realistic representative in the person of Mr. Payne Fletcher, who acted with much unctuous humour; Mr. W. J. Buckley deservedly scored a big hit as Jim; Mr. Herbert Morgan was a cool and calculating Clifford Armytage; and Mr. Herbert Hollister kept his emotions well under control in his masterly rendering of Seth Preene. Miss Violet Temple's ripe experience well suited the part of Mrs. Jarvis; Miss Nellie Maynard played with much intelligence as Shakespeare Jarvis; little Dorothy Bird pathetically portrayed the little waif Joey; and Miss Kate Randolph as Hetty Preene looked exceedingly handsome, her success being well marked. The rest of a long cast all played adequately, whilst the mounting and effects left nothing to be desired.

THE CROWN, PECKHAM.

On Monday, Sept. 23,
the Domestic Drama, by Gordon Holmes, entitled
"THE CONVICT'S DAUGHTER."

This week we have a return to full-blooded, exciting drama of the type so beloved by the good folks of Peckham in the shape of The Convict's Daughter, which is attracting good houses. Mr. Frank Bertram's clever company gives an excellent interpretation of the piece. Mr. Frank Bertram, as the tramp, Michael Grahame, has the leading rôle, and is thoroughly successful, his acting in his various disguises being admirable. Miss Lilias Deane portrays the part of Edith with much pathos and power; Mr. Walter Graham is a manly young lover as Harold Trevalyen; and the villainy of Jasper Thorn is well sustained by Mr. Escot Robson. Mr. Sam Roberts is very amusing as the Irish policeman, Patrick O'Laragan; and Miss Lilla Nordan as the maidservant, Betty Hyne, ably aids him in the laughter-making. Good character-sketches come from Miss Maud Beard as Marian Thorn and Mr. Edward De Vere as Frederick Neville. The minor parts are all well played. The scenery and effects are a special feature of the production, the escape of the convict on an express train being most realistically managed.

GRAND, FULHAM.

On Monday, Sept. 23, the Musical Comedy, entitled
"SERGEANT BRUE."

The trials and tribulations of the worthy sergeant still amuse crowded houses, and Mr. Robert Crossman's company is doing well at Fulham. It is a strong company, and the piece is well put on. Mr. Arthur Reynolds makes an excellent representative of the Sergeant, and plays with unflagging spirit and a strong sense of humour. Mr. J. H. Goldsworthy is a more than usually attractive representative of Michael Brue, and his songs go well. Mr. T. A. Shale is in his best low comedy vein, and as Crookie Scrubbs scores a decided success. His amusing facial contortions and expressive by-play keep the house in continual laughter, whilst the singing of his songs give evidence of musical gifts considerably above the level of the usual "comic man." Mr. Chas. Sims is amusing in his sketch of the magistrate, Mr. Crank, and Mr. W. Payne Palmer acts very smartly as the brusque Inspector Gorringe. Miss Daisy Dale looks and plays well as Aurora Brue; and Miss Mary Hay carries through the important part of Lady Bickenhall with much brightness and charm; Miss Marion Hargrave being amusing in the smaller part of the servant, Daisy. Mr. E. Farmer as Mr. Lamb, Mr. W. Jeffery as Captain Bay, and Mr. H. Soutar as Mr. Habisham fill their parts with satisfaction; and the chorus of ladies and gentlemen are up to the mark in song and dance. The music was under the direction of Mr. Sydney Shaw, and Mr. Charles Howard and Mr. Tom Robertson act for Mr. Crossman before and behind the curtain respectively.

GRAND, ISLINGTON.

On Monday, Sept. 23, the Drama entitled
"A ROYAL DIVORCE."

After a somewhat lengthy absence, Mr. W. W. Kelly's company in A Royal Divorce again forms the attraction, and a good house was present on Monday to renew their acquaintance with the fine play. The whole production, which is that used for the Scala Theatre, is of a very elaborate character, the scenery from the brushes of Messrs. W. T. Hemsley and Charles Fell being excellent examples of the art. Mr. Frederick Victor still portrays all the varying moods of Napoleon with conspicuous success. Mr. Tom Robertson as Talleyrand submits a capital study of the unscrupulous Minister of State; and Mr. Frank Stone is responsible for a good piece of work as De Beaumont. Mr. William Ellonby as Augereau is amusing; and derives great assistance from Miss Clara Earle, who acts with spirit as Stephanie. Mr. J. J. Gordon as Grimaud gives a neat thumb-nail sketch of the innkeeper; and Messrs. St. George Frere and Mr. C. Jackson in smaller parts are to be commended. Miss Beth Elliott, who now appears as Josephine, assumes a difficult and arduous rôle with happy results, her acting throughout being of a high order. Miss Leah Marlborough as Marie Louise is also to be congratulated on a sound performance. Miss Ethel Love as the Little King of Rome is clever; and Miss Loyale Frere as the Gouvernante is good; the remaining smaller parts all finding careful exponents in the other members of the company.

TERRISS THEATRE.

Manager Taylor is to be congratulated on having secured that interesting play The Eve of Her Wedding for this week's bill of fare, and a full house showed its appreciation of the management's enterprise on the play's first representation in Rotherhithe. Mr. Ashley Page, always an ideal hero, played the double rôle of George Tremain and Nemo in his usual finished and taking style, and was ably supported by Miss Marion Denvil as Mavis Leverton. Mr. J. C. Aubrey invariably makes an effective villain, and his Dean Clifton is no exception to the rule; Mr. W. J. Holloway's Jack Herne was a touching and well-studied performance, and was duly appreciated by the audience; Mr. Bensley Evans in the trying part of Paul Cairshaw made a distinct hit, his acting in the old ruined mill scene being particularly good; the parts of Squire Leverton and his son Dick were ably portrayed by Mr. F. F. Evans and Mr. Roland Daniels; Mr. J. Chippendale never fails to interest and amuse, and his Rudolph Earle was a consistent performance; thanks to the finished acting of Mr. Frank Harrison and Miss East Robertson in the parts of Giovanni, the Secret Service agent, and Renie de Telle, an adventuress, the attention of the house was closely held throughout; and as the American millionaire and his daughter Mr. Frank Denis and Miss Everitt were just right. Mr. John Sargent was a splendid Bill Groggins. The play is particularly well mounted, the exterior of the church being really beautiful.

THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD.

On Monday, Sept. 23, the Musical Play,
"SOMEBODY'S SWEETHEART."

As a change from the staple fare at this popular melodrama theatre, Mr. Edward Marris's company, in Somebody's Sweetheart, is the attraction this week, and the piece is meeting with much success. The large number of interpolated songs and dances necessarily interfere with the thread of the story, but this is not of much account, for what the audience lose in one way they gain in another. Mr. Cecil W. Parke plays Stanton Ashleigh in manly style, and renders the numbers allotted to him with fine effect. Mr. Charles E. King portrays the villainous Stephen Leverton on sound lines; and Leverton's confederate, Lem Lee, is forcibly rendered by Mr. Percy Maitland. Mr. George Brentwood proves himself a very alert comedian as Martin Blabbs, and his vocal contributions are very enjoyable. The negro servant, Old Joe, receives careful treatment from Mr. Frank Gala; and Mr. Arthur Slade is a smart Detective Wilson. Miss Norah Melton is a pretty and vivacious Lulu, and sings charmingly. Miss Maisie Jerrard handles the part of the gipsy Zora with skill, and is responsible for a delightful rendering of "Lotus land," one of the best items in the piece. Miss Lily Williams and Miss G. de Monte, as Norah and Molly, contribute some capital dances; and Miss Dora Hargreaves plays very naturally as Miss Ainsley. Miss May Norris makes a bright and entertaining Freddie Ashleigh, and looks quite spruce in her well-fitting male attire.

"HIS HELPMATE."

A Play, in One Act, by Charles McEvoy, produced for the first time at the Midland Theatre, Manchester, on Monday, Sept. 23.

Mrs. Chartris ..... Miss Jessica Waters
Lionel ..... Miss Nonny Lock
Mrs. Ormond ..... Miss Mona Limerick
Walter Ormond ..... Mr. A. G. Somers

The opening performance of the Playgoers' Theatre Company, established in Manchester for the local exploitation of new plays and choice masterpieces, was signalised on Monday by the production of His Helpmate, a sarcastically-named play in one act, by Mr. Charles McEvoy. It is the story of a woman who has married a man much older than herself for his money and its social advantages, and who, when misfortune comes to him through no fault of his own, refuses to believe his story, and suggests that he would be better dead. Pending the crisis, the contrast of Mrs. Chartris is made good use of, this being a lady who has married a comparatively poor man for love, and who declares strenuously that love is more conducive to happiness at home than money. Mrs. Ormond, however, having married for money, and being essentially cold and heartless, is not affected by the argument, and her son Lionel is seen to be developing similar traits of character. Ormond discovers that his partner in business is a defaulter, and that the firm cannot meet its obligations. These are the circumstances in which his wife brings him to the pass already indicated. The discovery of a letter of confession from the defaulter is made by Mrs. Ormond, through the instrumentality of Lionel; but it is too late to prevent the suicidal shot which brings down the curtain.

Miss Mona Limerick gave a powerful and accomplished depiction of the cold and selfish Mrs. Ormond; Mr. A. G. Somers as Walter Ormond was particularly good in the scene with his wife, when he tries to make her believe his story, and leaves with the revolver in his pocket; Miss Nonny Lock was effective as Lionel; and Miss Jessica Waters as Mrs. Chartris contributed to the argument in a clever and natural manner. The play was very well received and neatly staged.

On the same evening a revised version of the comedy of David Ballard, also by Mr. McEvoy, was presented by a very capable cast. The story of the young clerk with the ambition to become an author, but with the ability only—in spite of his ideas—to descend again to the level of ordinary life, glorified more or less by the love of a woman who chooses him for himself alone, is well told and garnished with interesting and significant characters. The moral is hard and practical, and Mr. B. Iden Payne's rendering of David was emotional enough to justify the young man's failure to achieve his fine ambitions. Mr. Charles Bibby as Percy Ballard acted the snob to the life; Miss Lillian M. Revell played Gladys intelligently; an excellent delineation of Mrs. Ballard was given by Miss Clarge Greel; and Mr. A. G. Somers as Simon Ballard made the most of a part that was hardly worthy of his powers. Mr. Charles Charrington added a capital impersonation of Darwin Snodge; and, with the remaining parts proportionately well handled, the total effect of the play was quite satisfactory, and received unstinted applause.

THE SHAKESPEARE THEATRE.

On Monday, Sept. 23, the Comic Opera, entitled
"LA POUPEE."

The visit of Mr. C. P. Levilly's company in the delightful comic opera, La Poupée, was eagerly anticipated by patrons of the popular Clapham Theatre, and the opening performance on Monday found the house filled with an appreciative audience. That their expectations were fully realised was very evident by the enthusiasm which prevailed throughout the play; and, indeed, it could hardly have been otherwise, for the sparkling music and witty lines, together with a capital company and fine scenery, made the performance as bright and attractive as could be desired. The acting and singing was excellent all round. Miss Stella Castelle made a charming appearance in the part of Alesia, and won unstinted applause for her excellent acting and singing. Mr. W. H. Powell as Hilarius was the life and soul of the piece, and his clever acting and amusing antics kept the house in uproarious laughter. Miss Dulcie Garland was interesting as Mme. Hilarius; and Miss Victoria Wray made a dainty Guduline. In the rôle of Henri Miss Kitty Cavendish was seen to advantage, and acted the part with marked ability. The three dolls were attractively presented by Miss Frances Lane, Miss Belle Gray, and Miss Hilda Milburn; and minor parts were capably sustained by Miss Florence Wynn, Miss Rose Lytton, and Miss Nita Lingham; and Lancelot was excellently sustained by Mr. F. Maxwell Stuart, and his excellent voice was heard to advantage in several songs. The crusty pessimist, Loremois, was ably portrayed by Mr. Leon Simpkin; and Mr. Arthur Gibbons as Baron Chantrelle acquitted himself with success. Father Maxime was admirably embodied by Mr. Ernest Torrence, and he was accorded a well-deserved encore for his rendering of the song "A jovial monk." Messrs. Vernon Reed, P. J. Bannon, D. Rowlands, and H. J. Edwards, and the chorus, under the direction of Mr. Harry Rushworth, rendered the concerted pieces with due effect. Mr. Herbert Ralland is general-manager and Mr. Leon Simpkin stage-manager for Mr. C. P. Levilly.

BOROUGH THEATRE, STRATFORD.

On Monday, Sept. 23, the Musical Comedy,
"MR. POPPLE (OF IPPLETON)."

The bright and entertaining Mr. Popple is paying a return visit to Stratford this week, and on Monday night was very favourably received. Mr. Charles Macdona's company has Mr Arthur Longley as Freddy Popple, and his droll doings and sayings always compel laughter Miss Millie Hylton portrays La Bolero on somewhat original lines. Miss Hylton's songs go wonderfully well, and she meets with much success. Mr. Wentworth Fane is an energetic and buoyant exponent of Norman Popple; and Mr. Douglas Phillips is exceedingly good as Jacques Kenyon. The two gay old parvenus, George Hennay and Henry Doring are depicted in genuine comedy vein by Mr. Sydney Young and Mr. James Stevenson respectively; the "better half" of each being safely entrusted to Miss Anton Lang as Mrs. Hennay, and Miss Alice Rene as Mrs. Doring. Mr. C. E. Paton is a very alert and amusing Platt, much of his good work being in conjunction with Miss Nellie Hodson, who, as the maid Louise quickly wins her way into favour. Miss Cora Lingard is a very prepossessing Violet Brinton; and the large number of minor parts all receive careful treatment; while the efficient chorus and augmented orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Julian Rutt, render the concerted music in praiseworthy style.

Messrs. Chappell's ballad concerts will be resumed at Queen's Hall on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 12. Among the artists engaged are Miss Agnes Nicholls, Miss Miranda, Miss Carmen Hill, Mme. Kirkby Lunn, Miss Gertrude Mellor, Mr. Ben Davies, Mr. Dalton Baker, and Mr. Fritz Kreisler.

THE ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

The usual weekly meeting of the Council of the Actors' Association took place at 10, King-street, Covent Garden, on Tuesday. There were present Mr. Fred Grove (chairman), Mr. Henry W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Mesdames Rose Mathews and Lucy Sibley, and Messrs. Arthur Applin, Cecil Brooking, Lewis Casson, C. F. Collings, Edmund Gurney, Roy Horniman, Fewlass Llewellyn, Fredk. Morland, and Chas. Cruikshanks, secretary.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. It was decided that the fortnightly meeting fixed for the 27th inst. be not held. The hon. solicitors reported correspondence on behalf of three members in the matter of the recovery of salaries, and received instructions.

The secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting of the Finance and General Purposes Committee. It was proposed by Mr. Fredk. Morland and seconded by Mr. Fewlass Llewellyn that the recommendations of the Finance and General Purposes Committee held on the 21st inst., namely, (1) In view of the present financial position, it is advisable to place the Association in liquidation; (2) that a meeting of the Association be called for Monday, Sept. 30, to lay the position before the members, be adopted.

It was also agreed that "All other business be suspended pending decision on the above." After considerable discussion, in which the various alternatives were reviewed, the proposition was adopted. The secretary then asked for instructions. He was directed to call a meeting by a notice in the office for Monday next, at 3 p.m.

It was agreed that the statutory meeting should be held on Monday, Oct. 14, at 2.30, followed by the further meeting of Oct. 28, at the same time to submit to the members a resolution to place the affairs of the Association in liquidation.

The question of the vacancy on the Council was further postponed. The resignation of Mr. W. Graham Browne was accepted with regret. Mr. Graham Browne gave as his reasons for resigning his seat on the Council an engagement at the Court Theatre which would make it impossible for him to attend Council meetings.

The secretary reported that a late member, whose name was removed from the register of members on Aug. 6 last, had since gone to America, and he asked for further instructions as to forwarding letters. He was instructed to write to him and acquaint him that after Oct. 14 his letters would be returned to the D.L.O. marked "No longer a member of the Actors' Association."

The Chairman referred to a letter received from the secretary of the Touring Managers' Association, stating that the A.A. letter of July 26 regarding the question of the minimum wage was read at their last committee meeting.

The Chairman read a letter from the Touring Managers' Association, and the secretary was directed to acknowledge receipt and state that the matter was under consideration.

A complaint from a member regarding the state of the dressing-rooms at a provincial theatre was considered, and the secretary was directed to write to the management on the subject.

With regard to the nominations for election of Charles King, Winifred Rae, and Minnie de Worms it was agreed that their records were satisfactory, and the secretary was ordered to exhibit their names in the usual way, but he was instructed to return the fees paid by them with a letter stating that their nominations had been accepted but their election had been postponed, and that the Council trusted to be in a position to communicate with them further on the subject in the near future.

The secretary reported that the names of Mesdames Ruby Wyndham, Mary Deverell, and Julietta Milo had been duly posted, and they were now eligible for election. It was, however, agreed that they could not be elected at the present time, and the secretary was directed to return the fees paid by them, with a letter stating that the Council agreed that they were eligible for election, but such election had been postponed, and the Council trusted to be in a position to communicate with them further on the subject in the near future.

The secretary reported that Miss Beatrix de Burgh had written to say that she could not spare time to serve on the Social Committee and that he had received no reply from Miss Margaret Cavania.

The reinstatements of Stephen H. Langton and Ruth Wingrove were confirmed.

"IN WASHINGTON'S DAYS."

A Romantic Comedy, in Three Acts, by H. Gerald Ransley, produced, for the first time on any stage, at St. Francis Xavier's College Hall, Liverpool, on Wednesday, Sept. 25.

Captain Delamere ..... MR. GERALD RANSLEY
Lieut. Philip Maurice ..... MR. JOS. F. BOON
Dr. Cumberland ..... MR. J. SIDNEY GORRIE
General Bryce ..... MR. EVAN HARDING
Murty Maloney ..... MR. CHAS. ROBINSON
Sergt. Howard ..... MR. T. RIGBY ARMSTRONG
Erasmus ..... MISS ALMA CLARE
Rosie Willett ..... MISS OLGA HILBERRY
Martha Mutch ..... MISS STELLA VERNON
Mrs. Maurice ..... MISS VERA MOULTON
Virginia Marlowe ..... MISS WINNIE BROMLEY

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

This is a rather pretty love-story, in which self-sacrifice plays a prominent part, while the interest awakened at an early stage is well maintained to the close. The scene opens at Claremont Hall, during the American War of Independence. An English captain named Delamere, operating in the neighbourhood, billets himself for the night, in the course of which Lieut. Maurice, of the American Army, and son of the lady of the Hall, steals his despatches. The Captain, however, discovers the theft, and is about to shoot Maurice; but on the pleading of his mother, and his cousin, Virginia, is spared, on condition that he at once rejoins his regiment, and does something to regain his good name. Subsequently, Delamere is made prisoner by the American soldiers, and conveyed to their camp. Here he is followed by Virginia, who, actuated by a desire to repay the Captain's kindness in sparing the life of her cousin, demands that the latter will plead with General Bryce, commanding the American troops, for the release of the Englishman. The Lieutenant refuses, but on Virginia threatening to act as advocate herself, and reveal her cousin's theft and falsehoods, gives way, and makes a clean breast of the affair to his General. Delamere is accordingly released, and Virginia gives him her hand in marriage.

Although the play was presented by amateurs, brought together by Mr. Ransley, it met with much acceptance. The author held the rôle of the English Captain with dignity and soldierly bearing; Mr. Evan Harding handled the character of General Bryce with discretion; Mr. Joseph F. Boon presented a thoughtful study of Lieut. Maurice; Mr. J. Sidney Gorrie proved a sufficiently villainous Dr. Cumberland, an adept in administering poisons; a lively and most amusing Irish servant came from Mr. Charles Robinson; Miss Vera Moulton played tenderly as Mrs. Maurice; and Miss Winnie Bromley looked sweet and spoke her lines well as Virginia. The minor parts were also satisfactorily presented. The new play was preceded by a humorous sketch, entitled The Lottery Ticket, in which Messrs. Ransley, F. Crosby Dare, and Armstrong; along with Miss Moulton and Miss Hilberry, took part.

MR. CHAS. HOWARD has been kindly released by Mr. Robert Crossman from his engagement with Sergeant Brue, on tour, to enable him to take over the resident-management of the Hippodrome, Eastbourne, where he will commence his duties on Monday next.

ACTORS' UNION.

LONDON.

Mr. H. TRIPP EDGAR presided at the weekly meeting of the Actors' Union on Tuesday at the Bedford Head. Among the others present were Messrs. Frank Gerald, Harry Paulton, jun., Watty Brunton, Stanley Burt, Norman Wrighton, Fred Bentley, James English, Edward S. Petley, J. W. Braithwaite, and Harry Townley; and Mesdames Eva Stuart, Eveleen Mills, Kate Randolph, Ada Melrose, May Conrade, Adelaide Gracey, Kitty Marion, Bessie Armytage, W. Bentley, and Gladys Ffolliott.

The CHAIRMAN, in opening the proceedings, said that he had to advance a serious warning against members accepting anything but the authorised programme as laid down by the executive committee. No one had the right to declare the policy of the Union except the council which they, as members, had elected. If he (the Chairman) had thought for one moment that the object of the Union was to create a strike then he should withdraw from the committee. He had to tell them that Mr. Walter Gibbons was applying for the Standard (Shoreditch), the Prince's (Poplar), the Grand Theatre (Islington), the Grand (Woolwich), and the Terriss (Rotherhithe) to be turned into variety houses. Another manager was desirous of converting the Camden and the Coronet into music halls. Members of the Union would have to consider their position as actors in this matter. He had also to inform them that the committee had that day appointed Mr. Frank Gerald as honorary delegate for the Union. They considered that they wanted a good organiser, as they were not forging ahead as well as they should. Then, as to the possibility of benefits accruing to members of the Union, he would point out that they ought to have their orphanage fund. If they had a sufficiency of funds at their back they could start the scheme by endowing a bed at the orphanage and calling it the "Actors' Union Bed." There had likewise to be taken into account the subject of old age pensions and a burial club.

Mr. FRANK GERALD said that he highly appreciated the confidence shown in him by his appointment as honorary delegate, and it would be his chiefest endeavour to prove himself worthy of the post. He believed that the time was ripe for the Union to be "up and doing." As to what the chairman had said about strikes, he thought there was a good deal of misunderstanding on this point. Some actors and actresses appeared to be holding aloof because they believed that the Union intended forcing a strike. That was the last thing they wanted to bring about. They would be interested to learn that on Sunday, Oct. 20, the Union would hold a mass meeting in London. It would be open to all trade unionists on production of their card, as well as to any actor or actress on showing his or her card. The object of that meeting would be to preach the gospel they had started out to preach. They would be supported on the platform by some of the great Labour leaders, as well as by representatives of trade unions in the country. Similar meetings would be held in the various provincial towns of England and Scotland.

Miss GLADYS FFOLLIOTT explained the advantages of the Union appointing a delegate. It was absolutely necessary for them to have a man who understood the requirements of the working profession. They would all realise the difficulties which confronted a few actors and actresses who desired to bring their grievances before their managers. They knew very well that the man who acted as spokesman in such a manner would be a marked man, and he would find difficulty in getting engagements afterwards. Mr. Frank Gerald thoroughly understood their position, and she (the speaker) did not think they could possibly have a better man.

The CHAIRMAN announced that a dinner had been arranged for Sunday at 7 pm. at the Boulogne Restaurant, Gerrard-street, which was open to members of the Union and their friends. Tickets could be obtained from the Secretary, at 49, Bedford-street, the price being 2s. 6d.

Mr. NORMAN WRIGHTON suggested that the Union should have a symbol, which could be worn by members as a distinctive badge.

NEW MUSIC.

Messrs. Ascherberg, Hopwood, and Crew, Ltd., have recently published "A True Blue English Girl," words by Arthur Wallis, music by Fred Morley. The author of the verses speaks freely as to the merits of a "true blue English girl," and does not hesitate to give her the first place, Continental wives being "nowhere." Mr. Morley well seconds the author. His music has no particular claim to originality. Indeed, he starts with an introduction based on an Old English hornpipe, and winds up with an echo of the National Anthem. But he so skilfully interweaves these familiar passages with his own ideas that we cannot find fault with him. Neither will the auditors of his song, but will applaud lustily when the "true blue" maiden is heard in these ditties. The publishers—who, by the way, now issue their works from Mortimer-street, Regent-street—allow the singing of the ballad in the concert-room, but do not permit it at the theatres or music halls. Messrs. Ascherberg and Co. also publish "Layonara," a series of Japanese love songs written by Florence Hoare and composed by Joseph L. Roeckel. There is a singular quaintness about these compositions, the author and musician having cleverly caught the simplicity and somewhat monotonous cadence of Japanese music, which, however, has considerable charm and effect. The same writer and composer are associated in a song of a totally different character. It is called "Little Miss Vanity," and the author laughs to scorn the "Vanity of vanities—all is vanity" of the old Scriptural writer.

"Slippers and Rice" carries with it a reminder of an event which some of us remember with much pleasure, and pleasantly tells of a little incident which leads in due course to a "slippers and rice" conclusion.

"Le Baiser" valse Boston, by Octave Crémieux, has had great success in Paris, and the languishing figure on the frontispiece will no doubt add to its popularity in London. The exclamation "Take pity on the heart that adores you" is just what we should expect from such a sentimental young lady, and explains the sale of 35,000 copies in the French capital. Messrs. Ascherberg, Hopwood, and Crew will no doubt find a ready market in London for the work of a musician so well known in Paris as M. Crémieux.

MISS WINNIE VOLT.

A DELIGHTFUL PERSONATION.

Miss Winnie Volt, as the domestic drudge of her family, who captivates an American millionaire, gave a delightful personation, acting throughout with great spirit and vivacity, and she was warmly applauded alike for her singing and dancing.—The Scotsman.

SHE HAS THE AUDIENCE EVERY TIME.

The Lady Slavey. We are pretty well acquainted with this volatile and smart young lady, but I doubt if she has ever been smarter or in gayer spirits than she is this week in the enchanting little figure and personality of Winnie Volt. Her whole present performance is full of charm, and she has the audience every time.—The Porcupine.

COMEDY POWERS OF A HIGH ORDER AND IRRESISTIBLE NAIVETE.

Miss Winnie Volt, who undertook the title-rôle, is a winsome young actress, possessing a sweet voice, comedy powers of a high order, and irresistible naiveté. She secured the admiration of her audience at the outset, and held it with increasing power till the end.—Irish Times.

THE WORK OF THE PRODUCER.

CHAT WITH MR. ERNEST CARPENTER.

Mr. Tree's recent utterances on the subject of the actual production of plays aroused considerable interest in theatrical circles, and the opinion of a producer of plays like Mr. Ernest Carpenter—who can claim many years' experience of this department of stage work, and, even apart from this fact, the successful manner in which he has brought out three dramas within a period of six months at the Lyceum entitles his judgment to some consideration—must be of real value.

A man of ideas, it was not long before Mr. Carpenter plunged into his subject. "Sufficient importance has not been attached in London for some time past to the position of the producer, whose work, I quite agree with Mr. Tree, is second only in importance to the work of the dramatist. I rather fancy there has been a tendency in London to let the ladies and gentlemen of a company play their scenes according to their own individual ideas, with the inevitable result that there has been in many instances a want of cohesion in the complete performance. There has sometimes been lacking that master mind which should blend the whole together."

It is Mr. Carpenter's opinion that there would be less talk about the decadence of the drama if there had been of late years a greater supply of practical producers. "You cannot," he affirms, "get that strong dramatic effect which grips a audience unless you have the capable producer to supervise everybody and everything. One sees dramatic scenes so often played in a disjointed manner. You will realise that a producer is in the position of a general of an army. He must not bow down to the individual likes and dislikes of the various units he is supposed to control. I recognise that it is my business to consider the tout ensemble, and that alone."

It is not necessary that we should detail at length Mr. Carpenter's methods of rehearsing his company. Briefly, though, we might mention that it is his custom, after he has selected a play for production, to study that play thoroughly at his home, and then to read it as it should be read to the assembled artists. Having been an actor himself, this work comes perfectly natural to him.

"What are the essential qualities that go to the making of a successful producer, you ask? Well, I can answer that question without a moment's hesitation. The necessary qualities are tact and a keen dramatic instinct. Preferably a producer should be an actor of some experience. In fact, I will go so far as to say that he actually must have been 'through the mill' before he can produce really good shows."

"No, I do not consider that authors are good producers. In regard to the other point you raise, as to the length of rehearsals, I would say that in London five weeks is not too long a period in which to prepare and make perfect a series of characterisations in a new play. Of course, much depends upon whether or not the producer knows the play thoroughly. If I know a play I can produce it in a fortnight, but, naturally enough, if I have to handle an entirely new thing, it takes much longer. When we first took the Lyceum for the production of Her Love Against the World, I had only three weeks in which to engage the company, make the production, rehearse, and produce the piece. I think that is almost a record for London."

Turning the interviewee's attention to the present play, The Christian, Mr. Carpenter said that he thought the success of the piece was due not so much to the controversy it had caused as to the great human sympathy and heart-interest to be found in the story. "It is a very remarkable fact," he went on, "that, notwithstanding all the severe things that have been said about the play, there has never been one dissentient voice in the theatre from the first night onwards, and we have played to four thousand people every performance. You will have read the opinions of the clergymen who witnessed the production at a special matinée a little more than a week ago. Those opinions were flattering in the extreme."

It may be of interest to mention at this time that Mr. Carpenter started his professional career twenty-three years ago, since which time he has played nearly every possible kind of part and run every possible kind of entertainment, in addition to many touring companies. His first playhouse was the Theatre Royal, Darwen, and from there he migrated to Bristol, where he had the Theatre Royal, then at its lowest ebb, and now, thanks to Mr. Carpenter's careful and judicious management, one of the most successful drama houses in the country. He then bought the Empire, Hanley, turned that from a failure into a prosperous concern, and sold it at a good figure. The same thing occurred with the Empire, Bristol. Mr. Carpenter subsequently built the new Queen's Theatre, Swindon, ran it for three years, and profitably parted with it. Afterwards he had control of the Grand Theatre, Brighton, which was in a deplorable condition when he first took it in hand, and we know into what a popular establishment his energetic efforts transformed it. His latest enterprise, of course, is his joint management of the Lyceum with Mr. Smith.

Mr. Carpenter has had a great experience in "stock" business, both as actor and producer, being one of the few managers in the country who have successfully, for some years past, run stock seasons.

Outside his theatre work, Mr. Carpenter has for some years past taken a great interest in municipal affairs. He was a member of the first Town Council at Swindon, and last year he was elected to a seat on the Town Council of Brighton, in the work of the corporation of which he continues to play a leading part. He was mainly instrumental in organising the Municipal Orchestra, which has proved such a boon to the town. And all this has been done by a man who is now only in his fortieth year!

"THE THIEF."

A Play, in Three Acts, by Henri Bernstein, Produced at the Lyceum Theatre, New York, on Sept. 9.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Le Voleur was the title of this play in the original French, and the leading rôles were played by M. Guitry and Mme. Le Bargy when it was first produced in Paris. The play begins in the grand salon of M. Lagardes' château near Paris at 9 p.m.; is continued during the second act in a boudoir of the château at 2 a.m.; and ends in the library about eight hours later. When the curtain rises, Richard Voysin and his young wife, Marie Louise, familiarly called Marise, are making ardent love to each other, nothing abashed by the presence of their host and hostess, Raymond and Isabelle Lagardes, and their fellow-guest, a certain M. Zambault. The uxorious Voysin leaves his young bride, and Fernand Lagardes, Raymond's son, a youth of nineteen, chock-full of De Maupassant, immediately takes his place, and reproaches her for her coldness towards him, protesting that he is desperately in love with her. She tells him that his foolish infatuation has gone far enough, and sends him out into the garden to cool his fever. Returning from the smoking-room alone, M. Lagardes makes startling disclosures. For some time past, he says, money and valuables have been stolen from his wife's sécretaire, and one of his guests, none other than M. Zambault, whose unaccountable presence in the house has been much commented upon, is a detective. Furthermore, M. Zambault has just announced that he has discovered the thief. The detective is summoned, and M. Lagardes tells him to name the guilty one. At first he refuses to do this, but M. Lagardes insists, and, finally, to the consternation of everybody, he tells the master of the house that the thief is none other than his own son. The father flies into a terrible rage, and declares there must be a mistake, his life-long friend M. Voysin joining him in a vituperative outburst, during which the detective remains calm and positive. Then he asks that the young man be sent for, so that he may question him in his father's presence, and Mme. Voysin volunteers to go and find Fernand. She returns in a few minutes, and says that he is nowhere to be found; but a moment later the youth comes from another direction to say good-night. The detective questions him sharply, taxing him with an intrigue with an actress and having bet large sums of money on horses. And, while the father stands dumbfounded and overcome with shame, the lad confesses. He goes further. From his pocket he takes out four hundred francs that were stolen from M. Lagardes' sécretaire that morning, and hands the money to the detective. The curtain falls as M. Voysin and his wife retire to their apartment, leaving the grief-stricken host and hostess to weep over the terrible discovery that the cherished son is a self-confessed thief.

The second act shows the apartment of the Voysins immediately after. The husband is almost as much saddened by the discovery as is his host, for they have been dear friends for many years. It is all a mystery to him why the young man should steal, and his perplexity leads him to experiment on a bureau in the room. He finds he can open it with a penknife, as Fernand says he opened the sécretaire. He is surprised at the quantity of expensive finery which the drawer contains, but his wife tells him that she is a great bargain-hunter, and that the things have not cost as much as he imagines. Opening another drawer in the same way, he takes out a pocket-book, joking with her the while as she scolds him for his inquisitiveness, and, in spite of her protests, inserts his fingers to find out why it is so "fat." To his utter amazement, it contains six thousand francs. The wife explains that she has accumulated the sum by practising strict economy, laughs it off, and retires. But the husband, as he thinks of her modest allowance and the manner in which she has gratified her modish tastes, sees that the thing is impossible. In a peremptory tone he summons her from her bedroom, and demands she tell the truth. She protests, temporises, prevaricates, and pleads, until he wrings from her that it was she who stole the money. In a torrent of weeping she tells him that she was afraid she would lose his love unless she dressed becomingly and made herself attractive. The more she grew to love him, the more she feared his indifference, and, when the temptation to steal beset her, she was ready to fall. She puts her arms around him, and begs him to forgive her, because it was all for love of him, and for a moment he is reconciled. But his doubts are not to be dispelled so easily. It suddenly occurs to him to ask why young Fernand should be so ready to sacrifice himself for her. She tries to tell him that there has been nothing more between them than a boy's foolishness, which she has checked that very evening; but Voysin is mad with jealousy now, and flings her from him, crying, "You lied to me once; I shall not believe you a second time." He tells her that she is a depraved woman, and starts to leave the room to wake up the young man and have it out with him, when his wife declares that the moment he leaves her she will throw herself out of the window. By doubting her purity he has changed her grief into scorn and anger.

"Then we will pass the night face to face, and to-morrow will tell," he says.

"Nothing will please me better," she replies, and the curtain falls.

The tension is not relaxed in the last act until the husband, in the final moments of the play, becomes convinced that his wife is a pure woman, and is reconciled. Lagardes decides to send his son out of the country for a year. The lad is heart-broken, but gives no hint of the sacrifice he is making. He says good-bye to each in turn, but when Mme. Voysin is reached she suddenly breaks down and confesses that she is the culprit. Lagardes, overjoyed to know that his son is no thief, is all pity for the wife of his old friend, and freely forgives her. Voysin's accusation of infidelity still stands, but his wife's manner partly restores his confidence, and when she demands that the lad be questioned in her presence Voysin is satisfied, and the play ends with the husband and wife in each other's arms.

Mr. Kyrle Bellew and Miss Margaret Illington as the Voysins carried off the principal honours, the scene in their apartment in the dead of night, in which the infuriated husband cross-questions his wife and taxes her with being unfaithful to him, being very effectively enacted. Mr. Sydney Herbert played the suave M. Zambault in his usual careful and finished manner; Mr. Herbert Percy gave a fine impersonation of the father, Raymond Lagardes; Mr. Leonard Ide was an excellent Fernand; and Miss Edith Ostlere bore herself charmingly as Isabelle Lagardes.

THE London Ballad concerts, which for some time past have been held at Queen's Hall on Fridays, will this year take place at the Albert Hall on Saturday afternoons. Messrs. Boosey have engaged an attractive list of artists, among whom are Mme. Donalda, Miss Edith Evans, Miss Marie Hall, Mr. John McCormack, Mr. Ivor Foster, and Mr. Raoul Pugno. The concerts, which have reached their forty-second season, will begin on Oct. 12.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

ACTORS' DAY.

The annual collection in connection with Actors' Day is due this year on Thursday, Oct. 17. Cheques should be made payable to the Trustees, Actors' Day Fund, and addressed to the Trustees, 10, King-street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

Return forms will be sent in due course, enabling contributions to be clearly and simply set forth.

The total amount of contributions to Actors' Day, 1906, was £1,509 10s. 2d. The expenses up to Dec. 31, 1906, were £31 12s. 2d.

The Advisory Board have, in deference to the expressed wishes of many contributors, recommended the trustees to hand over to the committee of the Actors' Benevolent Fund the sum of £622 14s. 7d., which sum the Advisory Board, after careful investigation, have computed to be the maximum loss which the Benevolent Fund may have suffered through the institution of Actors' Day. Donations of £40 each have also been made to the Actors' Orphanage and the Theatrical Ladies' Guild.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—As the date for Actors' Day, the third Thursday in October, is fast approaching, I should like, as an elected member of the Advisory Board representing acting-managers, to urge my confrères in London and throughout the country to give us all the help they can in bringing Actors' Day to the favourable notice of the members of their company, and by undertaking on their behalf to forward contributions to the trustees.

A system has now been devised by which the amounts contributed can be readily and accurately checked, without in any way departing from the principle that amounts contributed by those who give up their one night's salary once a year shall not be divulged.

The Advisory Board have, after careful consideration, arranged that every contributor shall in future have the opportunity of saying whether he wishes his contribution to be set aside for the exclusive benefit of those who, like himself, are willing to give up their one night's salary once a year; or whether he wishes his contribution to be a gift without condition for the Actors' Benevolent Fund, the Actors' Orphanage, or the Ladies' Theatrical Guild.

The difficulties that arose last year in the minds of some have thus, we hope, been quite removed, since every contribution will now be applied in accordance with the wishes of the contributor. I earnestly commend the scheme to my brother acting-managers, and hope they will give us their most cordial support. Even should there be any among them to whom this admirable scheme does not personally appeal, I still hope they will be kind enough to place the matter before their companies, and undertake to forward their contributions.—Yours faithfully,

C. T. H. HELMSLEY.

St. James's Theatre, Sept., 1907.

P.S. — Acting-managers will render valuable assistance by sending at once lists of their company, with the name of the theatre at which they will be playing on Oct. 17, to the Organising Committee, 10, King-street, Covent Garden, of whom all further particulars may be obtained.

A REAL CRITERION FARCE.

A second visit to the Criterion Theatre is not necessary to confirm our opinion that A Night Out is one of the funniest farces that has ever been adapted from the French. We formed that opinion when it first saw the footlights in London at the Vaudeville. It is a compound of whimsicality rivalling Charley's Aunt in its reckless fun, and to analyse it is out of the question. In the second act, where we see all the personages assembled for the wildest of wild games of blind man's buff and quiproquo, the authors have paved the way for indispensable coincidences by sundry preliminaries that are most ingenious.

Fortunately for A Night Out, we have that practised actor and comedian Mr. George Giddens showing us the breadth and versatility of his methods in the character of Pinglet. The builder, as we all remember, though he has been married for twenty years, still possesses some of the ardour of his youth. He finds in the neglected wife of his friend Paillard a sympathiser and she an admirer. The pretty scheme arranged by Pinglet for a quiet souper à deux at the Hôtel Mascotte goes very much awry, and no peccant husband on the stage—as far as our experience tells us—can be quite as funny as Mr. Giddens. His upbraiding of the innocent and unfortunate Madame Pinglet in the last act is the drollest episode in a succession of uproariously comic scenes, and the actor revels in a part that he has certainly made his own.

Miss Margaret Leslie is new to such a rôle as Madame Paillard, to which she gives ample expression, endowing it also with a personality altogether sweet and gracious, and we have had no more fascinating representative of the character since Marguerite Caron originally played it at the Nouveautés in 1894.

Mr. Bertram Steer's solidity as Paillard is in excellent contrast to the airiness and frivolity of Mr. Giddens as the amorous Pinglet, and herein lies the strength of a capital impersonation.

Miss Alice Beet has a really difficult rôle to play in that of Angélique, and she gives just the shrewish touch that is necessary in the first act. Again does she score a genuine triumph in the last act by Angélique's expression of terror at the bare thought of being compromised by an assignation with another woman's husband at a shady hotel.

Miss Frances Vine makes a skittish and saucy Victorine, playing with considerable cleverness in the scene with Maxime in the first act. Her success is shared by Mr. George Desmond, who makes the unsophisticated (!) lad's study of Plato's ethics very amusing.

The creation of Mathieu is essentially French. No one but a Parisian dramatist would conceive the idea of making a character stammer with every break of the weather. This peculiarity leads to the screamingly funny situation in the last act, where Mathieu's tongue, paralysed by the brewing storm, is unable to reveal the peccadilloes of Pinglet. Mr. Frederick Volpé, always a sound comedian, plays with an unconsciousness that is very mirth-provoking, and Mathieu's apparition in déshabille at the Hôtel Mascotte evokes screams of laughter.

Mr. P. L. Julian as Botticelli is sufficiently truculent, even for a raffish Italian; Mr. Reginald Walter's Brochard is quite in the best vein of French officialism; Mr. F. W. Permain's Bastien has lost nothing of its unctuousness; Mr. Lawrence White's Boulot is most effective; Mr. Geoffrey Saville's Ernest is quite gentlemanly; and Miss Millicent Forsyth is a graceful and attractive representative of a lady, the four Mathieu girls being vivaciously presented by the Misses Nell Toller, St. John Denton, Leonora Caldwell, and May Hollom.

MR. FREDERICK WHELEN, Mr. Beerbohm Tree's able secretary, has just returned from Liverpool, where Mr. Tree's company has been busy rehearsing The Beloved Vagabond for Dublin. It is spoken of as very promising.

A RECITAL of the compositions of Mr. Coleridge-Taylor will be given in the school hall of the Crystal Palace School of Art, Science, Music, and Literature on Monday evening next. The artists will include Miss Grace Burchell, Miss Agathe Manns, Mr. Peter Musson, Mr. Nevill Swainson, Mr. C. Aves, Mr. C. A. Crabb, and Mr. S. Coleridge-Taylor.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

A special general meeting of the Actors' Association will be held in the saloon at three o'clock on Monday to consider the financial position of the society. The vital nature of the business will be apparent when it is added that the council at their meeting on Tuesday passed the resolution, moved by the Finance and General Purposes Committee, that "In view of the present financial position it is advisable to place the Association in liquidation." Mr. G. K. Chesterton has kindly consented to be present and speak at the meeting.

The following resolution will be submitted to an extraordinary general meeting, which will be held at the Bijou Theatre, 3, Bedford-street, Strand, on Monday, Oct. 14 at 2.30:—"That the Actors' Association be wound up voluntarily under the provisions of the Companies' Acts, 1862 to 1900." Should the resolution be passed by the requisite majority it will be submitted for confirmation as a special resolution to a subsequent meeting of the Association, when, in the event of it being adopted, a further resolution will be proposed for the appointment of a liquidator or liquidators for the purposes of the winding up and fixing their remuneration.

Mr. Oscar Asche and Miss Lily Brayton's production of As You Like It, for which such elaborate preparations are being made at His Majesty's, will be sustained by players of rare distinction. In addition to the artists above named, the cast will consist of Messrs. H. R. Hignett, Kay Souper, Ernest Groom, J. Fisher White, Tripp Edgar, Herbert, R. Ian Penny, J. Fritz Russell, Henry Ainley, Alfred Brydone, Courtice Pounds, Henry Kitts, Caleb Porter, Godfrey Tearle, and F. R. Anson, Masters Glandon Williams and Moxham, and Misses Muriel Ashwynne, Leila Morris, and Marianne Caldwell.

The comedy, which will be produced on Monday, Oct. 7, will be presented in three acts, and the following synopsis of scenery will show how Mr. Asche has arranged the play: Act I.—Scenes 1 and 3—Oliver's Orchard. Scenes 2 and 4—A lawn before Duke Frederick's palace. Act II.—Scenes 1 and 4—The Forest of Arden. Scene 2—Another part of the forest. Scene 3—Before the banished Duke's cave in the forest. Act III.—Scenes 1 and 5—Outside Rosalind's cottage in the forest. Scene 2—By a lake in the forest. Scene 3—Another part of the forest. Scene 4—The banished Duke's cave in the forest.

The late J. L. Toole left instructions that the residue of his property, after its distribution to the various legatees, should be disposed of in charity at the discretion of his executors. Several excellent institutions have already benefited, and the latest to have its funds augmented are the Royal Dental Hospital, Leicester-square, to which £250, less legacy duty, has been allocated, and the Royal Sea Bathing Hospital, Margate, which has received £225.

Miss Phyllis Dare has sent to the secretary of the Actors' Benevolent Fund a further sum of £5 5s., which she has collected by means of autograph postcards. Mr. H. Beerbohm Tree daily forwards to the Fund the postal-orders he receives in exchange for his autograph. Miss Dare and Mr. Tree herewith thank the collectors for their contributions.

Miss Lena Ashwell, who is opening the Kingsway Theatre, in Great Queen-street, on Wednesday, Oct. 9, with Mr. Anthony P. Wharton's Irene Wycherley, heads the cast in the title-rôle. The other parts in the new play are allotted to Misses Muriel Wylford, Gertrude Scott, Nannie Bennett, Dorothy Brunt, Christine Silver, Francis Ivor, and Doris Lytton, and Messrs. Norman McKinnell, Henry Vibart, Dennis Eadie, C. M. Hallard, and Graham Hope. The chief piece will be preceded by Mr. Alfred Sutro's A Maker of Men, with Miss Edyth Olive and Mr. Douglas Gordon in the principal parts. At Miss Ashwell's "At Home" on Thursday, Oct. 3, the band of the Coldstream Guards, under Lieut. Mackenzie Rogan, will play throughout the afternoon.

Mr. H. B. Irving, who is among the London "stars" now illumining the provinces, has shared largely in the favour which has been generally bestowed on popular favourites. At the close of his performance of Mathias in The Bells, at the Gaiety, Dublin, on Saturday, Mr. Irving was wildly applauded, and, coming before the curtain for the third time, he said:—"Ladies and Gentlemen,—I should feel myself ungrateful if I did not take this opportunity to thank you with all my heart for the reception you have given me this week. I know that you have seen these plays before, but I was anxious to know what your verdict would be, and I can only say I appreciate the way you have received them, and express my hope that before long I may be back here again. I am sorry that this week has come to an end, and once again I desire to thank you with all my heart."

Mr. Arthur Bourchier, who with Miss Violet Vanbrugh has had a cordial reception throughout their stay in Dublin last week, was enthusiastically called upon for a speech on Saturday, the last night of his engagement at the Theatre Royal. In response, the eminent actor-manager said that a very brilliant orator once stated that an impromptu speech took him far longer to compose than any other speech. He had spent a long time that morning preparing an "impromptu" speech; but he went to the Exhibition and got on the water-chute. The speech was then in his pocket, but when he got off the water-chute it was gone. He tried to find it, but it was no good. He knew that there was something in the speech about "thanks, thanks, ever thanks," and there was also something in it about coming again. Renewed applause, it need scarcely be added, greeted the last announcement.

Despite the extent and variety of his professional work during his tour, which includes the production on October 7 of the new play, Simple Simon, Mr. Bourchier will find time for religious and social activity. On Sunday, October 6, he is to read the lessons at the special "harvest home" service at St. Ann's Church, the sermon at which is to be preached by the Bishop of Manchester; and on October 11 he will lecture before the Manchester Playgoers' Club, when his discourse is sure to prove profoundly interesting.

Mr. Henry Neville, the Worshipful Master of the Year, presided over the regular meeting of the Jubilee Masters' Lodge of Freemasons, No. 2,712, held at the Hotel Cecil, on the 20th inst., when General Sir Francis R. Wingate, Sirdar of Egypt, District Grand Master of Egypt and the Soudan, was the guest of the evening. At the banquet which followed, Mr. Neville proposed the health of the Sirdar, and remarked that Sir Francis had won a name for himself, and for the Empire, which would never fade. A hearty reception was given to the toast of the Master, who, before closing the proceedings, announced that Sir Francis Wingate had consented to become an honorary member of the lodge.

Miss Kitty Clayton is naturally disturbed by reports of her death, which, by some inexplicable means, have obtained currency. Miss Clayton, we hasten to state, has been playing Fifi with Mr. Chas. Macdona's company of A Chinese Honeymoon for the past twelve months, and assures us that she has never enjoyed better health.

Mr. Lionel Rignold and Miss Ada Blanche are still delighting provincial audiences with their clever comedy, What the Butler Saw. This week they are at Huddersfield—the greatest holiday week of the year—and the house resounds nightly to roars of laughter. Mr. Rignold intends sending out, in the late autumn, the Broadhurst comedies, What Happened to Jones (which ran for over twelve months at the Strand Theatre), Why Smith Left Home, and The Wrong Mr. Wright, with new scenery and specially selected company. Mr. Rignold is noted for the manner in which he produces all his ventures, and the three clever comedies mentioned should furnish a powerfully attractive bill.

Mr. Austin Melford was greeted with quite an ovation on his re-appearance at the Lane. The limited opportunities afforded him in his new rôle of the Rev. Martin Hope do not allow of a creation in any way equal to his Father Ferrati of last season; but it must be admitted that The Sins of Society could not have been the gigantic success that it undoubtedly is, had it not been got within reasonable time. The striking sermon from the pit, which is now omitted, was a splendid example of Mr. Melford's elocutionary skill.

The members of the Seymour Hicks South American Opera Company arrived at Rio de Janeiro on the 4th inst., fit and well, on board the R.M.S.P. Magdalena. The company was booked to open at Monte Video on the 9th, and later on to fulfil an eight weeks' season at Buenos Aires. The tedium of the journey across the ocean was enlivened by a concert given on the 3rd by the members of the company in aid of the R.M.S.P. Widows and Orphans Benevolent Fund, when a substantial sum was realised by the sale of programmes, the price of which was fixed at a minimum of 6d., but which in many cases realised 5s. apiece.

Mr. Martin Adeson, the principal comedian, did yeoman service in the cause, rendering a humorous song and a "burlesque oratorio," and taking part with Miss Clara Bernard in a diverting pot-pourri. Contributions were also made by Messrs. Stanley Brett, Arthur Appleby, Savill Foster, Walter Heal, Fred Leslie, and Harry Emeric, and Misses Nancy Langtyre, Beatrice Edwards, and Maisie North. The company will be back in England at Christmas.

An inexplicable error has been perpetrated in at least two of our contemporaries, who have this week asserted that the pantomime at Drury Lane is to be The Forty Thieves, gravely adding the names of the artists to whom the parts of Robin Hood, Maid Marion and Friar Tuck were allotted. How such essentially English characters as those named could figure in a story from the "Arabian Nights" it is hard to imagine, but in Babes in the Wood, which, of course, is the real theme of the next Drury Lane annual, they would, manifestly, be quite at home.

The "book" is being written by Mr. J. Hickory Wood in association with Mr. Arthur Collins, Mr. J. M. Glover is composing the music, and Signor Attilio Comelli is designing the costumes. Mr. Walter Passmore and Miss Marie George are to be the "babes," and Mr. Harry Fragson will make his appearance for the first time in England in petticoats, in the part of a French governess. Miss Madge Vincent, who played Nates so charmingly to her sister Ruth's Amasis at the Duke of York's, will be Maid Marion, and Miss Queenie Leighton Robin Hood, and the incomparable cast will also include Mr. Harrison Brockbank, Mr. Johnnie Danvers, Mr. Arthur Conquest, Mr. Neil Kenyon, Messrs. Drew and Alders, and Miss Meredith Meredro. The clever Pender Troupe will be responsible for the harlequinade.

Mr. Alfred Sutro sailed on Wednesday from Liverpool for New York, where he intends to produce his play, John Glayde's Honour. Mr. George Alexander was on the quay to wish the eminent dramatist bon voyage.

We are enabled this week to offer congratulations to Mlle. Zelie De Lussan, a famous member of the lyric stage, who was married on the 11th inst. at St. Peter and St. Edward's, Palace-street, S.W., by the Rev. Father Foster, to Mr. Angelo Fronani, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emanuele Fronani, Diplomatic Service, Washington, U.S.A. In spite of her foreign name, the bride is, like her husband, an American, and was born in New York. She was trained by her mother, and without having studied music she could sing several operatic pieces. She was four years at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, and eight years at Covent Garden, her fame being closely associated with the rôle of Carmen.

The bride's last appearance on the London stage was at the Lyric during the Moody-Manners season, when one evening, in consequence of the indisposition of Miss Kate Anderson, she played at short notice the part of Cherubino in The Marriage of Figaro to the Susannah of Miss Fanny Moody and the Figaro of Mr. Lewis James. Mr. Fronani is a professional pianist of repute, both in England and abroad, and acted in the capacity of accompanist for Mlle. de Lussan during a concert tour in America some four years ago. An attachment sprung up between the couple, with the felicitous result which we announce. Mrs. Fronani will happily continue her operatic career, and will in future be known as "Madame" Zelie De Lussan.

Many stars of the variety firmament will assist at a matinée to be given at the Chelsea Palace on Thursday, Oct. 24, in aid of the Lord Mayor's Cripples' Fund. London's chief magistrate will himself attend in state, and will be met by the Mayor of Chelsea and members of the Borough Council. An influential committee consists of Major Fountain Woods (chairman), Mr. W. Mead, Mr. W. Ross, Dr. Glassington, Mr. Wolfe S. Lyon, Mr. Henri Gros, and others. The stewards will be Mr. James W. Mathews and Mr. F. H. Pedgrift.

It will be remembered that the Lord Mayor took the chair at the recent dinner of the Royal General Theatrical Fund, and successfully advocated the cause of charity in behalf of the actors. It would be an act of grace if some members of the dramatic profession would offer their services at this matinée, as it is desirable that both the legitimate and variety stage should be represented on the programme. Any offers of assistance will be gladly received by Mr. F. H. Pedgrift at The Era office.

"Sweet Kitty Bellairs" is due at the Haymarket next Saturday. Mr. Louis Calvert, who is producing the piece in conjunction with Mr. Frederick Harrison, will be the Colonel in command of the 51st Regiment, and Mr. Henry Neville will devote his sterling abilities to the portrayal of a Colonel of the Inniskillings. The title-rôle will be embodied by Miss Eva Moore, Miss Minnie Terry will be the Miss Doll, and Miss Nita Faydon, who has for some time been a popular "Sunday" on tour, will be entrusted with the rôle of Lady Standish (Julia). The remainder of the characters will be sustained by Messrs. Eille Norwood, Owen Roughwood, Loring Fernie, Donald Fergusson, E. H. Brooke, Montague Elphinstone, Cecil Yapp, R. Fielding, J. M. Napper, Gerald Venning, G. Brookes, and Reginald White, and Misses Minnie Griffin, Maud Hoffman, Ada Mellon, Gladys Erskine, Maud Leslie, Nellie Moore, and Evelyn Beaumont.

Mr. Alfred Sutro's new play is to be produced at the Comedy on Thursday, Oct. 10. The production will be remarkable for the fact that by its means Miss Marie Tempest will be seen in a serious vein. Miss Tempest has already turned with conspicuous success from musical comedy to comedy pure and simple, and to accomplish the same results, as may well be anticipated, in still another branch of her art will indicate the possession of genius on an exalted plane.

Mr. A. E. Matthews, who bore himself so well in Peter's Mother, and won many a hearty laugh over the drollery of Gibby in My Wife, will also touch the pathetic note in the part of the younger son of a Duke who is engaged to an actress, the rôle in which Miss Tempest will appear. Other members of the cast will be Miss Lillah McCarthy, Mr. Eric Lewis, and Mr. Dawson Milward. The action of the new play takes place partly in London and partly in the country, and covers only the space of two days.

The hero of Hamilton's Second Marriage, the new play by Mrs. W. K. Clifford, which is shortly to be produced at the Court, is a distinguished Civil Servant, whose first matrimonial venture was a failure. On the death of his wife he determines to try again, and proposes to a charming young girl, with the result that the gifted authoress reveals in her own way in the course of the piece. Whatever may be the outcome of the story, there can be no doubt that the theme will be treated in interesting style.

A mass meeting of the Actors' Union will be held in London on Sunday evening, Oct. 20, when the speakers will include Members of Parliament and leaders of the Labour movement. Every member of the theatrical profession will be admitted on production of his or her card. The London meeting will be followed by mass meetings of a similar nature at Liverpool on Tuesday, Oct. 22, Manchester, Oct. 23, Glasgow, Oct. 24, and Birmingham, Oct. 25. Those members of the A.U. who are in the above towns on the dates named are asked to communicate with the secretary.

The following letter has been addressed to Mr. Richard Bell, expressing the sympathy of the A.U. with the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants in the present crisis:—"Actors' Union, 49, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C., Sept. 25.—Dear Mr. Bell,—At a general meeting of our members held yesterday, the 24th inst., a resolution was unanimously carried expressing sympathy with the Amalgamated Railway Servants' Association in their present difficulty, and appreciating the moderation and determination you yourself are displaying in this great crisis. We beg you to accept our sincere good wishes.—Yours very faithfully, Kenneth Blackmore, Secretary."

Mr. Norman V. Norman will stage Miss Gladys Unger's play, Mr. Sheridan, at Brighton next week with a powerful cast. It was at Brighton that the piece was originally produced before it went to the Garrick Theatre. Esther Ogle will be played by Miss Beatrice Wilson, Lord Cray and Tom Sheridan by Messrs. Norman-Bent and Alfred Gray, and Kitty Montgomery by Miss Sybil Ruskin.

"The Ballet of the Clouds" is the name given by Mr. Maundy-Gregory to the new terpsichorean spectacle invented by Miss Lizzie Maynard for the elaborate pantomime to be presented by him at Christmas. A scene of quite a fresh character is being painted for the setting to the fairies' dances.

A new play of a farcical nature, called Gentlemen Boarders, by Arthur Eckersley, who writes for a number of London magazines, will be produced by one of the Messrs. J. Maundy-Gregory companies at the New Assembly Theatre at Malvern on Monday next.

"Great Possessions," in its second week of provincial representation at Edinburgh Lyceum Theatre, has entirely justified Mr. Martin Harvey's belief in its original and telling qualities, and was played four times to very large and appreciative audiences. Mr. Harvey is so delighted with the success of the new production that he intends also to represent it four times at Glasgow next week and three times at Manchester during the week following.

Mr. J. F. Elliston made a personal application at the Town Hall, Bolton, on the 25th inst., for his twenty-eighth consecutive dramatic licence. It is well for him that Mr. Elliston has reached that period when flattery exercises no ill effect, otherwise the many and various complimentary remarks that were made by the chairman, Alderman Nicholson, J.P., and other members might have adverse influences.

Miss Gertrude Kingston appeared before Mr. Curtis Bennett at Westminster on Thursday to an Excise summons for keeping a carriage, "wearing and using" armorial bearings on a carriage, and employing two male servants, without the respective licences. Miss Kingston in private life is Mrs. Gertrude Angela Mary Silver, and an Inland Revenue officer deposed that on June 4 he called at her residence at Victoria-square, and a man-servant answered the door. Subsequently Mrs. Silver appeared, and he questioned her about an electric motor-car at a garage in her name. The lady said she had only had it six months from relatives. Witness afterwards saw at the door a motor-car on which were armorial bearings. The defendant was officially written to in May, and again afterwards, but no licenses were taken.

Defendant said that what she told the Excise officer was that the car was lent to her by a lady and gentleman friend. It was kept in her name at a garage until June 15, when she purchased it. The crest on the car was not hers, but that of her friends. The chauffeur was supplied by the garage company, and paid by agreement with them. She had no idea that licenses were required, and rather resented the Excise officer's manner and the way he cross-examined and heckled her. She had a butler—a Frenchman—and his wife in her service.

The magistrate said with regard to the chauffeur it could not be said that he was in defendant's employ when the garage company had power of dismissal, &c. So that summons would be dismissed. But a licence had to be taken for keeping a carriage, and anyone using armorial bearings was liable. It need not be their own crest, as in this instance, so there would be fines of two guineas, to include costs, on each of two summonses, and an additional fine of 15s. and costs of summons (to include a licence) for the manservant who opened the door. Mr. Curtis Bennett added that he was sure there had been no intention on the part of defendant to defraud the Revenue, and that she had only acted in ignorance.

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," which was recently transferred from Terry's to the Adelphi, will register its 200th performance in London on Tuesday, Oct. 15, and to mark this special occasion Mrs. Madge Carr Cook is again inviting the "Mrs. Wiggses" of London to a special matinée. Only applications coming directly through clergymen can be dealt with, and seats will be allotted as far as possible to all applications received up to Sept. 30. Mrs. Gaston Mayer and Mr. Tom B. Davis are lending every assistance to Mrs. Cook in her kind endeavours, and the entire Mrs. Wiggs company have generously volunteered their services for the occasion.

Miss Olga Nethersole began her American tour at Kansas City, Mo., on the 12th inst., appearing in Carmen. Early in February she will fulfil an engagement at the Astor Theatre in this city, where she will be seen in four new plays, viz., The Enigma, by Paul Hervieu; a dramatic version of I Pagliacci, by Charles Brookfield; The Rival, adapted from the French by Louis N. Parker; and Paul Hervieu's latest play, The Awakening.

The Paris stage has lost an esteemed celebrity in the death of Ernest Blum, the prolific dramatist, who passed half a century in writing plays. M. Blum, who died on the 19th inst., was born in 1836, and had his first play produced when he was only 18. It was called Une Femme qui Mord, and was staged at the Variétés. M. Blum had collaborated with most of the authors of his time. With M. Henri Rochefort he wrote a charming comedy, Les Memoires de Réséda, but his most assiduous collaborator was Raoul Toché, and between them they produced no fewer than forty pieces, prominent among which were Voyage en Suisse, Adam et Eve, and Madame Satan. The first-named piece, it may be recalled, has been popularised by the Brothers Renad throughout the kingdom under the title of The Swiss Express. M. Blum was a chevalier of the Legion of Honour.

Miss Joan Derry, who has just finished a long engagement with Mr. Charles Collette, has been retained by Mr. Charles Cartwright for his Dickens répertoire company to play Agnes Wickfield in David Copperfield and to create Susan Nipper in Dombey and Son.

Mr. Henry Tweedie this week celebrates his silver wedding, and has our heartiest congratulations. Mr. Tweedie commenced his theatrical career some twenty years ago as co-lessee of Theatre Royal, Eastbourne, and afterwards toured for many years as business-manager with the late Captain Gilbert Elliott in G. R. Sims' famous drama, The Romany Rye. Drama followed drama, and subsequent to a long spell of musical comedy with Milton Bode's companies came three tours, representing Forbes Robertson with Mice and Men and The Light that Failed. A busy career has also included a long itinerary in association with Miss Olga Nethersole's Sapho company.

Another company organised by the enterprising Maurice E. Bandmann left England's shores last week by the P. and O. ss. Persia bound for the Mediterranean, India, and the Far East. The entertainment will be on the lines of the Follies, and is styled the London Frivolity Company. All the principal theatres of Mr. M. E. Bandmann's circuit will be visited.

Mr. Charles Constant, the enterprising proprietor and manager of the Theatre Royal, Ryde, was again honoured by a Royal visit on Tuesday last, when Prince Leopold of Battenberg, with Mr. Victor Cockran, motored over from Osborne Cottage in order to be present at the flying matinée of Miss Louie Freear and her talented company. This is the third occasion on which the management of this popular house has received Royal patronage during the past season.

Mr. Allan Wilkie's next addition to his already extensive répertoire will take the form of a special production of Julius Cæsar. An entirely new wardrobe is being prepared, and new scenery painted by expert artists.

Miss Stella Brereton Douglass, one of our most able teachers of elocution, acting, and deportment, has resumed her classes at 30, Park Village East. Miss Douglass's methods are entirely practical, and the result is that she has turned out a large number of young persons equipped not only with the necessary elocutionary ability, but with the knowledge of stage business, dramatic gesture, and appropriate movement, which too often have to be acquired by aspirants at actual rehearsal, much to the extra annoyance of unfortunate "producers." Miss Douglass does not spare herself, and the training she gives is correspondingly effective.

The Actors' Union has arranged a dinner for Sunday next, to take place at 7 p.m., at the Boulogne Restaurant, Gerrard-street, to which members and their friends are invited. Tickets may be obtained of the secretary, price 2s. 6d. each, at 49, Bedford-street.

The "King's" Time-table, issued by Mr. Mulholland with the programme should be welcomed by the patrons of his handsome playhouse at Hammersmith, and the idea might be adopted by more central theatres with great advantage. Not only are the trains after the performance on the many convenient railways and "tubes" clearly given, but the tramway and omnibus facilities can be seen at a glance, and attention is even directed to the fact that the King's Theatre is a few yards outside the four-mile radius, but that the radius does not affect the taximeter cabs.

The fancy dress balls at Covent Garden will be given approximately every fortnight until the end of March, and will not be interfered with by the autumn opera season. The prizes offered last evening for the most handsome dominoes consisted of a lady's dressing case, with solid silver fittings; a lady's silver toilet set, in case; a silver-plated flower-bowl; and a silver-plated afternoon tea-set.

Mr. Sutton Vane, the author of The Span of Life, which has enjoyed such extended prosperity on tour, and of The Cotton King, one of the Adelphi productions of former years, has been prostrated by a paralytic stroke. At the time of the seizure he was engaged upon a play intended for immediate production by Chas. Cartwright, but which must now remain unfinished. Mr. Vane's illness is causing great anxiety.

Mr. George R. Sims has taken in hand, for the purposes of revision, his fine play, The Harbour Lights, for Messrs. Savery and Pigott, in order that all business may be brought up to date for the forthcoming tour of this well-known Adelphi piece.

A new comedy, in three acts, entitled Dynecourt's Venture, by Geraldine Kemp, will be produced at the Theatre Royal, Great Yarmouth, on Oct. 9. The piece will be produced under the auspices of the "New Play Company," a society formed for the exploitation of new authors.

"Mr. Popple of Ippleton" will be the attraction at the Crystal Palace Theatre next week. Mr. Bannister Howard is fortunate in being able to secure Mr. Macdona's chief company, which includes Miss Millie Hylton as La Bolero, Mr. Arthur Longley as Mr. Popple, and a strong cast.

Interesting conclusions regarding the "musical ear" were furnished in a lecture delivered by Dr. John Warriner at Trinity College of Music on Wednesday. An ear for music, declared the speaker, although occasionally inherited, was largely the result of environment at a time when the perceptive faculty was strongest. A child who heard no music had no ear for music. Children of the upper classes—by which he meant the children of titled parents—because they did not go to school in the ordinary way had not usually a good ear for music. With children of other classes who went to school at an early age it was different. All class-singing, drilling to music, kindergarten, had its effect. Even the pianola and the street organ were useful in creating an ear for music.

Mr. T. G. Hales, who is now enjoying a well-earned retirement, keeps a close eye, nevertheless, on the deserving members of the profession with which he was so long connected. His wide experience of the ups and downs of stage life makes him a keen sympathiser in cases of real distress, and in writing to Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, of The Era, about the unfortunate Mr. Marshall Moore, he says:—"I am sure the case is a deserving one. I know nothing but good of him, and also know him to be a persevering and conscientious worker." Words are cheap, but Mr. Hales is a practical philanthropist, and backs up his kindly remarks with a cheque for £5.

Messrs. Alban Atwood and Russell Vaun's new farcical comedy, Is Marriage a Failure? will start on tour at the Theatre Royal, Worthing, on Oct. 10. The company will comprise Messrs. Farren Soutar, Charles Allan, P. H. Clayton Greene, Alban Atwood, Edward Sidney, William Vaughan, and Clyde Burchett, Misses Lilias Waldegrave, Beatrice Selwyn, Vere Gerald, Florence Le Clerc, Nellie Dade, Alice Gwynne, and Mrs. Edgar Colona. Mr. Henry Tweedie will be the business manager.

Mr. C. Finch Hatton, the popular acting-manager of the Palace Theatre, Leicester, in addition to his prowess as a cricketer and footballer, is also an expert golfer, but met his match on the Birstall Links last week, when he, in conjunction with Mr. Percy Honri, who was appearing at the Palace, challenged Mr. Frank Lindo and his manager, Mr. Helsby Wright, to a foursome. After a keenly-contested game, the latter won by 14.

Mr. Herbert Sleath has engaged Mr. Arthur Bertram for his business-manager during his season at Mr. Vedrenne's New Theatre in Shaftesbury-avenue.

At the meeting of the directors of the Oldham Empire Theatre Co. this week, the advisability of pulling down and rebuilding the Hippodrome Theatre was considered, and it was decided to put the matter on the agenda for further discussion at their next meeting, when the important question of whether the new theatre shall be designed for a first-class dramatic or opera house or for a variety theatre will have to be decided.

Large and enthusiastic audiences have welcomed Mr. T. Edward Ward's first visit to the Theatre Royal, Sheffield, this week with his new production, Second to None. The keenness of the audience imparted quite an edge to the efforts of the players, and this notwithstanding the absence of cutlery in the play, for Second to None has been evolved without the aid of murderous weapons of any description.

"When Other Lips" has fully sustained the promise made on its production, and Mr. T. Arthur Jones is delighted equally with its artistic and commercial success. The piece is playing to record business everywhere, and this week, at Auckland, money has been turned away in the popular parts every night.

The Leeds Musical Festival will be held on Oct. 9 and three following days. The rehearsals of the principals and band will take place at the Royal College of Music, London, on Sept. 30 and Oct. 1, and two following days, the first full final rehearsal being fixed for Friday evening, Oct. 4, and full rehearsals for Oct. 5 and 7.

The exterior of the Theatre Royal, Plymouth, has recently been greatly improved by the erection of a number of powerful electric arc-lamps, and many other useful innovations have been introduced by the new management. It may be added that communications concerning business matters should be addressed to Mr. J. Langdon Lee, the resident-manager.

Mr and Mrs. Wilfrid Compton (Miss Miriam Holt) are again renewing their acquaintance with Our Flat, playing the young lovers, Clarance and Lucy, with great success. Mr. Compton has had a long innings with this favourite comedy at different periods, whilst Miss Holt registers her seventieth performance this afternoon at the Theatre Royal, Bath. Next month Mr. Compton and Miss Holt play Sir Christopher Frayne and Muriel Eden in The Gay Lord Quex. They return to the "halls" next May, opening at the Empire, Hackney.

The attraction at the Dalston Theatre, S.E., on Monday, Oct. 7, will be a powerful one, consisting as it does of Mr. Wentworth Croke's company in the wonderfully engrossing and stirring drama, The Prodigal Son, by Hall Caine. The production, which is direct from Drury Lane Theatre, has the advantage of new scenery, dresses, and effects, and the company is of a first-class order.

The full cast of The Sugar Bowl, the comedy in four acts by Madeline Lucette Ryley, which Mr. Herbert Sleath will produce on Oct. 8 in conjunction with Mr. J. E. Vedrenne at the new Theatre in Shaftesbury-avenue, will consist of Mr. Frederick Kerr, Mr. Charles Sugden, Mr. Wilfred Forster, Mr. George Bealby, Mr. Herbert Sleath, Mr. Edmund Gwenn, Mr. G. D. Burnaby, Miss Kate Sergeantson, Miss Beatrice Ferrar, Miss Mary Ralph, Miss Hilda Dick, Miss Lena Halliday, Miss Denton, Mr. Albert Sims, Mr. Mark Paton, Mr. Harry Glover, and Miss Ellis Jeffreys.

An excellent football contest under Association rules was witnessed by a large attendance on the Whipcord-lane Ground, Chester, on Wednesday, when Mr. Geo. Dance's Spring Chicken company put up a good resistance to the Chester Wednesday Football Club. Miss Violet Loraine (Rosalie) kicked off, and the home team won by 6 goals to 3. The Spring Chicken team was composed of Messrs. Percival Knight (captain), Payne, Corray, Berkley, Fisher, Lascelles, Ossay, Percival, Arunell, Crane, and Swift. Messrs. Knight, Payne, and Lascelles each scored a goal.

Hereditary talent has been manifested in the case of the winner of the tenth George Edwardes's Scholarship at the School of Music and Dramatic Art, 77, New Oxford-street, which was secured on Sept. 19 by Miss Doris Cameron, a daughter of the once famous comic opera artist, Violet Cameron. The Foundation Open Scholarship, which was competed for on Sept. 18, was awarded to Miss Gladys Voile, aged 17, whose versatility was exemplified in a ballad, a comedy song and dance, a dramatic extract, and serious and humorous poems. The school has now started its autumn term, but pupils may be admitted at any time.

Miss Sophie Lingwood is playing Mrs. Smith in Mr. Walter Reynold's comedy, Mr. Smith.—Miss Louie Adair, who created the leading part in the new drama, A Mother's Sacrifice, is to be complimented on a big success, her performance being a highly artistic one.

Mr. Desmond M. Raleigh, who is so successfully running Her Son at the New Theatre, is under contract to produce Mrs. Ellison's Answer by an early date, and should he be unable to find a theatre, it will be necessary to withdraw Mr. Vachell's charming comedy in order to allow the staging of Mrs. Ellison's Answer. This, however, is a measure Mr. Raleigh is loth to adopt, as during the last two weeks the business at the New Theatre has increased to an enormous extent. It is to be hoped that a house suitable to the requirements of the piece may be found, and that Mr. Raleigh's double enterprise may pursue a prosperous course.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

In Defence of Liverpool.

THE speech delivered by Mr. Beerbohm Tree on Saturday last at the annual dinner of the Liverpool Stage Club has, writes a correspondent, been strongly commented on in that city. He said that his enquiries as to the dramatic history of the city "filled him with profound depression," and he "deplored the fact that Liverpool should have developed so one-sidedly," also that the "support given to what had hitherto been known as the legitimate drama was deplorably small as compared with that which welcomed musical comedy," &c. Liverpool has for years shown a decided affection for the "legitimate." "A glance at the columns of The Era," says our correspondent, "will reveal the fact that there are sixteen places of amusement in the city on the Mersey, at nine of which drama is staged. In your issue of July 20 mention was made that in Liverpool the two performances per night of drama were becoming very popular, and that four halls, formerly variety, had abandoned that class of entertainment within recent years. Further, the Muncaster, at Bootle, had adopted drama twice nightly, thus giving Liverpool the credit of possessing five stock dramatic companies, a record that is not equalled by any other centre in the British Isles."

Dainty "Diggings."

"I WAS once," writes an old actor, "on an all-night journey by rail from Scotland, and arrived at Bolton, Lancs., at seven in the morning, cold, hungry, and wretched. The theatrical public-house had just opened, and the barman gave me a lodging-house address kept by three elderly maiden sisters. One of these, in answer to my application re apartments, said, with a trembling voice and looking very pale and scared, 'Yes, sir! You can have a sitting and bedroom, but not until this afternoon!' 'Why?' I asked. 'Well—you see—the—the gentleman who occupied your bedroom that is to be hung himself in it last night, and we're waiting for the parish people to take the body away!'"

A Quadruple Wig.

"WE had a very clever scenic artist," says the same correspondent, "who wore a 'chameleon' wig. I use the term advisedly, because its colours varied according to the light—daylight or artificial—which it was subjected to. I have said that he wore a wig; I should have said he wore four wigs: a short one for the first week in the month; then another, a little longer, for the second week; one longer yet for the third week, and one longer still for the fourth week. Then, remarking incidentally, 'I think I'll have my hair cut!' would go home and put on jasey No. 1. It pleased him and deceived no one."

Instead of Stockings.

POOR Charles Vernon, a light-hearted, devil-may-care, clever leading man, was once announced to play Hamlet at Oldham, but, on looking out his props for the night found that his black silk tights were in "ladders" and holes. Putting 15s. in his pocket he rushed over to Manchester to purchase a new pair, but, having "a heart open as the day for melting charity," and meeting the "boys," he dipped too deeply into his purse and came back to Oldham without the black tights. Being a young man of fertile resource, he black-leaded his legs with the stove polishing brushes, and, report sayeth, they looked better than silk itself.

Admiration All Right.

MR. HENRY ARTHUR JONES, who is in America, superintending the rehearsals of his new play, The Galilean's Victory, which is to be played at the Knickerbocker Theatre, on Monday, in speaking of the bicycle accident he recently met with in London, said, "My collar-bone is dislocated, but my admiration of America is still in the right place." The scenes of the play are laid in Trentistown, an English manufacturing town. In the course of an interview Mr. Jones said:—"There seems to be a broader field for serious plays in New York than is afforded in London. Just now over there there is less appetite for the serious drama than in many seasons. The trend of popular approval is toward the lighter forms of theatrical entertainment, such as musical comedy and burlesque, which promise to be the 'fads' of the season."

As She is Wrote.

DRAMATIC criticism is indeed being raised to a high plane; indeed, almost above the heads of ordinary playgoers. Mr. Holbrook Jackson, in his recently-published book on Bernard Shaw, says:—"Ever since that incident occurred in life which produced man, a battle has been going on between the result of the incident—man—and the probably unwitting cause of it—Nature, alias the Life-force. At one point in the course of evolution, the highest form of sentient matter—man—commenced to think about itself. Self-consciousness was born. The Life-force, as exemplified in the mind of man, became a mirror in which man saw himself. . . . From the instant man became obsessed by his own beauty and wisdom, evolution ceased. If it had been possible for the apes to have acquired this conceit, evolution would have ceased with them just the same." There is evidently a good deal more in the drama than most people are aware of.

Actors' Incomes.

An actor, says Mr. George Grossmith, jun., in London Opinion, never has an income in the ordinary acceptation of the word, and it is obvious that rules for the cultivation of thrifty habits which are intended for people who have incomes can be of little use to people who have not. Under normal conditions, an actor only earns money when he has an engagement. When the piece he is playing in stops, so does his engagement, and, consequently, his pay. Therefore, to say that an actor receiving £100 per week is making £5,200 per annum is absurd. His salary may cease at any moment. I know an actor who jumped from £5 a week quite suddenly into a salary ten times that amount. But just as he was beginning to adjust his expenditure in accordance with his salary, the piece he was playing in stopped, and so, of course, did his £50 a week, and he found, as many an actor has done before, that a salary of £50 a week is a very different thing from an income of £2,600 a year, though there is an apparent similarity between the two.

Saving and Seclusion.

The fact that an actor's earnings are liable to fluctuate in this way really makes it impossible for him to observe ordinary rules of thrift. He must devise rules to suit the needs of the moment. One of these might be to save money when his salary exceeds the amount of his ordinary expenditure. This seems a simple rule to observe, but in practice it is not so. An actor who lives a good deal in the world, and has plenty of friends, may, and often does, help to attract people to a theatre better than the man whom no one ever sees except on the stage. But the former finds it excessively hard to save money. I know there are actors who deliberately hide themselves from the world because they find it pays them to do so, on the principle that the public take a greater interest in a man whose private life is strictly veiled from their gaze than one who is at no pains to shroud himself in mystery. The recluse plan of living certainly enables a person to cut his living expenses to a minimum, and if it in addition increases an actor's drawing powers, its advantages are obvious.

"JOY."

A Comedy in Three Acts, by John Galsworthy.
Produced at a matinée at the Savoy Theatre, on Tuesday, Sept. 24.

Colonel Hope ..... MR. A. E. GEORGE
Mrs. Hope ..... MISS HENRIETTA WATSON
Miss Beech ..... MISS FLORENCE HAYDON
Letty ..... MISS MARY BARTON
Ernest Blunt ..... MR. FREDERICK LLOYD
Mrs. Gwyn ..... MISS WYNNE MATTHISON
Joy ..... MISS DOROTHY MINTO
Dick Merton ..... MR. ALLAN WADE
Hon. Maurice Lever .... MR. THALBERG CORBETT
Rose ..... MISS AMY LAMBORN

There is room on the English stage for the gratification of the most opposite tastes; and those who prefer for their afternoon's amusement a painful and unpleasant situation, a certain reality of pettiness, and a problem which is left unsolved at the final descent of the curtain, will find their desires catered for in Joy.

The "motive" of Mr. John Galsworthy's play, which was produced at the Savoy Theatre on Tuesday afternoon, is the discovery by a young girl of her mother's adultery. Joy, the heroine, is a merry, artless maiden, who, when the action opens, is staying on one of the upper reaches of the Thames with her uncle, Colonel Hope, a retired officer of limited means. His wife is a tyrannical, conceited woman, who rules the household by sheer force of "nagging" and self-assertion. She is impatient at the Colonel's preference of a safe three per cent. investment to more perilous ventures, and wants him to invest part of his capital in a gold mine in Mexico, which is being promoted by a certain Hon. Maurice Lever. Mrs. Gwyn, a relative of the Colonel's, has quarrelled with her husband, who has practically deserted her, and has gone away to India. She has formed an immoral alliance with Lever, with whom she is passionately in love. The Hon. Maurice and she come down to the Thames-side place, and the Colonel becomes interested in the mine, in which he ultimately decides to invest £2,000. As the mine is more or less of a swindle, Mrs. Gwyn asks Lever not to accept the Colonel's offer of investment, and, in the end, it is refused. But Joy, who, from the first, has conceived a bitter hatred for Lever, comes upon him and her mother in a position which leaves no doubt of their relations; and the girl makes a passionate appeal to her mother to break off the liaison. This, however, Mrs. Gwyn, having chief regard for her own happiness, refuses to do, and Joy, having fallen in love with a young man named Dick Merton, is more inclined to be indulgent to her mother's frailty, the play ending with things being allowed to remain in their present condition. The part of "chorus" to the drama is played by an elderly governess, Miss Beech, who is of such an essentially benevolent nature that she will not judge Mrs. Gwyn, believing, as she says, that we are all the same, and that we always erect our personal errors into the category of "special cases." Other characters in the play are the Colonel's married daughter, Letty, a colourless personage, and her husband, Ernest Blunt, a phlegmatic critic of the general action. The details of middle-class life in somewhat straitened circumstances are added with much humour, and all the accessories, especially the single scene, are supplied with great care and solicitude.

The piece was well acted in the quiet, natural style of the present Savoy management. Mr. A. E. George played Colonel Hope so as to give the character all the necessary prominence, and depicted the irritable, high-strung, and contradictory old officer in a most realistic and effective way. The contrast between the Colonel's habitual submissiveness to his wife, and his occasional outbursts of independence when goaded beyond endurance by her tyranny, was admirably drawn by Mr. George, who hit the happy mean between exaggeration and under-acting, and emphasised the author's irony with commendable skill. Miss Henrietta Watson as the domineering wife was very brisk and vivacious, and depicted the utter unconsciousness of the termagant, and her absolute confidence in her own wisdom very smartly and neatly. Miss Florence Haydon's performance as Miss Beech could hardly have been improved upon. The quiet good-sense of the amiable old maid, her placid acceptance of the inevitable, and the deep feeling with which she discussed with Mrs. Gwyn her painful and puzzling position were all rendered by Miss Haydon with almost faultless repose and harmony. Miss Amy Lamborn hits off nicely the blank, unexpressionless face, and the insensible monotone of the well-drilled servant; and the little touch of nature when Rose—the real girl coming out for a moment—has a solitary waltz in the moonlight, was neatly and cleverly put in. Mr. Frederick Lloyd supplied a very real and unforced sketch of a familiar type as the smiling, slangy, imperturbable Ernest Blunt, his lazy grin and languid drawl being especially effective. Miss Dorothy Minto as Joy showed herself to be not only an agreeable and attractive representative of a young girl on the brink of womanhood, but an actress of much emotional power. Joy's ingenuous artlessness was well shown, and Miss Minto's acting in the scene between mother and daughter was full of strength and feeling, and intensely and irresistibly impressive. Mr. Allan Wade handled the rather difficult character of Dick Merton with much tact, the infusion of burlesque in the love-making in the last act being just sufficient, and not overdone, and the lines being delivered with all the necessary youthful fervour. Mr. Thalberg Corbett made the Hon. Maurice Lever just the self-contained, politic, and worldly-wise individual suggested by the text, and his able interpretation of the rather repulsive character accentuated the irony of the main situation. Miss Mary Barton as the quite commonplace Mrs. Blunt, was quite satisfactory, and did all that the part demanded. Miss Wynne Matthison looked very handsome and attractive as Mrs. Gwyn, and, for the poignancy and deep significance of her emotional acting, deserves our warmest praise. Her performance was not only strong, but subtle; and the delicate art of the embodiment was only equalled by its earnestness and truth. The piece was listened to with attention by an obviously interested audience, who gave Joy and its author a very cordial reception.

Shakespeare and Shaw.

"The reason Shakespeare belittled Cæsar and that no later English dramatist touched this greatest of all protagonists until I saw my chance and took it, was simply that Shakespeare's sympathies were with Plutarch and the Nonconformist Conscience, which he personified as Brutus." This passage occurs in a letter from Mr. Bernard Shaw in the Play Pictorial. It is quite characteristic of the attitude of the little artist with reference to the great artist, whom the smaller man usually conceives in his own image, as a person with sympathies and theories instead of an intuitive creator, solely intent on realising his imaginations. Still, every letter helps. Since the Welsh mountain episode, we expect every day to hear of Mr. Shaw diving off Westminster Bridge in order to "boom" Cæsar's jump in the amusing Shavian sketch.

A Model Wife.

MISS AMELIA BINGHAM, an American actress, is appearing this season in a new play, called A Modern Lady Godiva, by Frederick F. Schrader and Lloyd M. Bingham. It tells the story of an English noblewoman who sacrifices her modesty for the sake of her ruined and invalid husband by posing for a picture of Lady Godiva. Miss Bingham's supporting company includes Mr. William L. Abingdon.

"BARRY DOYLE'S REST CURE."

Play, in Three Acts,
by W. Gayer Mackay and Robert Ord,
Produced at the Court Theatre,
on Wednesday, Sept. 25.

Earl of Strathesk ..... MR. E. W. GARDEN
Barry Doyle ..... MR. W. GRAHAM BROWNE
Jack Harverson .... MR. ARTHUR HOLMES-GORE
Cotter ..... MR. C. M. LOWNE
Angus Macdougal ..... MR. EDWARD Y. RAE
Footman ..... MR. CLAUDE VERNON
Servant ..... MR. HEATH J. HAVILAND
The Countess of Strathesk
MISS CARLOTTA ADDISON
Lady Jean Hamilton .... MISS BEATRICE TERRY
Lady Hazel Pearce-Warrener
MISS ROSE MUSGROVE

Messrs. W. Gayer Mackay and Robert Ord's comedy belongs to the category of light but pleasant plays, and forms a very agreeable two hours' entertainment of an amusing and diverting nature. There is not very much in it; but it is so neatly written and so admirably acted that the impression it creates is warmly favourable. Barry Doyle is a young man who, after various experiences in the Colonies, has been left a large fortune by a relative, and is now one of London's millionaires. His secretary is his old and trusted friend, Jack Harverson, with whom he worked in Australia. Barry is disgusted with the shameless manner in which the match-making mammas try to catch him as a husband for their daughters. After an exciting ball he has proposed to Lady Hazel Pearce-Warrener, whose mother has assured him that her daughter is deeply in love with him. Lady Hazel, however, was only acting under orders, her heart being given to Harverson. On the morning after the ball, she calls on Barry and asks him to give her back her promise, confessing that she cares for somebody else. Doyle willingly releases her; but the incident makes such an impression on him that he resolves to fly from the mercenary metropolis to a cottage in Scotland, exchanging identities with his faithful secretary. The cottage turns out to be dilapidated; and the two young men are taken by the proprietor, the Earl of Strathesk, an impecunious and thrifty Scotch peer, into his castle, where Barry, in the character of Harverson, falls in love with the Earl's daughter, Lady Jean Hamilton. The persevering attempts of her parents to marry her to rich men have disgusted Lady Jean with millionaires, for whom she proclaims an especial aversion, much to Doyle's embarrassment. Before he can explain matters, Lady Hazel, who is an old friend of Lady Jean's, comes to stay at the Castle, and precipitates matters by recognising Barry and Harverson. The Countess, who has just told Barry that, as a poor man, his pretension to Lady Jean's hand is absurd, is greatly relieved by the discovery; but Lady Jean is highly indignant at the way in which she has been deceived, and breaks off her engagement at once. The last act takes place in the cottage, to which the young men have returned, and where they amuse themselves with repairing the premises. By representing to Lady Jean that Doyle is becoming seriously ill as the result of her cruelty, she is induced to reconsider her decision; and, Harverson and Lady Hazel eventually pairing off, all ends well and cheerfully.

The piece was played in just the light and bright style necessary, and with an admirable amount of polish and refinement. Mr. W. Graham Browne as Barry Doyle hit off exactly the easy, natural, animated nature of the newly-made millionaire, and depicted, very expressively, his genuine good nature, his warm and honest impulses, and his droll anxiety. The love-scenes with Lady Jean were treated with agreeable tact and skill; and altogether Mr. Browne's reading of the rôle was one which could only have been supplied by an artist of real gift and ripe experience. Mr. E. W. Garden's firm, humorous, and reposeful method was well suited to the character of the Earl of Strathesk, whom Mr. Garden endowed with all the necessary bland good nature and "canny" thriftiness. Mr. Arthur Holmes-Gore handled the rôle of Jack Harverson very ably and well. The part is one which requires sustained skill and much quiet consideration; and Mr. Holmes-Gore's performance was convincing by reason of its complete unconsciousness and entire freedom from strain and exaggeration. Mr. C. M. Lowne was superbly refined and marvellously self-respecting as Cotter, the immaculate valet who takes himself so seriously as to create ample amusement. In appearance, tone, and demeanour Mr. Lowne was an ideal body-servant; and his Cotter was one of the most comical things in the play. Mr. Edward Y. Rae contributed a quaint and characteristic sketch of a Highland gillie, his broad Scotch being excellent; and Mr. Claude Vernon did good work as the Footman at the Castle. Mr. Heath J. Haviland was efficient as a servant. That admirable actress, Miss Carlotta Addison, gave an almost faultless rendering of the rôle of the Countess of Strathesk, the scheming and mercenary nature of the lady and her style and dignity being equally well depicted. A bright and bewitching Lady Jean Hamilton was Miss Beatrice Terry, who won all hearts by a judicious mixture of ingenuousness and individuality, and by her charming appearance and dainty and delicate delivery. The success of the comedy scenes in the second and third acts owed much to the assistance of Miss Terry, who had the keenest appreciation of the possibilities of her part, and took advantage of them to the utmost. Miss Rose Musgrove was a very pretty and pleasing representative of Lady Hazel Pearce-Warrener. Lady Hazel's uneasiness in the interview with Doyle in the first act was ably indicated; and Miss Musgrove's acting throughout was full of cheery expressiveness. She managed to be animated and amusing without ceasing to be essentially well-bred.

Barry Doyle's Rest Cure, which had a very favourable reception, was preceded by the one-act play by E. M. Bryant, entitled

"THE PEACEMAKER."

Elizabeth Lavendar .... MISS VICTORIA ADDISON
Joyce Harford ..... MISS INA PELLY
Doctor Burton ..... MR. REGINALD EYRE
Richard Harford ..... MR. EDMUND BREON
Parsons ..... MISS ELLA TARRANT

This pleasant little piece, which was first performed in front of The Stronger Sex at the Apollo Theatre on Jan. 22, is capably performed at the Court by a well-chosen cast. The benevolent Miss Elizabeth Lavendar, whose attempt to reunite the young married couple who have quarrelled and are separated is so little appreciated by the pair, has an intelligent and agreeable representative in Miss Victoria Addison, who plays the part with all the necessary gentleness and grace, and with the acceptable addition of excellent style and feeling. Miss Ella Tarrant is extremely amusing as the stupid servant Parsons; and Miss Ina Pelly and Mr. Edmund Breon give neat interpretations of the characters of Joyce and Richard Harford, Mr. Reginald Eyre sustaining with tact and judgment the rôle of the doctor who finally wins Elizabeth's heart by his patient devotion.

MR. TREE AT LIVERPOOL.

Mr. H. B. IRVING, the president of the Liverpool Stage Club, occupied the chair at the Club's annual dinner at the Exchange Station Hotel last Sunday, and amongst those present were the guest of the evening, Mr. H. Beerbohm Tree, Sir Alfred Jones, the Rev. T. W. M. Lund, Mr. F. Salisbury (Postmaster of Liverpool), the Hon. J. L. Griffiths (United States Consul), and Messrs. Austin Harford, C.C., and F. L. Joseph, C.C.

The PRESIDENT, in proposing "Our Guest," said they were deeply indebted to Mr. Tree for attending the club's annual dinner. He suspected that one reason why Mr. Tree was so ready to be their guest was because he knew that they were a young club. Ever young himself, Mr. Tree was always in sympathy with and delighted in encouraging those who were young. That was a trait in his character which endeared him to many. Perhaps the whole of the secret of Mr. Tree's success was that he kept himself young and abreast with the movements of the time. He did not suppose that Mr. Tree had ever supported anything quite so young as they outside his own home. They were not yet two years old, but they were a very lusty and thriving infant, and they hoped to grow up worthy of their sponsors. One thing about the young was that they never forgot those who encouraged them in their youth, and the Liverpool Stage Club would never forget Mr. Tree's kindness in giving them his help in their early days. They were very proud to have him with them that evening, because all those who loved the theatre respected and admired his work, and recognised that by his art, and by the spirit and the energy of his management and the work he had done in the theatre he had upheld the highest and best traditions of our stage—traditions which have always in this country depended for their perpetuity and their very existence on the efforts of the individual. It was to such as Mr. Tree and to other actors in the past that they owed the very existence of our national drama, and the fact that Shakespeare and all that was best in the the theatre still held its own, even in these days of severe competition; and it was only by the spirit and determination of men such as Mr. Tree that England had been able to secure some sort of local history for the greatest drama that the world had ever seen, but which had met with the least recognition in the country that gave it birth.

Sir ALFRED JONES supported the toast. He said he did not attend that gathering simply for pleasure, but because he thought it an act of duty to pay respect to his friend Mr. Tree. He regarded men such as Mr. Tree and their president as doing a great deal to keep the people straight and to educate them and elevate them.

Mr. BEERBOHM TREE, in reply, said:—"I feel it a great privilege to be present on this occasion, when you are celebrating your second year of existence. Much depends on the first two years of a club's life, but I am glad to hold your pulse to-night and to record the vigour of your constitution. I have very pleasant recollections of the hospitality extended to me in Liverpool some years ago, when I was a guest at the Liverpool Press Club. A genial Bohemian there, seeing through his glass lightly and talking through his hat darkly, in the course of a speech in my honour, said, "Ah, Mr. Tree, you are a great man—you are, indeed, a great man—you ought to be a member of the Toxteth Board of Guardians." Well, I am going to talk to you to-night in my capacity as a guardian. All well-wishers of the theatre must welcome such an institution as this, for it tends to engender and to keep alive an interest in the serious drama. Such a watch committee is, indeed, needed in every great centre if the theatre—that is, the higher theatre—is to maintain its proper place in the body politic. I have read during the past week a very interesting correspondence which has appeared in the Press on the subject of the preference of the Liverpool public for the lower forms of art, and I understand that a recent Shakespearean production, reputed to be of high merit, has been neglected, while the music halls have been crowded to suffocation. From the point of view of the theatre, that is, of course, a regrettable state of things, but it is a state of things which is chronic, and can only be dealt with by the gradual evolution of education and of taste. The tendency of fashion here—as elsewhere—is no doubt towards lighter forms of entertainment; and, indeed, it is quite understandable that the masses should spend their money where they are made most happy. I believe that the need for a club of this kind is really considerable. In my peregrinations through the city I have noticed one or two rather striking facts which have led me to make some inquiries as to the dramatic history of your city during the past generation. Not far from the hotel when I am now staying there still stands a relic of a famous Liverpool theatre, the old Theatre Royal. The Royal Arms are still over the front entrance, flanked on either side by medallions of Comedy and Tragedy. Beneath these relics of a past age I saw the legend "Liverpool Cold Storage and Ice Company." I presume that is a definition of the higher drama. But worse is to follow. A few yards away there still stands another disused theatre, the old Prince of Wales's Theatre—the theatre in which, I believe, our friend Mr. John Hare made his first appearance, and on the boards of which the father of our chairman of this evening has frequently delighted Liverpool audiences. In this theatre I remember playing in my very early days—twenty-seven or twenty-eight years ago. Here, above the legend which says "Open nightly—Matinées Wednesdays and Saturdays," hangs a great board, printed in plain letters, so that those who run may read, "This theatre to be sold." Gentlemen, you will understand why these facts made me inquire as to whether we had gone backwards or forwards in Liverpool as far as the drama is concerned. I inquired naturally of members of your club, and they have given me particulars of the past history of Liverpool, which would fill me with profound depression were it not that I realise by such a gathering as we see here to-night that you are alive to the situation and are prepared to cope with it. About twenty-five years ago I understand there were four leading theatres in Liverpool and three music halls. You had the Amphitheatre, which was given up mainly to melodrama, interspersed with opera. You had the Prince of Wales's Theatre for comedy, light opera, and burlesque. You had the Rotunda, the home of melodrama. You had the Alexandra Theatre, sacred to Shakespeare and to what was known as the legitimate drama. In the twenty-five years Liverpool has not diminished in population. The opportunities of the Liverpudlians for intellectual development have not diminished. You still have but four theatres, but your three music halls of twenty-five years ago have increased to eight, giving two shows nightly. Well, gentlemen, I have no word to say against the music halls, which give entertainment and enjoyment to multitudes, but I cannot help deploring the fact that a town such as Liverpool—the second city in the Empire—should have developed so one-sidedly as appears to be the case to-day, and this does not exhaust the position, for I understand that in Liverpool the support given to what has hitherto been known as the legitimate drama is deplorably small as compared with that which welcomes musical comedies, which almost continuously occupy the boards of certain theatres. Again, gentlemen, I wish it to be quite understood that I am not saying a word against musical comedy—there is plenty of room for musical comedy in the dramatic fare of our times; but I cannot help regretting the support which is given to musical comedies as compared with plays of another type. This club will fulfil its highest mission if it does something effective to encourage the taste for the higher drama, so that Liverpool may not continue to be entirely dependent on the occasional incursions of stars from London. If the national theatre is something in the nature of a nebular hypothesis, the municipal theatre is, to my mind, nearer being within the reach of practical politics. Such a theatre might well come from the joint efforts of the municipality and of a voluntary committee, of which the nucleus might be found in this society and the active co-operation of your most distinguished citizens. But, above all, it must have the guiding inspiration of a personality. We have here Sir Alfred Jones, and if my distinguished fellow-guest had the time to spend some of his energies on this problem, I should regard the wild dream as an accomplished fact.

THE DUKE OF YORK'S.

Fortune has smiled benignly on Brewster's Millions, and another half-century has marked its triumphal progress at the Duke of York's, where it recently reached its 150th performance. The success of the piece might be ensured by one scene alone, that of the storm at sea, surely an example of stage ingenuity that cannot be surpassed. The play, which came to us on May Day from America, where it had already enjoyed a large measure of prosperity, is a dramatisation by Winchell Smith and Byron Ongley of a story by George Barr McCutcheon, and is staged by the first-named author. The present cast is practically identical with that of the first production, and each part is fitted to a nicety.

Mr. Gerald Du Maurier's conception of the title-rôle is one that displays his abilities as a light comedian in a still higher degree, and adequate as are the opportunities presented in the lines of the part, Mr. Du Maurier manages to supplement them by numberless diverting touches which intensify their drollery. The difficulties of the young legatee squandering huge sums of money with a lavish hand, yet having to fight against overwhelming prosperity in his financial affairs, are realised with irresistible effect by the actor, whose airy ingenuousness and business-like smartness provide an amusing combination. Mr. Du Maurier exerts a powerful fascination, and the part stands out as a character study of wonderful skill, perception, and intelligence.

Miss Beatrice Agnew maintains the freshness and charm of her impersonation of Peggy. Daintiness and refinement are the distinguishing marks of the embodiment, and the clever young actress presents the part in such engaging fashion with such maidenly modesty and reserve as to heighten its artistic effect. There is a wealth of tenderness in the expression of her affection for the apparently faithless Brewster, and the sympathies of the audience are throughout given to such an appealing case of "beauty in distress."

Prominent among a long list of subsidiary characters is the Archie Golding of Mr. Louis Goodrich. A buoyant and dashing style and a right appreciation of the part make it one of exceptional merit, and the love scene with the "emancipated" Janice Armstrong on board the yacht is marked by a sense of drollery which is irresistible. Admirable support is lent by Miss Evelyn D'Alroy, whose finished elocutionary methods are of great value in the rôle of Janice, a part which is rendered effective both in appearance and delivery.

Distinction is lent to the character of Mr. Grant by Mr. Edward Sass, who gives the rôle the necessary suavity which belongs to the family solicitor. The chief points which set going the perplexing plot are in the keeping of the lawyer, and Mr. Sass, by the employment of his finely-modulated voice and the exercise of his practised art, puts them with all possible plainness. The excitable Joseph McLoud is competently enacted by Mr. Percival Stevens, who gives full prominence to the resentment of the canny Scotsman at his friend's extravagances. Mr. Clarence Blakiston gives character to the part of Colonel Drew, lending due weight to the scenes in which he appears. The erring Charlie Harrison is feelingly portrayed by Mr. J. L. Mackay, whose pathos in the scene wherein he confesses to embezzlement is made profoundly touching. Master C. Hersee has only limited opportunities for the display of his comedy gifts in the part of the office boy, but of these he makes the most; and Miss Jane May grasps the humorous possibilities of the typist effectively. Mr. George Bellamy adopts the airs and graces of the frenzied Frenchman with life-like fidelity; and a quietly comic creation is the butler of Mr. Arthur B. Murray, whose dryly droll utterances are keenly relished. A prepossessing appearance is made by Miss Kitty Melrose, who acts delightfully as the musical comedy actress, Trixie Clayton; the magnificent presence and musical voice of Miss Mollie Lowell are admirably adapted to the part of the stately Mrs. Dan de Mille; and Miss Hazel Thompson is a graceful Barbara Drew. The state of bewilderment existing in the minds of Brewster's associates is well maintained by Mr. George Lestocq as Frank Bragdon, Mr. Courtenay Foote as Tommy Smith, Mr. Vernon Davidson as Horace Pettinghill, and Mr. Arthur Minton as Jack Gardner; and the bluff and hearty manners of a sea-captain are capitally assumed by Mr. Webb Darleigh. The house continues to be filled to its fullest capacity, and audiences keenly alive to the merits of play and performers exact innumerable curtains.

"THE JEWESS."

A Tragedy, in Five Acts, by M. Lerner,
Produced for the first time at the Pavilion Theatre, on Friday, Sept. 20.

Eliazer ..... MR. S. FEINMAN
Rachael ..... MME. D. FEINMAN
Cardinal Browni ..... MR. B. ROSENTHAL
Prince Leopold ..... MR. B. SHEINGOLD
Princess Euvdoci ..... MME. KAYZER
Roderigo ..... MR. N. ISAACOVITCH
Gilbert ..... MR. HAMBURGER

The simple story of Lerner's adaptation of "The Jewess" is well known to those who have witnessed Halévy's opera of La Juive. As is generally the case in the writings of the Yiddish dramatists, the motive is in connection with the persecutions undergone by the Hebrews in times past. Cardinal Browni for a supposed offence has ordered Rachael, the daughter of the jeweller Eliazer, to be burnt at the stake. It happens, however, that Rachael is not a Jewess, but the natural daughter of the Cardinal, whom Eliazer has adopted. The Cardinal, discovering that he has condemned his own child to death, endeavours to prevent the execution taking place, but is too late. This brief resumé of a somewhat gloomy story was watched with keen interest by a large audience. Mr. Sigmund Feinman was good as Eliazer, his bearing, manner, enunciation, and histrionic methods being well in keeping with the character. Mme. Diana Feinman presented a portrait of Rachael that was refreshingly natural; while the necessary dramatic force was sustained with good effect. Mr. B. Sheingold was happily placed as the lover, Prince Leopold, to which he imparted the requisite amount of vigour, while his fine resonant voice and excellent deportment, together with a pleasing personality, added considerable charm to his efforts. Mr. Boris Rosenthal was well suited as Cardinal Browni, which he portrayed with conspicuous success, and his "make-up" was worthy of the highest commendation. Mme. J. Kayzer secured approbation by her satisfactory impersonation of the Princess Euvdoci; the military bearing of Mr. N. Isaacovitch as Roderigo denoted ability; and Mr. Hamburger did well as Gilbert. The scenery and mounting were in every way admirable. Sir Charles Wyndham was an interested spectator on the occasion of the production.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

The funeral of Mr. John Bradley, for fifteen years master carpenter at the St. Helens Theatre Royal, took place on Saturday last at the St. Helens Cemetery. Deceased, who passed away on Tuesday in last week, had been in indifferent health for the last twelve months, but had attended to his duties up to the Saturday prior to his death, the cause of which was chronic bronchial pneumonia. He was forty-three years of age, and leaves a widow and grown-up daughter to mourn his loss. The funeral was attended by the relatives of the deceased, representatives of the theatre staff, Mr. Frank Tarbuck, representing the St. Helens Hippodrome, Mr. C. J. McCarthy, representing Mr. Roland Yorke, &c.

On Sunday, Sept. 22, a picnic was held at Southport by the stock company and staff of the Roscommon Theatre, Liverpool. Beautiful weather favoured the outing, which was a great success. After a drive to Freshfield and back, a company of thirty-five sat down to dinner, well served at the Royal Hotel. Toasts were afterwards given, and the health of Mr. Boucher and the continued success of his enterprise at the Roscommon was received with much applause.

A fatal accident happened to Mr. H. Body, a member of the electrician staff at the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, on Thursday morning. Mr. Body was engaged in putting up a sign relating to the forthcoming fancy dress ball, and was at the top of a long ladder. How the mishap occurred is not quite clear, but Body fell from the ladder a distance of thirty feet on to the iron railings below. He was removed to King's College Hospital, and died a few hours after admission.

The Executive Committee of the National Association of Theatrical Employees are arranging the annual concert in aid of the benevolent funds, and it is hoped that one of the West-end theatres may be secured for this purpose. The date under consideration is a Sunday early in December.

Mr. J. Brunskill, lately master carpenter at the Savoy, will occupy a similar position at Mr. Vedrenne's new theatre in Shaftesbury-avenue. Mr. W. H. Marsh will be the electrician in charge.

Trade and Labour Councils in various parts of the Metropolitan area are acting in the interests of the musicians and stage employees, and the following letter is an interesting result of the intervention of the Shoreditch Trades Council, who report that the management in question were quite in sympathy with the purpose of the agreement, which, obviously, removes any probable ground for friction in the future between the organisations interested and the directors of these halls:—

"Mr. A. P. Brown, Secretary, Shoreditch Trades and Labour Council, Tee-To-Tum, High-street, Shoreditch, E.

"Dear Sir,—With reference to my conversation with you relative to the conditions of employment at our halls, this matter was duly considered by my Board of Directors, and the following decision arrived at:—'That we do hereby undertake to employ only members of the Amalgamated Musicians' Union for our orchestras, and members of the National Association of Theatrical Employees in the various stage departments of the music halls below mentioned, and that we will not pay less than the rates and observe the conditions of employment laid down in the Music Hall Award until such time as we are able to pay a dividend of 5% to our shareholders, when we undertake to pay to the musicians and stage employees not less than the minimum rates of pay agreed with such Unions respectively.'

"Signed on behalf of the Directors of the London Music Hall, Shoreditch, the Cambridge Music Hall, Cambridge-street, E.

"Thos. G. Richards, Director."

A NEW COMPOSER.

On Thursday, at Queen's Hall, the programme was of exceptional interest, opening with the magnificent third act prelude to Die Meistersinger, in which the genius of Wagner is shown so remarkably. It was played by the orchestra and conducted by Mr. Wood in such a way as to do the most perfect justice to this glorious work. The band also gained great credit in Tschaikowsky's "Casse Noisette," the dance of the Sugar-plum Fairy being delightfully rendered. The new March No. 4, "Pomp and Circumstance," by Sir Edward Elgar was another brilliant item; and Richard Strauss's "Till Eulenspigel" had as many admirers as usual. The vocalists were Mrs. Henry Wood and Mr. Robert Burnett, and Mr. Willibold Richter was heard in the No. 4 Concerto of Brahms' for the pianoforte in D minor, one of the composer's finest compositions. The novelty of the evening was a new overture, "Shylock," by Mr. Felix H. White, a British composer who is likely ere long to be much better known than he is at present. His overture has great merit. The composer has taken passages from the play, and has illustrated them with great felicity. For instance, Portia's speech, commencing "The quality of mercy," supplies a suave and graceful theme, which contrasts admirably with the fierce outbursts of the Jew, in which Mr. White employs the full force of the orchestra. The drums and cymbals tell the story of Shylock's rage in "If I can catch him once upon the hip," and other passages. The reception of the overture was quite enthusiastic, and at the conclusion the youthful musician was called to the platform and greeted with hearty cheers, which in time to come will, we feel assured, increase in proportion to his achievements, for it can hardly be doubted that the name of Mr. Felix H. White is destined to shine prominently in the list of native composers. It was the first occasion when he was so fortunate as to have such a splendid orchestra to convey his ideas to the public; but Mr. Wood, who has a generous sympathy with native musicians, will certainly give this promising young composer other chances of being heard, and there is no fear that the musical public will be deaf to his claims. Audiences now do not rush from the hall when a British musician is announced; they know what to expect, and several calls to the front proved the genial appreciation of the crowded house. Among other items should be mentioned Sir Charles Stanford's "Songs of the Sea," admirably sung by Mr. Robert Burnett, and Mrs. Henry Wood was heard with the greatest satisfaction in her songs.

Mme. Calvé arrived at New York on the 19th inst. on board the Cunard liner Pannonia. Most of the prima donna's spare time during the voyage was devoted to making rag dolls for the children in the steerage. Before the ship reached New York one of the steerage children came aft to thank her for the gifts. Two of the dolls, it is stated, were raffled, and fetched £53.

Mr. Henry Arthur Jones's new play, The Galilean's Victory, was copyrighted on Monday at the Theatre Royal, Stockport. The initial production of the play at the Lyceum Theatre, Rochester, on the same day was a decided success. It's New York début will be made next Monday at the Knickerbocker Theatre.

Arrangements between the members of the Motor Club and the British Motor Boat Club were recently completed at the Motor Club house, Coventry-street, and the amalgamation of the two institutions is now un fait accompli. An inaugural dinner to celebrate the event is being arranged.

IN GARRICK'S DAY.

Garrick, says Mrs. Clement Parsons in "Garrick and his Circle," advised Ned Shuter, whose low comedy he pronounced genius, to avoid being too comical. He knew that there is no more deadly sin in art, especially in the art of acting, than over-emphasis, and he knew how prone the true-born English actor is to it. Garrick was severely "down on" the performer who was so silly, and so little an artist, as to laugh at his own humour, or at anyone else's, before an audience, thereby telling them it was not such and such a character, but "the humorous negligent Mr. Wou'd-be the actor." Garrick himself, once, and once only, laughed out of his part. It was at a wicked, sly whisper of Kitty Clive's. So wicked and so sly was the whisper that he was seized with such a violent attack of merriment he could not finish Lovemore in Murphy's The Way to Keep Him, but was obliged, after two or three efforts, to make his bow, "amidst a roar of electrical laughter." It is sad to think we shall never know what it was Kitty whispered.

An actor, in those days, always made a parting bow. It was a rather begrudged gain for realism when he did not preface his purple patches of soliloquy by advancing to the centre with a bow and some arm-waving. Yet, in spite of it all, in comparing those times with ours, it is difficult not to come to one's grandsire's opinion that the old actors were in many respects better than the people we see to-day. At any rate, their method was more of an art, i.e., less a personal affair, an exhibition of always to be repeated individualisms. Study counted for more, and even second-rate players took their craft perfectly seriously. On the other hand, everything being mapped out, new parts lent themselves too readily to stock criticism. The audiences, in consequence, were definite and explicit as to what constituted good acting. They required it straight and strongly underlined. The playgoing public, if small (Foote estimated it in London as twelve thousand), was exceedingly keen, and in every way stimulated by the répertoire system, which at the same time kept the actors in perpetual variegated practice, and permitted the manager a large range of fresh and untried pieces. Where there was no great effort or expense over staging, the acting was the thing people paid to enjoy and criticise.

Between the performers and the lookers-on there were more direct relations than nowadays. What Mr. H. B. Irving, in an article on Colley Cibber, called "the kind of happy family feeling that naturally sprang up when two theatres were sufficient for the needs of playgoers," occasionally led to curious recontres. That to talk to any person in the house is indecorous and unbecoming has been a stage maxim since the time of Thespis, but even that was sometimes set aside.

Nathaniel Dance-Holland, and George Dance, R.A., are now remembered for having painted portraits of Garrick and his associates. Foote, perhaps, had Love in his mind's eye when he made one of his puppets say, "As to player—whatever might happen to me, I was determined not to bring a disgrace upon my family; and so I resolved to turn footman." Then, as now, Philistia was invincible, and the foggy person of substance from the City feared artists, in whatever genre, and uttered contempt of them. Probably, each actor's social position was what he had the character and taste to make it, and varied ad infinitum with the individual. Colley Cibber justly says in his "Apology," that persons who might otherwise have been mercers or milliners, but, by dint of ability, became players instead, stood a much better chance of "entering into conversations" with the great than had they remained in the station to which their original fortune would have destined them.

CORRECT COSTUMES.

It is only in quite recent times, says Dutton Cook, in "A Book of the Play," published in 1876, that the correctness of stage costumes has undergone systematic consideration, and been treated as a matter of real urgency, although occasional experiments in the direction of reform are to be found recorded in early accounts of the drama. Mr. Pepys describes his visit to the theatre in 1664, to see Heraclius, or the Emperor of the East, Cariell's translation of Corneille, and notes, "the garments like Romans very well . . . . at the beginning, at the drawing up of the curtain, there was the finest scene of the emperor and his people about him, standing in their fixed and different postures, in their Roman habits, above all that I ever saw at any of the theatres." But attempts to be accurate in this way were only of an intermittent kind; any enduring amendment can hardly be found until we approach a period that is within the recollection of living playgoers. Mr. Donne, lately the Examiner of Plays, writes in one of his essays on the drama: "We have seen The Rivals performed in a sort of chance-medley costume—a century intervening between the respective attires of Sir Anthony and Captain Absolute"; and he adds, "we have seen the same comedy dressed with scrupulous attention to the date of the wigs and hoops; but we doubt whether in any essential respect that excellent play was a gainer by the increased care and expenditure of the manager.' Sir Walter Scott had previously written: "We have seen Jane Shore acted with Richard in the old English cloak, Lord Hastings in a full court dress, with his white rod like a Lord Chamberlain of the last reign, and Jane Shore and Alicia in stays and hoops. We have ascribes to Voltaire "the sole merit of introducing natural and correct costumes. Before his time the actors, whether Romans or Scythians, appeared in the full dress of the French court; and Augustus himself was represented in a huge full-bottomed wig surmounted by a crown of laurel." Marmontel, however, claims to have had some share in this innovation, and also in the reform of the stage method of declamation, which had previously been of a very pompous kind. Following his counsels, Mlle. Clairon, the famous tragic actress, had ventured to play Roxana, in the Court Theatre at Versailles, "dressed in the habit of a Sultana, without hoop, her arms half naked, and in the truth of Oriental costume." With this attire she adopted a simpler kind of elocution. Her success was most complete. Marmontel was profuse in his congratulations. "But it will ruin me," said the actress. "Natural declamation requires correctness of costume. My wardrobe is from this moment useless to me; I lose twelve hundred guineas' worth of dresses! However, the sacrifice is made. Within a week you shall see me play Electra after nature, as I have just played Roxana." Marmontel writes: "From that time all the actors were obliged to abandon their fringed gloves, their voluminous wigs, their feathered hats, and all the fantastic paraphernalia that had so long shocked the sight of all men of taste. Lekain himself followed the example of Mlle. Clarion, and, from that moment, their talents thus perfected, excited mutual emulation, and were worthy rivals of each other."

Upon the English stage reform in this matter was certainly a matter of slow growth. A German gentleman, Christian Augustus Gottlieb Gœde by name, who published, in 1821, a long account of a visit he had recently made to England, expresses in strong terms his opinions on certain peculiarities of its theatre. "You will never behold," he writes, "foreign actors dressed in such an absurd style as upon the London stage. The English, of all other nations the most superstitious worshippers of fashion, are, nevertheless, accustomed to manifest a strange indulgence for the incivilities which this goddess encounters from their performers. I have seen Mr. Cooke personating the character of Sir Pertinax McSycophant in The Man of the World in a buff coat of antique cut, and an embroidered waistcoat which might have figured in the court of Charles II.; though this play is of modern date and the actor must of course have been familiar with the current costume. In The Way to Keep Him, Mr. C. Kemble acted the part of Sir Brilliant Fashion, a name which ought to have suggested to him a proper style of dress, in a frock absolutely threadbare, and obsolete doublet, long pantaloons, a prodigious watch-chain of steel, and a huge incroyable under his arm. This last article, indeed,

STRATFORD THEATRES OUTING.

The above illustration represents the combined staffs of the Borough Theatre and Theatre Royal, Stratford, at their annual outing at the Broxbourne Gardens on the 1st inst.

One of the quaintest of the customs was that of an actress-mother leading on her "debuting" daughter (usually as Juliet) bathed in tears. It is stated that when Garrick, in 1747, rose from a sick-bed to play for Quin's already postponed benefit, his friendly letter to Quin was printed at the head of the playbills. "Gentlemen, it is not my turn to speak," said Mrs. Cibber, after a long pause, when one of the actors had hopelessly lost his cue. It is amusing to find how George II. communicated to the audience in Drury Lane Theatre the news, just received by him in his box, of the victory of Culloden. "Animated with all that majestic grace which he so eminently possessed, he held out the paper, and with an ineffable smile of grandeur and beneficence, uttered the exclamation, 'Oh!'"

We can but hope it was during an interval that Boswell, one night, entertained the Drury Lane audience "prodigiously," by lowing in the pit like a cow. "Encore the cow!" cried the galleries, till, finally, the Rev. Dr. Hugh Blair found it necessary to restrain his young friend's "very inferior" imitations of other animals by the caustic recommendation, "My dear sir, I would confine myself to the cow!"

It must have been excessively difficult for performers to keep their tempers, and act on in an easy way, when "half-eaten pippins," "suck'd oranges," or, in the case of actresses, the rind, were being aimed at them as demonstrations of the gallery's disapproval. One actor, adapting Beatrice's pun, speaks of two or three uncivil oranges bursting at once on his devoted head, and mentions that his nerves never could endure the sound of the cracking of nuts since a York audience once treated him for a whole evening with this sign of his incapacity to interest them. In the Macklin strike at Drury Lane in 1743, the disaffected brought pea-shooters to prevent walking on the stage. Even when inaudible for tumult, Garrick and his lesser brethren used, by "respectful bows" and "apologetic gestures" to attempt pacification in cases where we can only imagine a modern actor stating "in emphatic language what he'd be before he'd stand it." There was far more servility in a crude form then on the part of the servants of the public.

As regards the social position of the old actors generally, evidence is conflicting. The London patentees and Foote were expected to go to Court, and would on no account have missed a birthday. On the other hand, Arthur Murphy was denied admittance as a barrister by both the Middle and Inner Temple on account of his having been an actor; and the son of the architect of the Mansion House changed his name when he went on the stage from Dance to Love, in order not to imperil the reputation of his relations. The brothers of this James Love, Nathaniel Dance, afterwards Sir seen Miss Young act Zara, incased in whalebone, to an Osman dressed properly enough as a Turk, while Nerestan, a Christian knight, in the time of the Crusades, strutted in the white uniform of the old French Guards!"

Even as late as 1842 a writer in a critical journal, reviewing a performance of She Stoops to Conquer at the Haymarket Theatre, reminds the representatives of Young Marlow and Hastings that the costumes they wear being "of the year 1842 accord but ill with those of 1772, assumed by the other characters. The effect of the scene is marred by it," writes the critic. And ten years before Leigh Hunt had admitted into the columns of his Tatler many letters dwelling upon the defects of stage costume in regard to incongruousness and general lack of accuracy. One correspondent complains of a performance of The Merry Wives of Windsor at Covent Garden, in which Bartley had played Falstaff "in a dress belonging to the age of the first Charles"; Cains had appeared as "a doctor of the reign of William and Mary, with a flowing periwig, cocked hat, large cuffs, and ruffles"; while John Rugby's costume was that "of a countryman servant of the present day." Another remonstrant describes Kean as dressing Othello "more in the garb of an Albanian Greek than a Moor; Richard goes through the battle without armour, while Richmond is armed cap-à-pie; and Young plays Macbeth in a green and gilded velvet jacket, and carries a shield until he begins to fight, and then throws it away." A third correspondent draws attention to The School for Scandal and Mr. Farren's performance of Sir Peter Teazle in a costume appropriate to the date of the comedy, the other players wearing dresses of the newest vogue. "Even Sir Oliver," it is added, "appeared in a fashionable modern drab great coat." In a note Leigh Hunt records his opinion that Mr. Farren was right, and that it was "the business of all the other performers to dress up to his costume, not for him to wrong himself into theirs," and adds, "there is one way of settling the matter which puts an end to all questions except that of immediate convenience and economy; and this is to do as the French do, who rigidly adhere to the costume of the period in which the scene is supposed to take place. Something of immediate sympathy is lost, perhaps, by this system, for we can hardly admire a young beauty so much in the dress of our grandmothers as in such as we see our own charmers in; but this defect is compensated by a sense of truth and propriety, by the very quaintness and novelty of the ancient aspect, and even by the information it conveys to us."

The condition of the Parisian stage in regard to its improved and splendid scenery, decorations, and accessories owed much to the special intervention and patronage of Louis XIV. Sir Walter Scott was an appendage of 1803, but all the rest presented a genuine portrait of an indigent and coxcombical journeyman tailor. He must have known that pantaloons and an incroyable rumpled and folded together are incongruous articles of apparel—that no gentleman, much less Sir Brilliant Fashion, would make his appearance in a threadbare coat; and that steel watch-chains, as the chronicles of the Birmingham manufactories plainly evince, have been out of date these four-score years. Neither would he, I am perfectly convinced, parade in such a costume off the boards of the theatre. Why, then, should he choose to exhibit such a whimsical figure upon them? May I venture to offer my own conjecture on the subject? The real cause probably is that an absurd costume is perfectly fashionable upon the English stage!"

PATENTS.

The following are abridged descriptions of theatrical patents specially compiled for The Era by Messrs. Hughes and Young, registered Patent Agents and Engineers, of 55-56, Chancery Lane, London, W.C., of whom our readers may obtain all information and advice relating to British and foreign patents, designs and trade marks free of charge.

12,925.—Emergency-exit fastenings. Patentee, Mr. J. Bull, 9, Nansen Road, Lavender Hill, London, S.W. In an emergency-exit or like fastening for the door of a theatre or other building, the push-bar terminates in a pin, which operates a lever to turn a crank fixed to a spindle, which operates a latch, by means of a follower. The latch is locked against operation from the outside by means of a spring-pressed pivoted lever, which is released from engagement with a shoulder of the latch, either by means of the tail of the follower, or by the nose on the tumbler, raised by the key during the operation of the slide to withdraw the latch by the hook arm. After withdrawal the latch is held back by the spring-pressed hook until the door is slammed, when the auxiliary latch is retracted, causing the nose thereon to engage the end of the hook.

12,535.—Fire-extinguishing. Patentee, Mr. G. I. Rockwood, 52, Summer Street, Worcester, Massachusetts, U.S.A. Sprinklers automatic. A cap is retained on a nozzle by means of a post, a lever, and a strut formed of two parts, united by fusible solder. The lever bears against a boss depending from the top of arms, the lowed ends of which are connected to a collar engaging screw-threads on the nozzle, so that the resisting pressure on the cap-retaining device can be adjusted. When this adjustment has been made, retaining-pins are inserted in holes in the joint between the collar and the screw-threaded portion of the nozzle.

Quin was once at a very small dinner-party. The master of the house, pushing a delicious pudding towards Quin, begged him to taste it. A gentleman had just before helped himself to an immense piece of it. "Pray," said Quin, looking first at the gentleman's plate and then at the dish, "which is the pudding?"

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

[We do not answer inquiries by post. In all letters the names and addresses of inquirers must be given as a guarantee of good faith. Initials only or pseudonyms will be used in the answers if so desired.]

E. M. BURNARD (Surbiton).—It is quite probable that Everyman will be revived next year during Holy Week. Mr. William Poel might be able to give you more definite information. Write to him, 5, Amersham-road, Putney, S.W.

W. B. JONES.—It would be difficult to place a song that is not published at a London theatre. Possibly if you were to submit the manuscript of the number to any of the firms of publishers in our columns they might think it worth while to take it up. Send the words and music to Francis, Day, and Hunter, with sufficient stamps for return. You will find the names of many ladies in our advertisement columns on the back page of The Era who play principal boy's parts.

DOUGLAS BLAIR (Harrogate).—Yes; Mrs. Kendal has played the part in America, but we cannot give you the date.

U. S. (Glasgow).—We are making inquiries, and will let you know in this column as soon as possible.

A NEW READER.—A Mother's Sacrifice is at Oxford this week. We do not know the town where the company appears next week. Letter, care of THE ERA, would probably answer your purpose to both lady and gentleman.

VINCENT.—Sept. 26, at his residence in Kennington-road, E. S. Vincent, actor, late of John Lawson's sketch companies.

IN MEMORIAM.

SPURR.—In fondest memory of my dear father, Mel B. Spurr, drawing-room entertainer, who went to his last resting place at Melbourne Sept. 25, 1904. Never forgotten by his affectionate mother, my dear mother, and his only child, Brenda. "Give unto him eternal rest, O Lord."

DR. WALFORD BODIE, who had arranged with the Alf. Wood Amusement Co., New York, for a tour of America, has had to postpone his engagement owing to several managers refusing to release him. He should open next month at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, which is the Drury Lane of America. He has been greatly boomed for the last six months, and had booked a special saloon on board the "Kaiser Wilhelm II.," having paid £100 deposit three months ago. What has been America's loss will be Britain's gain, as there is a great demand for the doctor's latest sensation, The Cage of Death, and he is already fast filling up his vacant dates. Last week at the Hippodrome, West Bromwich, he broke all records, playing to close on £500. Next week he returns to the Albert Hall, Swansea.

A COPY of "THE ERA" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

"THE ERA" LETTER-BOX.

A Stamped Envelope, plainly addressed, must be enclosed with application for each Letter. Letters, after lying at this Office for One Month, are forwarded to the Postal Authorities, to be returned to the Senders.

Mr. H. Vivian Fisher, the general-manager of the Hippodrome, presided at luncheon, and proposed the health of Mr. Rowland and Mr. Scutt, general and acting-managers respectively of the Gaiety Theatre. Mr. A. E. White gave the health of Mr. Griffiths, formerly of the Gaiety and now managing-director of the Hippodrome, who spoke of the pleasure it gave him to be associated with his old staff. Mr. Scutt pledged the health of the general staff of the Hippodrome, to which the acting-manager, Mr. Walter Norman, suitably responded.

Unfortunately, during the second innings of the Hippodrome, Mr. Walter Norman slipped and sprained his ankle, so Mr. Gates, another member of the Hippodrome, kindly took his place. The Hippodrome has now challenged the Gaiety Theatre for a football match.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.

Another book which calls for attention is that excellent and almost indispensable work of reference, "The Era" Almanack and Annual. In this handy shillingsworth one has a complete record of the past dramatic year, and the arrangement is so admirable that no time is lost in finding the desired subject, title of play, revival, or new production, and all that appertains to the drama of the year. The same remark applies to the information concerning the stages of Paris and Berlin; and I should like to see next year the American stage included, because it is becoming so intimately allied with our own, by reason of the production of plays, the interchange of actors, and the comprehensive interests of managers. In addition to the solid pages of facts, there are included short tales and stories by well-known actors and actresses, and altogether the book is one which should find its way into the hands of all genuine lovers of the drama.—Morning Advertiser, Feb. 23, '07.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER.
BY ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B.
Chapter I.
COPYRIGHT AS OPPOSED TO PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter II.
PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter III.
INFRINGEMENT AND REMEDIES.
Chapter IV.
MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.
Chapter V.
INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT.

"The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," by Albert A. Strong, LL.B., solicitor, author of "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" office), seems to be the one compendious and indispensable authority on the subject, as vexed as the "Bermoothes" and as tortuous as a Chancery suit, that has long been wanted. It is in every essential a text book for the perplexed layman, and no solicitor or barrister worth his salt ought to think of taking or appearing in "proceedings" without consulting its pages. It must suffice, after what has been said, to state little more than that the contents include five chapters, respectively named "Copyright as Opposed to Performing Right," "Performing Right," "Infringement and Remedies," Musical Copyright," and "International and Colonial Copyright." The work, for all its precise authority, is not dry reading. The statutes, with the elucidatory notes, necessarily impose a task on the reader which takes some tackling, but they had to be there. The cases adduced, however, are full of interest. Certain of them might fitly find a place in the romance of copyright. There was the fight of Charles Reade with George Conquest over "It's Never Too Late to Mend," for instance, and the equally interesting conflict of Mr. J. A. Cave with Chatterton over "The Wandering Jew." The latter was a famous battle. Chatterton took it to the House of Lords, and was finally beaten, to the unspeakable relief of Mr. Cave, who is never weary of relating the story. Had the result been otherwise, it would have meant his ruin. I well remember meeting him on the day of his victory and "crashing a cup with him" in honour of the same. "The Law of Copyright" is dedicated to Mr. A. W. Pinero.—Sportsman.

Copyright confusion is, like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr. Albert A. Strong's new work, entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr. Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his textbook on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" Office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full of interest.—Referee.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
To anyone connected with the stage, from the call-boy to the "star," and from the electrician to the manager, the "Era Annual" makes an appeal which it is very hard to resist. The number of stories and anecdotes contributed by well-known members of the theatrical profession are always bright, breezy, and fresh, and, as usual, the photographs are excellently reproduced. The calendar is arranged so as to give an interesting theatrical event, with the year of occurence, for every day in the year. The tables of plays produced at the various London and provincial theatres provide an interesting story of successes and failures, and in every respect the Annual for 1907 is well up to the usual standard. It is published at one shilling by "The Era," at 5, Tavistock-street, London.—Dublin Express, Jan. 28.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
A capital shilling's worth is the "Era Annual," with its valuable lists of new plays produced during the year in London, the provinces, Berlin, and Paris. It contains, also many readable articles by stage favourites, notably a characteristic contribution, "How I Spend My Day," by Miss Ellen Terry.—Daily Express, Feb. 2.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
"The Era" Annual for 1907 is out, published from the offices of "The Era," 5, Tavistock-street, W.C. It is the usual complete record of doings in theatreland during the past year, and possesses a live interest in the number of excellent personal contributions by well-known managers, authors, actors, and actresses of the day.—Sportsman, Jan. 22, 1907.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
"The Era" Dramatic and Musical Annual for 1907 is up to its usual standard—in fact, it is, if possible, smarter than ever. There is an excellent budget of articles from the pens of Miss Ellen Terry, Miss Cicely Richards, Miss Pollie Emery, Messrs. Frank Cooper, Arthur Collins, Charles Collette, Frank Curzon, Edward German, Cliff Ryland, and many others. The illustrated obituary, the alphabetical list of plays produced in London and the provinces, and all the other valuable features of the Annual are as complete as ever, and make this handbook extremely useful not only to members of the profession, but to the infinitely wider circle interested directly or indirectly in the drama.—Whitehall Review.

THE ERA

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1907.

DRAMATIST AND PRODUCER.

With the return of September came the revival of the interest in the drama which is always evident after the holidays, and a very spirited debate between Mr. BEERBOHM TREE and Mr. PINERO, with reference to certain views expressed by the latter gentleman on the subject of play-producing. In the course of his remarks Mr. PINERO stated that he regards an elaborate scenario as carpenter's work, belonging to a low form of composition; that he never alters anything at rehearsals; and that with every play he writes he has to learn afresh the art of playwriting.

Mr. TREE seems to have seen in these statements an attempt to diminish the importance of the actor and producer; and in an interview he claimed for them a large share of the credit attached to any successful stage production. "The artist," said Mr. TREE, "must always have a substantial influence upon the situation; from his individuality, from his creative faculty spring effects which authors cannot invariably determine beforehand. It is largely this fact that entitles him to the place he holds in the eyes of the public. It has been gravely advanced that the star system is antagonistic to the best interests of the drama. The pre-eminence of the individual actor, whether manager or not, is, however, created, and exists solely by the favour of the public. Broadly speaking, the playwright loses as much as he gains by holding stubbornly to the ideas conceived and elaborated in the study. Again and again I have seen plays developed on the stage, to their manifest advantage, and I am bold enough to contend that a first-class producer not infrequently stands upon a level very little beneath that occupied by a first-class dramatist. The author who comes to rehearsals with an open mind, with a mind prepared to receive and act upon suggestions, can hardly fail to benefit by the fact."

Asked how he regarded the matter of the dramatist's absolute supremacy, Mr. TREE admitted that he could not, save in very exceptional circumstances, submit to the thraldom of such a system, which he honestly believes must have a paralysing effect upon every actor. "Had I, however," said Mr. TREE, "the advantage of producing a play by Mr. PINERO, and he insisted that 'nothing should be altered at rehearsals,' I should defer to the wishes of so experienced a craftsman."

To this Mr. PINERO replied in a letter, in which he said: "The actor, so far as my experience enables me to judge, rarely fails to give a cordial welcome to the work of a dramatist who carries into the theatre a play which is as complete as the author can make it, and who has a definite notion of the way in which his play should be interpreted."

Discussions of this kind between persons of such distinction as Mr. TREE and Mr. PINERO are deeply interesting. We have no hesitation in saying that both gentlemen are absolutely in the right in their main contentions. The methods which suit one playwright and one class of play are inappropriate to another dramatist working under different conditions; or, indeed, to the same dramatist at a different period of his development. For instance, Mr. HENRY ARTHUR JONES would probably have resented any attempt to "teach him his business" in the production of The Hypocrites; but he may not have been so sensitive in the case of Mr. WILSON BARRETT and The Silver King. There are playwrights and playwrights, just as there are plays and plays. There is the intellectual drama, which depends entirely for its power over an audience on the clash of characters and the war of emotions; and there is the play which leaves sufficient scope by its very omissions for alterations and embellishments. There is the practised playwright, who comes to the first rehearsals with definite ideas down to every detail of what he wants done; and there is the rising dramatist who is learning his business and has not yet acquired the ability to see his work through a theatrical medium, and requires to have it played before his eyes before he can say exactly what he would like. When Mr. STEPHEN PHILLIPS first read Herod to Mr. TREE he was at the outset bored and sceptical, and wanted nothing so much as to get through with it. Gradually he grew more interested and excited, until Mr. PHILLIPS came to the passage where the trumpets are heard in the distance. At that point Mr. TREE, we are told, sprang from his seat. "Ha!" he said to his secretary; "you see the reason of that?" Then, turning to Mr. PHILLIPS, Mr. TREE enquired, "Have you ever been on the stage?" "Could anything," said Mr. PHILLIPS to Mr. ARCHER, who was interviewing him for "Real Conversations," "have been finer than Mr. TREE's stage-management of the last act of Herod? And, remember, there was real and high imagination in it; true invention—no mere working up of old stage tricks."

Supposing, however, that Mr. PHILLIPS had furnished his play with elaborate directions like those which Mr. BERNARD SHAW adds to the dialogue of his works, there would have been nothing left for Mr. TREE to invent or suggest. The complete dramatist doubles the parts of author and producer, and reigns at rehearsals by virtue of his proved capacity. The incomplete dramatist, whatever his literary or constructive gifts may be, must submit to receive assistance from those who, though they may not have his special genius, possess, either by nature or from long familiarity with the actual effect of a performance, that "sense of the stage" which is something apart from the dramatic instinct. Of course, in the case of melodrama, the producer becomes a much more important factor of the success attained; and the interesting interview with Mr. ERNEST CARPENTER which we print this week shows what an influence the producer has on the fortunes of a popular piece. But even in a much more delicate class of work there are little things which, though apparently trifling, are really of the utmost importance; and it is merely a question whether the dramatist has perceived them and arranged how they are to be done, or has contented himself with preparing a dramatic play, and has left the purely technical and theatrical element to be supplied by actual experiment and by the assistance and advice of the "producer" at rehearsal. The end aimed at is to get the greatest possible effect out of the situations and dialogue; and the means by which it is attained are, after all, comparatively unimportant.

ACTORS' SATURDAY.

APPEAL FOR THE ACTORS' BENEVOLENT FUND.

We have once more to draw the attention of our readers to the necessities of the Actors' Benevolent Fund in general, and to Actors' Saturday in particular, the date being the last Saturday in January. Papers will be sent out by Mr. Colton, the able secretary of the A.B.F., to every theatre and touring company in the United Kingdom, in order that a collection may be made for the benefit of the fund. In saying this, we cannot too strongly impress upon actors and actresses the fact that the Actors' Benevolent Fund has for more than quarter of a century rendered invaluable assistance, by way of monetary grants, loans, and pensions, to thousands of members of the profession and their dependents.

At the present time the fund is granting seventy-five weekly allowances, which are renewed from quarter to quarter, and were the committee to publish the names of those in receipt of these pensions it would be found that many of our stage favourites of former years would be in the direst straits had it not been for the goodly offices of the fund. The affairs of every applicant for assistance, however, are regarded as sacredly confidential, and no one who is suffering from some temporary misfortune need fear that his name or the nature of his transactions will ever be divulged.

Another aspect of the beneficent work of the fund is, that no player nowadays, when the hand of Death has put an end to his earthly labours, will be permitted to be laid to rest in a pauper's grave, but will be buried at the expense of the A.B.F. in the event of his having died in poor circumstances. Surely this is a benefit which cannot be lightly overlooked for the self-respect of the profession. Then, were every guarantee needed as to the bona-fide and just distribution of the money at the command of the executive committee of the fund, it would be found in the list of names of eminent and responsible actors comprising that committee. Thus, Sir Charles Wyndham is the president, and Mr. Tree, Mr. George Alexander, and Mrs. D'Oyly Carte are vice-presidents, while the committee includes Messrs. Harry Nicholls (treasurer), Edward Terry, Cyril Maude, Robert Courtneidge, Lionel Rignold, Algernon Syms, Isaac Cohen, Harry Loveday, Morris Abrahams, J. D. Beveridge, M. R. Morand, J. Bannister Howard, Charles Cruikshanks, Arthur Williams, Fred Wright, Akerman May, A. V. Tapping, Lionel Brough, E. H. Bull, Sydney Paxton, and Fredk. Carr, the trustees being Sir Charles Wyndham, Mr. Tree, and Mr. Edward Terry.

We would urge all those ladies and gentlemen who will collect for Actors' Saturday to persuade each member of her or his company to contribute something to the only fund which can afford assistance in the hour of need. In the year 1906 the committee dispersed the sum of £3,400 in pensions, gifts, and loans. Surely no further recommendation is necessary to induce actors and actresses to loyally support the fund which has done, is doing, and will continue to do such an incalculable amount of good. We do not think that those who are now following in the artistic footsteps of the late Sir Henry Irving could pay a better tribute to his memory than to lend their moral influence and financial aid to the institution of which he was the president and founder.

THE Royal Choral Society's season at the Albert Hall will open on Nov. 7 with a performance of Elijah. Bach's Mass in B minor, Handel's Messiah, and Israel in Egypt, Rossini's Stabat Mater, Sir Edward Elgar's Dream of Gerontius, and Mr. S. Coleridge-Taylor's Dream of Hiawatha will also be presented.

THE committee of the St. Leonard's Entertainments Association have voted £80 per week for ten weeks for the maintenance of an orchestra, the season of which is to commence in January. The grant is subject to the condition that before Nov. 1 400 season tickets at one guinea each are secured.

A WELL-KNOWN composer and pianist passed away at Vienna last week in the person of Ignaz Brüll, whose works comprise almost every branch of music. His songs and chamber music were widely popular, being of a refined character, and naturally melodious. His greatest success was the opera The Golden Cross.

THE DRAMA IN BERLIN.

"IHAVATRATHE,"

Drama, in Two Acts, by Julius Bersti, Produced at the Neues Theatre, Sept. 19, 1907.

Ihavatrathe	FRAULEIN REINGRUBER
Dagar	FRAULEIN WINKLER
Iramith	FRAULEIN PRILL
Fatime	FRAULEIN MIRYTA
Shitrima	HERR SCHINDLER
Hiriaka	HERR ZIEGOLD
Der Sklave	HERR CHRISTIANS
Vrster Sklave	HERR HAHN
Zweite Sklave	HERR HERMANN
Erste Sklavin	FRAULEIN BOCCAY
Zweite Sklavin	FRAULEIN REINING

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, THURSDAY, SEPT. 26.—This is the longer of two novelties—the first of the season—produced on one evening. Herr Bersti is a dramatist hitherto unknown to the world, and his first play is full of the faults of youth and inexperience; yet the talent displayed justifies expectation of better work in the future. A few words will suffice for the very poor plot. Ihavatrathe is a beautiful Indian Princess, who falls in love with the head slave of her father, the King of Anywhere. The slave—whose name does not transpire—abuses the maiden's affection, endeavouring to gain her concurrence in a plot to murder the King and create himself ruler over the people. This Princess Ihavatrathe very properly declines to do, and after a great many tirades and passionate struggles with herself, she orders the slave to be put to death. Herr Christians did as much justice to the part of the slave as was possible, but it was a rôle unworthy of this excellent actor's powers. The name-part was well played by Fräulein Reingruber, and the remaining characters were adequately sustained. A favourable reception was accorded, the young author being called and applauded.

The second piece in the bill was a one-act comedy, entitled Liebe, by the eminent Danish dramatist Gustav Wied. It is drastic, and at times funny, but cannot be placed on a par with any of Wied's former works. It is the sketch of a village love-story. The heroine, a pretty peasant who has been reading blood-and-thunder novels, demands that her lover must do some doughty deed to gain her hand, whereupon he simulates a suicide, and so receives his reward. This piece, too, was brightly acted and met with a cordial reception, but I fear neither will hold the boards for long.

AMONG the Chamber plays at the Deutsches, Herr Schnitzler's drama Liebelei has had a place this week. It was satisfactorily interpreted and created a favourable impression. Wedekind's realistically repulsive play, Spring's Awakening, is still drawing well, that unhealthy kind of fare unhappily appealing to the public taste.

IBSEN'S early work, Der Bund der Jugend, has been produced at the Lessing in a manner worthy of all the traditions of "Ibsen Theatre" par excellence, and Dr. Brahm may be warmly complimented upon its success. The famous writer's caustic satire has perhaps never been so blended with humour—real, genuine, laughable humour—as in this fascinating play. That great pains had been spent on both cast and mounting goes without saying. Herr Bassermann as the boastful barrister, Stensgard, was perfectly delightful; it was a masterpiece of humour. Herr Meinhardt was equally good as Hejre; while Herr Sauer gave an admirable impersonation of the old "grand seigneur"; and Herren Marr, Reicher, and Forest each gave a well-nigh faultless rendering of his respective rôle. Fraulein Eberty was most amusing as Mme. Rundholm, and the lesser rôles were all satisfactorily given. This week, by the bye, is devoted, with one exception, entirely to Ibsen's works.

AN exceptionally talented young operatic singer, Miss Marcella Craft—an American—made her début at the New Royal Opera recently in Traviata. Miss Craft, who was engaged for several years at the Mayence Opera, met with an enthusiastic reception here. Her voice is well trained and of very beautiful quality, while her acting is exceptionally powerful; she should, therefore, have a brilliant career before her. After singing Violetta several times, Miss Craft sang in Hoffman's Erzählungen at the Komische Oper, with equally good results.

"MADAMA BUTTERFLY" will be produced at the Royal Opera to-morrow. Miss Farrar sings the name-part, and Mr. MacLennan that of Pinkerton. For Caruso's four performances at the end of October the ordinary prices have been doubled. There will be two performances of Aida, and one each of Rigoletto and Lucia.

A NEW cycle of one-act plays by Sudermann is anticipated with great interest. The first is a drama, entitled Margot; the second, also a serious play, is called Der letzte Besuch ("The Last Visit"); while the third is a comedy—Die ferne Prinzessin. The collective title is Rosen. There will be a simultaneous production of the cycle in November at the Burg Theatre, Vienna, and our Lessing Theatre.

A PLAY, drawn from Oscar Wilde's powerful story "Dorian Gray" was recently produced at the Josefstadt Theatre at Vienna. I am told it is an unworthy travesty of the original. Two other theatres have acquired the story for dramatising purposes.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, SEPT. 26.—Maman Robert, M. Sabatier's new comedy, brought out at Antoine's, is an amusing and, above all, a healthy play, such as we would be glad to welcome on an English stage. Moreover, the personages therein—society men and women—talk and behave like well-bred people, and not—as we only too often see on a Paris stage—as if they had received their education in a Montmartre cabaret. Maman Robert, as the title seems to imply, is not a lady. It is the name given by the author to Robert de Rosbourg who, since his parents' death has watched over his younger brother Pierre with motherly care. And Pierre, the good-natured weakling, is only too happy to follow blindfolded the directions of his big, strong-minded brother. As to the latter, no sacrifice is too great where the youngster's happiness is at stake. Robert is engaged to Louise de Cléry. Yet, when he discovers that Pierre and Louise secretly love one another, he breaks off his engagement and allows his brother to take his place. When the curtain rises on the second tableau Pierre and Louise are married, but thunder clouds which nobody could foresee are gathering over their heads. The feeble and undecided Pierre cannot do without his brother's guidance, and Robert therefore advises him like he did when he had had him under his sole charge. Louise resents this interference; she is jealous of Robert, her rival, and she so far forgets herself as to reproach him his meddling in her husband's affairs. It then dawns upon him that he has been lacking in tact, and he seeks counsel with Paulette, Louise's half-sister, a sagacious young girl, but for whom he would never have known of Pierre's love for Louise. Little Paulette does not mince matters. She tells Robert that his attitude in Pierre's household is more that of an interfering mother-in-law than of a brother, and she winds up by advising him to secure a wife and manage his own home. If Robert had not been so wrapped up in his brother's affairs he would have known that a charming wife was within his reach in the person of little Paulette. But he is blind to all this, and, finally, Louise's anger reaches such a pitch that to rid herself of Robert she stoops to crime, and scribbles a note, in reply to one supposed to have been sent to her by Robert, wherein she forbids him to persecute her any further with his declarations of love. Poor Pierre reads the note and is dumbfounded. And when in a violent scene with his brother the latter refuses to disculpate himself, Pierre seizes a revolver to blow out his brains. Robert, however, wrenches the weapon from him. Louise implores their forgiveness for the deed she committed, and Paulette brings everything to a pleasant close by giving Robert plainly to understand that she is quite willing to become his wife. The work, which met with an excellent reception, was capitally acted by Mlle. de Felberg, who made a good début in the rôle of Louise; by Mlle. Farna, a fascinating Paulette; by M. Rouyer, an impressive "Maman Robert"; and by M. Gerbert, as Pierre.

"LA SACRIFIEE."

Play in Three Acts, by M. Devore, produced at Antoine's on Sept. 19.

Jeannine	MLLE. MADELEINE LELY
Mme. Baudricourt	MME. EVEN
Suzanne	MLLE. GERMAINE LECUYER
Françoise	MLLE. SYLVERINE
Pauline	MLLE. JASMONDE
Dorville	M. GEMIER
Baudricourt	M. JANVIER
Roizel	M. COLAS
Julien	M. GEORGES FLATEAU
Jean	M. PIERRE LAURENT

The idea of M. Devore's play Sacrifiée is by no means novel, but the work was so well acted as to secure it a success which it otherwise would not have achieved. The milieu, too, into which we are introduced is anything but a pleasant one. Baudricourt, a rich manufacturer, has three daughters: Françoise, blossomed into an old maid, Jeannine, and Suzanne. It is on the last-named that M. and Mme. Baudricourt's affections are centred. She is the darling, and her sisters count for nothing. Françoise, the uncomplaining, accepts this situation philosophically, but not so Jeannine, whose independent spirit rebels against this injustice. She has fallen in love with Dorville, her father's foreman, an honest, hardworking man who, deserted by his parents, had to fight his way up in the world. When the story opens, Roizel, a financier, supposed to be immensely rich, has applied for Suzanne's hand for his son Julien, but he insists on the girl having a million francs dowry. As it happens, Baudricourt can dispose of this sum, which he has put aside for his daughters in the event of their marrying. And M. and Mme. Baudricourt do not scruple to despoil Françoise and Jeannine by giving the entire sum to Suzanne. Jeannine does not mind the loss of the money, but, smarting under this fresh indignity, she opens her heart to Dorville, and confesses her love for him. Dorville at first tries to reason with her, but as he reciprocates her feelings he rejoices in the idea of making her his wife. And then he informs her that he knows for a certainty that Roizel, the financier, is nothing but a common swindler, who reckons on Suzanne's dowry to help him out of his difficulties. Jeannine communicates this to her parents, but her mother replies that she is only inventing these stories because she is jealous of her sister's marriage. Then follows a violent scene between Jeannine and her parents, ending in the former declaring that she will now leave the house to go to her lover Dorville. In the last act, Dorville supplies such proofs of Roizel's rascality that the match is at once broken off, and Baudricourt offers to give Dorville the dowry originally put aside for Jeannine. But Dorville and Jeannine refuse. They believe in "free love," and scorn family ties and social prejudices. As stated before, the play was admirably acted, especially by Mlle. Madeleine Lély, who showed herself really great in the anything but easy rôle of Jeannine.

The Gymnase brought out Joujou Tragique, by Mlle. Jehanne D'Orliac. The lady is only twenty-two, and this is her first attempt at playwriting. Poor little lady! The public behaved very cruelly to her, laughing at the most pathetic scenes. The work certainly is very foolish, but the ladies and gentlemen in the stalls might have thought of the exponents, who, owing to these unseemly demonstrations, could hardly act their parts. "Why on earth did they produce this play at a house like the Gymnase?" I heard a guileless old gentleman exclaim. This question, my dear, sir, you had better put to the management.

THE beautiful black wig with curls worn by Mr. Pelissier as Hamlet was made by Mr. Hans Hugo.

"THE WOMAN PAYS."

Drama, in Four Acts, by Frank M. Thorne, produced at the Royal Princess's, Glasgow, on Monday, Sept. 23.

Sid Armstrong	MR. PHIL HARPER
Roger Marchant	MR. RAYMOND THOMAS
Micky Maloney	MR. FRANK M. THORNE
Cyrus Treadgold	MR. BERESFORD INNES
Luke Morland	MR. DUNLOP STEWART
Doctor Trevor	MR. CHARLES ARTHUR
Nathan Moss	MR. CLAREMONT GASKELL
Captain Holt	MR. A. T. JONES
Peter Hallam	MR. W. G. CLEMANTS
Doctor Wintcombe	MR. H. W. PERCIVAL
Motor Man	MR. ARNOLD BROWNLAW.
Madge Armstrong	MISS MAUD RUSSELL
Nell Morland	MISS EDITH WALLIS
Polly Stokes	MISS ANENA WALTON
Tabitha	MISS FLORENCE THORNE
Nurse Agnes	MISS S. PORTSOUS

This new play, by the author of Her One Great Sin and A Beautiful Fiend, contains all the elements that go to make a popular success. The story is clearly and succinctly told, and the author has labelled his characters in no uncertain manner. A good old landowner, Cyrus Treadgold, finds himself slowly but surely being overcome by monetary difficulties, partly due to the machinations of his "unjust steward," Roger Marchant, who hopes by completing the old man's ruin, to force Madge Treadgold into marrying him. Treadgold has written to a wealthy brother abroad for a remittance; and as the arrival of this would upset Marchant's plans, the steward waylays and murders the old postman and steals the registered letter. The murder is seen by two persons, Micky Maloney, an itinerant photographer, and Nell Morland, the discarded mistress of the steward; but neither of them informs the police. The non-arrival of the letter completes the ruin of the old landowner; and Marchant seizes the opportunity to make an offer for the hand of Madge, only to discover that she is secretly married to a young fisherman, Sid Armstrong, between whose father and Treadgold there had been a family feud for years. The discovery of the marriage by the old landowner, and the scene in which he orders his daughter out of his grounds, forms a striking and dramatic close to Act I.

The second act shows troubles accumulating on the heads of the young couple, due chiefly to the evil influence of Marchant. Sid Armstrong's boat is cut adrift and wrecked; and when his wife goes to London to appeal to her father for help, the steward artfully makes it appear that she has eloped with a young doctor; and, in despair, Armstrong goes off on a long voyage to the Arctic regions. His vessel is lost, and he is thought to be drowned; but after three years he comes back from Australia, rich and prosperous. Meanwhile, Marchant has managed to get his discarded mistress, Nell, into a lunatic asylum, and in the hope that she will never escape, he proposes marriage to the supposed widow, Madge, and is this time accepted, on his undertaking to clear off the debts of old Treadgold. The wedding party is coming from the church, when a double surprise is in store for them; for the lost husband, Sid, arrives on the scene, and Nell Morland escapes in time to denounce the treachery of Roger Marchant. After suffering severely at the hands of the young sailor, the steward is nearly lynched by the villagers, and meets his death by the knife of Luke Morland, Nell's father. The clouds of suspicion being now cleared away, the curtain falls on a happy reunion of husband and wife, and their reconciliation with the lady's father.

Mr. Frank M. Thorne's company give a first-rate rendering of every part. The author himself plays the comic photographer, Micky, with much humour, and is ably assisted in the comedy business by Miss Anena Walton as Polly, and Miss Florence Thorne as Tabitha. Mr. Phil Harper makes an excellent Sid Armstrong, and acts in a bright and breezy manner that is much enjoyed. Equally well suited is Miss Maud Russell as Madge. Miss Edith Wallis infuses a wealth of power and pathos into the trying part of Nell Morland, and is a valuable member of the cast. Mr. Raymond Thomas makes a most unscrupulous and vindictive Roger Marchant, and is duly hissed for his able performance. Mr. Beresford Innes is well suited as the old landowner, Treadgold. An excellently-played character is the Luke Morland of Mr. Dunlop Stewart; make-up, voice, and gait being all admirable. Mr. Charles Arthur as Dr. Trevor, Mr. Claremont Gaskell as Nathan Moss, Mr. W. G. Clemants as the old postman, and various subordinate parts were all ably filled. The play is well staged, the fishing village from the Manor grounds being a particularly fine set.

AN UNFORTUNATE ENTREPRENEUR.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—In the face of various paragraphs which have appeared in the Press it is well that a definite statement should be made regarding the circumstances of my recent unfortunate trouble. Firstly, re capital. For obvious reasons, it would not be wise to print names, but it had been arranged for, and the interested subscribers were gentlemen of such status that in the ordinary way none would have doubted the validity of their promises. Suffice it that when the actual putting down of cash was required, each, for some reason or another, found himself debarred from fulfilling his undertaking. This difficulty I moved heaven and earth to overcome in time. This, unfortunately, I was unable to do until after the trouble.

I am, unfortunately, terribly reduced privately (financially), as I had for many weeks past been spending out of my own purse for all the touring preparations, and, truly enough, had got down to my last penny. I had gone too far; and I was, in common fairness, obliged to notify the theatre managers involved so that they might be able to replace my bookings with some other attractions. In my state of distress I worded my letter to the company somewhat hysterically, and this being published gave rise to the various paragraphs which appeared, effectually bringing about the final stroke by shaking the confidence of those from whom there was still a possibility of securing help.

At this juncture Mr. Arnold Bell, to whom I told my trouble, at once held out a helping hand personally by introducing into his fine Leah sketch an additional scene, necessitating the engagement of another artist—myself—and this week in his Paul Kauvar sketch found use for me again as Duc de Beaumont (Henry Neville's old part). A grim humour of the local management (Southampton) has been to advertise Mr. Bell as supported by the missing actor, Marshall Moore; so, you see, I am not endeavouring to hide myself. I have received a number of kind letters from various managers and well-known artists, amongst them the following:—

(COPY.)

MY DEAR MARSHALL MOORE,—As Rob Roy says to Mr. Owen, "Things are not so bad but what they may be mended." I am indeed very and truly sorry for you in your present little trouble. You were led into it by someone else, and it cannot be helped—that is the long and the short of it.

The worst of the affair is personally for yourself, I consider, because it must do your position no good, but the reverse, with a gentleman of your ability and standing. Personally, I have not the slightest complaint to make against a friend who has encountered bad fortune over a project, but the most generous sympathy.

Yours faithfully,
MARSHALL MOORE.

THE pastel by Alfred Stevens, recently stolen from the Alcazar Theatre, Brussels, has been discovered left at a house as a security.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

Managers, proprietors, and syndicates in the country and London are falling into line on the question of the model contract; and though the condition of things of late presaged another storm between artists and proprietors, equity and moderation have had their sway, the immediate result being calmness and conciliation. As the interests of each are bound up with the other we can tender hearty congratulations to both sides on the happy issue.

Miss Marie Loftus, the popular comedienne, sails for Africa to-day under engagement to Messrs. Hyman, of the Empire, Johannesburg, and the Tivoli, Cape Town. The favourite "Glesca lassie" will have a grand send-off at Waterloo at 11 a.m., and we hear it whispered that some of the boys will be presenting her a trophy of flowers that will symbolise "Good luck." Marie Loftus will carry with her the good wishes of thousands of our readers, and we have no doubt that her gifts as a comedienne will evoke the enthusiastic admiration of the warm-hearted folk on the Rand. Miss Loftus has had the special permission of Harry Lauder to sing "I love a lassie." She sails by the Walmer Castle.

Mr. Alec Hurley was the guest of his fellow-members at the Eccentric Club on Monday evening. Mr. Jack Harrison, the popular honorary secretary, who was in the chair, proposed the health of the coster comedian in cordial terms, and expressed very happily the goodwill felt by every member of the club towards Alec and his popular wife, Miss Marie Lloyd, who afterwards sang.

It is interesting to know that while the London halfpenny Press on Saturday last was busy with rumours of Mr. Marshall Moore's disappearance, he was playing the part of Smithson in a copyright production at the Britannia Theatre, Hoxton, of the one-act play, An Actress's Honour, by Arnold Bell and Ivan Patrick Gore.

Many stars of the variety firmament will assist at a matinée to be given at the Chelsea Palace on Thursday, Oct. 24, in aid of the Lord Mayor's Cripples' Fund. London's chief magistrate will himself attend in state, and will be met by the Mayor of Chelsea and members of the Borough Council. An influential committee consists of Major Fountain Woods (chairman), Mr. W. Mead, Mr. W. Ross, Dr. Glassington, Mr. Wolfe S. Lyon, Mr. Henri Gros, and others. The stewards will be Mr. James W. Mathews and Mr. F. H. Pedgrift. Any offers of assistance will be gladly received by Mr. F. H. Pedgrift at The Era office.

Mr. Walter Gibbons's application for a music hall licence for the Standard Theatre is to be opposed by the Shoreditch Trades and Labour Council. At a meeting held last Sunday the following resolution, proposed by Councillor Parker, seconded by Councillor Girling, was adopted:—"That this meeting of the inhabitants of the Borough of Shoreditch strongly protests against the granting of a music hall licence for the Standard Theatre, and calls upon the L.C.C. to refuse to grant such a licence on the ground that this district is adequately supplied, there being already twelve music halls within a radius of two miles from Shoreditch Church." Another meeting on the same subject will be held on Sunday in Church-square, Hoxton, at which representatives of the Council and others will speak, including Mr. Frank Gerald for the Actors' Union, Mr. C. Jesson for the Musicians' Union, and Mr. Harry Mountford for the Artists' Protection League.

A petition on the same subject is being issued throughout the borough, which is being supported by the Trades Council, the Actors' Union, the Musicians' Union, the Theatrical Employees' Society, workmen clubs, and various representatives of the religious bodies. The petition states an additional reason, viz.:—That Mr. Walter Gibbons owns or controls fourteen halls and theatres and has family interests in, and works in conjunction with, syndicates controlling another eleven halls, making twenty-five halls and theatres.

It is stated that opposition on the same lines will arise in Poplar in regard to the application for a music hall licence for the Prince's Theatre; in Rotherhithe in regard to the Terriss Theatre; and in Islington in regard to the application for a music hall licence for the Grand.

In her interesting play, Warp and Woof, produced at the Vaudeville in 1904, the Hon. Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton attacked the fashionable dressmakers of the West-end and their sweating methods. The powerful aid of Mrs. Patrick Campbell, who played the over-worked and sorely-tempted heroine, did much for the piece, but it was a failure.

Mr. John Lawson, who is in the habit also of impeaching abuses and assailing the sins of society from the footlights, is now concerned with the evils complained of in a recent strike of shop-assistants at Kentish Town, and will produce a new sketch at the Holborn Empire next January entitled Living In.

We regret to announce the death of Mr. E. S. Vincent, who was so well known on the variety stage as an actor in Mr. John Lawson's sketches. Mr. Vincent was for years a comedian in the stock company organised by George Conquest in the eighties at the Surrey, and he and his deceased wife (Miss Jenny Lee) played parts in some of the finest dramas ever produced at the house "across the bridge." He made his mark on the lesser stage as the villain Cuthbert in Humanity, and his famous struggle with Mr. Lawson as Jacob Silvani will be remembered by all who saw it on that eventful night at the Middlesex years since when John Lawson started his successful career as a sketch producer.

Mr. Vincent also appeared in The Shield of David, Sally in Our Alley, and other of the Lawson productions, and his death will be much regretted. He passed away on Thursday at his residence, 121, Kennington-road, S.E., and will be buried on Monday, at 11 o'clock, at the Lambeth Cemetery, Tooting. The funeral arrangements are in the hands of Mr. Theophilus Dunkley.

A most interesting turn at the Palace this week is Doraswami, a clever and cultured musician, who plays both the piano and violin. His enthusiasm for music at an early age took the form of a love for the violin, which he holds in similar fashion to that generally adopted by players of the 'cello. This method does not apparently handicap him unfavourably, for on the night we heard him he gave a brilliant rendering of the "Waltz L'Araqonesa," by Alard, a French composer of the De Beriot school. Doraswami adopts native dress, and opens his entertainment with a pianoforte solo, and closes it with some clever imitations on the fiddle of the bagpipes and the banjo.

He is accompanied on a fine Brinsmead piano by Miss Dorothy Manners, a clever young pianiste, with a high reputation for solo playing both in this country and in Australia. Miss Manners, who is very young, contemplates giving piano recitals in the West-end, when we hope to have the pleasure of hearing her in classical works.

A site has been acquired at Watford for a new Hippodrome, and the building is to be commenced forthwith. The capital is being subscribed locally, and the management is in the hands of Sylvester's Hippodromes, Ltd.

Mr. Geo. Saphrini commences his third season at the Palace, Boston, on Monday next. During the summer vacation great alterations have been made. A new stage has been installed, new scenery hung, a spacious gallery built, and the place generally thoroughly renovated. Mr. D. J. Rees has been appointed assistant-manager and Mr. Bert Mortimer musical director.

We regret to learn that Mr. Mark Lorne, acting-manager of the Mansfield Hippodrome, is at present seriously ill, suffering from inflammation of the lungs.

Mr. Sydney Payne will conduct the orchestra at the Cardiff Empire next week, in the Miserere scenes from Il Trovatore, having been engaged by Mr. Oswald Stoll on behalf of the Moss Empires, Ltd., to act as musical director for Mme. Alice Esty's forthcoming tour with that syndicate.

"In Old Virginia" is a new spectacular and vocal scena, invented by Mr. Harry Instone, and produced by him at the Royal Theatre of Varieties, Oldham, on Monday. The curtain rises on a plantation scene. Slaves are seen bringing in the cotton they have picked, to be weighed, and the overseer is checking the weight. On the ringing of a bell the darkies at once commence enjoying themselves. In the midst of their festivities appears Miss Rosie, whose father has decided to free all his slaves in honour of her birthday. Solos and part songs are indulged in, and some capital dancing is introduced, the whole concluding with a grand finale showing Britannia protecting the slave and the downfall of the slave dealer.

The scene reflects great credit on Mr. Instone, the stage-manager and producer. The properties and lyrics are also the results of his labours. The music is from the pen of Mr. Fred Eplett, the able director of the theatre band, the scenery being by Mr. H. O. Richardson, scenic artist. Among the artists engaged are two clever juveniles, Miss Rosie Harrison and Master Monty Burgess, who appear with great success. The show had a good reception, and Mr. Instone had to respond to repeated recalls, the result being a complete success.

It will be remembered that a few weeks ago one of Miss Ella's lions (Gundar) killed an attendant at the Palace, Gloucester, on the Sunday evening prior to giving their performances. The accompanying paragraph from the Gloucester Citizen will be of interest to our readers:—"Mme. Ella's lions left Gloucester on Thursday morning. Two of the largest were bought by Mr. George Sanger last week, while the rest, including Gundar, go to the Blackpool Tower Menagerie. Mme. Ella wished to continue her show with the lions, but her husband has by no means recovered from his accident (one of the cages fell on him), and so she has decided to start something different altogether, and with this aim in view has become the possessor of the famous double-maned horse, Linus, and several other animals."

The following letter from Charles Merion, formerly manager of the Trocadero Music Hall, reveals a sad state of things. Writing from 61, Arthur-road, Brixton, he says:—"Unfortunately, some few months since I had an attack of effusion of blood to the head, and but for the timely assistance rendered me by Doctor Fraser, of Akerman-road, Brixton, I should have been paralysed or dead. I shall be seventy in a few days' time, and am still unable to follow any regular employment if I could get it, and am terribly reduced in circumstances. This last week or so I have scarcely had the barest necessaries. I have two sons, the younger out of employment. The elder pays my rent here, but can do little more, having a wife and young children."

"The Modern Godiva," L. Austin Millais's dramatic episode, created a sensation at bottom of bill at the Lyceum Theatre, Stafford, under the management of Mr. James Elphinstone. Lord Leighton's Venus, Mr. L. Austin Millais, and Mr. Harry Barron (the author), of D'Oyly Carte fame, playing in the production. They were repeatedly called before the curtain.

Mr. Henry de Groot introduced a new feature in the Crouch End Hippodrome programme this week when he presented Mr Henry Austen in the humorous-pathetic poem written by the late Robert Buchanan and entitled "The Wake of Tim O'Hara." That refined, intellectual turns are appreciated by music hall audiences was amply proved at the finish of the poem, when the actor received unstinted applause.

A grand matinée which was given on Wednesday at the Prince's Theatre of Varieties, Poplar, in aid of the Lord Mayor's Cripples' Fund, realised over £100 clear profit for the charity. Mr. Walter Gibbons generously defrayed all the printing and preliminary expenses. Lord Mayor Treloar attended in state, and expressed from the stage his heartfelt thanks to artists, musicians, and stage staff.

The Sheerness Hippodrome celebrated its first anniversary last week, having a bright company and good attendance. A number of London managers sent their congratulations by wire to Manager Fred Leighton, who, before the interval, made a neat little speech thanking all and sundry for their patronage and good wishes.

Mr. Tony Iverson, "the Ragman at the Piano," was, on Sunday evening last, initiated into the Terriers Association at the Dover Castle Hotel, Terrier Gage presiding over a lively meeting.

The regular meeting of the Chelsea Lodge of Freemasons was held on Friday (the 20th) at the Town Hall, Chelsea. The officers present were Brothers Serpentello, W.M., Harry Coutts, S.W., W. Hitch, J.W., Harry Bawn, S.D., Robert Duce, acting J.D., G. H. Dyball, I.G., Angelo Asher, Organist, Albert Le Fre, I.P.M., J. W. Mathews, P.M., W. S. Lyon, Treasurer, C. J. Doughty, Secretary, and J. H. MacNaughton, Tyler. The W.M. initiated Messrs. Hubert Bartlett, Ernest Leathley and Willie Benn, and vacated the chair in favour of Bro. Albert Le Fre, who initiated Messrs. Gerald O'Connell and Austin Rudd, after which the W.M. gave the charge to the whole of the initiates, and retired to allow Bro. Wolfe S. Lyon to advance his son, Bro. James S. Lyon, and Bros. Tom Mellor and Joe Robbins. Then Bro. Serpentello again occupied the chair and further advanced Bros. J. Laurie Graydon and Monte Bayly.

At the close of the business Bro. J. W. Mathews raised a discussion as to some minor details of the work of the Lodge, and it was determined to adhere to that of the Genesius and Logic clubs. The following members, in addition to those already mentioned, were present:—Bros. B. A. Bigny, L. G. Sharpe, Fred Clay, Fred Neiman, Dan Lipton, Fred Farren, R. E. Wilding, H. R. Mayville, C. H. Burton, P. H. Bingham, W. Permane, W. C. Jeapes; and as visitors Messrs. A. G. Laurence, G. W. Jennings, J. T. Ladly, B. Shelton Logan, W. A. Bennet, A. Meers, D. M. Trytel, Frank Lister, J. H. Smith, G. Burgess, and J. Blades. The members and visitors adjourned to the Six Bells Hotel, where a pleasant hour was spent.

In view of important developments a mass meeting of the members of the Variety Artists' Federation was held at the Bedford Head Hotel on Friday (yesterday) at noon.

Mr. Harry Barnard on Thursday was elected a director on the board of the Camberwell Palace. Mr. Barnard has for many years been a shareholder. He is well known for his charitable activities, notably in connection with the Music Hall Home, which we are glad to say is in a very prosperous condition at the present time.

Mr. Manny Warner, of Somers and Warner, arrived in London from New York on Monday, and owing to urgent business in connection with the Klaw and Erlanger Circuit, had to leave for the Continent the following morning.

The name of Harry Randall is missing from the names of the cast of Mr. Arthur Collins's forthcoming production at Old Drury of The Babes in the Wood. But if the absence of the comedian of Cockneydom is to be regretted, there will be some consolation for pantomime lovers in the engagement of Mr. Neil Kenyon, the Scotch comedian, who was given his first chance on the variety stage in town by Mr. Frank Glenister at the London Pavilion. Scotch comedians of late seem to have ousted the Irish variety from their pride of place, and Mr. Kenyon's pawky humour should be a distinctly refreshing feature of the National Theatre annual.

It is ten years since the subject of "The Babes" was utilised for a Christmas entertainment by Mr. Collins, who, for his production in 1897-98, had the valuable help of Dan Leno and Herbert Campbell as the Kiddies. Other notables in the cast were Alice Barnett and Alfred Balfour. Alas! all have since joined the great majority.

Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Knowles and Miss Hetty King were passengers on board the Carmania, which sailed from Liverpool on Wednesday for New York. The American comedian is bound for a long lecturing tour, and we on this side shall not look on his white ducks for some time. Miss Hetty King will be on the other side for six weeks. Mr. Alfred Sutro, author of The Walls of Jericho and John Glayde's Honour, was a passenger by the same boat.

Miss Sable Fern has been compelled to give up her engagements during the past five weeks on account of a severe attack of neuritis. She had hoped to make her reappearance next week at Coventry, but this is now impossible, and the English singer of English songs will take a further week's rest.

Mr. Sam Lohenwirth notifies all managers, agents, and fellow artists not to be deceived by any person or persons using a colourable imitation of his name. He is the only Sam Lohenwirth, and is in partnership with Charles Cohan.

The Oxford announces for Monday Blake and Amber, an entirely new American turn, brimful of the latest quips and cranks. Their entertainment is entitled "Sowing a Little Smile Seed and Reaping a Whirlwind of Laughter."

The Right Hon. Isabell Maude Penrice Countess of Clancarty ("Belle Bilton"), of Garbally Court, Ballinasloe, co. Galway, formerly well known on the variety stage, who died on Dec. 31 last, left personal estate in the United Kingdom valued at £446, and administration has been granted to Mr. Alexander Knox McIntire, of Bankruptcy-buildings, Four Courts, Dublin, the official assignee acting in the matter of Lord Clancarty, a bankrupt.

Thousands of admirers of Planquette's opera, Les Cloches de Corneville, the subject of the forthcoming ballet at the Alhambra, will be curious as to how Mr. G. W. Byng, the musical director of the establishment, will treat the music. We are assured that the greatest care has been taken to preserve the composer's sparkling melodies, and not one of the favourite numbers will be missing. Due justice will be done by the magnificent orchestra of the Alhambra to such popular airs as "The legend of the bells," "Just look at that: just look at this," the cider song, "That night I'll ne'er forget," the hiring fair, and many more. In addition, the connecting links necessary in a ballet for the perfect weaving of the whole have been provided by the musical director and Mr. Alfred Moul.

Not for the first time has ballet been associated with Planquette's opera, Les Cloches de Corneville. When the opera was originally produced in Paris on April 19, 1877, at the Folies-Dramatique, it was such a success that it was transferred to the Gaite Théâtre, a much larger playhouse, and to fill the stage a ballet was added, La Cuilette des Pommes, in other words, the Apple Harvest, and some of this music has been introduced in the new ballet shortly to be produced at the Alhambra. Among those engaged to impersonate the various characters are Signor Rosi, who will be Gaspard, the miser; Mlle. Bordin, the Spirit of the Bells and several other parts; Mlle. Morino, who should be a charming Serpolette. Miss Julie Seale, another old favourite at the national theatre of varieties, is also included in the cast.

Every now and again we hear of the revival of the curfew in country places, and, ever up to date, the management of the Alhambra is going to utilise this return to old feudal customs by arranging for the citizens of London to be reminded every evening, not that they ought to go to bed, but that they should proceed to the Alhambra to see the new ballet, Les Cloches de Corneville. Every night when the curtain rises on the choreographic version of Planquette's opera the inhabitants of the West-end, at least, will hear the bells ring out the fascinating and rhythmic chimes which have immortalised his work.

So successful has the engagement of La Milo been at the Alhambra as Lady Godiva, that her other artistic poses have been added to, and now nightly she gives living form to such studies as Hebe, Maidenhood, Diana, and Una and the Lion, all, it need hardly be said, perfect embodiments of living statuary.

Lieut. Albini, the big-line attraction at the Hippodrome, Hastings, met with a great reception there on Monday night on his return, the patrons voting the accomplished showman and illusionist brighter than ever.

Crowds of spectators thronged the sides of the lake at the Balkan States Exhibition, Earl's Court, on Wednesday, to see Mariedl, the Tyrolese giantess, "shoot the chute." Coaxed into the centre of the boat the 8ft. 2in. lady shot with more than ordinary rapidity down the slide, and when she struck the water the tidal waves were a sight to see. Mariedl had been driven from the Shepherd's Bush Empire (where she is appearing nightly) to the main entrance of the Exhibition in a powerful, large-sized motor-car. Dressed in the national costume of the Tyrol, topped off by a large conical hat, the gigantic fair one stepped with dignity from the car, and passed through the admiring crowd into "Old Japan." In the Japanese tea-garden, at the invitation of Messrs. Spiers and Pond, the party sat down to refreshment. The pygmies were so awed by her presence that they crowded together, showing the whites of their eyes in alarm. After visiting the Servian section, where an appropriately large-sized brooch was presented to her, Mariedl, looking pleased with her visit, drove off.

Mr. Alfred Lester's return to the Palace Theatre with A Restaurant Episode synchronises with large audiences, in spite of the midsummer heat, which is doing so much for belated holiday-makers. The droll trifle has been much elaborated, and Miss Florence Wakeman, a very graceful and attractive young lady, who, we understand, is of French extraction, plays particularly well as the actress who demands refreshment and bilks the waiter. There are many hearty laughs during the progress of the sketch, and Mr. Lester's impersonation of the waiter who is "dicky on his plates" is one of the funniest character sketches to be seen just now in London.

We have witnessed many smart and intrepid performances at the London Pavilion on the part of English and Continental artists, and we were greatly impressed with the turn that is being contributed to the current programme by Celest—an alert, skilful, and handsome athlete. When the curtain rises Celest is hidden by a large property shell, from which he emerges after a pistol shot, and immediately commences some extremely vigorous bâton-twirling. This is merely a preliminary to an extremely daring wire-walking act. He promenades the thin filament of steel from a height, but the "line" is immediately loosened, and he continues the act on a slack wire. He swings easily and gracefully while continually changing his position, and, finally mounting a ladder held in position by himself, he finishes his wonderful balancing by a display of English and American flags which suddenly grow out from the sides of the ladder.

Mr. Allan McAskell, manager for Pringle's Animated Pictures, terminates to-night his fourth week at Guildhall, Plymouth, and has been re-engaged for two weeks longer to look after the Mechanics' Institute, Nottingham, commencing Monday next, Sept. 30.

Mr. Yorke Stephens is the latest acquisition to the variety stage, having been secured by Mr. Joseph Wilson to present at the Tivoli Mr. R. C. Carton's clever duologue Dinner for Two, which has always been a popular curtain-raiser at the theatres. In it Mr. Yorke Stephens appeared on the occasion of his benefit a few years since at Wyndham's Theatre, when he was supported by Sir Charles Wyndham. On Monday next at the Tivoli his colleague will be Mr. Windham Guise, a Gaiety comedian, who has won considerable popularity at the Hippodrome. One of Mr. Yorke Stephens's earliest successes on the theatrical boards was as the war correspondent in Held by the Enemy at the Princess's.

"The Belle of the Ball," the new ballet, will be produced at the Empire on Monday at 9.45. Dealing, as it does, with every popular element in the music of the hour, and traversing so many light operas familiar to playgoers, it should achieve a great success.

Mr. Arthur Playfair's success in the sketch 327 Finsbury at the Empire has appealed very vividly to every lover of the Turf, and remains a feature in the programme, and Miss Betty Ohls, the new American soubrette, has fully vindicated the most confident anticipations formed regarding her new turn, her success both in English and French songs being immediate.

The Satinettos made their first appearance on Thursday on the occasion of Mr. Charles Beecham's benefit at the Paragon. From first to last their rapid and artistic pictures, constructed entirely in satin and silk, met with immense success, the effects obtained by these clever artists being nothing short of marvellous. A figure of the Yeoman of the Guard met with unbounded enthusiasm. Rapid changes by means of a revolving frame save all unnecessary delay, so that picture follows picture, and the interest never flags. The Satinettos should have a long and prosperous career before them for such an original entertainment.

Miss Elsie Kerry, the accomplished young comedienne, has had a succession of triumphs on her Irish tour, which has just concluded. It is not a far cry from Belfast to Dublin, but many a capable artist has had reason before now to appreciate the difficulty of catering for audiences in the two great Irish centres with the same fare. It is to the credit of Miss Kerry's art and manner that she has succeeded where others failed. Her reception at the Hippodrome, in the Northern capital, was only eclipsed by the hearty greeting that awaited her in the city of her birth, where, at the Tivoli, she had nightly recalls, and was the recipient of quite a profusion of floral tributes. She opens on Monday at the Walthamstow Palace.

Mr. John Fuller, jun., is still globe-trotting. Writing from San Francisco, he mentions that he is just leaving for Japan, and will be back in New Zealand at Christmas. He has had a splendid time, and while travelling through America has seen, in all its branches, the show business, which he says seems to be going with a perpetual boom, while Sunday performances give the American manager a "holiday house" once a week. Mr. Fuller further remarks that America is a very expensive country to live in, and that any English artist coming to America should ask double the ordinary English salary if he, or she, expects to get on level terms. Whilst in America Mr. Fuller received a cable from his firm, announcing that they had purchased His Majesty's Theatre, Dunedin. This very fine house is almost the facsimile of Herald-square Theatre, New York, and has accommodation for 1,700 people.

Mr. C. W. Somerset, the well-known actor, who is at the Hackney Empire next week, with The Great Poison Case, fulfilled his first engagement in London with Miss Marie de Grey at the now extinct Olympic. Later, in 1882, he appeared as Siward, in Macbeth, at Drury Lane. Since then he has played in many successful West End productions, notably as the old Earl in Little Lord Fauntleroy, at the Prince of Wales, and as Dr. Marshall in Her Advocate, at the Duke of York's. Everyone remembers his Earl of Harpenden, in Boys Together, produced at the Adelphi, at the back end of 1896. Since then he has adventured provincial touring companies in melodrama, and has taken part in some of Mr. Tree's most important productions, notably in Herod.

Mr. Frank Gerald desires, through the columns of The Era, to express his sincere gratitude to all those members of the theatrical, musical, and variety professions who contributed so generously to the testimonial presented to him at the Criterion Restaurant on Sunday week last, 15th inst., and to tender his best thanks to the Labour Members of Parliament and Trade Union officials for their support, and to the Chairman, Secretary, Treasurer, and Committee, for their work in carrying the affair through to such a successful issue.

The special arrangements for Mr. Fred Miller's benefit at the Canterbury on Oct. 24 next are in the care of a committee, of which Messrs. David Cowis and Charles Meggy have been appointed joint hon. secretaries and treasurers.

A grand Bohemian smoking concert will be given at the Vaudeville Club, 98, Charing Cross-road, on Sunday (to-morrow), at 9.30 p.m. Mr. W. W. Sampson will be in the chair. Among those who have promised to appear are Little Tich, Wilkie Bard, Harry Tate, Tom Costello, Neil Kenyon, Wal Pink, Dave Carter, Ryder Slone, Paul Knox, Wensley Russell, Apollo, Johnny Gilmore, and Barney Armstrong.

We hear that it has been decided to reopen the Coliseum in November next. The house will be conducted on popular lines, and prices of admission have been fixed at extremely moderate rates. Certain alterations will be made in the internal arrangements, and a number of the small boxes around the grand circle will be removed. There will be two performances daily.

A pretty little girl in blue: a brunette with a vivacious style, who magnetises her audiences—such is the brief description of Daisy Dormer at the Oxford. At this hall, where Mr. Blyth Pratt is giving an all-star programme, Daisy fetches them most unmistakably in "I wish I were you" and a rag-time song and dance that keeps one's eyes glued to the stage. Daisy is now firmly established as a top-liner.

Among the passengers who sailed from Liverpool by the White Star liner Cedric on Thursday for New York were the Rhondda Male Voice Quartette, who are booked for a six months' tour in the States.

The visit of the Municipal Council of Paris to the Palace Theatre on Tuesday, Oct. 8, will be signalised by special numbers in Mr. Alfred Butt's programme, and Mr. Herman Finck has in preparation a special surprise "bouquet" of music for that evening. Lor' Maire Treloar and the Sheriffs will attend the performance in state.

A reminiscence of Miss Florrie Gallimore, who appears at the Gaiety Theatre, Ayr, this week, is sent to us by Mr. Arthur Brogden. "It was," he writes, "just about the time when musical prodigies were both numerous and fashionable—child pianists, 'celloists, violinists, and vocalists were all the rage—I had a little mite of a girl amongst my musical freinds—the possessor of a wonderful contralto voice and a remarkable gift of mimicry. She had only seen nine summers, and yet was sufficiently clever to command a salary that not only kept the family, but left quite a nice little sum each week for her bank book. We called her Baby S——, and on the halls she was considered a little star. She would often make calls, take tea, and play with my children, and it was on one of these occasions a very pretty incident occurred, which I think worth while relating, and which will also serve the purpose of introducing the chief character in my story.

"Miss Florrie Gallimore, the well-known music-hall star, occupied a suite of rooms in the same house as myself and family in the busy town of M——. Looking over the banisters one day, I saw the great star and the little star meet on the stairs. There was the sound of a kiss, a mutual recognition, and the little star disappeared in the arms of the big star behind the folding doors. What took place I can only guess, for I know there were plenty of good things in there for little children, but when Baby S—— once more made her appearance her little face was buried in a monster bouquet of most expensive and beautiful flowers, which must have cost guineas. Baby S—— lost her mother shortly afterwards—she died very suddenly—and Baby's guardian removed her from the stage and sent her to a French convent. I have not seen her since. Miss Florrie Gallimore is still a great star and an ornament to her profession, and when I see her again I shall not forget to remind her of that meeting of the two stars."

The members of the staff of Jasper Redfern, Limited, the enterprising pictorial entertainment firm of the Central Hall, Sheffield, Grand Theatre, Manchester, and Public Hall, Barnsley, had their annual outing on Sunday, Sept. 15. The place chosen was Blackpool. The company, which numbered 105, arrived at their destination about 11 a.m., and proceeded to the Winter Gardens Restaurant, where dinner was served under the presidency of Mr. Jasper Redfern, the managing-director, supported by Mr. George Mettham and Mr. Joseph Thompson, directors. The weather was beautifully fine, and after a full day's enjoyment the party returned home in the best of spirits. The arrangements were made by Mr. Jasper Redfern, ably assisted by Mr. F. W. Holmes, his genial manager at Sheffield, Mr. J. Rolmaz (Manchester), and Mr. T. Johnson (Barnsley).

It was with considerable regret that we learnt of the death of Johnny Hanson, who passed away after a long period of ill-health on Friday, the 20th inst., at the Middlesex Hospital, whither he had been removed at his own request from his residence, 64, Frith-street, Soho. The deceased comedian made his last appearance on the stage at the Middlesex, where he had always been such a favourite, but his state of health was such that he lost his voice and broke down. The immediate cause of death was heart failure, which supervened on chronic bronchitis.

As far back as the 'seventies, Johnny Hanson headed a team of clown cricketers, and he and his merry men assisted to raise charitable funds at many a fête and gala. His favourite character with the crowd was Soft Sammy. He was, we believe, in the original production of The Queen's Birthday, which became highly popular at the Middlesex, the Canterbury, and other London halls. The first cast included several ladies who afterwards became famous, the Sisters Mario, Katie Seymour, the Sisters Casselli among the number. The company also included Millie Howes, Louie Austin, and poor Issy Holt, who afterwards died by her own hand.

Miss Minnie Mario for some years played with the deceased comedian in a sketch founded on "The Tinted Venus" of Anstey, author of "Vice Versa." Other popular sketches which Johnny made famous were A Country Nurse (afterwards known as The Lily) and The Doctor's Boy. Probably his most important engagement in the theatres was when he played Hobbedehoy in Sir Augustus Harris's last production of Cinderella at Drury Lane. A few years since he played Widow Twankey and Clown at the West London in Mr. William Bailey's production of Aladdin. In 1891 he was the Queen Elizabeth in Queen Bess Bamboozled and Leicester Squared at the Middlesex, but of late years his appearances at the halls have been few and far between.

The late Mr. Hanson started his stage career at the age of thirteen, and died at the age of sixty-four, so that he was for over fifty years in the glare of the footlights. While pursuing his calling as a printer he met with an accident, and one of his hands was disfigured by the loss of several fingers.

Johnny Hanson was twice married, his second wife, who survives him, being Miss Mattie Hepburn, who in her younger days was a famous dancer, and fulfilled at the Nottingham Theatre Royal a five years' engagement with Mr. T. W. Charles. She was the principal dancer in the spectacle Sardanapalus, which toured the provinces. Miss Agnes Hanson, her second daughter, is in the profession, but the other four children are not following the stage.

The remains of the deceased comedian were interred in Manor Park Cemetery on Thursday. There were several beautiful wreaths from members of the family and friends in the neighbourhood. Miss Gladys Huxley, Miss Alice Clifton, and Mr. and Mrs. Wal Douglas also sent floral tributes. Miss Clifton and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas, who had supported the deceased comedian in his sketches, were at the graveside.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

AMONG the songs published during the week by Mr. David Day's firm are Mr. R. G. Knowles's latest acquisition, "The house, the flat, and the bungalow," by George Arthurs and C. W. Murphy; "Jack of all trades—master of none!" (sung by Mr. George Brooks), by Edgar Bateman and F. W. Leigh; "Where the daffodillies grow" (Mr. Harry Bedford), by Barnes and Weston; "Come, come to Iowa" (Miss Agnes Hanson, Mr. Johnny Hanson's daughter), by J. F. Lambe and T. W. Thurban; "I'd like to have you for my girl," by Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford; "I knew I loved you when you went away," by Harry Castling and Fred Godfrey; and two new numbers of Mr. Alec Hurley's, "She's been a good wife to me," by Worton David and Orlando Powell, and "Liz; or, let me call her mother too," by Fred Murray and Charles Hilbury.

"I AM COMING HOME TO ENGLAND" is the title of an up-to-date chorus song, secured by Miss Florrie Gallimore for immediate production. It is written and composed by Harry Marlow, the clever writer of this year's plum number, entitled "Bayan," published by the Monte Carlo Publishing Co.

MR. SAM MAYO has just published with the Shapiro, Von Tilzer Music Co., Ltd., a new song, entitled "Tally Ho," which he intends to feature shortly. The same firm have also acquired the publishing rights of a new number, "Take me to hear the band play," which Miss Florrie Forde will produce shortly.

MISS VESTA TILLEY is still scoring enormous successes with her two successful numbers, "When the right girl comes along" (David and Lyle) and "The seaside smile" (David and Lyle), and the publishers, the Von Tilzer Co., are having big demands for the songs.

CLARKE AND HAMILTON are making good at the Oxford with a charming song, "My Princess of Japan," which is being published by the Shapiro, Von Tilzer Music Co.

PARK'S Eton Boys have been making their usual success this week at the Palace, Hammersmith, and Collins's, where they have been specially featuring three of the Star Co.'s popular songs, "Has anyone seen a German band?" "Oh! the Isle of Anglesey," and "When the lilac blooms in springtime."

MR. GEORGE LEYTON, at the East Ham Palace, has during the week made a great and lasting impression on the patrons of that very fine house. His song, "You can't do without a girl," has grown in popularity each day until it has become quite the accepted anthem East Ham way. The Star Co. are the publishers.

MASTER NIPPER LUPINO LANE, who is making a huge success on the Stoll tour, has arranged to specially feature Mills and Scott's great pantomime song, "Has anyone seen a German band?" in Mr. Chute's forthcoming "annual" at the Prince's Theatre, Bristol.

MR. FRANK COYLE has just bought this week another good song, entitled "Would you like me to sing you a song?" It is from the pen of Mr. James Hargreaves, and is a certain winner. Mr. Coyle's number, "The only man left in the world" has turned out a gigantic success.

MISS FLORENCE EDAILS has made a great and artistic success with a new and charming song, by Edward St. Quentin, entitled "Our castle of dreams." It has been secured by Messrs. Enoch and Sons, the eminent firm of Great Marlborough-street.

MR. RYDER SLONE has caused a furore nightly at the Stoke Newington Palace by his artistic singing of "This is my silver wedding; or, the night watchman." The idea is very humorous, and was suggested by Mr. Ben Albert to his brother artist, and the song has been put into verse by the author of "The 'ouses in between," who was specially selected for the task. The music is by C. W. Murphy, whose characteristic and flowing single chorus is taken up with avidity. Mr. Slone is at the Palace, Camberwell, next week.

THE outlook for the musical season of 1907-8 has not been considered by many as brilliant as some which have preceded it, but Messrs. M. Witmark and Sons state that when facts are brought out and a close reckoning made, there is no doubt that it will prove equal to, and perhaps surpass, any of its predecessors as far as they are concerned.

MISS JESSIE PRESTON, "a wee drop o' rale Scotch," during the past week has been entertaining her friends in the East at the Queen's, Poplar, singing six songs nightly, viz., "I can't forget auld Reekie," "Will somebody see me hame?" "I love a laddie"; also a humorous ditty, entitled "Bang went saxpence." Miss Preston also works the Oxford, where she remains another two weeks. Mr. Blythe Pratt is to be complimented on the beautiful scene which he has provided for Miss Preston. You can almost scent the heather across the footlights. We may mention that all Miss Preston's songs are from the pen of Mr. J. F. Lambe.

MARIE LLOYD'S FAREWELL.

To enumerate a third of the names of those who assembled on No. 6 platform at Euston on Thursday morning to bid farewell to Miss Marie Lloyd and Mr. Alec Hurley on their departure for "the Americas," as the old chroniclers quaintly called the land of our cousins, would fill a column almost of this paper. Proprietors, managers, brother and sister artists, publishers, journalists, authors, and composers, scores of personal friends, all vied with each in making the send-off something to remember and be proud of. Liveried servants, commissionaires, and messenger boys arrived in relays laden with flowers and bearing messages from various quarters of the Metropolis for the popular pair, and the cheer that went up when the train moved off and the queen of all comediennes, looking radiant in a dark blue travelling costume, smiled a last farewell from the carriage, was deafening.

AMONG the many well-known folks present were Messrs. J. L. Gregory, Joyner, Harry Rickards, H. G. Hibbert, David Day, H. J. Didcott, Lester Barrett, Herbert Clarke, Worton David, George Fairburn, Jack Lotto, Fred W. Leigh, Henry E. Pether, Orlando Powell, Charles Wilmott, Mr. "Sixpenny Pops" Smith, Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter's manager, H. E. Darewski, jun., and the whole of the members of Mr. Alec Hurley's sketch company, including Mr. Ted Hanley and the two veterans George Moore and Victor Liston. Miss Lloyd's father, mother, brother, and also her daughter were present, as likewise were the Misses Alice and Rosie Lloyd, and Miss Ella Lane, Miss Alice Lloyd having run up from Birmingham specially, being due back there at 3 p.m. Miss Annie Lloyd accompanies the voyagers to America. Many journeyed to Liverpool to witness the embarkation and departure of the White Star liner Cedric.

ALMOST Miss Marie Lloyd's last action at Euston was to place a flower in the coat of a well-known writer of coster and cockney songs, saying, "A rose for you in token of your 'Little bunch of daisies' for me."

OUR Liverpool correspondent writes:—"Miss Marie Lloyd, and her husband, Mr. Alec Hurley, had a grand send-off from Liverpool on Thursday, when they sailed in the big liner Cedric for the United States.

"ON their arrival from London they were met at the Riverside Station, on the Landing Stage, by a large crowd of local theatricals, headed by Eugene Stratton, who, after speaking a few complimentary words, presented Miss Lloyd, on behalf of the local branch of the V.A.F., with a magnificent floral arrangement in the form of a heart, the central white flowers showing the words, 'Our Marie's heart,' the upper decoration being the letters 'V.A.F.' prominently displayed. Great cheers were given as the huge liner gently receded from the stage.

"AMONG the company who joined in the farewell were Eugene Stratton, Harry Randall, Mr. and Mrs. Wood (parents of Marie Lloyd), Ella Lane, Maud and Sydney Wood, Mrs. Egerton ('American Bar,' who organised the presentation), Carrie Joy, Mr. Girling, Fred Higham, Amy Russell, Walter Emerson, Mr. and Mrs. Gunnup, Ted Hanley, and others."

MR. AND MRS. HURLEY on Wednesday at Romano's entertained a select party of friends, among whom were Messrs. Graydon, Tozer, Walter and Jack de Frece, H. J. Didcott, Wilkie Bard, Fred W. Leigh, Charles Wilmott, J. P. Harrington, and Orlando Powell.

"THE AVALANCHE."

A Sensational Episode, written by F. Neville,
Staged by Frank Parker, and Produced at the London Hippodrome, on Monday, Sept. 23.

André ..... MR. LAUDERDALE MAITLAND
Pierre ..... MR. CECIL M. YORK
Jacques ..... MR. A. WALCOTT
Lizette ..... MISS JANET ALEXANDER
Mr. John Smith ..... MR. W. FULBROOK
Herr Grimerstein ..... MR. A. LISLE
Mons. Fairi ..... MR. F. RICKARDS
Caleb Hudson ..... MR. S. LEICESTER

In his latest production at the Hippodrome Mr. Frank Parker has left the peaceful shores of the Zuyder Zee, with its quaint Dutch folk and pictures, for the equally interesting but more picturesque steeps of the Alps, and on Monday evening a large audience stamped with the hall-mark of its approval The Avalanche, which surely is the most sensational thing in stage catastrophes that we have seen even in the popular arena of such productions. It is as thrilling as it is startling, and as deeply impressive as it is stupendous. Besides these qualities, however, it reproduces the gaiety of the peasantry of the mountain-side, the light-heartedness of the merry Swiss boy and girl in their village vestival. Truly the Switzer is a courtly gallant, and his fräulein the most fascinating of coquettes, who both find expression for their love-lilts in the elusive but ear-haunting Tyroléenne. We formed our impressions from the interesting and highly artistic performance of the De Freggers Tyrolean Troupe—the brightest and most gifted combination of the kind that we have ever heard.

The setting of The Avalanche is wonderful in its realism. Far up the height at the back of the stage we see the summit of a snow-covered steep towering above a yawning ravine. Close to the foot of the ascent, which is in the neighbourhood of the Matterhorn, is a pretty Swiss village, and when the curtain rises the peasants are en fête, celebrating the nuptials of the handsome young guide André and Lisette. Joy is everywhere save in the heart of Pierre, the disappointed suitor for the girl's hand, who takes his rejection very badly indeed, and vows vengeance on the bridegroom, who, brimming over with happiness, offers him the hand of friendship, which is churlishly refused. The men quarrel, knives are drawn, and bloodshed is only averted by the intervention of Lisette. But Pierre gets his opportunity, which comes when he takes a party of tourists up the Matterhorn, and his successful rival, tempted by the offer of £100, pioneers a solitary Englishman. We see the rivals in the throes of a deadly struggle, when the scene darkens, the fury of a storm outbreaks, and from the height, with a suddenness that is awe-inspiring, rushes down the awful avalanche, sweeping guides, tourists, and peasantry away from its path.

The hero is of course saved, according to the accepted melodramatic traditions, and the villain swept into the ravine. The ingenuity of the whole thing is really extraordinary, and Mr. Frank Parker may be here heartily congratulated on the greatest triumph of his career as a stage-manager.

Mr. F. Neville has done his share of the work well, the comedy being sufficiently obvious without being tedious. There is none too much dialogue, however, and the company has little chance. Mr. Lauderdale Maitland, who is acting at the Hippodrome for the first time, makes a handsome and manly André; Mr. C. Morton York broadly sketches the truculent and revengeful nature of Pierre; and Miss Janet Alexander makes a winsome bride of Lisette, whose distress of mind she sufficiently accentuates. Mr. W. Fulbrook as John Smith, an Englishman in search of Alpine flora, is particularly welcome as a fun-maker, his silent and expressive-featured companion, Binks, being played in whimsical fashion by a diminutive actor whose name is not on the bill. Mr. A. Walcott makes a jolly innkeeper; and the minor characters are efficiently represented. Tiller's Eight Snowdrops play the parts of dancing Swiss girls with their customary chic and vivacity; and in the tobogganing the real mountain guides, Rudolph Bernet and Christien Bohren distinguish themselves. Mr. Carl Kiefert has written the appropriate music, which is well rendered by the orchestra under the direction of Herr Erhorn. The "1812" overture by Tschaikowsky is impressively played by the Hippodrome musicians during the setting of the scene for The Avalanche, which should at least run until Christmas.

GRANVILLE ANNIVERSARY.

The ninth anniversary of the Granville, Walham Green, was celebrated in auspicious style on Friday, the 20th inst. The performance benefited by the patronage of the Mayor of Fulham (Councillor J. M. Littleboy) and the Mayoress, the former appearing in his robes of office. Mr. William H. Lennon, the acting-manager, had altogether a busy time of it, for the proceedings began at seven and did not terminate until well after eleven. The honorary stage-managers for the evening were Messrs. G. Ernest Aplin and Laurie Graydon. In a long list of artists were Mabel Le Roy, Francis, Johnny Walker, Arabella Allen, Arthur Gill, Sisters Anderson, Winifred Hare, W. T. Ellwanger and company, Austin Rudd, Vernon's Bioscope, Caryl Wilbur and company, Fred Herbert, Maud Laverne, Blake and Granby, Dan Crawley, Margaret Ashton, Rosie Archer, Abdullah's Arabs, Adie and Wylie, Jennie Alexander, Frank Boyce, Arthur Boyne, The Brontes, Geo. Brooks, Chas. Bailey, Minnie Thurgate, Harry Champion, Cribb and Cribb, Jack Charman, Flo Cecil, Little Cliff, Venie Clements, Cambrian Trio, Czar's Russian Troupe, Crown Trio, Olga Dore, Doody and Wright, Jack Daw, Eileen Douglas, Daisy Dormer, David and Longmore, Fred Elton, Lill Elfreda, Harry Ford, Ed. E. Forde, Violet Grazia, Little Ganty, Chas. Gardener, Dorothy Gould, Lil Hawthorne, Percy Hannan, Hughes and Elliott, Alfred Harmsworth, Three Sisters Jonghmanns, Tom Jones, Sisters Julian, Edie King, Letine, Pete and Minnie Lee, Fred Lester, Mendel, Aida Martine, Cecilia Maude, Bertram Noel, Victor Newman, Alice Pierce, Rita Rhylle, Rogers and Merry, Rose Sartella, Walter Stanley, Harry Thurston, Clive Watts, Maud and Sidney Wood, Johnny Worman, and the Zampas.

UNDER the spirited and energetic direction of Mr. Matt Raymond, the Victoria Hall, Walthamstow, is fast taking a firm hold of the Walthamstow public. The main feature relied upon is undoubtedly the series of Bioscope pictures. The subjects, ranging from Uncle Tom's Cabin to The Boy, the Bust, and the Bath, from the Bombardment of Casa Blanca to Father's Quiet Sunday, and from The Gipsy Bride to Tommy Atkins Minds the Babe, to mention only a few, show the wideness of their range. Two illustrated songs, "Only a message from home" and "Honey, stay in your own backyard," are well sung by Miss Winnie Winn. A great favourite is Happy Martin, the Ragman at the Piano, who plays that instrument and indulges in many quaint sayings to the great delight of his audience.

MARIE LLOYD'S FAREWELL.

"PHARAOH'S DAUGHTER."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—In your issue of the 21st inst. I noticed a letter from Mr. Joseph Tabrar, stating that the "plot" and "title" of Pharaoh's Daughter is his sole invention. This is not so. It is mine. I am the authoress, and what Mr. Tabrar did was at my dictation. By saying that the lyrics and music were by J. Tabrar, I was giving him credit for more than he has done, for the solo dance of the Greek slave is by Chas. Bendix. The lyrics were also very much altered by Mr. Francis Thackeray. As a very young girl my pet hobby was ancient histories, especially Greek; and so I wove my little romance and title of Pharaoh's Daughter. Mr. Tabrar was commissioned by me to write an opera in one act. I supplied him with full plot, characters, and each correctly named. I even lent him a certain ancient book so that he might study the style of language.—Yours truly, ETHEL RA-LESLIE.

Manor House, Brancaster-road, Streatham, S.W.
Sept. 24.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I note in your current issue that Mr. Joseph Tabrar claims the right of the title, "Pharaoh's Daughter." My novel under that title was published by Mr. J. W. Arrowsmith in 1887. It ran through many editions, and I hold the copyright.—Faithfully yours, EDGAR LEE.

25, Wellington-street, W.C., Sept. 25.

AT the Holborn Empire Mr. Charles A. Marshall has been appointed acting-manager in place of Mr. William A. Salmond.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE SURREY.

With thirteen performances a week Mr. Frank Macnaghten is endeavouring to accommodate his patrons here, and a sea of eager faces is always present to please equally the eyes of manager and artist. The big item of a programme full of variety is Fred Karno's combination of clever comedians in the pantomimical absurdity Early Birds, with its comical scenes, which keep the audience in a constant roar of merriment. In direct contrast to the above is Mr. Leonard Mortimer's sketch The Good Intent, and the intense interest taken in its many exciting incidents is a tribute to the dramatic abilities of this well-chosen company. Mr. Albert Guyon assumes the rôle of the Rev. Leslie Melford with manly earnestness; while his fighting scenes with the coiners are received with a roar of approbation. As his sweet fiancée, Barbara Warren, Miss Madge Morley imbues the part with a delicacy and feeling that win the hearts of her audience. Mr. Charles C. Ludlow as the faithful coffee-shop drudge, Feddon Nort, is admirable. As Elsa Wylsdon, Miss Guinevere Shilton acts with intelligence and conviction. As the brutal coiner, Kelsey Warren, Mr. Harry McClelland invests the part with cool and callous villainy; while as his accomplice, Harvard Wyssdon, Mr. Henry Hare brings out all the brutal coarseness of a nature steeped in crime. In the small part of the detective, Mr. War Maskell plays with skill. The locale of the action is laid in Ratcliffe Highway, and it certainly does not add to the realism of the scene to see all over the interior of the coffee house posters advertising Christmas hampers in the Waterloo-road.

Among the variety turns, premier honours fall to Josh Dixon, a very lively comedian and dancer, who, both in appearance and methods, is a striking replica of the late King's Jester. He is able to extract humour from his patter song, "I'm one of the ancient martyrs." The Donnas Trio, in their marvellous trapeze balancing scena, give an exhibition of balancing that is throughout original, daring, and wonderfully skilful, and evoke astonishment and admiration. Fox and Melville, in their illustrated songs, "Somebody's waiting for me" and "All is fair in love and war," not only give excellent point and expression, but get the audience to join heartily in their tuneful choruses; Blanche and Diacoff, on their inverted cycle track, indulge in some exciting races and daring blindfold feats of cycling, and win much approbation; Fred Walker has a choice comic ditty in "Shan't give my advice any more"; and Miss Norman Grant, while seated at the piano, sings two good songs, "It does go" and "Georgie," both of which "go" with a gusto that must gladden the heart of the fair performer. Flo Wood wins many admirers with her pretty song, "Wedding Bells"; while Raymond's Bio-tableaux, Lightning Sketches, concludes an enjoyable entertainment, which is heightened by the excellent work of the Surrey orchestra, under the bâton of Mr. Rattray. Good order is ever maintained by Mr. Charles Craig, the courteous acting-manager.

HACKNEY EMPIRE.

Variety is still the watchword of the programme at this popular hall, and business continues to be excellent. Miss Norah Emerald, who opens the proceedings, is a pleasing singer and a capable dancer, and her act is warmly greeted. Alcide Capitaine is a particularly accomplished lady gymnast, who presents a daring and skilful act that was deservedly the subject of much applause. Edward Frisby, a boy vocalist, who is featuring "Starlight," displays a capital voice, and gained a cordial call. The Sisters Caselli, duettists and dancers, do well, the latter item of their act being very good, and their turn makes a good impression.

Miss Alexandra Dagmar is one of the bright, particular star turns, sings and mimics her way straight to the heart of the audience, and tells some good stories in addition. Her singing of "Red Wing," a song she is introducing to London, gained an enthusiastic reception, and for an encore she gave a "yodel" song. Binns and Binns also make a hit. Their introductory business is very smart, and their musical act as good as ever. For an encore they gave their well-known bell duet, and the audience seemed loth to part with them. Conway and Leland present an uncommon show, Billed as the Merry Monopedes, this couple make light of the circumstance that they only possess one leg apiece, and display much ability as cyclists and dancers, while the humour of their business proves infectious.

Donaldson Bros., Ardel, and company, who are at the bottom of the bill, present their well-known act, A Zoological Comedy, in which knockabout business of a vigorous kind finds full play. The stage effects are elaborate, the company work hard, and complete success crowns their efforts. Ernest Shand is the remaining attraction, being at the top of the bill. His first song, "Toorle-i-oorle," goes well; his second, "Hope for the best," which enables him to give a good skit of a clergyman, is even better; and his third, a tirade on bachelors, is accompanied by some excellent patter. Altogether his appearance is a great success. The Bioscope is, as usual, good, and Mr. Walter Johnston's fine orchestra gives an effective selection from Lohengrin, as an overture.

CHELSEA PALACE.

Receipts must be constantly on the rise at the commodious and snugly-appointed Palace at Chelsea where audiences representing coin of the realm are numerous in attendance and lavish of applause. Expressions of approval have been abundant during the present week, the programme for which includes the name of Mr. Joe Elvin, who exacts incessant laughter with the sketch King of the Castle. Mr. Elvin's creation of the limp and languishing householder, who by the aid of a drug forcibly administered asserts his authority as the master of his domicile, is an example of comedy which much add largely to the popular Joe's reputation. He had the house in continuous laughter on the occasion of our visit, and was recalled again and again. A sketch in which fun is also prominent is that of The Express Baby, in which Mr. Frank Esmond as the young husband who foists a wax doll as his heir upon a short-sighted aunt acts with indefatigable buoyancy and humour. Miss Edith Evelyn appears to advantage as the extravagant young wife, and a remarkable representation of a miserly old lady is given by Miss Kitty Dease, whose facial expression is a study.

Weird and wonderful is the "turn"—or rather series of "turns"—supplied by Serpentello, who contorts his figure in a way that even a snake could hardly hope to rival. Few, we imagine, would care to attempt to pick up with his mouth a handkerchief which reposes on the floor behind his back, but Serpentello indulges in the feat with evident relish, afterwards facing completely round and walking with his toes pointing in the opposite direction. The same degree of pleasure apparently attends the dislocation of the neck, which the performer accomplishes with ease and dispatch, so that when he stands on his hands the head is seen wriggling about after the manner of a fowl which has just undergone the process of neck-twisting. Princess Pauline receives a royal reception in her well-rendered songs, the more impressive of which is "The old red, white, and blue," the cheers which break out when a tremendous Union Jack is unfolded being a tribute to the patriotic impulses of the audience and to the ability of the fair artist.

The new entertainment offered by the Poluski Brothers is called The Prevaricator, and allows the popular drolls to revel in an entertainment which is quite up to form. There is no end to the laughter while they occupy the stage, their duet of "Haven't we? Yes, we have" being the principal cause of mirth. Miss Kitty Wager is warmly welcomed, and delights all with her tuneful voice and dashing style in "Girls at the Penny Bazaar"; Mr. Fred Poplar scores his customary success; Mr. Fred Barnes wins favour as a light comedian; and the pictures shown on Veapes' Graphic, which has enjoyed such extended popularity at Chelsea, include the Easterner and The Showman's Treasure. The orchestra is directed by the experienced hand of Mr. Angelo Asher, and Mr. J. Norman Berlin officiates genially and tactfully as acting-manager.

THE BEDFORD.

"AT LARGE."

Jacques Strop ..... Mr. Harry Pleon
Robert Macaire ..... Mr. Percy Hayes
Charles Gossamer ..... Mr. Chas. Weaver
Pierre ..... Mr. Fred Houghten
Mme. Germaile ..... Miss Mira Collings
Clementine ..... Miss Celia Kent

Mr. Alfred Graham's company, with the popular comedian, Mr. Harry Pleon, at its head, is appearing at the Bedford this week in a very entertaining sketch, At Large. It deals with Robert Macaire and Jacques Strop, and their arrest and escape, ending with Macaire's death. These two gentlemen turn up at a wayside inn, just in time to assist at the wedding festivities of the adopted daughter of the house. Macaire takes an opportunity to rob one of the guests; the bride is accused of the theft, and Macaire finds she is his own daughter. The gendarmes come in and arrest Macaire, but in the attempt to escape he is killed. As Jacques Strop, Mr. Harry Pleon is seen in his most whimsical mood, and he keeps the audience in a roar of merriment. His versatility is shown by his clever acting at the end of the story, where he strikes the pathetic note for a few moments. Mr. Percy Hayes is very good as Macaire; and Mr. Charles Weaver is seen to advantage as Charles Gossamer. Miss Mira Collings does well as Mme. Germaile; and Miss Celia Kent is a very captivating Clementine, and scores with her song and neatly-executed dance. The sketch is capitally staged, and it met with a most enthusiastic reception.

ROYAL STANDARD.

Mr. T. S. Dickie can always be relied on to give the habitués of the famous Pimlico establishment programmes of sound quality and "good measure." This week there are fifteen excellent items, among which are one or two new acts. Mr. Nelson Watts-Phillips presents a Military Episode, by C. Cane-Horton.

"SNIPED,"

Jim Taylor ..... Mr. Algernon Syms
Jack Watson ..... Mr. James A. Story

The author acknowledges his indebtedness to General Baden-Powell, a story by whom in the Windsor Magazine suggested the idea for the sketch. In a sangar on the hills of the North-West frontier two British soldiers are fighting side by side. For the moment they appear to be isolated, and during intervals between the firing they indulge in confidences, as men will under such circumstances. Jim Taylor tells his chum the tragedy of his life. He loved a woman very dearly, he and she were to have been married, but at the eleventh hour she proved faithless to him. Still, however, he carries her photograph about with him, and he abjures his comrade to see that it is buried with him when he falls. He feels that he has no desire for life, and would gladly welcome a bullet from the enemy. That bullet is not long in coming, and Jim drops helpless to the ground and quickly expires. His chum, looking at the portrait, finds that it has been pierced by the same bullet as that which ended the life of Jim Taylor; but with a cry of anguish he finds also that the photograph is that of his own wife. The playlet is extremely well acted by Mr. Algernon Syms as Jim Taylor and Mr. James A. Story as Jack Watson.

An Irish comedienne who wins great favour with her songs is Miss Eileen Bernard. The lady is the possessor of a charming personality, and she has a most happy style. Her verses on the subject of the "illigant party" at the christening of McSaley's twins, as well as those relative to the adventures of McGilligan's daughter Mary Ann, are extremely amusing, and rendered with appropriate characterisation. Mr. Charles Verner also furnishes a good account of himself as a comedian; and Miss Cissie Hare distinguishes herself as a comedy artist. The Weimars appear in their exceedingly popular pot-pourri act, in which assistance is rendered by Mr. Duly, the bugler to Lord Roberts on the famous march from Cabul to Candahar. Mr. Luis Hardt, described as the original boy Samson, is seen, and, needless to say, admired in his novel athletic scena, Flights of Imagination. A good-looking young gentleman in evening dress is reclining in a chair in his ancestral mansion. Seemingly he dreams or imagines a variety of incidents, in which he plays the part of a veritable Samson. Thus he is able to support a weight of half a ton, made up of men in armour and powdered footmen, and he performs other feats equally remarkable for physical strength, skill, and endurance. Then, as the curtain goes down on the whole scene, we see him once more fast asleep. Mr. Hardt may be congratulated on a pretty and attractive "show." A capital and most entertaining comedy turn is that of Mr. Chris Baker; and Miss Fatmah Diard, the American prima donna, enchants everyone by her expressive and cultured vocalisation. Mr. Leo Fields is exquisitely comical in his song, "I'll call again a little bit later on," as well as in that concerning a hunt. His quaint mannerisms are irresistibly funny. Mr. Dave O'Toole, in the character of a most engaging female, contrives to make himself one of the merriest specimens of the sex we have yet come across, and the chorus of his song concerning the admirable advice given to young ladies to always "look under the bed" is heartily sung by the audience. Miss Addie Lennard has a dainty vocal number in "Pearl," which tells all about a sweet little baby girl. In her succeeding song Miss Lennard, in a most pleasing manner, describes how the different classes of human beings make love. Miss Addie Dorina, in her quick-change interlude, Dr. Spot's Patients, demonstrates her wonderful versatility as an actress by playing seven distinct characters, the changes of costumes and make-up being effected with astonishing rapidity. Mr. P. Waddock renders able service in the one male rôle. Mr. Sandy McNab and company present the absurdity The Egyptian Mummy, Mr. McNab creating great hilarity by his representation of the title-rôle. The Edisonograph treats us to an interesting new series of animated pictures, the film depicting the employees of the Army Clothing Department leaving their work being particularly commendable. The front of the house and the comfort of the patrons generally is well looked after by Mr. Maurice Volny, the able assistant-manager.

THE CROUCH END HIPPODROME.

Mr. H. de Groot, the courteous manager at this hall, is presenting this week a programme which is rich in variety and talent, and which maintains a high level of excellence. The orchestra, so well trained and directed by Mr. J. H. Hutchinson, contribute two interesting items, which are excellently rendered and much appreciated. The Sisters Allen set the ball rolling with a capital duet, "What's the good of knocking at the door?" and as a second turn do some clever dancing, for which they deserve commendation. Simosa San achieves a notable success as a juggler. Her act is augmented by the aid of some half-dozen performing pigeons. Mr. Frank Hawthorne gains much applause in his rôles of raconteur, singer, mimic, and reciter. Among his best items are capital imitations of Harry Ford, Knowles, and T. E. Dunville, a pathetic little poem, entitled "A Tramp's Story," and the preparing, mixing, and drinking of an American cocktail. Prominent in the current bill is Henri Cazman, in an entertainment which he describes as Le Café Chantant, a music hall entertainment, in which Cazman portrays the various artists. He is a capital mimic, and the marvellous rapidity with which he effects his quick-changes stamps him as a protean artist of no mean order. His first contribution to the entertainment is as a Frenchman, in a capital conjuring turn, followed by a clever impersonation of a lady aiffleuse. These are followed by imitations of distinguished musicians, their style of playing and conducting. Mr. Cazman concludes an excellent turn with a smart shadowgraph show. Johnny Johnston is one of the popular members of the company. Raconteur, musician, singer, whistler, and dancer, he gains loud applause by his well-chosen contributions, and achieves further success in his monologue, entitled "Violin." An admirable poetic fantasy, entitled The Sea Serpent, is presented by Lennie and Hast, and the applause they receive is hearty. Miss Florence Yamen, caricaturist, is a comedienne who sings two clever songs, and does some eccentric dancing, which wins warm applause. Mr. Edwin Boyde's quaint rendering of "My old woman," a parody on "The old apple tree," is enjoyed, and in response to a persistent encore he gives a comic recitation. Another first-class turn is that of Daisy James, who sings "He's just the same as me," "A home for mother," and her great success, "The Gibson Girl." Miss Minnie Letta, with her sporting girls and whippet, Firefly, in a novel performance on a rolling stage, take a prominent place in the programme, and have an enthusiastic reception. The last turn is the ever-popular Bioscope, showing several up-to-date pictures with clearness and success.

THE GRAND, CLAPHAM.

Despite the counter attraction of the new Crystal Empire, which has recently been reopened near here, the business at this house is still most flourishing. For this week a very interesting programme has been arranged, and one which—to quote a cricketer's expression—possesses no tail. It is being received in the heartiest manner by houses of the most liberal proportions. The evening's amusement is started by the Two Nightingales, the possessors of most pleasing voices, whose turn is received with every expression of goodwill. The most popular turn on the programme is undoubtedly Phil Ray, the well-known comedian. His numbers are interspersed with some amusing abbreviated patter, and are quite up to his usual high standard. On concluding he has to bow his acknowledgments in front of the curtain. W. H. Clemart, the clever ventriloquist, now making one of his periodical visits to this hall, is meeting with his customary success. With the aid of several figures he provides a most interesting and laughable item. In Little Agnes Tina is to be recognised a wonderful child actress. This youngster can but scarcely be in her teens, but she sings and dances with all the aplomb of an experienced performer. Amongst other items, she gives some very clever imitations of some of our leading music hall artists. Fred Earle, the "seaweed merchant," sings a couple of amusing songs, in which his quaint expression and oddity of manner enable him to score. The Brontes are here again with their successful sketch, Saucy Maude, which has been somewhat altered since last we saw it. To the lady member, in the dual rôle of Saucy Maude, the servant, and Maude Cunningham, the actress, certainly must be given pride of place, as whilst she is in possession of the stage her diverting behaviour causes considerable amusement. George d'Albert, the popular comedian, is singing a number entitled "Ten jolly old sports," which is distinguished by a vein of genial hilarity that exhilarates the audience in all parts of the house. It is a great pity that owing to the length of the programme he is unable to respond to the repeated demands for an encore.

Les Valdos, described as the eccentric motor-bus men, introduce some clever and original acrobatic work into their turn, in which they show themselves to be past masters of their work. The Three Laurels, in their fun on a ping-pong table, provide a most interesting number, the comedy merchant especially being a very humorous person. His many quaint comicalities fairly convulse the house, and he certainly contributes largely to the success achieved. Dolly Elsworthy, supported by a powerful company, is presenting the sketch on the subject of Nell Gwynne, entitled The Orange Girl. On this artist's shoulders the bulk of the work falls, and all through she plays the part of the King's favourite in a manner that deserves and wins success. An enjoyable evening is brought to a conclusion by some amusing pictures on the Bioscope, which are followed with interest from start to finish.

THE CRYSTAL EMPIRE.

Brilliant results, both in regard to the transformation of the interior and to the patronage of the public, have been secured at the old-established suburban hall, formerly known as the Washington and the Battersea Empire, which was reopened last week under the management of Mr. Humphrey E. Brammall, so long connected with the entertainments at the Crystal Palace at Sydenham. The interior of the building has been thoroughly renovated, and presents an attractive appearance. The colour scheme of terra-cotta, light blue, and gold makes a charming combination, but the distinctive feature of the decorations is found in a myriad of crystal pendants connected by rods of the same lustrous material, which extend all round the hall. It is estimated that 3000 crystals are contained in each pendant, the whole aggregating no less than three millions, and the effect of the tiny glass lamps when lighted by electricity is exceedingly brilliant without being dazzling. The lighting plant, which is known as the French Pearl system, is said to have cost over £1000, but the initial outlay is saved by the minimum of current expended. The attractiveness of the interior is further enhanced by an electric fountain of glass at the side of the proscenium, in which a pleasing variety of colour is displayed. Wall paper in two shades of red gives the hall a cosy appearance, and comfort is also suggested by a handsome carpet adorning the floor. New scenery and front cloths, too, materially assist the brightness of the entertainment.

The patronage secured for the new enterprise, as we have hinted, is very gratifying to its promoters, the second house on Monday, the night of our visit, being filled to overflowing with an audience made up of the respectable classes of the locality. A powerful draw is found in Mr. Fredk. Maxwell and company, who receive a hearty welcome in the sketch Lord Harkaway, among the many thrilling incidents of which is a realistic boxing match. Mr. Maxwell is one of the pioneers of sketches on the halls, and his productions always bear the impress of excellence both in acting and mounting. The present piece is no exception to the rule, the sketch being elaborately staged and played with skill. Mr. Maxwell repeats his impressive portrayal of the redoubtable Lord Harkaway, acting with reserved force and energy. He is loyally assisted by Miss Lois Du Cane, whose refinement and artistic finish as Grace Deane is pleasingly apparent, and other parts are adequately enacted by Messrs. Chas. Levey, Gerald Blake, and Sam Harcourt. A flattering reception is also extended to Miss Lilian Lea, whose exquisite scena, Primrose Farm, gives the greatest pleasure. Miss Lea's singing of the two ballads incidental to the item is greatly enjoyed, no less pleasure being derived from the dainty dancing of the comely lady who assists in the refrain of each. The scena is prettily set, and the dresses are tastefully designed.

The side-splitting act of Burg, Haud, and Wise, Ye Brown Cow Inn, which has so long and successfully ministered to the merriment of variety lovers, goes on its mirthful way, distinguished by some remarkable acrobatic evolutions on the part of its exponents. Little Zola's quaintness is utilised with his customary effect in his songs, "Four foot two-and-a-bit" and "Whoever would have thought it?" and Miss Nellie Navette makes a dashing appearance as "One of the Dandy Fifth." Miss Amy Campbell, comedienne, contributes to the programme; Mr. Pat Carey sustains his well-won reputation in the songs "They're Irish every one" and "How do you like the chorus?" and an old friend is also found in Witty Wattie Walton, who in his character as a page-boy indulges in some diverting patter, and in deference to recalls submits imitations, among others, of a Scotchman, a Frenchman, and a football player, the last-named character giving excuse for a comic recitation of "Casey at the goal." The latest medium for the display of living pictures is in keeping with the character of the house, and is called the Crystalscope, by means of which amusing films are presented. The orchestra is under the direction of Mr. Guillaume Leone, and Mr. Chas. A. Barnett discharges the duties of acting-manager quite in the manner of an expert.

THE FORESTERS'.

A good programme is being given this week at this capitally-conducted establishment, the principal item being Lionel Vaughan's company in a good comedy sketch, entitled In Trouble. The scene is the reception-room at the Hotel, Brightlink, and great fun is caused by the close resemblance between Harry de Vere and Teddie Grantly, which leads to amusing mistakes on the part of one's wife and the other's sweetheart. The character of James, the attendant, is well played by Mr. Charles Kenny, who gets many laughs by his odd sayings. Marjorie Cassini as Rose Grantly and Miss Josephine Richards (Leonora Stanton) play well throughout. Quite the hit of the piece is that made by Miss Sybil Hardcastle as Mrs. Stanton, her rendering of the character being perfect. Messrs. J. Herbert-Willis and Edwin Coates work hard as the Dromios of the sketch.

Mr. John B. Coyle sings in good style "Don't you think he ought to see a doctor?" and "In the sea," giving some very amusing patter in the last item, and retiring to the merry music of applause. The Sisters Jonghmann render excellently "Queen of Old Samara" and "Excelsior," the latter duet suiting their voices "to a nicety." An interesting item is supplied by Vandinoff (lightning oil-painter), his colourings of flowers being very true. A clever piece of work, too, is that of painting a bouquet whilst the frame is revolving. Ernie Williams, vocal comedian, sings "Swing me higher, Obadiah" amusingly, and his second number, "Will you dance with me, Marie?" is very tuneful and well rendered. Miss Billie Burford (an attractive young lady) gives with a powerful voice "Come with me in my submarine" and "A grain of help," the latter possessing a catchy chorus which takes well. The Royal Russian Dancers, a clever troupe, work hard, and gain well-deserved applause.

Mr. Tom E. Conover and company in the farcical sketch, The Drink Cure, are very entertaining. The wife and her brother decide to try and cure the husband of his drinking habits. The latter, disguising himself as a Frenchman, makes love to the lady in the husband's presence. This naturally leads to an altercation between the husband and lover, and a duel is arranged. Whilst the necessary arrangements are being made the husband makes out his will, bequeathing his belongings to various friends, but quite omitting his wife. The duel takes place, causing great laughter. The wife, donning male attire, acts as second. The husband, getting the worst of the argument, asks for pity, which is given, after he has promised to refrain from intoxicants in future.

The Sisters Melba, two bright little ladies, sing tunefully "When the sunset turns the ocean blue to gold" and "Until we meet once more." Mr. Nat Watkins, comedian, is funny in his songs, "Turn round" and "Lucy, my rag-shop girl." Some interesting films are shown on Raymond's Bioscope, the most important, "He Would be an Athlete," being decidedly clever.

HAMMERSMITH PALACE OF VARIETIES.

The excellent list of artists weekly engaged at this house continues to pack it to its utmost capacity, and Mr. J. C. Coe and his popular manager, Mr. Lewis Vincent, have every reason to be satisfied with their results. Last week Miss Marie Lloyd headed an excellent programme, and this week the figure-head is the renowned Mr. Wilkie Bard, who continues to amuse with "Let me sing," in which he has an extremely funny argument with the fireman. He also scores with "You, you, you," and a Dutch ditty. Miss Marie Kendall is a great favourite, and her two songs, "She came home in a taximeter car," and "Kiss the girl if you're going to," are very well received. The Poluskis give their new humorous entertainment The Prevaricator in their usual excellent style; Cribb and Cribb are another clever pair, who have a good song in "They are the simple things that we require"; Miss Daisy Jerome is well described as having "a dazzling personality," and is in high favour with the audience; Park's Eton Boys sing as excellently as ever; and Elmo and Rego (also in Eton suits) cause much mirth by their acrobatic tricks.

Mr. Herbert Terry and company appear in a dramatic episode entitled His Brother's Keeper, the plot of which is rather vague, but when slightly altered should prove a successful sketch. Brown and Kelly and company have a laughable sketch, The Lay Figure, or Why Jones Left Home. Mr. Frank Seeley, comedian, Hurman, juggler, Miss Ruby Emerson, comedienne, and Mr. Victor Courtney, comedian at the piano, complete, with the Edisonograph, the exceedingly enjoyable entertainment.

SHEPHERD'S BUSH EMPIRE.

An extremely entertaining and varied programme is offered to patrons of this excellent hall this week. The bill is headed by an exhibition of tree-felling and expert axemanship by the two champions of Australia, Messrs. Jackson and McLaren, a novel and very interesting item. The stage is set to represent as closely as possible a small clearing in one of the large forest tracts of Victoria (Australia), and is very picturesque. A match was arranged to take place at one of the performances on Friday evening this week between Jackson and McLaren and a couple of London axemen.

Mabel Sinclair provides a very pleasant ten minutes of so with a ventriloquial entertainment of high merit. Arthur Lennard achieves his usual success with three typical ditties, which include "The only little flower in my garden" and "Mother." Selma Braatz, a charming young lady, appears in a very clever juggling act.

The most uproarious entertainment of the evening is that provided by Sid Cotterell and company, in a farcical sketch, entitled The Substitute. The scene is the husband's bedroom in the flat of a newly-married couple. The husband, desiring to be out late, makes the porter attached to the flats (of course, a low-comedy part) occupy his bed during his absence, and by snoring lead the wife to suppose that her husband is in his room as usual. The wife, however, discovers the trick; but eventually all ends happily. The sketch is highly diverting and very well played.

A fine acrobatic turn is contributed by the Andos Troupe of happy little Japs; and Lizzie Fletcher scores as a comedienne. Mariedl, late of the Hippodrome, the famous Tyrolean giantess, and stated to be the tallest woman in the world, is introduced to the audience (along with her sister, who is quite of normal size), and after various particulars have been imparted by her introducer, she descends from the stage and strolls among the audience, shaking hands with any who may care to do so.

Will H. Fox, having discarded his red wig and dilapidated evening dress, appears in a smart suit of bright purple, with a bowler hat of the same shade, and a "clean" make-up. He is not at all handicapped by this drastic change, and scores as cleverly as ever. The programme is completed by the American Bioscope, showing some striking pictures from Casa Blanca, the most fascinating of which are those taken of the actual engagement on Aug. 18, in which mounted Arabs can be seen moving about in the far distance. Mr. B. G. Maclachlan continues as the deservedly popular acting-manager.

WALTHAMSTOW PALACE.

The belated summer weather in which we have been revelling during the past few weeks has certainly had no appreciable effect of a detrimental kind on the business done at this popular place of amusement. Some folk may say that the undoubted coolness of the evenings has been responsible for driving people indoors, but we are inclined to think that the excellence of the programmes presented by Mr. Arthur J. Barclay are solely responsible for the happy result. Certainly amusement-seekers would be hard to please who would cavil at the fare placed before them this week; but, if there be any such, they form an absolutely insignificant minority. Mr. Geo. F. Slatter, returning, on Monday night, to his acting-managerial duties after a well-deserved holiday, has had plenty of work to fill his hands.

A full account of Mr. Fred Eustace's new dramatic sketch, Salvation Jack, will be found in another column, so requires no further notice here. Mr. Harry Harris, a new mimic at the piano, soon makes himself popular with his clever imitations of various music-hall celebrities, those of Alec Hurley, Sam Mayo, and Gus Elen being loudly applauded. Miss Amy Marsden renews her acquaintance with an audience always delighted to see her, and sets the whole house laughing with her rendering of "I'm simple silly," and a parody on "The mocking bird was singing on the tree." A great success is made by Allis and Cassati, a lady and gentleman, who crack sundry amusing wheezes, sing well, and dance better. Miss Bertha Winder, who may fairly be described as the queen of clog-dancers, performs prodigies that send her audience into shouts of delight. Mr. Julian Ross, actor-vocalist, sings in a ringing voice, "The best friend I've had" and "The girl in blue," and is at once received into high favour. A most enjoyable vocal and instrumental comedy sketch, From Pavement to Stage, is given by the Markies. The lady of the pair has no mean powers as a low comedy actress, and sings well, while the gentleman's performance on the bottles and other instruments, and their joint manipulation of the musical glasses in "Alice, where are thou?" provokes some of the loudest applause of the evening. The Markies' pretty show is greatly enhanced by the beautiful electric lighting of the stage. No more charming and original comedienne and dancer could well be found than Miss Venie Clements, whose song, "Arguments" is clever in itself and admirably rendered. This is followed by a very pretty dance, in which agility and grace are well combined, and after it is over Miss Clements gives her wonderfully clever and artistic imitation of the quaint sayings of a number of small children at a "school treat." The young comedienne may be put down as one of the most popular turns seen here for some considerable time. Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope shows some excellent, up-to-date animated pictures. The orchestra, under the direction of Mr. H. Petersen, performs a tuneful overture capitally. Mr. Joseph Grant is, as usual, to be commended for his admirable stage-management.

"PEPPER AND SALT."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—In your present issue you inquire as to the authorship of a sketch, Pepper and Salt. The sketch to which you allude was called Chickweed and Groundsel, performed by the Bros. Wemms, the Bros. Clayton, and the Sisters Mario. This sketch was written by me, and became the property of the late Mr. Ambrose Maynard.

A week ago you had a paragraph speaking kindly of me, saying you were afraid I did not get the credit due to me for these trifles. This is explained by the fact that music-hall proprietors at that time were so harassed by common informers' actions for stage play infringements that in bills and programmes little was inserted likely to call attention to these playlets.—Yours faithfully,

CHARLES. MERION,

61, Arthur-road, Brixton, S.W., Sept. 23.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—In The Era of last week, in the "Variety Gossip" columns, you mention the farce Pepper and Salt, in which the Sisters Mario (Dot and Minnie) and the twin Brothers Wems played. I do not know whether Mr. Chas. Merion or Mr. Maynard wrote it, but Mr. Maynard engaged me to produce it, and it was rehearsed at the Bedford Music Hall, Camden Town.—Yours faithfully,

TOM WARDHAUGH.

75, Bath-lane, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Sept. 22.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—In answer to the query appearing in the variety gossip columns of The Era of Sept. 21, I desire to inform you that the late Ambrose Maynard was the writer and producer of the farce entitled Pepper and Salt.—Yours faithfully,

E. MAYNARD

(Widow of the late Ambrose Maynard).

Ambrose, Grange-road, Gunnersbury, Sept. 24.

"SAM HALL."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—As an old reader of your indispensable journal and an occasional contributor of letters you have kindly published on the subject of music-hall songs, &c., may I ask if you can oblige me with replies to the following queries, or can refer me to any reliable old-timer well up in the subject:—

1. In what year (and where) died the comic singer, W. G. Ross (of "Cyder Cellars" fame)?

2. Was Ross's famous song, "Sam Hall," ever published in song-form (nobody in the trade seems to know definitely). If not, are the words, without music, obtainable? They must, I imagine, exist, if only in manuscript form. Being in touch with so many connected with the variety world you may possibly be able to assist me in tracing a copy of the song in question.

I enclose my card, and with thanks in anticipation,—Yours truly,

VERITAS,

Knight's Hill, S.E., Sept. 19.

The Brewster Troupe, after a highly-successful tour, embracing Austria, Hungary, Bohemia, and Poland, open at the Folies-Marigny, Paris, on Oct. 1. The troupe returns to England in December for pantomime.

We regret to announce the death, at his native home, Orford, Suffolk, after a brief illness, of Mr. R. J. Brinkley, proprietor of, among other places, the Horns Hotel and Assembly Rooms, at Kennington. The deceased gentleman was well known to the variety profession, and a personal friend of many. The fancy dress carnivals that he had organised for some years were largely attended by artists, with whom he was highly popular. He was a past trustee of the Licensed Victuallers' School, and a warm supporter of the other trade charities. He was in his fifty-fifth year.

Bury September Fair.

BURY (Lancashire) has two fairs. The principal one, known as Bury March Fair, is mainly famous from the fact that it is practically the start of the great Lancashire pleasure fairs. There is no doubt that the September fair would attract a larger number of big shows but for the coincidence at this time of the year of many other first-class fairs. We are glad to see, however, that "Kemp's Dreamland" (one of the most superb cinematograph shows travelling) was the principal attraction, closely followed by Norman's varieties and living picture show. There were also many high-class machines, including J. Green's motor set, P. Makin's motors, J. Collins's razzle-dazzle, W. H. East's galloping horses, W. H. Davis's gallopers, J. Green's ostriches, Mrs. Holden's ostrich set, William Mitchell's steam yachts, W. Holmes's helter-skelter, and sets of park swings by J. Starkie and Holland. There were many high-class shooting concerns, including Winchester ranges by George Cornwell, J. D. Humphrey, Mrs. Jewell, and N. Holland; rifle saloons by J. Starkie, George Cornwell, Mesdames John Cornwell, Cottam, and Harrison; throwing games in great variety by Messrs. Forshaw, Houghton, Crick, Deeks, Ingham, Lorenzo, Finn, Slater, Wood, Marsden, Middlebrook, Smith, Boss, Holland, Harrison, Goodworth, Dale, Bullas, Clegg, and local caterers.

Balloch (Scotland).

HELD at the foot of Loch Lomond, this was once a celebrated horse fair, but owing to the changing conditions of Scotch life it has now become more of a pleasure than a business fixture. It is now under the able management of Walter Wilmot, who exhibited his ever-popular jumping horses and his new sensation, the great American helter-skelter. The other roundabouts were James Wilmot's Argyle racing motor-cars, and gem horses and swings by Wilmot Bros. and Talbot. There were swings and an aerial railway by Messrs. Palmer and Vetch. The goodly array of shows included Mrs. Manders's waxwork and living pictures, W. Clark, jun.'s, ghost illusion and cinematograph, Montano Bill's Far West expert shooting exhibition, a giant-girl show, and Stewart Bros.' boxing pavilion. The shooting concerns were those of Palmer, Wright, Strand, McIndoe, Freeman, and Horne. Throwing games, coker sheets, and football penalty frames were provided by Strand, Morris, Talbot, McIndoe, Thomas, Rotter, Knowles, Matchett, and others. This fair is growing in popularity, and although the weather was dull and showery business was quite up to the usual standard.

Bostock and Wombwell's Menagerie.

THIS "national institution" has been visiting a number of the towns in the Black Country. Amongst other places Bilston, Wednesbury, and Brierley Hill had the opportunity of answering to the "Call of the Wild." A notable event has been a double birth in the menagerie. Two lionesses have just given birth to cubs, one to three and the other to two. All are doing well, and they form an attractive feature of the exhibition.

Princess Gooma and the Dahomey Warriors.

THE Princess, with the Dahomey warriors under their chief, Lobogola, are touring Scotland, and are scoring success wherever they visit. After most successful exhibitions of Dahomey life and native customs at Nairn, the Provost requested Mr. John Hickey (manager for the troupe) to give a special performance to himself and brother magistrates. This was done, to the evident satisfaction of the select company assembled. After the performance the troupe was entertained to tea by the Provost, who presented the Princess Gooma with a valuable necklace. Chief Lobogola thanked the Provost and his friends in the name of the Princess and the troupe. At the conclusion of the chief's remarks, duly interpreted by Mr. John Hickey, the warriors gave, in their native tongue, three cheers for the Provost and party.

Circus.

THE Sports Ground, Redhill, has been the venue this week of large audiences, drawn there by Sir Robert Fossett and Sons' circus and hippodrome. Among the excellent numbers of the programme we mention the Two Rennes, in their clever cake-walk on the double invisible wire; Miss Fossett, in her pleasing trick act on her bare-back horse; Miss Marie, the charming serpentine dancer, on the revolving globe; Robert Fossett, jun., in a really wonderful jockey act; Thomas Fossett (Texas Tom), in cyclone and expert riding; Ida Evilo, in a most pleasing and daring trapeze performance; and Topsy, a performing elephant, interests everyone by a series of seemingly impossible feats. Of the horses, Patience does some graceful evolutions in the ring; Diamond is an astonishing calculator; whilst Cezar stands his ground in spite of sparks, flame, and thunder. A number of amusing pictures on the Bioscope completes an altogether delightful programme.

Sandbach Wakes.

THE shows, &c., at this Cheshire Wake were:—Scott and Sagor's palace of delight, living pictures, and varieties, Simon's ghost illusion, and Gallagher's exhibition, Miss M. Collins's racing cockerels, park swings, and gem sets; shooting concerns, coker-sheets, and throwing games by Messrs. Clough, Hall, Sheldon, Dearden, and Symonds.

The Roundabout Proprietors' and Showmen's Union.

NOTICE will be found in our advertising columns of an important gathering of the above society at Nottingham next week.

Dumfries Fair.

IMMEDIATELY following Ayr Fair, Dumfries attracts some of the best concerns from that important fixture. The shows at Dumfries are those of Messrs. Green, Biddall, Paulo, Johnson, Lavan, and Moore, and numerous side-shows. The machines are those of Wilmot, Green, Howard, Lawrence, Day, and others.

AMONGST the providers of minor amusements are Messrs. Kelly, Hiscoe, Day, Rostron, Wilmot, Sheeran, and Merrick.

Wombwell Feast.

TUBY AND SONS' coliseum and Proctor and Farrar's similar concerns were the big show attractions at this Yorkshire fair. White's two ground booths, the freak museum, and the miniature menageries were also on exhibition. The superb machines of Tuby and Sons, Harniess, and Amos, and the park swings of Messrs. Pullan, Fisher, Turner, Harniess, and Hepworth were also well patronised. The fun merchants and stallholders were Messrs. Shaw, Green, Tucker, Whatmore, Saunders, Moore, Cannon, Wallsen, Pullen, Fisher, and Williams.

Reading Fair.

HERE were Jacob Studt's mammoth Bioscope palace, racing motors, and four-abreast galloping horses; Purchase's Royal No. 1 Menagerie, with performing lions, bears, and wolves; also trained seals and hyenas; Reader's novelty show, Wilson's fine art gallery, Barber's giant girl show, Thomas's steam roundabout, and a crowd of minor amusement caterers, with all the fun of the fair.

Dunstable Fair.

THE entertainments here were principally supplied by the Metropolitan show caterer, Mr. Fred Gray, whose superb sets of motors and galloping horses drew the town. Mr. Gray, in addition to high-class riding-machines, provided shooting-range and other fairground varieties. With Mr. Gray were associated Messrs. T. Short, Sully, and Draper with throwing games and varieties.

The Moor Meadow, Maidenhead.

SIR ROBERT FOSSETT AND SONS' grand hippodrome and circus drew great crowds on Monday last to the meadow, and excellent shows were given to delighted audiences.

Cambridge Fair.

THE fair at this ancient University is under the management of Thurston's, who provide the greater part of the entertainments. Their exhibits this year were motor-cars and galloping horses; Harris, the local caterer, had big boats and ranges of swings, highfliers, and throwing games. Professor Goldsmith's school of boxers and athletes were much patronised, and Messrs. Gray and Martin exhibited varieties and stalls.

ANSWERS TO SHOWMEN.

EQUESTRIAN.—We do not know the European office of the firm you want. We advise you to address a letter to the manager of the circus in question, care of "The New York Clipper."

MITCHAMITE.—All the principal parties to a possible settlement are away on vacation, so that negotiations are at present dormant. All in good time correspondence will be resumed at the first possible moment.

WALTER WILMOT, LARKHALL.—Kindly send next week's address to Guild Secretary, "The Era" office. We are addressing a letter to you at Larkhall acknowledging receipt of letter and P.O., but fear it may not reach you.

WILL Mr. John Barker communicate with The Era offices? There is a letter waiting for him.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL LAW.

BY A. A. STRONG, LL.B. (LOND.), SOLICITOR.

Your book will, I am sure, be a valuable aid to all managers and actors.—SIR HENRY IRVING.

Mr. Strong states the whole case very clearly.—Illustrated London News.

Should be found very useful.—Pelican.

Should prove perfectly invaluable.—Weekly Sun.

Furnishes useful information.—Daily News.

The work succeeds in making plain the thorny legal path that every manager and artist must tread, and by a timely consultation of its pages they may avoid much misapprehension and trouble.—Star.

Mr. A. A. Strong has compiled an exceedingly useful volume dealing carefully, intelligently, and fully with the law bearing upon things theatrical. As a book of reference this excellent digest will be found invaluable.—The Era.

A NEW musical comedietta, entitled Miss Cook of California, from the pen of Roland Oliver, with music by Louis La Rondelle, will shortly be produced by Mr. C. H. Mannon.

SHOWMEN OF TO-DAY.

MR. JOHN WILMOT.

Affectionately known as "The Father of Scottish Fairs," Mr. John Wilmot has endeared himself to the whole body of Scotch showpeople by his transparently honest and upright dealings with his fellow travellers in the land of his adoption. Mr. Wilmot is not a Scotsman, although the greater part of his busy life has been spent over the Border. Born at Bath in 1843, the "call of the showground" came to him whilst quite a lad, for his earliest experiences of show life were with the Brewer family, the old West of England show people. John Wilmot tells many stories of those early days, "the days of his youth," and points many a lesson to the youth of to-day by recalling "the bad old days," when show people were regarded with suspicion and were subjected to gross injustice on account of the narrow-minded prejudice that classed them as gipsies and outcasts of the road.

Show life in the early 'fifties of the last century was indeed a hard and trying school; a rough-and-tumble training; yet it had its glorious moments—when joy and life and merriment for all was the motive and the inspiration of its followers. From his apprenticeship with the Brewer family he passed to such notable showmen as Isaac Gregory and Wm. Manders. In early manhood—somewhere about his twenty-second year—he struck out for himself with various stalls and penny games. With these he prospered, finding the best field for his business ability and perseverance in Scotland.

With the advent of the steam roundabout came

MR. JOHN WILMOT.

John Wilmot's great opportunity. If not exactly the pioneer of the steam roundabout in Scotland, he was certainly in the first flight of those enterprising men who foresaw its vast possibility.

With the rapid development of the steam roundabout also came the growth of the fairs, and the opportunity of the private lessee of fairgrounds. The roundabout, on the new scale, needed the central position and also a rearrangement of the fairground and its principal attractions. This necessitated the leasing of the whole ground wherever it was possible in order that good positions for roundabouts might be secured. Following on the lines of this great revolution in fairground business, Mr. Wilmot became lessee of a considerable number of important fairs.

Mrs. Wilmot has been both the partner of his home and of his business life, and is equally esteemed with her husband for the unfailing goodness and generosity of her character. In very truth "a mother in the Israel of Showland," "her children call her blessed," and rightly too. There are six sons and three daughters, and all of them in the show business. Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot have added a new clan to the clans of Scotland, "the Clan Wilmot."

"The gathering of the Clan Wilmot" would make a fair. The chief of the clan controls three high-class machines; John Wilmot, jun., controls shooting galleries, gem machines, swings, and fairground varieties; James Wilmot has two big machines; Walter Wilmot two or more; the three younger sons are still with their father and mother in the working and management of "the old firm," so are the daughters of the house. Miss Wilmot takes a deep personal interest in all that concerns the religious life of her people. In fact, the Wilmot family is a remarkable example of the reality and the enduring strength of the home life of show people.

For twenty-three years past Mr. Wilmot has been identified with Sir Edward Moss in the Waverley Market Christmas and New Year Carnival, Wilmot's roundabouts being a special feature of that immense winter fair at Edinburgh.

The Wilmot family have so won the heart of Scotland that wherever they go they are held in the highest respect and esteem. We gladly quote from the Helensburgh News of July 18, 1907, "an appreciation" of Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot:—

"Few men have more friends than Mr. John Wilmot, the veteran showman, who has been 'on the road' for close on half a century. . . . Many a struggling showman has he helped with a kindly word and something more tangible to tide him over a nasty road. . . . Knowing the value of money and its uses, no man is more generous to deserving objects. . . . Although we cannot claim for Mr. Wilmot the honour of being a Scotsman—of course, that's no fault of his!—he belongs to the country that is second in importance to Scotland. . . . At first his roundabouts were driven by manual labour, but eventually steam and electricity were used as motive power. Mr. Wilmot is the pioneer of the electric light in Scotland, being the first to use that illuminant in this country. It was employed in connection with his 'Caledonian Hunters,' and when in rural districts people came from far and near to see the strange white light.

"At present he is the lessee of all the principal showgrounds in Scotland, is welcomed at all the towns he visits, is able to take his place in any company, and is familiarly spoken of everywhere as 'Honest John.'

"It is many years since Mr. Wilmot first came to this town, while in Greenock he has been there for the past forty-three summers. Besides, he has been a householder in Glasgow for over forty years—all these facts being a record of which any man may be proud.

"Mr. Wilmot gives the reasons for his success, which, in brief, were simply sobriety and strict attention to business. Associated with the 'Grand Old Man of the Road' in his business is Mrs. Wilmot, who has shared his joys and sorrows and proved herself a loving helpmate all these years, and their six sons, three of whom assist with the management of the 'home' concern, while the others are more or less engaged in shows of their own.

"The caravan in which Mr. Wilmot travels is a marvel of ingenuity, its accommodation containing, among other conveniences, a separate bedroom and a well-appointed kitchen. Portraits of relatives and friends hang round the walls, and this gives an added cosiness to the neat little abode.

"Let us hope that for many years to come Mr. Wilmot and his sons will be spared to visit our town to help to enliven and amuse both young and old."

Mr. John Wilmot has been a sturdy champion of showmen's rights and a defender of the fair fame and domestic purity of the life of the travelling showman. He is a vice-president of the Guild, and has been on the Executive Committee of the Society from its very beginning in 1889.

A most liberal subscriber to its funds, his example has been of the utmost value in the growth of the movement for the co-ordination of all the varied interests of the show business.

We gladly endorse all the good things said about the Wilmot family in the land of Scotia, and in that wider domain—the Empire of Showland.

"SALVATION JACK."

A Dramatic Sketch, in four scenes, by E. B. Matthews and Charles Stanley Self. Produced at the Walthamstow Palace, Monday Sept. 23, 1907.

Jack Chester	MR. FRED EUSTACE
Philip Hawke	MR. JOHN WALCOTT
Mark Benjamin	MR. HERBERT LLOYD
Tommy	MR. CHARLES GORDON
James Ward	MR. GEORGE BUTLER
Kate Russell, Nell	MISS MARY EUSTACE

At last the world-renowned organisation, conceived and carried on so successfully by the now elderly gentleman who is affectionately known to his multitudinous followers as "The General," has reached the stage by way of the variety theatre, and the disinterested good work done by the "Army" has been employed as the foundation for an interesting dramatic sketch. Although Mr. Fred Eustace (for whom the piece has been especially written, by Messrs. E. C. Matthews and Charles Stanley Self) is careful to point out in his printed address "to the audience," that, in the eyes of many, he may be treading on somewhat delicate ground, there is nothing in it, from start to finish, to shock the susceptibilities either of the friends or the enemies of the Salvation Army. As a matter of fact, Salvation Jack aims at being little more than a miniature melodrama, the setting of which happens to be, for once, of a nature somewhat unusual for theatrical purposes; and a liberal, but by no means overwhelming series of appeals to the sympathies of popular audiences are all on the side that makes for good. It is but fair to say that on Monday night the rousing speeches put into the mouth of Jack Chester, and finely delivered by that accomplished elocutionist, Mr. Fred Eustace, were received with evident approval and volleys of the heartiest applause.

The story may be briefly told: Jack Chester, a rich Colonial, while making a visit to England, meets Philip Hawke and his friend Mark Benjamin, commonly known as the Major, at Ascot, and the pair having ascertained that Chester is a rich man, they invite him to spend a few days at Richmond with them. Cards are introduced as a means of robbing Jack, but the plot is spoilt by Kate. The scene is interrupted by the entrance of Nell, Kate's sister, a Salvationist, and, owing to her gentle words, Jack realises the uselessness of the life of pleasure which he is leading. Having failed to cheat Jack, Philip Hawke determines to rob him by force. Kate tries to protect him, and she is accidently shot by Hawke, who escapes, and Chester determines to devote his life to good work, and bring Hawke to justice. After this dramatic episode, nine months elapse, and Jack, who has joined the Salvation Army, has fallen in love with Nell, and is devoting his time and money in assisting them in their good work. Hawke, who has been in hiding all these months, is now in very reduced circumstances indeed, and when he accidently meets, and is scornfully repudiated by his quondam accomplice, Mark Benjamin, there is likely to be a wild scene, which is frustrated by the entrance of Jack, who, failing to recognise his old enemy, Hawke, pours oil upon the waters; that is, feeds and shelters him. In the end, just as Chester and Nell are about to be married, the former discovers the identity of Hawke, and, after a fierce desire to wreak his vengeance, listens to the voice of mercy, and tells the wretch to "go, and sin no more."

The interpretation of the piece by the clever company leaves nothing to be desired. On the broad shoulders of Mr. Fred Eustace, as Jack Chester, the heaviest portion of the work naturally falls, and most ably does the actor respond to the innumerable calls made upon his resources. Both as the rich young man, gradually drifting towards ruin, and the earnest, cheerful, and kind-hearted worker in the "Army," Mr. Eustace is very fine, while, as already hinted, his declamation gives every inch of significance to his telling speeches. Miss Mary Eustace artistically contrasts the widely-differing characters of the twin sisters Kate and Nell, not sparing herself in the earlier scenes as the abandoned woman, and still being full of sweetness and delicacy as the pure-minded Salvation "lass." Mr. John Walcott is a picturesque Philip Hawke and Mr. Herbert Lloyd an amusing personage as the rascally Jew, Benjamin. Mr. Charles Gordon is clever as the thorough "wrong 'un," Tommy, and Mr. George Butler a supremely stolid policeman. Salvation Jack has been staged with great care, and when a few more performances have given the necessary smoothness in many directions, it should prove not the least successful among Mr. Eustace's many successes.

THE services of Mr. John Alexander have been secured by Messrs. Jesse Sparrow and Harry Bawn for Christmas to produce a "spectacle" at the Empire, Camberwell.

A COMPANY is being formed, with a capital of £25,000, for the purpose of building a new theatre in Oldham. Gentlemen of Oldham and Manchester are interested in the venture. The house is to be after the style of the Ardwick Green Empire, with tea rooms, &c.

FRED SOUTHERN writes that The Fatal Letter, written by Brien McCullough, which he produced three weeks since at Sandgate, is both a financial and artistic success, and is one of the best sketches—if not the best—he has in his répertoire.

MISS ETHEL WALKER'S entertainment at the London Pavilion matinée last Saturday left nothing to be desired. The popular comedienne at the piano contributed no less than three distinct items—viz., "Are we downhearted?" followed by four amusing stories, each of which went home to the audience, and then concluded by singing that favourite song with the orchestra, entitled, "If you only, only knew," with a result that before leaving the stage Miss Walker took no less than three curtains.

WARRINGTON PALACE AND HIPPODROME.

A spontaneous outburst of enthusiasm was manifested at the opening of the above new house on Monday, the second performance being honoured by the presence of the élite of the district, the Mayor and representatives of the Town Council and Corporation occupying nearly the whole of the dress circle. The proceedings were opened by the band, under the able conductorship of Mr. Widdop, playing the National Anthem, the audience joining in the singing in a hearty manner. The Sisters Reno danced most delightfully, and their quick changes were smartly accomplished. Tennyson and Wallis are a pair of excellent comedians, and their cross-talk is both clean and highly amusing. Kurkamp, the singing conductor, supplies a delightful turn, and is ably assisted by a clever harpist named Chapman. John Tiller's company are seen to advantage in High Jinks. Bob Selvidge as George Jesmond Dene is the personification of humour, and there are continuous risible features when he is on the stage. Harold Wardroper is well placed as William Plataganet; and Inspector Smart is made a good character-sketch by Teddy Gibbs. The diminutive Barney Dixon is an eccentric William Glum; Miss Jessie Templeton charms all as Mrs. Jesmond Dene, and Miss Minnie Cecil is decidedly amusing as Mary Ann, a maid-of-all-work. Mr. Tiller's troupe are brilliant exponents of the terpsichorean art, and a big success was scored in the last setting with a bell-ringing and dancing display. The musical director is Mr. William Corri, who has a well-balanced chorus under his control. The Bioscope pictures depicting a Nurses' Strike were excellent specimens.

Much of the success achieved at this the opening performance is due to the untiring efforts of Mr. Sydney Arthur, who has laboured very hard. Mr. Bradbury is the resident-manager, and Mr. Widdop has an orchestra numbering sixteen under his control.

During an interval in the programme, Mr. Macnaghten said he wished to make a statement with reference to the policy he intended to pursue. He had come to Warrington as a stranger, but he hoped he had come to stay. He hoped also to be successful as an entertainer. He was addressing them in that beautiful theatre, the nineteenth which had been built in Great Britain. The foundation stone of the new building was laid on May 1, and that was only September 23, and they had had practically only four months in which to complete the work the audience now saw. It certainly reflected credit on their townsman, Mr. Davenport, who had done magnificent work. It was a work which spoke for itself; his (Mr. Macnaghten's work) they would see in the days to come. He was in a fortunate position in the matter of providing entertainments, as he controlled so many houses of entertainment, which put him in the position of providing the best talent the world produced. That was a figure of speech, no doubt, in many cases, for every "showman" made a similar remark. Sometimes they gave the best show, sometimes they did not, but so far as he was concerned he would provide them with an entertainment which he hoped they would appreciate, and he hoped to be able in the years to come to stand before them and receive their congratulations. He would not take up their time by making a long speech; all he wished to do was metaphorically to shake hands with them over the footlights, and tell them what he contemplated. He would specially cater for the ladies. (A Voice: "And it never fails.") It never had, and he did not think it would. There were many ladies present that evening, and he wished to thank them for their attendance, because he often found when a person opened a theatre that they held back until they had heard from their male friends what the entertainment was like, and if it met with their approval they came. They had shown confidence in him that night, and it was a compliment he deeply appreciated, and he could assure them there would never be any item on the programme to which the most fastidious could reasonably take exception. He could not stay with them always, but his manager, Mr. Bradbury, would do everything that was possible in their interests, and it at any time there should be anything to which they took exception they knew where a letter might find him. If they wrote to him and told him what they wanted, their letters would not be discarded, and he would promise to answer them with courtesy, and do everything to please them, and to popularise the theatre over which he had the honour to preside.

At the evening's performance Mr. Macnaghten was presented with a massive bouquet in the shape of a horseshoe as an emblem of good luck, and this now occupies a prominent place in the main entrance to the theatre.

ROBERT PHILLIPS, aged twenty-six, a music-hall artist, living at Vicary-street, Brixton, was charged at the West London Police-court on Saturday, before Mr. Garrett, with shooting at John Howard, baker, of 32, Avalon-road, Fulham, with intent to do him bodily harm. The accused, a dwarf, who is a member of Mr. John Tiller's variety company, was being followed on Thursday by a crowd at Walham Green, and, after telling them to go away, fired the revolver in the air. Mr. Garrett fined the accused 40s. for discharging loaded firearms in the public street.

MESSRS. HARRY BRAYNE and Bert Lloyd will be at the Empire, Camberwell, next week, in their novel act, The Tree of Truth. Managers should not miss seeing this sketch.

THE eleventh annual general meeting of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association will be held on Sunday, Oct. 27, at the Empire, Camberbell, commencing at 5.30 p.m. Mr. W. H. Clemart (president) will be in the chair. Due notification of any resolution for discussion at the general meeting must be sent in writing to the secretary fourteen days prior to the date fixed for that meeting, and the attention of members of the Association is drawn to Rules 8, 10, 13, and 14, which concern the honorary officers and executive committee.

OWING to ill-health Miss Lillie Dene (of Dene and Dawson) has been compelled to retire from the profession for the winter. She hopes, however, to resume work next year, for which the pair are well booked up.

MR. AND MRS. FRANK H. FRANCE (Miss Edith Stewart) start on Monday at Richmond a lengthy tour of the Moss and Stoll halls with their highly exciting and very successful sketch, The 100 to 1 Chance.

REHEARSALS in connection with the seventh season of the Crystal Palace Orchestral Society will commence on the evening of Monday, Oct. 7, in the Concert Room. Among the entertainments arranged are German's Merrie England (concert version), on Nov. 21; Grieg's "Olav Trygvason," pianoforte concerto, "Peer Gynt," suite, &c., Feb. 15, at 3.30; and Elgar's "Black Knight," and orchestral pieces, on April 11.

THE Auxeto Gramaphone free concerts, which proved such a success at the Crystal Palace, will be resumed on Monday afternoon next and continue till further notice. They will be held in the concert room, and the public will have an opportunity of hearing such celebrities as Melba, Patti, Caruso, Battistini, Edward Lloyd, John Harrison, Harry Lauder, and many others.

FILM GOSSIP.

Showmen will read in this column news with regard to the best and newest films in the market. Most of these films we have seen ourselves, and can confidently recommend showmen to add them to their stock, either by purchase or hire.

Charles Urban Trading Co., Ltd.

There is a modest gentleman who speaks with an American accent who has during the past few years played an important part in the cause of education and scientific training. That gentleman is Mr. Charles Urban, F.Z.S., and it is to be hoped that one of these days a grateful British Government will publicly recognise his handsome services to humanity at large and to the people of these islands in particular. A few months ago we dealt at some length with an interesting publication, of which Mr. Urban is the author, explaining the value of the cinematograph in science, education, and matters of State. And not only in subjects academic, but in subjects entertaining and amusing, will Mr. Urban's name be associated.

Across the Balkan States.—Mr. Urban's latest collection of films afford a unique pictorial record of an expedition across the Balkan States, organised by the Urban Company, under the direction of Mr. Harry de Windt, the eminent explorer. These series should be of special interest to showmen. They were secured only by great expenditure of time and money, at considerable danger and grave risks, and they are remarkable for enlightening scenes which depict the manners and customs of the inhabitants of so-called "Savage Europe," and for the quaint and attractive sidelights which they throw on the character and sentiment of the Eastern States. It might be mentioned, too, that they are the only animated pictures of the Balkan States in existence. Thus, we are taken to Herzegovina, Bosnia, and Dalmatia—countries formerly inaccessible to the stranger—and are shown beautiful railway and other panoramas, curious towns, typical native characters, habits and customs, bazaar incidents, street scenes, wild, rugged, verdant, and tropical valleys, mountains and gardens, and foaming torrents.

Life and Scenes in Servia.—In this set are included pictures of great historical importance, containing, as it does, the portrait group of actual conspirators who murdered the late King and Queen of Servia. Picturesque military scenes are also afforded as the royal guard assemble and march past the camera, and further inspiring views show various branches of the army in training. Then we get views of Servian peasants on their way to market with droves of pigs, &c., others driving bullock carts laden with timber and produce, and excellent portraits of the natives in their national dress. In the series dealing with Macedonia there are thrilling pictures of insurgent bands, who took up arms to throw off the yoke of Turkish tyranny. The fighting scenes are fascinating in the extreme, and pathos is furnished to a remarkable degree by pictures of the refugees at Rilo, and interest and entertainment are afforded by the railway panoramas, the village festivities, and customs.

Bulgaria and its Citizens brings us into touch with the picturesque town of Tirnova, the grain traffic of Bulgaria, the home life of the country, and the thousand and one incidents of ordinary and ceremonial life in that much-debated land. Another set shows us various units of the Bulgarian Army at work, on parade, in review, at play, at mess, and on the march. One learns a great deal, too, from the series, Roumania, Its Citizens, and its Soldiers. The production comes at a particularly opportune moment, by reason of the peasants' rising in Roumania. The panoramic and other scenes of palaces, mansions, monuments, and parks, and of soldiers of every arm at drill and manœuvres, are of great beauty and clearness. Montenegro and the Albanian Alps are treated in a most comprehensive manner in still another film. It would be possible to devote a page of The Era to descriptions of these various productions, which are highly commendable from every point of view.

Pathé Frères.

This firm seems to have in its service a genius who employs his wonderful talents of ingenuity upon the production of trick films. Of this order of film, one of the best we have seen for some time bears the title of A Clever Tailor. We had always laboured under the impression that eighteenth-century manufacturers were much more slow and thorough in the execution of work than we of this day. But Messrs. Pathé disillusionise us on this point. Into a quaint, old-fashioned tailor's shop there steps a gallant gentleman, who is measured for a new suit with wonderful rapidity. And with equal rapidity are the clothes made. In fact, the wizard who manipulates the scissors has scarcely cut a length of cloth from the roll than it has assumed a portion of the garment, brocaded and shaped, as it is intended to be worn. The sleeves fairly fly on to the arms of the customer, and in almost shorter time than it takes to tell the story the gallant gentleman is more gorgeously attired than ever. In the tailor and his assistant are two capital comedians.

A Drama in Seville is a tragic episode of the love affairs of a matador. The bull-fighter is desperately smitten with the charms of a beautiful girl, who appears as if she has not quite made up her mind whether she will accept his advances or those of a less adventurous individual. We see her seated with the latter among the audience at a bull-fight, wherein the matador distinguishes himself by his superb skill and daring. But an accident happens. He trips in the arena, and is gored by the savage beast, whom he and others have goaded to a state of ferocious excitement and fury. He is quickly taken to the hospital, where he expires in the presence of the woman whose heart and hand he has endeavoured to capture by the display of his reckless bravery.

Naples and Vesuvius, also a Pathé film, treats us to some realistic scenes of that historic locality which even now affords us some idea of the former glory of Herculaneum and Pompeii. Of course, such a series would be incomplete without a view of Mount Vesuvius, the eruptions of which are shown with fine colour effects. One wonders how this striking pictorial representation was secured. Another Pathé subject depicts the pottery industry in Japan in a most interesting way; while a further notable novelty is The Heart's Bidding.

Vitagraph Company.

The Baby Elephant is a Vitagraph novelty that should find a ready market. It is a capital film, which contains many amusing incidents. A Persian nobleman possesses a very wonderful elephant, which a sultan is desirous of buying. The sultan sends two of his emissaries, a Turk and an African, to barter for the animal. Its owner refuses to sell it, but shows visitors how clever and intelligent the baby elephant is by making it perform many wonderful tricks, such as standing on its head, standing on his hind legs, walking the tight-rope, and sitting at the table during dinner, eating its meal in a most interesting manner. Finding that the Persian positively refuses to sell the elephant, the sultan's messengers finally steal the animal, but they find they have truly "an elephant on their hands," for it will not perform any of its tricks, and after acting like a stubborn donkey, it suddenly becomes vicious and makes a furious attack on its captors, chasing them all around the country, until they jump over a precipice to escape its fury. The intelligent elephant then kicks up its hind legs and runs back to its lawful owner.

Bathing Under Difficulties is also a Vitagraph production. A gentleman and his family are resting at their summer home. Father is sleeping peacefully in the hammock and is discovered by his young son, who is bent upon mischief. Securing a feather duster he tickles his father's face, waking him, for which he is soundly spanked. The son watches his chance for revenge. As papa is enjoying a quiet plunge in the river, the son comes upon him and makes off with the "Old Man's" clothes. Papa's pleadings are of no avail, and he has no alternative but to wait until the coast is clear or until help arrives. His loneliness is broken first by a young lady who takes a seat on the bank and reads. Finally she goes away, only to be followed by the "Boston Young Ladies' Botanical Society," who gather an assortment of specimens, meanwhile keeping the poor bather under water during their stay. They have scarcely departed before a young lady artist appears, sets up her easel and proceeds to sketch. Again "Pop" is compelled to keep "under cover." To further add to his discomfiture a crab gets hold of his foot. Removing the crab, in desperation he throws it on the bank, almost hitting the artist, who becomes frightened, gathers up her paraphernalia and beats a hasty retreat. Next to appear is a Sunday School delegation led by the parson. One of the party implores the preacher to save the "drowning man," so the parson takes off his coat, plunges into the stream, and swims out to rescue, when he is made aware of the awful predicament in which the other man is placed. He returns to the bank, imparts the said information, and all hands depart. By this time the poor man is chilled to the marrow and about ready to collapse. A tramp comes along, decides to surprise himself with a little bath, and plunges in, clothes and all. Here is father's chance. Grabbing the tramp, he disrobes him, appropriates the clothes, and gets home about dead. His wife sees him, and hardly recognises him in his new outfit. Explanations are in order, and while these are going on, the cause of all the trouble comes along dressed in "papa's" clothes and smoking a cigar.

SINGING PICTURES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Replying to the letter from Mr. Geo. R. Beaumont in your last issue, I am afraid that his contention as regards the failure of the combination of kinematograph and phonograph to appeal strongly to an audience, except as a curiosity, cannot be disputed.

Without wanting to depreciate the labour that has been put into the combination, one cannot deny that its chief interest is that of a scientific curiosity, and the human voice appeals more directly to an audience than any reproduction of it. Doubtless the combination indicated by your correspondent, that is to say, "Song Illustration," is a promising one.

Some seven or eight years ago I produced a number of such animated illustrations for popular songs, in which the action of the picture synchronised exactly with the descriptive matter in the song.

Some of them met with very considerable success when produced at St. George's Hall, the Agricultural Hall, and other places, and among them were "'Arry on the steamboat" (as sung by Mr. E. J. Lonnen), "Britain's tribute to her sons," and others, which were thoroughly appreciated by the audience, and I should be delighted to see a revival and extension of this form of entertainment.—Yours faithfully, ROBT. W. PAUL.

AMUSEMENTS IN BRUSSELS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

At our national theatre, La Monnaie, the management has revived Reyer's Salammbo, with Mme. Lina Pacary as the heroine and M. Verdier as Matho. Delibes' Lakmé, which has given Mlle. Yvonne de Creville an opportunity to score, Gounod's Faust, and Berlioz's Trogans have also been on the bills.

The Alcazar has changed its name to La Nouvelle Comédie, and has been completely renovated. Alfred Capus' La Veine is being performed by a fine company.

The Molière has wound up its melodrama season with Dumas' Dame de Montsoreau.

Constantino Bernardi has been the principal attraction at La Scala.

As for the Palais d'Eté, our cold summer has been a boon to the management; it has been full up every night. The turns introduced this week include Mlle. Challigny, chanteuse; Nadir and her cleverly-trained cats; the Flers-Barlay duettists; Amylla and Myosis, in a mythological dumb show; that fine juggler Drawee, with his funny blackie and his clever collie dog; the Kubans, singers and dancers; the Four Perez, with their thrilling ladder act; the Five Cliftons, in their Olympian games; Max Waldon, a young female impersonator with a fine voice; and Tom Grave, looping the loop, in his "infernal" wheel.

Horace Goldin is still drawing big audiences at the Antwerp Scala.

The Olympia and the Galeries, now both under the management of M. Fonson, are about to reopen with modern comedy and operettas.

Mr. Harry Marlow and Miss May Manton come to the Palace, Hammersmith, on Monday with their clever comedy sketch, Other People's Babies, which has been proving so successful round the provinces and at one or two of the outlying London halls.

One of the season's most catchy songs, viz., "Cherries are blooming," owes much of its success to the charming costume in which the singer, Miss Bessie Butt, is attired. This dress was "built" from the design of Miss Butt, and is being extensively copied in all directions. Needless to say, Miss Butt feels highly flattered, but would like it known that she was the originator of cherry trimmings.

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, Aug. 20.—Princess's Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. J. C. Williamson; Sub-Lessee, Mr. Edwin Geach.—A crowded audience assembled on Saturday evening to witness the first performance of Human Hearts, billed by the management as "the sweetest play on earth." Taken on the whole, the performance was a decided success. Mr. Ernest Leicester as the hero, Tom Logan, displayed great talent. His best work was in the prison scene. Mr. Leicester succeeded in keeping interest on the stretch to the last. The low comedy was supplied by Mr. Berkeley in the form of a tramp of the Weary Willie pattern, a clever piece of acting for which the actor received well-deserved applause. The character of Jeanette Logan was admirably played by Miss Valentine Sidney; while the part of the villain, Frederick Armsdale, her partner in crime, found an able exponent in Mr. George Montford. Miss May Hesford (Samantha Logan), the blind mother, was well placed; while Miss Florence Redfern as a newspaper boy did some capital work. The rest of the cast was ably sustained by other members of the company. Owing to the theatre being otherwise engaged Human Hearts can only be staged for twelve nights and two matinées.

Her Majesty's Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. J. C. Williamson; Business-Manager, Mr. George Tallis.—Mr. Andrew Mack and his company faced a packed house on Saturday evening, when they staged Jack Shannon, a play that proved the most successful of Mr. Mack's productions during his last season in Melbourne. Of Mr. Mack's acting and singing it need only be said that he commanded his audience as completely as he had done hitherto. Mr. Martin Alsop as the treacherous Tyrrell presented a clever piece of acting; while the Mrs. Fairleigh of Miss May Stephenson was alternately charming and hateful as the play demanded. Miss Jane Kelton as Maura Sherlock, Mr. Fred Cambourne as Father Lawler, Mr. McCormick as Clifford Sherlock, Mr. N. Townsend as Lucy Sherlock, and Mr. Edwin Lester as Hugh Dillon all sustained their parts well. Special praise is due to little Miss Gwennie Walshe, who took the part of Peggy; her acting throughout was both charming and natural.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr. Bland Holt; Business-Manager, Mr. Simonsens.—Mr. Bland Holt's production of The Bondman continues to attract large crowds to this popular theatre. The scenic effects and the able acting of Mr. George Rignold, Miss Francis Ross, and the other members of Mr. Holt's company make the production highly successful. Taken on the whole, The Bondman is about the finest production Mr. Holt has presented to his patrons during his present season in Melbourne.

Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Rickards; Business-Manager, Mr. Fred Ayton.—A bright and varied entertainment was presented to a full house on Saturday evening. Mr. Hamilton Hill, baritone, is the leading attraction at present, his fine rendering of the two songs "Queen of Love" and "Honey Boy" nightly calling forth loud applause. Techow's Cats are established favourites; Mr. Edward Cranston and company present a pleasing little sketch, entitled Terry; Ernesto, the musical juggler, gives a clever performance; while other excellent turns are contributed by Baby Watson, Carden Wilson, Fred Bluett, the Four Rosebuds, Eileen Lyons, Claude Leplastriere, Bijou Russell, Nellie Kilburn, Harold Reeves, Leonard Nelson, and a host of others.

West's Pictures and the Brescians continue to draw good houses at the Athenæum Hall. A fresh series of pictures are being shown, while a number of new items have been introduced into the musical portion of the programme.

The Glaciarium is nightly thronged with enthusiastic skaters. On Saturday evening next Miss Emily Fox will give an exhibition of fancy figure skating.

SYDNEY, Aug. 20.—Mr. J. C. Williamson's Royal Comic Company—minus George Lauri, invalided—revived The Belle of New York under Mr. Gerard Coventry's direction, at Her Majesty's on the 17th. Miss Florence Young was the latest Violet Grey, an entirely new kind of rôle for her, but her superb voice and artistic singing pulled her through. Mr. Alf Stephens was Ichabod Bronson on traditional lines; Mr. Reginald Roberts played Harry Bronson as a typical "Murrikan," nasal alike in singing and speaking; Mr. W. S. Percy was an amusingly polite lunatic; while Mr. Fred Leslie made the showiest hit in the cast as Blinky Bill; and it goes without writing that Mr. Claude Bantock made the most of Sniffkins and Miss Alma Barber made a piquant Fifi; Miss Nellie Wilson made Cora Angelique a prominent feature; and Mr. Arthur Crane sang "Old Glory" with all the necessary fire.

Miss Maud Hildyard is attracting more attention than is usually bestowed upon melodramatic actresses. She is absolutely unique, natural beyond our experience, and her method of delivering asides is perfectly delicious. In The Great Awakening Miss Hildyard has a part which would be a scowling fiend with most actresses, but her murders are done smilingly, and every strong line has its humorous echo, and all so natural. The play abounds in strong male characters, and two good female parts. The latter are enacted by Miss May Congdon and Miss Violet Dene.

At the Palace Miss Florence Baines keeps Miss Lancashire, Limited, going for all she is worth, and as it is absolutely a one-horse play, the lady has an exhausting time. But the true Lancashire ring charms us from the Old Land, and those of the new who have never heard the real accent before. The Governor has made the 31st a vice-regal command night.

The Tivoli has a new big star turn in the Four Geraldos, the first of Mr. Harry Rickards' latest engagements. They were warmly welcomed and cheered. Miss Mabel La Blanche also made her first appearance here; Mr. Fred Graham and Miss Nellie Dent are as popular as ever in their sketch, Packing Up.

West's Pictures at the Lyceum announce last nights. There is no apparent reason for closing the season; the house is full every night.

The National Amphitheatre has a full vaudeville company. The Victoria Hall, London Biotableaux, Haymarket, Hippodrome, Oxford Theatre, Glaciarium, Queen's Hall, and several smaller shows are all doing paying business; in fact, amusements are all prospering.

On Saturday (17th) afternoon Mr. C. Warburton Gamble and Miss Gillian Scaife, of the Ward Willoughby company, were married at St. John's Church, Glebe, by the Rev. S. S. Tovey, whose brother, the late Arthur Redwood, was a popular and talented actor here in the eighties. Some two score fellow-artists and friends celebrated the event, and the happy couple didn't lost one night's salary, leaving for the National Park on Saturday night and returning for Monday's performance at the Criterion.

The death is announced in Paris of M. Ernest Blum, one of the most prolific French playwrights of the nineteenth century. With M. Raoul Toché he wrote over a quarter of a century since Le Voyage en Suisse, of which the adaptation The Swiss Express has been running for years at provincial and suburban houses, where it is still being pioneered by the Brothers Frederick and Charles Renad.

SPANISH DANCES.

Spain, the land of warmth, of sunshine, of music, of art, says Reginald St. Johnston in his "History of Dancing," can justly claim pre-eminence among the nations for her graceful and beautiful dances.

Not perhaps so vigorous, nor yet of such intricate and involved movements, as those of her Northern sisters, they are nevertheless the acme of all that is pleasing and artistic in the rhythm of motion. Dancing comes as naturally to her daughters as swimming to the Polynesians, or singing to the Germans; while Cervantes, who had such a keen insight into the natures of the Spanish people, was undoubtedly thinking of his countrywomen when he said, "There ne'er was born a woman yet, but she was born to dance."

Yet, even now, while she is a nation laid low amongst those whom she once despised, she can still claim a great distinction, for it is from Spain that those dancers come who by the grace and perfection of their dancing become the wonder and admiration of every capital of Europe.

The dances peculiar to Spain are mostly of Moorish extraction; but the interval has been so long, and the dances have been so added to and improved by the people themselves, that there is now but little trace of their ancient origin. Andalusia is the classic home of the dance, and it is there that one sees the best displays of the national dances. These are three in number—the Fandango, the Bolero, and the Seguidillas, though, of these, the Seguidillas is really only the Fandango or the Bolero danced by a greater number of people. The Fandango, which means literally "Go and dance," is danced in slow six-eight time, by two people facing each other. It is the prototype of all the others, and is the most popular of the Spanish dances. In this, as in all the others, the arm movements play an important part, and much of the peculiar grace and charm of the Spanish dance is due to them. The performers hold castanets in their hands, and often the clicking of these and the rhythmical hand-clapping of the onlookers is all the music they have, though sometimes a mandolin or a guitar is added.

There is a curious old story in connection with the Fandango, which nearly all the Spanish historians vouch for as true. It is said that in the year 1700 the Sacred College, or Ecclesiastical Court from Rome, condemned the Fandango as an irreligious performance, and were about to forbid the dancing of it anywhere.

But some enthusiastic votaries of it asked to be allowed to have it performed before the Court, to show the learned members how harmless it was. So some dancers started it, and so contagious was the music and the rhythm of it, that eventually the whole Court joined in, and there was to be seen the unusual spectacle of the Sacred College dancing the Fandango, which they had specially met to prohibit!

The Bolero is a more modern dance, and is found less in the Southern than in the Northern districts, as it is of French extraction and was introduced from Provence, passing through the Basque country into the North of Spain. It is a dance for a solo performer, almost always a woman, and the hand and arm movements are a great feature in it. It consists of sharp turns and revolutions of the body, of short quick rushes of two or three steps, now to one side, now to the other, the feet always stamping on the floor in time to the music, while at intervals, when there is a sudden pause in the tune, the dancer stops rigid in a picturesque pose, with the body bent slightly backwards, the hands on the hips, and the head erect and defiant.

The Seguidillas is in quicker time than the Fandango or Bolero, and is a combined dance of eight people. The performers range up in two files, with three or four paces interval between them, and commence dancing to the usual accompaniment of castanets, guitar, &c. It is a very exact and definite dance, and the bars of the music are counted for each fresh movement. Thus, on the fourth bar the dancing begins, on the ninth there is a pause, while at intervals, just as in the Bolero, the performers stop in a rigid and immovable pose, this, if good, being especially applauded by the onlookers.

There are numerous other minor dances of Spain, among which the Sarabanda, made historic by its performance by Cardinal Richelieu to please Anne of Austria, La Cambelas, and the Chacona, are the most important.

There is also the Cachucha, which is a comparatively modern dance, brought into prominence by Fanny Elssler, the famous première on the Paris Opera stage.

About this dance James Russell Lowell, the American writer and statesman, remarked in his account of the wedding celebrations of the late King of Spain:—"By far the prettiest and most interesting feature of the week was the dance, in the Plaza des Armas, before the Palace, of deputations from all the provinces of Spain, in their picturesque costumes. The dances were curious rather than graceful, and it was odd that the only one which we are accustomed to consider pre-eminently Spanish, the Cachucha, was performed by two professional dancers. The rest, had, however, higher interest from their manifest antiquity and almost rudimentary characters."

A famous dance of Naples is the Tarantella, a dance with surely the most strange and curious history of any. For it is said to have originally been invented to cure a disease, Tarentism, from which it got its name! This peculiar remedy was organised as early as 1374, when the disease, which was the terrible "dancing mania," a form of hysterical madness which once spread over the whole of Germany, first made its appearance. This Tarentism was for a long time thought to be the result of a bite from the Tarantula spider, owing probably to a confusion of names; but it is now practically certain that it was merely a form of nervous hysteria, of which the better known "St. Vitus' Dance" is a distant branch.

In France, the great revolution having removed the sharp dividing line between the upper classes and the lower, there is now no real national dance; for, just as in England, the dances of the country people have become assimilated with those of the upper classes.

In remote country districts, it is true, one may still find occasionally the "contre danse," a dance not unlike our own Sir Roger de Coverley, and of which our old-fashioned "country dance" is a corruption, while there is, of course, in Paris, the "Can-can"; but, apart from these, one may safely say that the present dancing of France is in all respects similar to that of England.

Not so in Russia. Here we have dances of a wilder and more vigorous kind than are to be found in any other European nation. And I think it may be regarded as a general rule that the colder the climate of a country may be the more vigorous will be its dancing.

The dances of Russia (I am not speaking of their society dances, which are, of course, the same as those of any other civilised country) are of many varieties, as is only natural in a country so large and divided into so many provinces; but through them all runs one general type.

I was once fortunate enough to see some Russians performing one of their national dances, and was struck by the really difficult and exhausting nature of the movements. Some seven or eight men and girls took part in the performance, though most of the time only one of them would be dancing, the others meanwhile standing round and making the music by clapping their hands, singing, and beating tambourines; although at certain intervals they would all join in, passing and repassing each other, dancing the whole time, till some fresh performer commenced a solo once more.

AMERICAN AMUSEMENTS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—The Movers, a drama in four acts, by Martha Morton, is the first offering of the new season at the Hackett Theatre. The theme of the play is somewhat similar to that of The Climbers. Chudleigh Manners, a young broker, and his wife, Marion, have been living beyond their means. When the crash comes, and their home is sold under the hammer, Chudleigh confesses to his wife that he is an embezzler and commits suicide. His example, however, does not serve as a warning to his brother-in-law, who buys the luxurious furnishings, and with an equally extravagant wife, plunges headlong down the same path. Marion Manners becomes a hospital nurse, and in course of time comes to her sister's house to take care of her during an illness. The young couple are on the verge of ruin, and Marion can save them by contracting a certain marriage, which, however, she refuses to do, and the mortgage on their house is foreclosed. But under Marion's influence they change their wasteful way of living, and get on their feet again; while Marion, herself a changed woman, finds happiness as the wife of John Stirling, her family physician, who has long been her friend. The play promised well in the earlier scenes, but fell flat after the second act, and for that reason its reception has not been altogether favourable. Miss Dorothy Donnelly, Miss Ida Waterman, Mr. Vincent Serrano, and Mr. W. J. Ferguson acquitted themselves creditably in the more important rôles.

Mr. Henry Miller is collaborating with Mr. Hartley Manners on a new adaptation of the German military play, Krieg Im Frieden, which was the original of Augustin Daly's The Passing Regiment. Mr. Daly's version was a five-act comedy, with scenes laid in New York. The new version is to be a three-act comedy, with the scenes laid in Quebec. Mr. Laurence D'Orsay and Miss Cecilia Loftus will have the leading rôles, the former appearing as an officer of an English regiment stationed in Canada.

"Ruth," a domestic drama, in four acts, was recently produced in Washington, with Miss Fernanda Eliscu in the title-rôle. The play was adapted from the Yiddish of Z. Libin, by Professor Addison Hervey, of Columbia College. The first three scenes show the library in the home of the Buchanans, and the last an exterior picture of their summer home with a midsummer setting. The play deals with the confession to her husband of Ruth, who, impelled by conscience, after having been married six years, tells him of a past when, struggling for existence, she met a man who promised her all the glittering things of life, and, tempted by the vision of a happy future, she had fallen. The husband, of a forgiving disposition, would condone her fault, but his sister, having overheard the confession, begins to persecute Ruth. Finally, the husband grows suspicious, and accuses his wife of taking a small sum of money to provide for an orphan in an asylum, who might be her own child. The wife leaves him to resume a life of drudgery, but poverty forces her to return in the hope of being forgiven, and the husband welcomes her with open arms.

Mr. Joseph Vandenberg, formerly of London, is directing an opera company at the West End Theatre, in Haarlem, and is reviving all the favourite operas in an attractive manner.

AMUSEMENTS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PIETERMARITZBURG, Aug. 27.—Town Hall.—The Bohemians gave a satisfactory performance on Saturday last. Miss Clara Pierse is the possessor of a well-trained contralto voice; and Miss Madge Nicholson gained no end of applause. Mr. Alfred Thomas proves himself to be a thoroughly finished entertainer. Watty McNab, a Scotch comedian, did well; and Mr. Alf Hurley is a quaint little comedian.

Scott's Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. D. Scott; Lessees, B. and F. Wheeler, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. A. Wyburd.—Mrs. Brown Potter and company are here this week in a répertoire of plays. On Monday La Tosca was staged, Mrs. Brown Potter as Floria Tosca presenting a finished study of a difficult rôle. Miss Price Owen as Marie Carolina (Queen of Naples) gave a dignified rendering; Baron Scarpia was in the capable hands of Mr. A. G. Poulton, who brought out all the hatred and vindictiveness of the part in an able manner; Marco Cavaradosi was ably portrayed by Mr. Chas. A. Deran; Mr. Esme Percy as Cæsare Angelotti is deserving of high praise; Mr. Chas. A. Daly (Le Machese Attavanti), Mr. Harold Carfax (Scharoni), and Mr. H. Ashton (Procurateur Fiscal) all lent able support. The company are down to play The Ironmaster, School for Scandal, Lady of Camelias, Mary Queen of Scots, and Forget-Me-Not.

The Woods-Williamson dramatic company are doing good business at Kimberley.

The Leonard Rayne company are at present at His Majesty's Theatre, Johannesburg.

Fillis's Circus has opened for a short season at Durban.

By insuring each ankle and foot for £15,000, La Belle Otero is merely following the example of other famous artists and musicians, who find it necessary to make provision for the loss which would follow their non-appearance on the stage or platform, owing to an accident to the throat or hand. Kubelik was the first to start this idea of insuring against loss of income, and he pays a premium of £300 a year in order to insure his right hand for £10,000, while Paderewski's right hand is insured for just £1000 less.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.—HIPPODROME THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Robt. A. Nicholson; Acting-Manager, Geo. Stainton.—Chas. Majilton and company head the bill with a comedy act, Round the Clock, which is greatly appreciated; Nancy St. John, comedienne and dancer, scores greatly; and Parker and Parr cause great amusement as the Welsh Musicians; Trentanovi Sisters present a sensational gymnastic act, while a delightful musical turn is provided by the Musical Keiths; Alix Lukos receives a flattering reception for his scena, Pictures in the Fire; and Ouda and Artell, gymnasts, are well received. The pictures conclude the programme.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Councillor J. Batty; Manager, Mr. W. Batty.—Duncan and Godfrey in their coster comedy, Me and 'Er, are here, and prove a very attractive turn; the Moutier Sisters present a sensational horizontal bar act; while the sketch of Ted Karno and company creates great amusement; Syd Herman, Hebrew comedian, is greatly appreciated; and Dolly Denver proved herself a dainty comedienne and dancer; a humorous sketch provided by Dene and Dawson is very amusing; Bartlo, concertina soloist, has made a great impression. The pictures are most attractive.

STOKE. — HIPPODROME. — Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Manager, Mr. H. Miller.—At the head of the bill here this week are Mr. Frank Long and Miss Omoyo-San in an exhibition of jiu-jitsu, which is decidedly interesting. Sam Redfern scores a success with his amusing patter; the Whittington Trio provide a clever turn; Sterling and Love are seen in a good sketch, during which some smart vocalism and instrumental items are introduced; Whimsical Walker and company present Captain Hamilton, V.C., which is decidedly interesting; Maude Forde is a smart comedienne; George Rae, a Scotch comedian of merit, is successful; Burnes and Bentley are very fine dancers, and the pictures are capital.

STOURBRIDGE.—ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—Manageress, Miss Maude Lynton.—A Woman's Past is finding great favour here this week. The company is under the direction of Messrs. A. Hamilton Warden and Charles W. Sandford. Miss Maisie Hanbury as Bessie proves a talented artist, and the same may be said of Mr. J. Cook Hinton as David Heath. The shady characters of the drama are admirably depicted by Mr. G. Moreton Williams as Uriah Craven, and Miss Nesta Sandford as Clara Darrell. Plenty of good humour is furnished by Mr. Charles V. Sandford as Frank D. Maney and Miss Mary Mallalieu. Mr. A. Hamilton Ward is a favourite as Clement Harper.

SUNDERLAND.—KING'S THEATRE.—Managing Directors, Messrs. Stevens and Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. L. Carlo.—The Girl from Kay's receives able interpretation from Mr. Charles Macdona's capable company. Mr. Johnny Schofield is especially delightful in his amusing delineation of the rich Max Hoggenheimer, there being nothing but hearty laughter whilst he occupies the stage; another clever and highly-amusing item is Mr. Claude Dampier's droll impersonation of the hotel hall porter Joseph; Miss Margaret Cathcart makes an exceedingly winsome and happy Winnie Harboro'; as Nora Chalmers Miss Mavis Hope proves a charming, well-favoured bride, singing her allotted numbers with admirable taste and skill; Miss Irene Vere is a pert and saucy Ellen, dancing most acceptably; and Miss Marie Shields gracefully enacts the more sedate rôle of Mrs. Chalmers. Mr. Herbert Franklyn capably accounts for the honeymooning husband, Harry Gordon; Mr. Geo. H. Liot gets many a laugh with his droll make-up of the Hon. Percy; and Messrs. Arthur Jackson and Archer Brown are both adequate as Uncle Theodore and Mr. Chalmers respectively. Misses Clapton, Eden, Wall, Madle, Plummer, and Chalmers are responsible as the Assistants at Kay's; and the Misses Molloy, Hope, Younger, Brame, Gummerson, and County make charming bridesmaids; whilst Miss Barbara Evangeline is responsible as Jane. Mr. Richard Keith and Mr. B. Strathmore enact the respective parts of Pepper and Archie Pembridge, and Mr. Ivan Ewart is entrusted with the rôle of the waiter Frank.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Richard Thornton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jos. Hemingway.—Messrs. Paumier and Howard's The Midnight Wedding company is here. Mr. Alfred Paumier appears in his original character of Paul Valmar, playing with great acumen and ability; Miss Annie Saker also is seen in her original and dual rôle of Lieut. Karl Helsburg and Princess Astrea Von Strelsburg, sustained with histrionic power; Mr. Ernest E. Imeson as Captain Rudolph earns the execrations of the house by his adequate interpretation of the generally unthankful rôle of the villain; Mr. F. W. Freeman succeeds as Prince Leopold; and Mr. A. E. W. Barnes is sufficient as Eugene Von Strelsburg. Mr. W. S. Hardy is a capital Father Gerard; Mr. James E. Page, as Sergeant Max, along with Messrs. V. Vane and Spalding as Corporal Otto and Private Bobo, contribute the necessary humour and lighter element; and Miss Ada Champion's embodiment of Kathie, of the Golden Lion, is most amusing.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—The bill is headed by George Gilbey, who scores as "Spouty, the goalkeeper." Verno and Voyce prove most acceptable in their autoplane burlesque The King of the Clouds, both in regard to their vocalism and smartly set together patter on topical and other current events; the Griffiths Brothers are as amusing as of yore with their motor-car and duel; and the Netherlands, a quartette of girls, appear in a song and skipping dance scena entitled Dutch Pastimes. The Three Cape Girls, smart long-boot dancers; Phillips and Terry, duologue artists; Tripello, chime manipulator and clever saxophonist; Mark Henton, comedian; Hinton and Wooton, in an exciting bicycle football match; and last, but by no means least, the Chronomegaphone in Harry Lauder's well-known successes, complete the list. The programmes of this handsome and commodious house still lacks sufficient variety and "tip-top" items of interest, and are by no means up to the fame of the other houses coming under the control of the Moss' Empires Company in the near vicinity of the large Wearside town.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Lessees, The United County Theatres, Ltd.; Acting-Managers, Messrs. Browne and Stringer.—A great draw this week is found in the visit of the popular burlesque artists, Florrie Forde, who secures a most flattering reception, and after singing "After you with the girl," "He's my pal," and "Up to one of your tricks," the audience would not be denied, when the fair artist responded with "Has anyone seen a German band?" At each change the audience lustily sang the respective choruses, after having been first tutored by the popular songstress. Another strong turn that is welcomed and applauded is the comedian J. W. Hall, who scores with some of his old and new numbers; the Glenroy Troupe, with their smart costumes and characteristic dancing, also come in for a fair share of applause. Albert Wyndham and company appear in the Shakespearean episode Prince Arthur, which is somewhat unique in music-hall programmes, but a welcome interlude withal. It is played, staged, and dressed in the most adequate manner. Others appearing include Arthur Goodman, comedy juggler; the Moncktons, in comedy act; John Lloyd's Gondolier Glee Singers; the Kroney Brothers, in their London's Lazy Coalmen act; and the Palace pictures.

SWANSEA. — THE GRAND.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Brooks and Woodbridge; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. Oswald Brooks; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Dean.—Baron H. Harriss's talented company presents The Prince of Pilsen for the first time in Swansea in a style that will long be remembered; one of the most talented actresses seen here for some time is Miss Sophie Harriss, and as Mrs. Madison Crocker she is delightful; Miss Minnie Muir, and Miss Ernestine Desborough are graceful dancers and charming singers, and in their respective parts of Nellie Wagner and Edith Adams are seen to great advantage; Miss Connie Leon as Sidonie is a great success, her dancing being excellent; Mr. Harry Kilburn is in great form as Hans Wagner, keeping the audience in one big roar of laughter; Carl Otto, the Prince of Pilsen, has a realistic impersonator in Mr. Frank Crimp; as the Earl of Shrimpton Mr. Bernard Russell is one of the successes of the play; Lieutenant Wagner is smartly played by Mr. S. Lindon Lang, and as the hotel concierge Mr. Ernest Gifford is good.

THE STAR.—Manager, Mr. William Coutts; Assistant Manager, Mr. S. J. Powell.—Mr. Andrew Melville and company give The Scales of Justice in a manner that delights the Star patrons; Mr. Andrew Melville is eminently suited by his part of Tony Wilkins, and fully sustains his reputation; Miss Rose Ralph plays the dual part of Mary and Jennie Maxwell in a manner that does not fail to charm every one; a large and talented company gives Mr. and Mrs. Melville excellent support.

EMPIRE, LTD.—Manager, Mr. A. Mitchell; Assistant Manager, Mr. P. C. Rowe.—George Formby is the chief figure of a good bill at the Empire this week; Cruickshank, "the fool of the family," acts the part to perfection, and does particularly well; the Musical Johnstons are true artists and their turn a most enjoyable one; Maud Rochey's monkeys give a really wonderful performance; as an impersonator of makers of history Ranschle excels, and Rosa Hamilton, as usual, is excellent; Wyndham and Killy do a sensational wire walking turn; Eda Mardy is a vocalist worth hearing, and Anna Kenwick sings and dances in good style; Bioscope pictures maintain their high standard.

SWINDON.—QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Business-Manager, Mr. Alfred Manner.—After its successful production at Glasgow last week, by Mr. J. Grant Allen's company, that new play, The Knave of Hearts, has been moved in its entirety to this house, where it was enthusiastically greeted on Monday. Mr. H. A. Saintsbury must be complimented on his admirable impersonation of Australian Jack; Miss Nina Sevening is most charming as Helen Brentwood; and Miss Haidee Wright cleverly undertakes the part of Hattie Flynn; Mr. Stanley Logan's efforts as Durham, the butler, are much appreciated; Mr. George De Lara, as Henry Bruder, and Mr. John Willes, as William Brentwood, should each be commended for some really good work; Mr. Leon M. Lion has much to do, not only as the general-manager of the company, but he also doubles, very cleverly, the parts of Flynn, a criminal, and Revils, a detective. Mr. W. J. Rae and Mr. W. Walford stand out prominently in smaller parts.

TAMWORTH.—ASSEMBLY ROOMS.—Manager, Mr. F. Hughes.—Miss Maggie Morton's company, under the direction of Mr. F. K. Herman, appeared here to crowded houses on Friday and Saturday nights in The Village Blacksmith. Mr. Victor Rae in the title-rôle showed himself to be an actor of muscle and mettle; Mr. Henri Gerald as Captain Leo acted so realistically that he was rewarded by the execrations of the "gods"; Mr. Frank Waller was successful as Lucas Marlow; Miss Cicely Clutterbuck, as Kate Strong, the blacksmith's wife, early enlisted the sympathies of the audience; Mr. F. K. Herman as Jeremiah Parkins and Miss Amy Lloyd-Earle as his wife were a highly amusing couple; Mr. Frank Venn as Billy Trigg was responsible for no little laughter; Miss Kathleen Willoughby as Ruth Parkins and Miss Josephine Melbourne as Harry Strong also deserve favourable mention.

TONYPANDY.—ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Carlton and Duckworth; General-Manager, Mr. Sam Duckworth; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Counsell.—This week the boards are occupied by Mr. Andrew Melville's company in Driven From Home. Mr. Felix Pitt is well placed as Antony Raybrock; Mr. Charles Burden scores heavily as Geoffrey Daring; Mr. Francis Everard makes a good Walter Hatherleigh; Mr. Villiers Stanley does justice to the rôle of Willie, the Outcast; the comedy relief is well supplied by Mr. Fred Imbert and Miss Susie Bevan as John and Margaret Anderson; and Miss Muriel Dean makes a dainty Laura.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. Thomas; Assistant and Stage-Manager, Mr. D. Armstrong.—The chief attraction here this week is the Two Errolls. Other items on the programme are Allsopp and Bekwith, Vendome and Chase, Lizzie North, La Belle Lily and Albert Lodge (champion whistler), J. C. Heffron, Sisters Henley, and Leo King.

TORQUAY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr. W. H. Mortimer; Secretary, Mr. Arthur Pearse.—Mr. F. R. Benson's Shakespearean company (North) is this week providing a welcome change here, and the performance of Julius Cæsar was very enthusiastically greeted. In the title-rôle Mr. Charles Francis acted with dignity, power, and restraint throughout; whilst Mr. Henry Herbert gave an excellent representation of Brutus. As the scheming Cassius, Mr. Clarence Derwent was all that could be desired; and Mr. Ross Shore was very good as the blunt Casca. In the character of Antony, Mr. Baliol Holloway was full of vigour, and his acting was frequently applauded. The rather trying characters of Portia and Calphurnia were very ably sustained by Miss Gladys Vanderzee and Miss Rosa Burgess respectively. The minor parts are in capable hands. Included in the répertoire are Henry V., The Rivals, Hamlet, The Merry Wives of Windsor, As You Like It, and The Merchant of Venice.

PRINCESS PIER CONCERT HALL.—Proprietors, The Torquay Town Council; Manager, Mr. A. T. Tremlett.—The Olympian Entertainers, under the direction of Mr. Paul Mill, who were so popular here last season, are here this week, and are drawing large audiences. Miss Haidee St. George has an excellent soprano voice, and she is well supported by Miss Happy Carton (contralto) and Miss Bertha Callen. Mr. Sydney Mannering renders some good songs very acceptably, and Mr. Harry Harmer also does well. Mr. J. G. Taylor, last year's favourite, fairly brings down the house with his amusing patter; and Mr. Paul Mill is quaintly humorous. Mrs. Paul Mill proves a capable accompanist.

TYNEMOUTH.—PALACE-BY-THE-SEA.—Proprietor and Director, Mr. J. H. Graham; Manager, Mr. Lindon Travers.—The place of honour this week is held by the Red Cloaks company in a merry musical mélange that proves most entertaining. Lillian Payne, contralto vocalist, gave no less than three songs and two encores; Arthur J. Hill, cyclist Prince of Lilliput, is both clever and amusing; La Tostia is a mandolist above the average; and secures an excellent reception. The Bioscope depicts the Scottish Highlands, and proves extremely popular.

VENTNOR (Isle of Wight).—PIER PAVILION.—On Monday Mr. Henri Goddard had his farewell benefit. Under his management the season has been most successful. The Evening Stars shone most brilliantly; Miss Gladys Haysack, soprano, is the possessor of a sweet voice and a charming personality; Mr. Stanley Ridout has an excellent and well-trained tenor voice; Miss Lizzie Finch is a fine contralto; and Miss Beatrice Cowley a most efficient pianist.

WAKEFIELD.—ROYAL OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Sherwood and Co.—Mr. Herbert Ralland's La Poupée company pays a return visit here, and was welcomed with a crowded house on Monday evening. Mr. Fred Seymour gives a fine impersonation as Hilarius, and is exceedingly funny; Mr. Arthur Cozens was highly successful as Launcelot; Mr. Fuller Allen is very effective as Baron Chamerelle; Mr. Walter Balfour's fine voice is heard to advantage as Father Maxime; Miss Edith Hunter is admirable as Mme. Hilarius, and Miss Alice Roche gives a charming portrayal as Alesia.

HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. Sydney Tolfree.—The programme here this week comprises Gorman's Juveniles, a clever combination of juvenile talent; Mr. Tom Lloyd, comedian, who scored a decided success in his funny songs; Halma, society juggler, performs some capital feats; Zenora, hand balancer, provides an interesting turn; the Sisters Russell, character vocalists, prove popular; Mr. W. C. Wensley, comedian, is amusing; and Miss Madge Allan, comedienne, dances well.

WALSALL.—HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, The Walsall Theatres Co., Ltd.; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. W. H. Westwood.—Brimful of genuine fun is the sketch, Casey's Court, which, as played by Harry Cadle's Midget Mimics, with Bob King as Mrs. Casey, is being received nightly with roars of laughter. Lilian Lowe is a charming vocalist; Lively Lily Langtry creates much fun; Daniel and Son are exceedingly clever acrobats and balancers; Harry Friskey proves a marvellous juggler; Charles Hargreaves' chorus songs, with illustrations, provide a capital turn; E. Rousby's electrical review of reviews, "Around Paris," proves most interesting; and the American Bioscope shows some capital pictures.

GRAND THEATRE. — Proprietors, The Walsall Theatres Co., Ltd.; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. W. H. Westwood.—A visit is being paid here this week by Mr. Percy Norman and company in the military drama, A Woman Worth Winning. Mr. Sidney Barton as Czar Nicholas is very successful; Mr. Gilbert Standing is a capable Amos Pauloff; Mr. Percy Horton is an excellent Fergus Lovinsky; General Borinski is well played by Mr. A. B. Mackay; Miss Trixie Leighton as Lota Kalnovky is well portrayed; Miss Cissie Bellamy displays great ability as Roma Pauloff; and other characters are well sustained.

WARRINGTON.—ROYAL COURT.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred J. Reece.—A large house gave Mr. and Mrs. William MacLaren's company a capital reception in Proof on Monday. The members of the cast are well balanced, and the staging and dresses are very effective. Mr. S. Herbert Humber's delineation of Pierre is an exceptionally fine piece of acting; Mr. P. Hamilton as Lazare depicts all the remorselessness the author intended; and the hearty, buoyant nature of Chamboran is ably portrayed by Mr. Carl Beechy; and a suitable air of dignity marks Mr. Bernard Elliott's Count D'Aubeterre. Miss Beatrice Sinclair is eminently succesful as Madeline; and a really clever juvenile is Miss Doris Dunville, who enacts Adrienne. Miss Emelie Wilson well fills the part of Duchesse D'Aubeterre; and rich histrionic abilities are displayed by Miss Alicia Ralegh as Valentine.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Waters; Director of Amusements, Mr. F. Willmot.—Ross and Grayson are a capital pair of comedians; the Sivronis score in their sketch, Opera Gone Mad; and Eva Hope, assisted by Jack Wayho, supplies a delightful turn in a series of duologues from works by Dickens. Miss Lily Wood is a dainty comedienne; and Blanche Marion a refined vocalist and dancer. Harry Luck is a funny comedian; and Fyne and Hurley score well as the Dude and the Coster. The Rowleys are clever speciality artists; and the Bioscope shows some excellent pictures.

WEDNESBURY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. Harry Battersby; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Kuner.—After an absence of some few years Dr. Walford Bodie and his variety company are paying us a visit here this week. It is needless to mention that his presence in the town is always a big attraction and a huge success. His mesmeric performance combined with the electrical entertainment creates roars of laughter and evokes continuous applause.

WEST BROMWICH. — THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee, Mr. Harding Thomas; Manager, Mr. R. Nightingale.—Messrs. Charles H. Phelps and James W. Mercer's company opened here on Monday with One Woman's Wickedness. Mr. Frank Roy was all that could be desired in the part of Philip Beaufort; the same remarks apply to the acting of Mr. Arthur Lynton as John Fossett; Mr. Frank Hertie presented a strong and telling portrayal of Paul Roque; Mr. Charles H. Phelps skilfully enacted Jem Craggs; Mr. Clifford Spencer did well as Fitznoodle; Mr. Harry Howe scored in the rôle of Limpy Larry; Miss Irene Carrington acted with distinction as Janet Raymond; Miss Mabel Hall submitted a clever interpretation of Lilian Craggs; and Miss Cissie Clarke evoked humour with her acting and songs as Jenny Jiggles.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Albert Withers.—A strong programme is again presented here. Bert Woodward gives a clever cycling act; smart songs are rendered by Belle Bromley; a treat in the way of dog training is presented by Prof. Macann and his Irish terriers; Rose Cabani submits some refined and clever songs; the New York Nippers cause great fun; a return visit is paid by Jack Pleasants, who keeps the house in roars with his humorous songs; Larola is all that he calls himself, viz., "the clever man with funny ways"; the Gotham Comedy Four gain encores; and a series of interesting pictures is thrown on the screen.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.—GRAND.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Fred Granville; Manager, Mr. Herbert E. Feather.—Messrs. H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh's company in the original version of East Lynne is appearing here. Mr. Alfred Beaumont's conception of the character of Archibald Carlyle is a capital one; Lady Mountsevern has a capable exponent in Miss Helen Lowther; Miss E. Hardacre is an amusing Cornelia Carlyle; Miss Kate Evelyn a successful Barbara Hare; and Miss Jessie Sydney does well as Joyce; Lady Isabel is effectually played by Miss Julie Kennard; and Mr. Alfred Tate is a droll Bullock.

PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Julius Simpson.—The Three Florodora Girls make a hit here in their speciality, Two's Company, Three's None. Prince Kokin is indeed a smart juggler; Charles Mildare a good whistler; Copeland and Son are well remembered in the district for their dancing; the Bros. Ralston are successful in duets; and Rosalie Jacobi (soubrette), and Nora Stockelle please all; Harry Taylor in original Hebrew comedy, and some capital films on Raymond's machine are other features of a good bill.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE.—KNIGHTSTONE PAVILION AND OPERA HOUSE.—Manager, Mr. N. Payne.—Messrs. Henry Chattell and G. W. Bowes' The Sign of the Cross company is here this week. Mr. Wallan G. Court is highly dramatic as Marcus Superbus; Mr. B. W. Yaldwyn is good as Nero; as Tigellinus Mr. G. Osmond Tearle shows much histrionic talent; Glabrio is humorously portrayed by Mr. Donald McAdam; Mr. W. Burton's interpretation of Favius is most artistic; Miss Olivia Eltone is remarkably handsome, and shows exceptional talent as Mercia; Miss Effie Dane's Stephanus deserves the highest eulogy; Miss Kathleen Day as Poppoea, Miss May Beatrice as Berenice, and Miss Dorothy Lambert as Dacia, are all praiseworthy.

GRAND PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. John H. Stevenson.—The Royal Comedy Entertainers are the attraction this week. Mr. Fred Daniels song, "The Blue Moon," was humorously rendered; Mr. Alfred W. Newton's mandoline solo was loudly applauded; Mr. Sydney Locklynne's imitations are extremely clever; and Mr. Owen Clark excels as a conjurer; Mr. John Warren's ventriloquial interlude was well received; and Miss Ada Tunk's fine voice was heard to advantage in "Prince Charming," for which she was loudly encored; Mr. Frank Lens showed some splendid pictures on the Bioscope; and the Austrian Blue Band showed marked improvement under the baton of Herr Herni.

WHITEHAVEN.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Clark; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Clark.—Miss Emma Litchfield's company is here in the drama A Clever Impostor. Mr. Stuart Cleveland is exceptionally good in the title-rôle; Mr. Arthur Page is clever as Captain Desmond; comedy is well represented by Mr. A. Lightfoot (Harris) and Miss F. Gomer (Annie); and Mr. John McEbroy is good as Jim Brightside. Miss Isabel Singleton makes a pleasing Masie, Miss Violet Lesborough a disagreeable Margaret, and Miss Emma Litchfield an excellent Norah.

WIDNES.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Jas. Kiddie.—This week we have here Mr. Clarence C. Corrie's company with The Dancing Girl of Spain and Office Hours. The new musical comedy goes with a swing, and the music is tuneful. When the comedy parts are "written up" a big success is certain to be achieved. Mr. Lawrence Emery is excellent as Don Julian Alvarez; Mr. Geo. Danvers is a fiery Sir Jeremiah Joyce; Mr. Geo. Delaforce is a comical McGinty; Mr. Philip Hartley plays the Jew well, and his bone solo turn is extremely clever; Mr. Johnnie Schofield, jun., as the dancing parson, reveals himself an expert in the terpsichorean art; Mr. F. Owen Bates as Don Carlos is good; the Guitarez of Mr. Arthur White is quite the funniest thing of the evening; Miss Pauline Hague looks very sweet and sings well as Marie Montressor; Miss Millie Neal is good as Juanita; Miss Eva Kelland in the part of Chequata Joyce reveals herself both as actress and vocalist of unusual merit. The dresses are charming and the staging is very pretty. Office Hours is a screaming farce, in which Mr. Arthur White as an irrepressible office boy fairly "brings down the house." Mr. F. Owen Bates lends excellent assistance.

WIGAN.—ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Co. — Mr. Fred Karno's pantomimical play, His Majesty's Guests, has attracted large audiences during the week. Mr. George Hester as Sergeant Lightning, Mr. Harry Howe as the Bouncing Bunker, Mr. Sid. Kearns as Mr. Minks, and Mr. George Denham as Fritz are most entertaining. Other prominent artists in a clever company are Messrs. F. Morton, Tom Manardo, C. Usher, and Miss Lenora Castelle.

THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Co.—The Piccolinos, marvellous lilliputian performers, are first-rate dancers, cyclists and gymnasts; Jennie Johns is a popular soubrette; and Rapoli is a clever juggler; Will Vay's Troupe of Juveniles are excellent in the sketch, Life in the Slums; and Ariston's Cats are entertaining animals; Mollie Wolstenholme, operatic vocalist, is well received, and capital comedy is furnished by Bert Harrow, Fame and Fortune, Cliff Ryland, and Master Clifford.

WORCESTER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager Mr. F. Le Warde.—The D'Oyly Carte principal répertoire company is paying a week's visit, and a change of programme each evening has served to attract packed houses. The week's engagement opened with The Mikado, which is to be repeated at Saturday's matinée and evening performance, and on successive evenings there has been given The Gondoliers, Iolanthe, The Yeomen of the Guard, and Patience. The company includes many old favourites, to whom a nightly ovation has been accorded, and principals and chorus have throughout the week scored signal successes. Amongst the most prominent members of this numerous and talented company are Messrs. Fred Billington, Leicester Tunks, Leo Sheffield, Henry Burnand, and Charles R. Walenn; and Misses Hope Hastings, Jessie Rose, Mabel Graham, and Theresa Rassam. The fact that the augmented orchestra is under the personal direction of François Cellier ensures an artistic interpretation of the works in hand.

WORKINGTON.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee, Mr Stanley Rogers; Manager, Mr. Falconer Jackes.—On Monday night there was a large audience to witness A False Wife, by F. Marriott-Watson's company. Mr. F. H. Constable was manly as the hero; as Rattler Mr. E. Morton was effective; Mr. F. Marriott-Watson was successful as Jean; as Sir Colin Mr. Geo. Langham was painstaking; as the heroine Miss Arnold Hylton was charming and pathetic; Miss Ivy Chandos was sprightly as Bessie; Miss F. E. Florence gave a fine rendering of the part of Estelle.

WORTHING.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Herr C. Adolf Seebold.—Messrs. Henry Swinerd and J. W. Cordiner's No. 1 company are here for the first three nights, presenting The Girl from Japan. Mr. George Hudson does well as Lord Allenbury; Mr. H. Buckstone Clair is an able Sir Mulberry Flippington; Mr. Percy Baverstock is an extremely droll General Baugh; Mr. Ernest Spalding a whimsical Rev. John Smith; and Mr. Ted D. Dennis a diverting Horatio Binks; Miss Florence Wilton puts in excellent work as Violet; Misses Daisy Cane and Edna Corré dance well. On Thursday Miss Ida Molesworth, Mr. Mark Blow, and company appeared in In the King's Name.

YORK.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Waddington; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. J. Dacre.—Lady Windermere's Fan, played four nights this week by the Monckton Hoffe Comedy company, has proved a great attraction, and has been notable for the charmingly natural rendering of the rôle of Mrs. Earlyn by Miss Lydia Busch, this clever lady had a most gratifying reception; a convincingly strong rendition of Lady Winderemere is given by Miss Nona Hoffe, an emotional actress of exceptional merit; Miss Maude Henderson gave a characteristic study of the part of the Duchess of Berwick; and Aubrey Fitzmaurice was a lively Cecil Graham; as Lord Windermere Mr. Monckton Hoffe had ample opportunities to display his undoubted abilities, and proved in every way a success: Mr. H. Lane-Bayliff gave a very fine performance as Lord Darlington; and Mr. Ralph W. Hutton caused much amusement as Lord Augustus Lorton. A pretty curtain-raiser is seen in A Breezy Morning, in which Aubrey Fitzmaurice and Winifred Vallant do exceedingly well. The Importance of Being Earnest was played two evenings.

OPERA HOUSE AND EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. William Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sidney Brooke.—Tina Clementa's sporting act is generally admired, it is a marvel of animal training; Hunter and Maris introduce some novel and amusing business; Bains and Reed are expert tumblers; Helen McGregor is a clever singer; and Wilson Hallett's mimicry of children is a pleasing item; Harwood's Juveniles give a pleasing show; and Atlas and Vulcana give an athletic show of great cleverness, which is loudly applauded.

INDISPENSABLE! Rayne's "Pocket Date Book." Contents: Map (19in. by 10in.), showing the distance betwixt the various music halls at a glance. Will tell if one hall is within the barring radius of the other, thus saving fears, worry, and anxiety. All about artists' luggage, list of clubs, information about stamping contracts, foreign money table, London music halls and theatres, their telephone numbers, list of brougham proprietors, list and address of photographers, size of theatrical printing paper, names and addresses of theatrical railway managers, &c. Price 1s., post free. The proceeds from the sale will be divided equally amongst the two great charities of the dramatic and musical professions, the Actors' Benevolent Fund and the Music Hall Benevolent Fund. RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office.

Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns.

Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT,
MR. S. GETHING,
Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT,
MR. T. GERALD MORTON,
Empire Palace, Leeds.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT,
MR. HATTON WHARTON,
Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, AND DISTRICT,
MR. ALBERT BULMER,
The Empire, Liverpool.

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT,
MR. J. CHRISTIE,
The Empire, Cardiff.

LONDON DISTRICT,
MR. WILLIAM COLLINS,
The Empire, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

THIS WEEK'S NOVELTIES.

THE JAPANESE GIRL.
Code Word, CONDOR.

The day of his engagement Serge receives an official-looking package in which he finds his orders to go to Japan to the war. Sadly he takes leave of his sweet Alba, thinking that perhaps he will not return. The scene at the front, the air rings with shot and shell, the Japanese are victorious, and are taking prisoners those that survive. We find Serge again in Tokio, where he is awaiting his liberation. In a tea-house he meets a sweet little geisha named Tsouki-San, or Madam Moon. They have a very good time together. But there comes Serge's liberation. Serge and Alba meet again and renew their love and happiness together. But Tsouki-San has followed him and quickly sees how matters are. She glides quietly out into the night. It is so cold outside, poor little thing, all alone; how can she live? 676 ft. The Subject, £11 5s. 4d.

THE HEART'S BIDDING.
Code Word, CONE.

A doctor has had a slight "affair" with a young lady of his acquaintance. One day this lady comes to his consulting room by chance, and finds the doctor with his two little girls. His wife is away at the time. The young lady finds that he is a good husband and father, but thinks nevertheless that his happiness depends upon her. However, she cannot make any impression on him, and she leaves as she has come. Unfortunately, the wife one day finds a short note amongst her husband's papers; she takes her children, packs her trunks and goes away, writing a note to say that she will not return. She is taken suddenly ill in an hotel and sends for a doctor, who proves to be her husband, and after a short conversation everything is explained, and all is put right, and they start life afresh once more. 495 ft. The Subject, £8 5s.

THE PRODIGAL SON.
Code Word, CONFINS.

There is no need to give a full description of this well-known story, portrayed in a perfectly reverent spirit, and being such a favourite story with old and young, which we feel sure cannot fail to interest our audiences. This has been given special care, and every detail of local colouring and surroundings has been gone thoroughly into, and no expense has been spared to make it a success. Do not fail to get it. 708 ft. The Subject, £11 16s.

THE CLEVER TAILOR.
Code Word, CONFIDENT.

Our clever tailor friend is simply a marvel—rigs you out while you wait, so to speak. He takes the cloth, cuts it out, and the thing is done. One is rigged out in a costume fit for a king.
215 ft. The Subject, £3 11s. 8d.

A DRAMA IN SEVILLE.
Code Word, CONFETTI.

In this film we see one side of the Spanish character in all its vividness and spirit. The matador Espartero manages to get fatally wounded by the bull he is fighting because the beautiful Manuela shows very plainly that she prefers another to him. When it is too late, Manuela is sorry, and her lover forgives her with his last breath. This true story is very interesting and perfectly mounted.
510 ft. The Subject, £8 10s.

NAPLES AND VESUVIUS.
Code Word, CANETON.

Beautiful pictures of Naples. Houses, gardens, and palaces, all surrounded by deep blue water and veiled in a thin mist. Streets full of every kind of merchant and pedestrian. Leaving Naples, one goes on mules towards Vesuvius. Higher and higher. Then comes the eruption, a grand sight, leaving Naples looming in the distance, in a large cloud of blue smoke. Wonderful film.
560 ft. The Subject, £9 6s. 8d. Colouring, 3s.

JANE IS FURIOUS.
Code Word, CAMPANILE.

Jane is furious, and there is every cause. She has broken some things and Madam has given her notice. Then she slams the door, knocks the crockery about, and altogether behaves in a very dangerous fashion. Madam says a few unkind things to Jane, and her only refuge is to hide in a trunk, which she does. Great is the surprise of the onlookers, when they open the trunk and Jane pops out like a Jack-in-the-Box. Most amusing.
198 ft. The Subject, £3 6s.

MAKING POTTERY IN JAPAN.
Code Word, CAMBUSE.

Delightful pictures of all kind of pottery being made in Japan. All the various processes are shown—baking, colouring, polishing, and moulding. These pictures are really delightful; then there is the sale room, where these are sold. Very interesting film.
346 ft. The Subject, £5 15s. 4d. Toning, 2s.

BATHING UNDER DIFFICULTIES: A NEW SUMMER COMIC.

Copyright, 1907, by The Vitagraph Company of America.

Gentleman sleeping in hammock. Son tickles him with feather duster and is chastised. Boy vows vengeance. Father takes swim in river. Boy steals his clothes. Parent unable to leave water. Young lady sits on bank and reads. Ladies' botanical society appears. Lady artist sketches. Sunday school picnic, headed by parson, attempt rescue. Father naturally protests. Passing "Hobo" takes swim with clothes on. Father appropriates tramp's clothes and returns home. Boy appears attired in his "Pa's" garments, smoking cigar. Son about to be punished. Mother intercedes and reminds "Pa" that he is but the victim of a huge joke.

Length, 500ft.

THE BABY ELEPHANT: AN ORIENTAL LAUGH PRODUCER.

Copyright, 1907, by The Vitagraph Company of America.

Persian nobleman owns a wonderful elephant, which Sultan of Turkey desires to purchase. Sultan sends two emissaries—an African and a Turk—to secure animal. Owner refuses to sell. Shows agents clever tricks of Elephant. Unable to purchase it, deputies steal beast. Elephant refuses to perform for new owners. Becomes vicious. Attacks captors, chases them around country, finally returning to its lawful owner.

Length, 425ft.

2,000 MILES WITHOUT A DOLLAR: A SENSATIONAL NOVELTY.

Copyright, 1907, by The Vitagraph Company of America.

Dan buys new hat for his wife. Doesn't suit. Quarrel. Dan leaves home, goes West. Becomes cowboy. Months later cowboy delivers telegram proclaiming him a father. Steals cowboy's horse. Caught. Nearly hanged. Message saves him. Takes train for East. Telegram is his passport. Arrives in New York. Rushes into cab. No money. Again message saves him. Reaching home, "Grandpa" brings out tiny baby, then another, and finally the third one. A grand surprise after travelling 2,000 miles without a dollar. Length, 430ft.

MAN, HAT, AND COCKTAIL: A NEW DRINK, BUT AN OLD JOKE.

Copyright, 1907, by The Vitagraph Company of America.

Gentleman wearing new silk hat calls on his friends. Invited to have a drink. While one man prepares decoction in glass his accomplice mixes a drink in Jones's new silk hat. Jones tries to work same joke on a friend. Friend changes hats and Jones gets drink in his own hat. Length, 400ft.

THE EASTERNER: A TALE OF THE WEST.

Copyright, 1907, by The Vitagraph Company of America.

Outside typical Western hostelry. A group of cowboys and Mexicans are startled by sudden appearance of automobile (first they've ever seen) with a young "Easterner" and his bride as occupants. "Bad Bill," a notorious character, appears. His horse shies at strange vehicle. Bill contemptuously glances at auto, and offers to race his horse against machine. Wager is laid and exciting race ensues in which horse is bested. Back to the hotel. Wager is paid. Defeated man enters in bad humour. Attempts to shoot young bridegroom. Held up himself. Autoist agrees to fight "man fashion." Easterner soundly thrashes "Bad Bill."
